■ We have arranged a special printing of the invaluable sound trouble-shooting charts which supplement the second revision of the sixth edition of F. H. Richardson's Bluebook of Projection. There are 19 practical, detailed charts that provide a simplified guide to quick trouble-shooting, enabling the projectionist to spot and repair sudden breakdowns both in the projection and sound apparatus. A limited supply is available in brochure form at minimum cost.

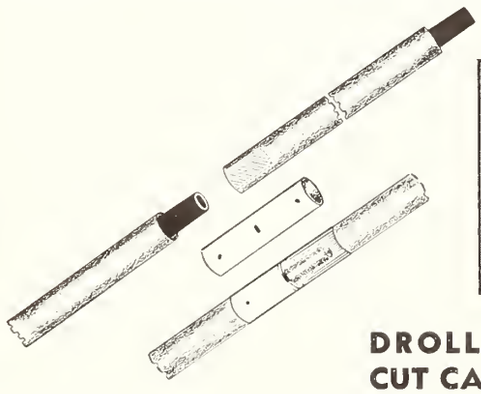
nary old arc which I worked over so the mechanism may be slid back and forth. I have an iris mounted in front of the condensers. Two lenses are mounted on a single rod, one lens for spot and medium flood, the other for an exceptionally wide flood or strip. We use suprex 8x8 carbons. Opening of the iris controls the size of the spot which, I may say, is as sweet a spot as I have ever seen. Incidentally, either lens can be quickly put in operating position by a quarter turn of a handle.

"For an effect machine we took a 1,000-watt stereopticon and mounted an iris on it. A piece of figured glass was used for the design, a +½-inch condenser lens being used instead of the regular slide lens. An oscillating fan is made to turn a color wheel and by the use of this the entire front of the theatre may be covered with an interesting design (the oscillating shaft of the fan was used for this, not the motor armature shaft).

"I got a kick out of the article which appeared in BETTER THEATRES a while ago about a chap who forced himself to go to work on an old Powers. It made me wonder just what some machines, if they could talk, would say about the care they receive from some projectionists!

"Another article told of some fellows in Illinois who were ribbed for wearing moccasins on their feet. I say, more power to these men! If only all the men in our field took care of their equipment as they do, everyone in the whole industry, from actors on down, would benefit by it [or is it from actors on up?—F. H. R.].

"We have a fine company to work with here at the Hines. We are denied nothing in the projection room. When a replacement is needed, it is ordered immediately, and no argument about it. As a result, we take more care and pride in our work and we see that all equipment is kept in top-notch condition. I can hear you say, 'Then why such a looking spot and such an effect machine?' I assure you it is simply because I like to see what I can produce out of parts of old machines. Call it a hobby, if you like. We don't run stage shows, but I just like to experiment.



"The film we receive out here is usually in good shape, but some prints are badly marked for S.M. and C.O. cues. I believe if the exchanges would clamp down hard on the practice of punches, crosses, etc., much could be eliminated. True, some cues are mean to see, but some care could be used in marking them instead of using a punch mark half as big as the picture.

"As to trailers, someone mentioned having a fade-in at the start, and a fade-out at the end. That would be well and good if frame lines were discernible, and a short piece of blank leader—say, 18 to 24 inches long—were attached ahead and behind the fade-in and fade-out, such a short piece of leader being replaced from time to time by the exchanges as the lengths were reduced by repeated splicing, and if standard cues were used for C.O., possibly trailer mutilation would decrease somewhat. Again, the exchanges would have to clamp down if the leaders were damaged. We use this method on the title 'previews of coming attractions' and it works out fine for us."

I cannot recommend making gadgets out of old parts for a serious purpose, but I certainly can sympathize with you, brother, for many a time in the past I have spent happy days doing what you like to do. By golly, some of my "inventions" were not so bad, either. I even went so far as to build a super-swell boat once. The only trouble was that when it was done I would have had to tear out the whole side of the basement to get it outdoors—and the nearest water was some 50 miles away!

Well, it was like this: I was upstairs messing around among some old papers in my den when Friend Daughter came up and said, "There's somebody here to see you, you'd better come down right away." Of course, I thought it was a beautiful gal who had found it impossible to resist my charms, so I dropped everything and hurried down the stairs. And who do you suppose the "somebody" was? You guessed it—the guys you see in the picture above. More than one somebody, come all the way from New York to my home in Scarsdale to look me over, to see if reports of my recent illness were not a publicity stunt! Grinning broadly on the extreme left is pictured Lester Isaac, supervisor of projection for Loew's, Inc. Next is P. A. McGuire, advertising manager of the International Projector Corporation; then Mr. Isaac's assistant, M. D. O'Brien; then Will C. Smith of the National Theatre Supply Company (who, incidentally, got into projection even before there was an intermittent movement); and perched on my left is Charles Horstman, supervisor of projection for RKO Theatres; while on my right is Harry Rubin, supervisor of projection for Paramount Theatres and chairman of the SMPE Projection Practice Committee. Somebody's, indeed, in the affairs of the motion picture—and for all that, great fellows whose friendship and high regard bestows pleasure as surely as honor.—F. H. R.

DROLL PROCESSED CARBONS CUT CARBON COSTS 10% TO 25%

Simply join two of these ready-for-use carbons and clip them with a sleeve of pure copper, which matches exactly the copper coating on the carbon and is consumed without altering light quality or intensity.

When the positive is 3 or 4 inches long insert the next carbon in the milled-out part, slipping the sleeve over the stub. No short lengths wasted. Available for the following carbon trims:

Negatives..... 6 mm. x 9" / 6.5 mm. x 9" / 7 mm. x 9"

Positives..... 6 mm. x 12" / 7 mm. x 12" and 14" / 8 mm. x 12" and 14"

AND High Intensity 13.6 mm. x 22" (machined for adapters) which provide 20 minutes more burning time per trim.

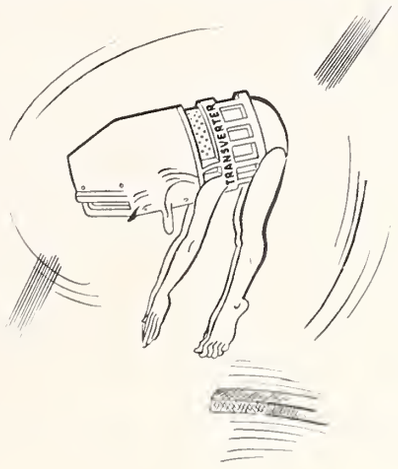
Suggestions for Making Cue Marks More Visible



JACK PRATER of Palouse, Wash., comes forth with some interesting comment on a suggestion made in a recent issue. He writes:

"I particularly enjoyed the letter in the May 31st issue of BETTER THEATRES from the projectionist in Brevard, N. C. I think his idea of having standard cue marks printed on alternate frames is splendid, because cues are now visible for only one-sixth of a second. It is entirely possible to miss a cue by just the normal batting of one's eyes. Equally good results could be accomplished by having the cue marks in every one of eight or ten consecutive frames. When made in the negative by accurate punches, the cue marks remain motionless on the screen, and even if they were visible for half a second, they would be less noticeable to the audience than one or two ragged scratch marks.

"Our friend from Brevard also suggests more easily visible white circles around the cue dots, which is something else we need badly. This could be done by stamping a dark circle around the punch hole in the negative with an opaque ink or lacquer such as is used for blooping positive splices. Another, and perhaps better, method would be to use a tool such as Clint Phare's Signo-Marker to cut circles through the emulsion surrounding the cue marks on master positives, so that easily visible marks would be transferred photographically to the duplicate negatives and thence to release prints.

"I might also offer a suggestion for our friend from South Carolina on the one-reel Technicolor shorts he says have no name on the leader. It is strange that Technicolor labs do not use the standard make-up for shorts, but unless the name of the subject has been cut or broken off, it will be found on these prints very near the end of the leader, written lengthwise of the film in only one or two frames. Sometimes the title is written by hand in very fine letters which are hard to read in projection room illumination.

"It seems that a general revising of Standard Release Print makeup would be well worth while right now, and the necessary pressure should be applied where needed to bring every producer strictly in line with the new and improved setup. Some of the original specifications are getting pretty obsolete—for instance, prints are still being made with half the frame set aside for the title of the subject and part number, cluttered up with sound print, film-disc in letters more than twice the size of those in the subject title, in spite of the fact that silent films and disc sound have been dead for years! . . Come to think of it, that should be a good undertaking for the Projection Practice Committee of the SMPE at our next convention. In the meantime it would be very helpful if we could have suggestions from as many projectionists as possible, perhaps through your Comment in BETTER THEATRES."

A MESSAGE TO M-G-M SALESMEN!

"There's one thing that never changes"

You will shortly be selling pictures under the Consent Decree.

There are years of friendly dealing with your customers behind you as you set forth.

It is significant that, just as a new era begins, there is continued evidence of your company's good faith with exhibitors—M-G-M's insistence that theatres must be served right now with important pictures, no holding back, a summer line-up of multi-million dollar proportions on the screen.

It was natural that M-G-M should do this. We pride ourselves on the fact that exhibitors looked to us above all others to answer their summer needs.

On the opposite page, you will find a listing of Warners' trade shows for the immediate future.

Thus far, exhibitor attendance at other companies' trade showings has admittedly been disappointing. The reasons for this are open to argument.

It appears evident, however, that with five major companies regularly tradeshowing their product, the average exhibitor will have to forego either the screenings or his business..

We don't want either to happen.

So Warners – the unusual company – will make it as easy as possible for you. We must, by law, hold trade screenings. We know you can't possibly get to them all. And since we want you to see all our pictures we say . . . .

Get to our screenings if you can. If you can't, call or write any of our branch managers and arrange a private showing at your convenience.

That's what we mean by trade shows!

Warner Bros. wants you to see before you buy. Which means – don't buy before you see

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Vol. 144, No. 5 — August 2, 1941

REVIEW SERVICE

THAT amiable and able dean of indigenous cinema critics of the West, Mr. Edwin Schallert of the Los Angeles Times, is far from pleased with all aspects of the new motion picture trade practice of withholding pictures from local critical attention until local release—and the while making them available for review by the trade press in behalf of the exhibitor, that he may be informed about the product before his customers come to buy seats.

Mr. Schallert, so long a friend of the art, thinks the industry is sacrificing advance publicity. He says, "Hollywood blames the whole thing on the New York office. . . . " And that New York he describes as "a far away metropolis, which knows very little about local problems. . . . " There speaks the true California patriot. Mr. Schallert, in his access of concern about the interests of the motion picture, forgets to explain the commercial interest of the newspaper which makes editorial merchandise out of the pictures and picture tidings.

As to the priority enjoyed by the trade press, Mr. Schallert has a keen notion. It is not necessary for newspaper critics to wait, for, says he, " . . . there is nothing to prevent that press [the lay press] from taking the necessary 'quotes' from that trade press to determine the values of the pictures. . . . "

There Mr. Schallert has something, indeed. So, one is not surprised to find him demonstrating the process in his column of July 26th, where he reports: "Return of Gloria Swanson to the screen is praised rather highly, considering the advance reports on this resumption in 'Father Takes a Wife'. The picture, with Adolphe Menjou as her opposite, is described as a well-paced comedy in Motion Picture Herald."

It is pleasant thus to render a service to the distinguished Mr. Schallert, so long our friend and the motion picture's friend. He will find eighteen features reviewed in this issue.

WHERE'S QUO VADIS?

AMID the concerns of a world so busy at war that it can scarcely attend to the business of living, so busy with barbarism that it tends to forget the concerns of civilization, it is pleasant to have attention interrupted by the challenge of such a poised consideration as "A Cycle of 300 Films", presented in a series of showings by the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, in New York. The cycle in its fashion, and rather more completely than might be expected by those who know the ephemeral nature of film, covers most of the milestones from 1895 to 1940. Iris Barry, curator of cinema, in a brochure, remarks upon two lacunae: first, a print of "Quo Vadis" of 1911 and, second, "the longer pictures of Charles Chaplin". In the considered opinion of one student of the art, Mr. Chaplin's longer pictures are of minor importance, save for the most dusty museum purposes. After he passed the two-reel achievements of "The Vagabond" and "One A. M.", his message had been delivered. Beginning with "The Kid", Mr. Chaplin became a business, and a very good one, on his own, while before he had been an art on stockholders' money. This observation is from a one-time production executive who promoted the art, cheerfully, because of the profits.

As to "Quo Vadis", it would be an important service if the showmen readers of Motion Picture Herald might be helpful in the finding of a print that could be made available to the Film Library. The picture, some of you will be remembering, was made under various promotional encouragements, and most important among them were some nine thousand dollars, total cost of production, advanced by the late George Kleine of Chicago and New York, who acquired for that advance the American rights, to his own great profit. "Quo Vadis" introduced spectacle to the screen in terms of drama. It was too big for the screen theatre of the day and had its career in the legitimate houses of Broadway and the hinterlands, in the days of Klaw & Erlanger. It was the picture which gave Adolph Zukor the impulse which made Famous Players and Paramount, with a notion for the screen of "a whole evening's entertainment", and it was the picture which set D. W. Griffith off, emulatively, on the course which began with "Judith of Bethulia", led to "The Birth of a Nation" and a world career for him and his art.

In somebody's film attic there is a print of "Quo Vadis" and it belongs in the Film Library of the Museum of Modern Art. Like the missing vertebra of a dynosaur, it is only a stone where it is, but a gem of motion picture paleontology where it belongs.

FREE! FREE!

THE amusement page of The Star News of Medford, Taylor County, up in Wisconsin, is dominated by advertisements of "Free! Free! Talkie Movies", every Friday night at Meier's Corner, Tuesdays at Schlais Hall, Sunday night at Sternberg's and at Louie's Tavern Tuesday nights.

If we are to lift eyebrows at Distribution methods which permit two and three pictures for one price of admission, what are we to think about the extension of that policy to enable tavern, crossroads and wayside amusement emporia to give the product away with hot dogs, fried chicken and dance music?

That contributes to the state of public opinion which leads Exhibition to charge for the dishes and give away the pictures. Hollywood has a deprecatory word in "Quickies". Maybe now the vocabulary will have to take in "Giveaway production".

YOUR toilworn editor, arriving home all a-drip with the weather, paused at the garden gate to commiserate with Giovanni, artisan from Calabria, who came up from the soil mopping his brow. "Tough day?" The answer was a big grin and: "No verra bad—you see God got to make red the tomato." Giovanni is a philosopher, and the biggest success we know.

This Week in the News

Skin Game

OFFSTAGE, offscreen, and at minimum a shade offcolor, the skin game introduced by Russell Birdwell in the publicity interest of "So Ends Our Night" continues to fascinate Hollywood press agents. Samuel Goldwyn's "Ball of Fire" is current beneficiary, if that's the word.

The Birdwell technique, it may be remembered, consisted in stationing a young woman outside the portals of the Loew-Lewin studio instructed to picket the plant, discarding a garment per day, until assured that she would appear on the screen in the completed version of the picture pertained to.

Birdwell got space next to pure, plus pictures.

Next to invade the field of epidermal exploitation was Earl Carroll's Theatre Restaurant, on the occasion of the burst of news about Joseph I. Breen's pronouncement in re sweaters for screen wear. A bevy of the Carroll chorines in sweaters snug paraded briefly in front of the Hollywood office building housing the Production Code Administration, pretending indignant protest.

Carroll's effort didn't spark.

A slight haze surrounds the source of the latest inspiration, implemented last week by strip-teasers and chorus girls from the Follies theatre, downtown Los Angeles burlesque grind, who picketed the Goldwyn studio in placarded protest against reported employment of screen talent from the Central Casting Bureau to portray the burlesque girls in "Ball of Fire," formerly "The Professor and the Burlesque Queen," which the producer has on his agenda for early production.

Mr. Goldwyn's publicity department, headed by William Hebert, attributes the incident to the fertile brain of Milton Stein, press agent of the Follies, who is said to have cooked it up after reading in a newspaper column conducted by Harrison Carroll that Central Casting talent was to be hired for the film.

Be all that as it may, a press release on the matter, under imprint of "William Hebert for Samuel Goldwyn," concludes an account of the happening with, "The executives hurriedly went into conference with Goldwyn and returned with the concession that representatives of the casting department will cover the show tonight and select a group to appear in 'Ball of Fire.'"

Art (see page 10) accompanied the release.

The Follies effort, if so, got itself reported, typographically, in the local newspaper.

Picture magazines are expected to attend to the photographic aspects of the matter shortly.

Dollar Exploitation

AS an exploitation medium, as well as a medium of exchange, the lowest denomination of United States paper money—the dollar—was aggressively pursued in promotions put across by theatremen on behalf of Warner Bros.' "Million Dollar Baby." A "lucky buck" search in Fort Worth, Texas, and a public sale of dollars for fifty cents in Des Moines were some of the slants whipped together by theatremen on newspaper cooperations for the date. How the dollars travelled and what their journeyings accomplished is told about in Managers Round Table of this issue, starting on page 53.

MGM in Radio Business

MGM STUDIOS, Inc., whose parent, Loew's, owns and operates radio station WHN at New York, entered the airwaves field in Hollywood this week when it received a permit from the Federal Communications Commission to erect a frequency modulation station in the Santa Monica mountains.

The station will reach an estimated 2,500,000 persons in a 7,000 square mile service area embracing Los Angeles, Orange, Ventura and part of Riverside counties. Pending approval of the mountain top transmitter site Metro was alloted a frequency of 46.1 megacycles. At the same time the FCC granted Columbia Broadcasting System authority to erect an FM station atop Mt. Wilson, in Pasadena.

$130,000 for 'York'

WARNER BROTHERS' "Sergeant York," which must move from New York's first-run Astor Theatre August 11th to make room for MGM's "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," will have played to approximately 80,000 persons and a gross of approximately $130,000 by that day, the company predicted Wednesday.

The house is one of the smallest big film theatres in the Broadway sector: it has 1,100 seats.

The company also issued some attendance oddments: those seats have been filled every day; one fan saw the film five times; another four; several three; women comprised 11 per cent of the opening matinee audience, this week, they comprised 47 per cent.

The Lasky-produced film opened at the Earle and Ambassador theatres, Washington, on Thursday evening, after much ballyhoo. The story of that is on page 48.

RKO's "Tom, Dick, and Harry" on Thursday began its third week at the Radio City Music Hall, having played to 236,748 persons in its first 11 days. Elsewhere it has had holdover time in every booking to date—23 second weeks and six three weeks. Walt Disney's RKO release, "The Reluctant Dragon," on Thursday, too, began a second week.

In Los Angeles, MGM's "Blossoms in the Dust" was held over at the Four Star Theatre. In Montreal, Charles Chaplin's United Artists' release, "The Great Dictator," was held for a seventh week at the Orpheum.

Peace, It's Wonderful!

AT long last, termination was in sight in mid-week of the bitter seven-month radio-music war, with reports that the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers and the National Broadcasting Company finally were reaching a settlement. NBC officials were closeted with ASCAP executives and the Society's attorneys, Schwartz and Frohlich and David Podell, ironing out the last remaining legal difficulties before signing a contract which would restore to the NBC and CBS airlanes ASCAP music banned since January 1st. Hitch to a final signing arose over legal angles including provisions covering relations in states with anti-ASCAP laws.

The costly and long-delayed peace pact will result in return to the two major networks of film music exploitation, affected since the break. An ASCAP executive unofficially estimated that about $20,000,000 was lost directly and indirectly by the music industry since January 1st, and that the networks plunged $4,000,000 in setting up their own music outlet.

It was indicated that as soon as NBC signed a contract, CBS would follow, probably later in the week. Basic provision of the settlement is payment of two and three-quarter per cent of net time sales to ASCAP for network programs which are cleared at the source, and two and one-half per cent for stations managed and operated by NBC.

The deal also provides for a two per cent payment on the telecast of ASCAP music.

This is a compromise settlement of the Mutual contract signed with ASCAP last May, which provides for payment of three per cent, later increasing to three and one-half per cent. A clause in the Mutual deal, however, calls for reduction of basic terms if other networks get a more favorable settlement.

Bid for Rodgers

THE man United Artists' partners want for president of their company is William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, it was understood in New York this week. An offer of the UA chieftainship, with full authority, was reported to have been made, unanimously, by the UA partner-stockholders, Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin, and Alexander Korda. It is subject, however, to approval by Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., whom Mr. Rodgers would have to ask for a release from his present contract. It has three years to run.

Full administrative power at United Artists is reported to have been included in the offer. From Hollywood it was reported that the United Artists' partners also interceded with Mr. Schenck over the weekend, in an effort to induce him to grant Mr. Rodgers a release. The offer was said to have been preceded by consultation with David O. Selznick and Frank Capra who, reportedly, will soon become United Artists partners.

Murray Silverstone as chief of world-wide operations was top administrator until he resigned to enter production two months ago. Arthur W. Kelly, vice president, succeeded him as acting head of world-wide operations.

Mr. Rodgers has been with Metro since 1924. Previously he was with Triangle, Mutual and General film corporations. He is 53, and was born in Camden, N. J.

Box-office Appeal

MORE ANENT why Dr. Gallup thinks three pictures a year are the ideal quota for a top box-office star trickled from RKO this week, for whom the researcher is studying the habits and preferences of film audiences.

Stars who limit appearances to less than three pictures a year, in order to avoid high bracket income surtaxes (see MOTION PICTURE HERALD, July 26, page 41) are likely to kill the goose that laid the golden egg, Dr. Gallup finds. One-picture-a-year stars average a 17 per cent loss in marquee drawing power, he finds. Two-picture players lose 11 per cent. Stars who make three pictures a year, however, increase their drawing power by nine per cent a year. The gains for four and five-picture stars, however, drop to seven and eight per cent.

The Exhibitors' Reason

THE first formidable, officially propounded, explanation of why more exhibitors are not attending trade showings, came this week from the Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey, which said: "Lack of interest on the part of exhibitors in reviewing trade showings is due more to the inconvenience caused with the present set-up of showings. This especially applies to independent exhibitors, where a big proportion have to manage their own theatres."

Meanwhile, distributors this week held more advance screenings, call others, and were considering moving showings from theatres to exchanges to cut costs—see page 29.

No Chiseling!

"THAT FINE has to come out of your own pocket," Federal Judge Frank A. Picard warned Mac Krim, 31 years old, Detroit theatre owner, Tuesday as he fined him $600 and gave him two years probation, and sent his brother Sol, 32, to prison for a year and a day, all for failure to pay more than $3,000 in federal admission taxes.

"Don't let me hear of your firing any employees or cutting any wages to raise the money or I'll send you to jail." Judge Picard warned. The brothers had pleaded guilty to indictments for withholding U. S. tax returns. The judge chided them for hiding from U. S. tax collectors while driving new cars and living high. Mac has been a substitute on the swanky Grosse Pointe Hunt Club polo team.

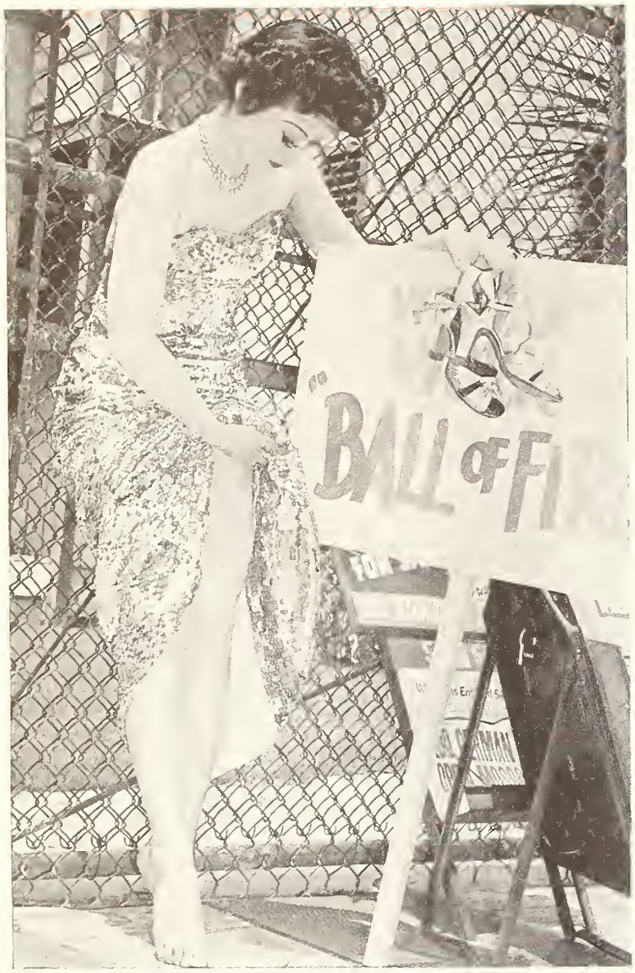
The Stramer Theatre Corporation, which the two brothers operated, was fined $1. The Krims operate the Harmony, Lasky, Krim and Park theatres. Since their indictment in February they have made restitution of $4,167, representing unpaid taxes, interest and penalties. This is their second tilt with the government on taxes, the first having resulted in a settlement.

Allied War Call

NORTHWEST Allied, proponent of the now fiercely protested anti-blocks-of-five film selling law, late Wednesday in Minneapolis issued a call for a "must convention" to muster support for that law (enacted but not enforced) which the big five are fighting in Ramsey County district court, St. Paul. (Story on page 25.)

The Northwest Allied convention will be held Tuesday at the Hotel Nicollet, Minneapolis. The convention call was issued by Fred Strom, the organization's secretary, who advised that matters for immediate attention also included booking of the blocks-of-five films, trade showings of those films, 16 mm competition, arbitration, ASCAP and admission taxes.

Undercover Uncovered?



THE California General Assembly says it is out to uncover undercover Communists at Hollywood's studios. Monday, a special committee investigating subversion began probing Hollywood, by calling witnesses of small import and by intimating that witnesses of greater import would appear.

Heading the committee of three senators and four assemblymen is Jack Tenney, assemblyman, and former president of Studio Musicians' Local 47. One of the first witnesses told of Marxist infiltration in that union.

Another, Pearl Osman, typist, asserted a film director, name not disclosed, addressed the People's World Forum two years ago.

FILMS GET PREVIEW IN NEW TAX BILL OF WHAT DEFENSE WILL COST

Lowering of Admission Exemption Expected to Increase Revenue by $60,000,000; Radio Will Fight Tax on Net Sales

From WASHINGTON BUREAU

The motion picture and broadcasting industries this week were given a "preview" of the tax burdens which the national defense emergency will impose upon them, in the $3,529,000,000 revenue bill before the House of Representatives for consideration —the second of a series of progessively expanding tax measures which President Roosevelt has warned will come annually.

Of major interest to the film industry was the admissions tax section, reducing the exemption from 20 to 9 cents, eliminating the exceptions from tax given rival amusements, such as church and lodge shows, but providing that men in uniform admitted to theatres at reduced admissions shall pay tax only on the amount charged them and not on the established price. If admitted free, uniformed men (the term includes men in the military and naval services and the Civilian Conservation Corps) will pay no tax.

A separate bill to exempt service men was deferred by the Ways and Means committee which decided that it was better policy to include the exemption in the general revenue bill rather than set a precedent of special legislation.

In dealing with the admission levies, the committee made permanent the 10 per cent defense super-tax adopted last year on a number of items, including box seats and sales of tickets outside box offices.

Discussing this section of the measure, the Ways and Means Committee, in its report commenting on the current exemptions from taxes for shows for the benefit of religious, educational or charitable organizations, said "Your committee regards these exemptions as of little or no benefit to such institutions or organizations and, at the same time, as a source of serious administrative difficulties and loss of revenue."

Climaxing efforts which have been made sporadically for a number of years to have broadcasting contribute toward the cost of its regulation, the bill provides for a tax on net time sales ranging from 5 per cent on sales in excess of $100,000 to 15 per cent on sales above $1,000,000, but with "notch" provisions for the relief of stations whose sales are but slightly in excess of lower-bracket limits.

This tax, which would be applicable for all calendar years beginning after December 31, 1941, would be 5 per cent on net times sales between $100,000 and $500,000, or an amount equal to the net sales in excess of $100,000, whichever is lesser; 10 per cent on sales between $500,000 and $1,000,000, or $25,000 plus the amount of the net sales in excess of $500,000, whichever is lesser, and 15 per cent on sales in excess of $1,000,000 or $100,000 plus the amount of sales in excess of $1,000,000, whichever is the lesser.

The levy is to apply to both networks and individual stations and "net time sales" are defined as the time sales minus the amounts paid or incurred for broadcast time to other persons operating radio stations or engaged in network broadcasting. Agency commissions not in excess of 15 per cent may be deducted in arriving at net time sales.

"The desirability of a special tax on radio broadcasting (distinct from a tax on advertising, one medium for which is radio) is indicated by several considerations," the committee said in its report.

"1. Radio broadcasters are the possessors of a valuable privilege awarded to them free of charge, on the condition that they operate in the public interest. Because of the technical limitations of the broadcasting band, the number of commercial broadcasters at any one time is for all practical purposes limited. In consequence, the right to operate a broadcasting station in particular areas carries with it a measure of monopolistic privilege and the opportunity for an extremely profitable investment. Through the exercise of that privilege and the exploitation of that opportunity, many broadcasters make substantial profits and virtually all broadcasters derive less tangible benefits in the form of publicity and goodwill.

"2. The principal operators in commercial broadcasting earn high rates of return on relatively small investments. They possess unusual taxpaying ability which, in view of the Government's present revenue requirements, can properly be subjected to special taxation.

"3. Radio broadcasting requires public regulation. Such regulation is provided at public expense, with great benefit to the industry but without any special costs to that industry."

The new admission tax provision is estimated to return an increased revenue of $60,000,000 a year, while the broadcasting tax is figured to bring in $12,500,000.

New Levies on Equipment

In addition, however, new taxes of 10 per cent are to be imposed on photographic apparatus, including that for the taking, developing and printing of motion pictures, to raise $12,400,000; on neon-tube signs, electric signs and electric advertising devices, raising $2,700,000, and on business machines of all types, including ticket issuing and ticket counting machines, to raise $21,000,000. A tax on outdoor billboards ranging from $5 to $11 will raise $7,000,000, and a levy of $5 on each automobile in the country and taxes on boats will raise another $160,200,000.

The schedule of billboard excises starts at $1 on signs up to 100 square feet; $2 on signs to 200 square feet; $3 up to 300 square feet: $5 to 400 square feet; $8 up to 600 square feet; and $11 on boards over 600 square feet.

Aside from the taxes on their business activities, members of the film and broadcasting industries will be subject, of course, to the new individual, corporation and capital stock taxes.

Under the new schedule for individuals, surtaxes begin with the first dollar of taxable income at a rate of 5 per cent, reaching 50 per cent at $44,000 and 75 per cent at $5,000,000. The present normal tax rate of four per cent will continue to apply, exemptions will be the same as at present—but where both husband and wife have incomes joint returns must be filed—and the total, once figured up, will be topped off by the defense levy of 10 per cent of the amount of the tax.

The corporation and excess profits taxes have been revised broadly, the surtax on corporations being 5 per cent on surtax net income up to $25,000 and 6 per cent on higher incomes. The capital stock tax rate is increased from $1.10 to $1.25.

The new individual income taxes are expected to return an additional $1,152,000 and the new corporation levies $1,322,900,000. The new capital stock rate will increase the revenue by $22,300,000.

Broadcasters To Fight

The National Association of Broadcasters will vigorously oppose the proposed taxes on radio advertising and has retained E. C. Alvord, prominent tax lawyer, to handle the matter, it was disclosed this week by Neville C. Miller, president of the association.

ALLIED LOOKS AT NEW TAX BILL

Allied States Association, from Washington, Tuesday, noted mixed gains on its original proposals for exhibitors in new Federal war-and-defense taxation, which this week reached the floor of the House.

Defeat of the U. S. Treasury's proposal to tax film rentals five per cent was noted. Allied feared a passage of this tax by distributors on exhibitors.

Ground was lost on Allied's suggestion that ticket taxes apply to all admissions, and not to a lowering of the exemption to nine cents, as now provided. The reason for no exemption was to preclude any lowering of admissions by exhibitors from ten cents to nine to avoid the tax.

Exemptions on tickets of rival amusements, such as those staged by churches and rivals was abolished, as the exhibitors requested.

There was no provision made for exempting children's 10-cent tickets from taxes.

The House Committee, however, did agree to impose a tax on certain competing theatrical enterprises.

ARBITRATION DECISIONS CONTINUE TO GO TO INDEPENDENT EXHIBITORS

Owners Win Two Awards; Get Favorable Settlements in Three Other Cases; Efforts at Conciliation Cut Complaints

Exhibition continued to appear on the winning side of the arbitration balance this week as independent theatres won two cases against distributors, and settlements, reportedly favorable to the theatre operators, were reported in three cities. Despite the apparent success recently of exhibitor complaints only two new actions have been filed in the past two weeks.

The slackening in the number of arbitration complaints is attributed by home office attorneys to efforts by the Big Five to conciliate disputes in advance of new order selling rather than risk the possible bitterness of an arbitrated award as new season selling is about to get under way. Other sources say that the independents are waiting until after September 1st when they will file a flood of complaints under section X of the decree, seeking to better their playing position with specific run awards.

Washington Exhibitor Wins

Interest in decisions centered at Washington where in the sixth case the Apex theatre won its clearance complaint against Loew's and the Warner circuit's Calvert and Uptown theatres. At the end of hearings on July 24, Louis M. Denit, arbitrator, announced in advance of a written decision that he would eliminate all clearance between the Apex and two Warner houses on the ground that they were not in the same competitive area.

The complaint, filed by James V. Hayes and Robert Sher, former Department of Justice attorneys who were active in drafting the consent decree, protested a seven day clearance held by the Calvert and the fact that the Apex was forced to follow the Uptown. Fred S. Kogod and Max Burka filed the action in early June. Mr. Denit ruled that the houses, in the residential Northwest section of Washington, were far enough apart, with a large enough potential patronage, not to be in direct competition.

During the hearings Mr. Denit refused to grant a motion by Stanley Thompson, MGM attorney, that the case against the Uptown be dismissed on the grounds that no clearance was involved in the immediately subsequent run which the Apex received following the Uptown. The arbitrator said the motion "split legal hairs contrary to the spirit of the decree."

Philadelphia

At Philadelphia in the board's fourth case Bryant Weist, operator of the Hollywood in Elizabethville, Pa., on July 25th received a reduction in the clearance held over his house by the Theatorium, in nearby Lykens, Pa. Roland J. Christy, arbitrator, ordered the defendant distributor, MGM, to reduce the seven day clearance of the Theatorium to five. In addition, the arbitrator ruled that the costs for the hearings be assessed equally between Metro and R. J. Budd, operator of the Theatorium, who filed as an intervening party on May 22d. The complaint was originally filed on April 22d and the hearing was held on May 26th. The Hollywood based its complaint on the argument that it was not in competition with the Theatorium and asked the arbitrator to set a just clearance for the house.

ARBITRATION CASES FILED TO DATE

Following is a summary of the arbitration cases filed to date:

Filed This Week:

Chicago—One on Clearance
St. Louis—One on Some Run

Previously Reported:

Clearance	66
Some Run	24
Withholding Prints	1
Total to July 30th	93

Settled This Week:

Washington—Case No. 6
Philadelphia—Case No. 4
Kansas City—Case No. 1
San Francisco—Case No. 1

Kansas City

Kansas City's first and only arbitration complaint was withdrawn on Thursday, July 24th, less than three weeks after it had been filed by W. A. Weaver, operator of the Pic theatre in Iola, Kan. Mr. Weaver, who had sought some run from all five of the consenting distributors, withdrew his action after notifying the tribunal that he had been assured of sufficient product of the type which he had sought. No arbitrator had been selected at the time of the withdrawal.

San Francisco

At San Francisco Case No. 1 was also withdrawn, on Monday, when William Symfy, operator of the Rita theatre in Solano, near Vallejo, Calif., and RKO, Paramount and Warners reached an agreement over the clearance which the Senator, Marval, Strand and Valmar theatres in Vallejo are to hold over the newly-opened Rita. Donovan O. Peters, attorney, was arbitrator.

Chicago

A new Chicago case, the fifth, was filed Tuesday by Steve Bennis, operating the Lincoln and Grand theatres in Lincoln, Ill. A clearance complaint, it names all five consenting majors and asks that the present system of setting clearance be adjudged unreasonable. At present distributors give product to Mr. Bennis 21 days after Chicago and sometimes Bloomington first runs. He asks that a reasonable clearance be allowed after Springfield, Ill., first run houses. Eleven Springfield, four Bloomington and one other Lincoln theatres are involved in the controversy which observers say may disrupt the whole structure of downstate Illinois clearance.

St. Louis

Louis M. Sosna, Mexico, Mo., exhibitor, has filed his second complaint in the St. Louis office of the arbitration association, naming Loew's, Inc. He asks for some run, claiming that unless product is furnished him he will be forced to close. The Frisina Circuit, operators of two opposition houses, the Rex and Liberty, is named as interested party.

Mr. Sosna's is the third complaint in the St. Louis area. His first, several months ago, naming the five major distributing companies, and charging them with encouraging him to build a theatre in Mexico, and later refusing. to sell him, was dropped. The other complaint was filed by the Shirley Theatre Corp., of Cape Girardeau, Mo., but this was settled before a hearing was held. Mr. Sosna's current complaint says Loew's has refused to sell him product and there is insufficient film available today.

New York

George H. Spiegelberg, arbitrator of the second New York case, a clearance action by the Squire theatre, Great Neck, L. I., which was in process of hearing for three and a half months this week visited the two theatres involved. He announced that he would be ready to deliver a decision after he had seen the respective facilities of the Squire and the competing Great Neck playhouse. The final hearing was on July 23d.

Chicago

Richard F. Kuhns, arbitrator of the clearance complaint of the Lawn theatre, Chicago, has postponed the city's third case from July 29th to August 12th at the request of intervenors.

In the fourth Chicago case, clearance action by the GCS Circuit's Portage theatre, intervenors have been entered by the Avaloe Amusement Corporation and the Irving Theatre Company, a subsidiary of the Essaness Circuit.

Paramount Quarter Net $1,800,000

Paramount's earnings for this year's second quarter will approximate between $1,800,000 and $2,100,000, Broadway heard from Wall Street Tuesday. On Thursday, the company was expected to announce the specific sum.

If the $2,100,000 figure is reached, the earnings for one-half year should total approximately $4,500,000. Wall Street reports, extremely optimistic on Paramount, are that the company's year's earnings may reach a total of $9,500,000. That would be the highest sum in several years.

The disclosure of the specific second quarter earnings was to be made Thursday at the Paramount board meeting.

Charlie Murray Comedian Dies

Charlie Murray, old-time comedian, died in Hollywood Tuesday, July 29th, of pneumonia. Born in Laurel, Ind., the actor appeared in numerous comedies dating from his early start in motion pictures with the Biograph Company in 1912. His most famous comedy part was as Kelly, teamed with George Sidney as Cohen, in Universal's series "Cohens and Kellys." His last two Hollywood films were "Breaking the Ice" in 1938, for RKO, and in Republic's "Circus Girl" in 1937.

Sanford Closes with Loew's

Servicing of the sound reproduction equipment of the 75 theatres of Loew's Metropolitan Circuit was turned over to Altec Service on Friday, under a deal closed by Bert Sanford, Altec's eastern district sales manager.

NO 'APPEASEMENT' FOR THE REDS IN PENNSYLVANIA; FILM BAN STANDS

Mrs. Carroll Bars Even Private Showing of Soviet Pictures, on "Public Morals" Charge; Artkino To File Test Suit

There'll be no appeasement for Russia in Pennsylvania. A ban on Soviet pictures "in the name of Democracy" stood this week, regardless of any change of attitude by the United States Government toward the U. S. S. R. following the Reds' shift to the position of ally of Great Britain in its war against Hitlerism, and which brought expressions of support for the Reds from President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull.

Following that pledge of support, there came this week new attempts to secure license for circulation in Pennsylvania of some Red Russian motion pictures which previously had been banned by the State's Censor Board.

Showing Cancelled

An empty screen, however, greeted some 50 Philadelphians, several of them prominent, who gathered for a private showing of two films dealing with the Red Army, at the Vine Street Motion Picture Projection Service, last Wednesday, July 23rd. The showing had been canceled by order of Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, chairman of the State Censors, calling attention to a recent censor board ruling requiring a seal of approval for all foreign films shown either in public or in private.

The films, which again centered the spotlight of censorship on the Pennsylvania board, were "Soviet Border," a documentary account of the occupation of Bessarabia, and an ordinary newsreel clip, "The Red Army."

The private screening was arranged for a group of specially invited guests, including newspapermen, to see the pictures for themselves and to record their own judgment as to their propriety as a prelude to suing the State for removal of the ban.

The private screening was arranged by a committee headed by Josephine Truslow Adams, instructor at Swarthmore College; Anna M. W. Pennypacker, daughter of a former Pennsylvania Governor and co-owner of the Daily Worker; and Frances Serber, widow of a former assistant City Solicitor.

Mrs. Serber, spokesman for the group, declared that the private showing had been arranged to "force the films out from the ban of State censors." She said that an official ban had been issued on the formal charge that the films were "not proper" and had a "tendency to corrupt public morals."

Jack Jaslov, Philadelphia representative of Artkino Pictures, Soviet agency and of the films, substantiated Mrs. Serber's charges. However, Mrs. Carroll offered an entirely different version as to the status of the pictures.

She denied that a formal ban had been issued and explained her action in canceling the private showing by saying, "We don't want the films shown while we were deciding what to do about them."

Characterizing the private screening as "irregular and improper," Mrs. Carroll said the censor board had viewed the films in question twice "and are agreed that the pictures are controversial."

She added, "They are still in the process of censorship and our decision may not be reached for a while."

PHILADELPHIA GETS SEX PICTURES

The Philadelphia film industry has again expressed alarm over the introduction again of the so-called sex pictures into the territory. Such bookings have been frowned upon by the local exhibitors for many years, after the movies became targets for attack from the pulpit for showing such films.

Presented as an expose of the marihuana or reefer racket, the Elm Theatre in adjoining Camden, N. J., last week offered "The Burning Question." It is also reported that University Film Corp. has booked into the city proper a feature on the syphilis problem, "No Greater Sin."

Mrs. Carroll said further that she was surprised that the private showing had been scheduled and said it was irregular for a producer to preview films not yet approved by her board, except to the producer's own staff. "That does not include outside guests and especially members of the press," she said emphatically.

Special Deputy Attorney General Abraham J. Levy, in advising William Friedman, one of the owners of the projection room, not to run off the reels, made it clear that the interpretation was in line with State regulations that forbids exhibition of a film, even a free, private showing, unless the film carries the seal of approval of the board of censors.

MPTO Consulted

Mr. Friedman sought legal advice from George P. Aarons, general counsel of United M. P. T. O., but anxious to avoid any trouble called off the screening in spite of the fact that Mr. Aarons advised him that the censor board was "definitely over-stepping its bounds."

Mrs. Carroll said later the attitude of the censor board in respect to all propaganda films, was that if "they tend to corrupt public morals," it is reason enough to be rejected by the board.

At the same time, Mrs. Carroll disclosed for the first time that the censor board had rejected early last month the German propaganda film, "Sieg im Westen" (Victory in the West") on the ground that it had a "tendency to corrupt public morals."

"The word 'morals' is to be understood in its most comprehensive sense," Mrs. Carroll explained. "Like most documentary films, this one is propaganda."

Although the New York Supreme Court has taken under advisement a suit by an anti-Nazi group to have the film banned in New York on the ground that it is not a newsreel and therefore not exempt from licensing by the New York State Education Department, Mrs. Carroll said that that question did not arise here.

"It was admitted to Pennsylvania and reviewed here as a feature film. A newsreel," Mrs. Carroll explained, "is understood in the trade to be a single reel containing a series of unconnected sequences."

Mrs. Carroll further disclosed for the first time that the censor board's scissors were being applied to Howard Hughes' "The Outlaw." The picture was submitted late in July by Mr. Hughes, she said, but since the submission was not a formal one, she declined to elaborate on any deletions being applied to the film.

For over a year now, the Pennsylvania Censor Board has been in continual argument over foreign and propaganda films, first in banning "The Ramparts We Watch" and then "The World in Flames." The ban was removed aiter March of Time appealed the board's decision in "The Ramparts" to court and the ban was similarly removed from "The World" aiter Paramount threatened court action.

Defines "Public Screening"

Mrs. Carroll explained that in the opinion of the board, all pictures shown to outsiders are considered public screenings, even if there is no admission charge, pointing out that the State law makes no mention whatsoever of admission charges. She said even the industry's own trade screenings were considered public screenings, adding that the producers had always co-operated in first applying for the seal of approval before screening any picture for the trade. Technically, the law even bars trade paper reviewers when a film is screened for the producer's own employees at an exchange, but no issue has ever been made of that, the board being lenient where industry showings are concerned.

On Monday, July 28, the Censor Board again viewed the two Russian films and this time officially rejected them as propaganda pictures having a tendency "to corrupt public morals." Mrs. Carroll attacked Artkino Pictures, owners of the films, saying that they had no interest in "public morals" and were only trying to cash in on an international situation.

"The showing of these pictures," said Mrs. Carroll, "would serve no other purpose but to encourage subversive groups, and it is in the best interests of democracy that they be banned."

Immediately upon receiving official notice of the ban, Nicholas Napoli, Artkino president, retained Louis F. McCabe, local attorney, to appeal the board's ban in the courts. Mr. McCabe said he would file an appeal in the Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas later in the week. He also hit at the board's action in banning the films. "The board's act looks as though it might have been dictated in Rome or Berlin," he said.

Soviet Commission in U. S. Buying Film Equipment

Of the $1,700,000 worth of merchandise to be purchased in the United States by Amtorg Trading Corporation, the American buying and selling agency for the Soviet Union, considerable sums will be spent on camera, sound and other motion picture equipment, according to Amtorg officials interviewed early this week. Specific data were not divulged, but it was learned at the Soviet trading company that a special purchasing commission, headed by G. Irsky and consisting of eight other leading film technicians, arrived in America three months ago and is now on the West Coast arranging deals for purchase of much-needed equipment. The commission already has bought $250,000 worth of Mitchell cameras, Teague background projectors, Bell and Howell laboratory equipment and other supplies from RCA and Eastman-Kodak.

Hollywood studios are inviting the Russians in. Thus far the commission has visited RKO, Columbia and MGM.

It is understood that the commission is not authorized to buy American films for the reason that Artkino Pictures in New York virtually has the exclusive grant for the purchase and sale of pictures to and from Russia. Reluctant to reveal any plans of the commission, M. Gusov, assistant to K. Lukashov, Amtorg's president, said announcement would be made in the future as to the chief purchases of the visiting Soviet film leaders.

Amtorg Busy

Amtorg, which was housed on lower Fifth Avenue until a year ago, is the sole tenant occupying nine floors in the building at 210 Madison Avenue, and is the scene of much activity since the U. S. Government issued export licenses to it for permission to ship more than $1,000,000 worth of machine tools, machine parts, oil field equipment and other related products from U. S. ports where they have been in storage awaiting such grants. Products ready for shipment will be carried by 11 Soviet vessels now in Atlantic and Pacific ports, to Vladivostok, and future shipments will depend greatly on the speed with which Washington officials and key manufacturers can work out plans with Amtorg for purchase of additional "capital goods," consisting of steel mill equipment, oil drilling and refinery machinery, and earth excavating and hauling machinery. Russia is prepared to pay in gold and cash for the merchandise she needs, but no requests have been made thru Amtorg for arms, ammunition or airplane products. It is quite likely that production on U. S. defense materials and machinery will prolong delivery to the Soviets of the equipment she will order, in addition to the merchandise for which Amtorg received export licenses last week.

Russia Interested in U. S. Films

Asked to comment on the announcement in the press last week of three Twentieth Century-Fox films, "Under Your Spell," "Three Musketeers" and "In Old Chicago," sold to Russia, Nicola Napoli, head of Artkino Pictures said that this sale was effected three months ago, before the war, but that it had received much press notice as a result of the statement released by Irving Maas, of the Fox foreign department, at the company's West Coast convention. Mr. Napoli also revealed that Russia was interested in a number of other American-made pictures, including some anti-Nazi films one of which is "The Great Dictator," but he said deals had not been completed for the sale of any other pictures.

According to Mr. Napoli, American newsreel companies are eagerly awaiting the first newsreel pictures of the Russo-German warfront which were edited and are now awaiting shipment to this country. Mr. Napoli does not know when they will arrive, but intimated that as soon as the films were on hand, all the five major newsreel companies would see screenings and then would make their selection for the scenes they wanted to use.

Soviet factual films, like "The Mannerheim Line," "The Red Army" and "Soviet Frontiers on the Danube" which already have been shown in America, are being prepared for U. S. distribution, Mr. Napoli said. Two other pictures, "Liberation" and "Dream," both of which deal with the sovietization of Byelo Russia and the Western Ukraine, also will be sent to this country.

Mr. Napoli, who also sends Soviet films to "practically all the territory in South America," believes that the Nazi invasion of Russia will result in increased business of Russian pictures here. "People will be interested to know more about the Soviet Union," he said, "and will want to know what the Russians are doing, especially after newsreels are shown in this country."

The Artkino official, when questioned about the "blacklist" prepared by the Rockefeller committee with the cooperation of the Department of Commerce in listing all Nazi-controlled Latin American firms, said his company had not been doing any business with alleged Nazi agents in South America, and that as far as he knew "that kind of people" would not be interested in Soviet film importation.

"Inside Russia" will shortly be distributed by Hoffberg Productions, of New York. Charles Stuart, an American directed the two cameramen who shot the film. Norman Brokenshire did the commentary. Mr. Stuart had permission from the Soviet Government. However, the distributors assert the film is not propaganda, but a factual document.

The Russian press this week emphasized applause given the Russians, and their leader, Joseph Stalin, in American theatres.

End of Japanese, Chinese Imports Seen

The freezing, by the U. S. of Japanese and Chinese assets here, may lead to complete cessation of film exports to those two countries, industry observers in New York feared this week.

The film companies now have $900,000 earmarked in the Yokohama Specie Bank, San Francisco, for payment later this year. The money represents their four years' receipts from Japan. What effect latest monetary action will have on the plan, is not known. There was conjecture money shortages in Japan may force abandonment of payment to the American companies.

The combined Japanese-Chinese market gave U. S. film companies approximately $3,000,000 annually, in normal times. Difficulties since those times have made business hazardous, and profits slim. The Japanese film import system has allowed but a trickle of American films. Their censorship was arbitrary.

Pending maturity of the financial agreement with the Specie Bank, Japan had authorized no remittances to the U. S., except those for print costs. These authorizations were frequently delayed; sometimes repudiated.

The Commerce Department last week disclosed trade with Japan had fallen to an eight year low. In May, exports to that country were $6,621,000, lowest for any month since 1933.

"Complete Ban" To Be Forced by Nazis

The ban on American films in certain sections of Europe, will be extended to all of that continent, if the Nazi have their way, according to a copyrighted London cable to the New York Herald Tribune Monday.

According to the story, there was an "international motion picture congress" in Berlin last week, which will campaign to "eliminate American and British films from European markets."

London film observers were said to regard the move as the most serious threat to Hollywood yet, and from a "ruthless competitor." It was further noted the "congress" was attended by representatives from Spain, Portugal, Sweden, and Switzerland, countries in which American firms still do business.

"Informed circles pointed out that the German plan was to make the elimination of American and British made films permanentby forcing distributors in every part of Europe, to sign long term contracts, and by offering them films so cheaply that American picture companies would be unable to compete even after the war."

According to a Berne, Switzerland radio broadcast to the New York Post and Chicago Daily News, a Frankfort Germany, newspaper disclosed recently, how stringently the German film industry is affected by the war; so stringently that film fans are complaining of the number of "revivals" and repeated programs. The newspaper, the Frankfurter Zeitung, editorialized that the number of revivals was because of the war, but that the film industry had not suffered as much as others.

Little Effect Seen From "Blacklisting"

President Roosevelt's recent blacklisting of Latin American business organizations with Axis affiliations is expected to have little effect on the activities of motion picture companies distributing in the southern markets, which reportedly have for some time been fully cognizant of the Administration's effort to cut the ties between United States exporters and such Nazi-controlled agents.

However, if the governments of the countries in which these agents have operated follow the lead of the United States, it is expected the field for our motion pictures may be broadened to fill the gap caused by the elimination of Italian and German films.

Small Exhibition Percentage

The score or so of South American companies which handled motion pictures, which were included in the blacklist, dealt primarily in European films, it is understood. Those pictures comprised only a small percentage of the total exhibited in Latin American theatres, but they were important out of all relation to their number of footage because of their propaganda content.

The blacklist of 1,833 concerns which investigation showed had tieups with Germany or Italy in 19 Latin American countries, however, will change relationships of many United States concerns which, in some cases for many years, have been distributing their products through such companies. It is quite possible that a number of United States photographic equipment companies will be in this category, but the list, as issued, gave no information regarding the activities in which any specified person or company was engaged.

German affiliated or dominated firms in Asia and Europe will be added to the American "blacklist" which recently noted the Latin-American firms with such connections, with the warning that dealings with such were perilous to this country's security.

Word that this would be done came last week from Washington, through official channels. It was asserted investigations to produce this new list, have been made in Japan, China, Thailand, Sweden, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal and Finland.

The lists include not merely firms acting under sponsorship of Axis interests; but also firms not of that sponsorship, but aiding its cause.

WARNERS PLANNING AD CONFERENCES

A series of regular advertising conferences, perhaps every three months, will be held by Warner Brothers, bringing together field and home office men for discussions of campaigns and general industry problems. This policy was decided upon following the success of a five-day parley last week at the home office.

WARNERS START 1941-42 WITH 36, IN A FLEXIBLE POLICY UP TO 48

Skouras Tells Distributors To Insist on Higher Admissions; Sears Sees End of Duals; Short Subjects To Be Shown

The 1941-42 national sales convention season officially ended this week, with Warner Brothers-Vitagraph-Vitaphone, the last of the 'Big Eight' to meet, assembling at the Blackstone Hotel, off Michigan Boulevard in Chicago, from Monday through Thursday.

The convention heard a theatre operator, Charles P. Skouras, of Fox West Coast, urge distributors to go out and demand that exhibitors charge higher admissions and that they also give longer playing time to distributors.

It heard Gradwell L. Sears, the Warner sales manager, predict that the consent decree spells the eventual doom of double bills and a brighter era for short subjects; it heard, too, a new policy of screening groups of short subjects for exhibitors in Warner exchanges, in advance, much as the decree compels the screening of features in advance. The decree does not, however, require the screening of shorts. But, with the decree forbidding the forcing of shorts with features, a new and special approach to shorts selling is deemed advisable.

The company announced 36 feature titles for 1941-42, but, under the elastic policy adopted by several companies for the new decree order starting September 1st, that figure will be extended, probably up to 48, before the new season's end. There will be 86 Warner shorts in 1941-42.

While the Warner officials in Chicago were disclosing new season's plans, policies and procedure, there was being released from the home office in New York, on Wednesday, the screening dates and places for the next three features to go out under the new small-block policy: "Navy Blues", "Smiling Ghost" and "Flight Patrol"; these are listed on page 29.

"Higher Plane for All": Sears

At the Tuesday session, Mr. Sears declared that "the new conditions starting September 1st mean that the film industry embarks on a higher plane where both the producer, distributor and exhibitor can benefit according to the extent of his efforts." Mr. Sears pointed out that producers no longer will be shackled by the necessity of turning out a specific number of films to meet release dates, but, instead, will be able to give each story the full treatment it deserves without budget restrictions, and in turn, will be able to sell every picture for its full worth.

In a telegram to Mr. Sears on the opening of the convention, Charles Skouras urged that "One of the keynotes of the convention be the advocacy of extended playing time and increased admission prices, as this is the only way your company can obtain the revenue on its pictures to which it is entitled."

Mr. Skouras predicted that the new selling system brought about by the consent decree would mean much closer cooperation between exhibitors and distributors through the more frequent contacts that would be necessary. He said he foresaw a new era for betterment of the industry, and pledged his support to that end.

LASKY 'TO STAY' WITH WARNERS

"Jesse L. Lasky has affiliated himself permanently and exclusively with the Warner Brothers organization," and his next production will be "The Adventures of Mark Twain," the producer announced late Tuesday to the Warner sales convention in Chicago.

He said that, following "Sergeant York," he had received offers by "almost every studio."

Mr. Lasky disclosed that he had had a Gallup Poll conducted "to ascertain public interest and acceptance value of a picture on Mark Twain," reporting a public receptivity for such a film.

"By exerting every effort toward longer engagements and better box office prices," Mr. Skouras said, "distributors could concentrate on the American market and make a profit here without worrying about the foreign field."

Mr. Sears also received a wire from Spryos Skouras, who said, "You now have the instrumentality and the right to merchandise your product on its merit, to foster and advocate among your accounts the policies and treatment that will sell the product to its best advantage before the public, and, above all, you have in your hands the power to revitalize and regenerate this business by the aggressive intelligent policies you display now at this revolutionary turning point.

"The distributor and the showman once bought this industry out of the nickelodeon days by the careful, individualized care of each picture they sold, but wholesale trading and routine treatment in time stifled the imagination and initiative of salesman and showman. That spark, however, still burns."

A New Day for Field Men

The greater need of executive ability to branch managers as a result of consent decree requirements was stressed to the sales delegates by Mr. Sears. He declared that Warners, through the recent elimination of outposts and other intermediary channels of contact between home office and field, had given new authority, importance and responsibility to branch heads and placed the company in a position for constant and quick contact with the field so as to make possible quick decisions and fast action in whatever situations arise under the decree.

Compared to the 11,000 large-block contracts customarily closed in a season, heretofore, Mr. Sears told the delegates to be prepared for handling as many as two hundred fifty thousand (250,000) contracts under the decree—in selling pictures by blocks-of-five, it will mean nine or ten times as many contracts, Mr. Sears said, and if a large number of pictures are sold singly, this amount becomes multiplied further. "Hence the need for the strongest possible men at the heads of branches," Mr. Sears declared.

Announcement by Carl Leserman of winners in the "Sears-Sales Drive," in which Ben Kalmenson's western and southern division again nosed out Roy Haines' eastern and Canadian division for first place, was the main item of the opening session. The winners were announced by Mr. Leserman as follows:

Branch winners: First prize, amount distributed, $3,500, Seattle, William Shartin, manager; second prize, $3,000, Winnipeg, Lou Geller, manager; third prize, $2,750, Los Angeles, W. E. Callaway, manager; fourth prize, $2,500, Atlanta, Tom Gilliam; fifth prize, $2,000, Calgary, Sam Pearlman, manager; sixth prize, $1,750, Salt Lake City, William Gordon; seventh prize, $1,500, Washington, D. C., Fred Beiersdorf; eighth prize, $1,250, Portland, Pete Stewart, manager; ninth prize, $1,000, St. John L. McKenzie, Manager; tenth prize, $750, San Francisco, Al Shmitkin, manager.

After the winners were made known, the delegates attended a screening of "Dive Bomber" in the Cinema Theater.

Sears Announces 1941-42 Product

"'Sergeant York' has set the pace for the coming year," said Mr. Sears, Wednesday, explaining that the new Lasky film now in its fifth week at the Astor, New York, and opening in two theatres Wednesday in Washington, is the first Warner production on the 1941-42 schedule.

Novel, plays and biographies are prominent in the list of forthcoming productions which as given by the Warner general sales manager to the convention. Some of the properties now in production or slated for early filming are as follows:

SERGEANT YORK, starring Gary Cooper. Following the engagements in New York and Washington, it will open on a road-show basis in key cities.

ARSENIC AND OLD LACE, adapted from the sensational Broadway comedy-thriller by Joseph Kisselring; to be directed by Frank Capra.

NAVY BLUES, musical, with Ann Sheridan, Jack Oakie, Martha Raye, Jack Haley, Jack Carson and the "Navy Blues Sextette." Filmed in part on location at the San Diego Naval Base, under direction of Lloyd Bacon.

THEY DIED WITH THEIR BOOTS ON, with Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Alan Hale, Gene Lockhart, directed by Raoul Walsh. A Western, climaxed with Custer's last stand.

ONE FOOT IN HEAVEN, with Fredric March, Martha Scott, in Hartzell Spence's book story based on the life of his father, a Methodist minister. Irving Rapper is directing from a script by Casey Robinson.

KINGS ROW, with Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan, Ida Lupino, James Stephenson. Based on the novel by Henry Bellamann, this is now in production under direction of Sam Wood.

Canadian Air Force in Color

CAPTAINS OF THE CLOUDS, a color picture which has just gone into production in Canada, where it is being filmed with the co-operation of the Royal Canadian Air Force. James Cagney heads the cast, which also includes Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale, George Tobias, etc. The original was written by Arthur Horman and Roland Gillett. Michael Curtiz is directing.

THE MAN WHO CAME TO DINNER, from the Kaufman-Hart Broadway play. Cast: Bette Davis, Monty Woolley, Ann Sheridan, Jimmy Durante, Reginald Gardiner, Richard Travis, Laura Hope Crews. William Keighley is the director.

THE MALTESE FALCON, from the mystery novel by Dashiell Hammett, with Humphrey Bogart, Mary Astor, Gladys George, Sidney Greenstreet. Directed by John Huston.

FLIGHT PATROL, a story about the International Brigade of the R.A.F., with Ronald Reagan, Olympe Bradna, James Stephenson,

ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT, starring George Raft in the adaptation of an original by Leonard Q. Ross and Leonard Spigelglass.

THE MALE ANIMAL, from the play by James Thurber and Elliott Nugent; to be directed by Mr. Nugent, who also acted in the original Broadway play. Henry Fonda, Joan Leslie, Priscilla Lane, Jack Carson, Alan Hale and Hattie McDaniel will be in the cast.

Jack Benny Comedy

THE WIDOW WOULDN'T WEEP, a comedy by Dalton Trumbo which will star Jack Benny, supported by a brilliant cast.

THE GAY SISTERS, starring Bette Davis. Adapted from a novel by Stephen Longstreet. Supporting will be Geraldine Fitzgerald, Richard Whorf, George Brent, Donald Crisp. Edmund Goulding will direct.

YANKEE DOODLE DANDY, the life-story of George M. Cohan, with James Cagney in the title role. Screen play is now being written by Robert Buckner.

MONTANA, color production in which Errol Flynn will star.

Other properties acquired for 1941-42 production season include:

OLD ACQUAINTANCE, the Broadway play by John van Druten.

UP AT THE VILLA, the Somerset Maugham book.

THE DAMNED DON'T CRY, from Harry Hervey's novel. A Bette Davis vehicle.

GEORGE WASHINGTON SLEPT HERE, by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart. Jack Benny will be starred.

A NIGHT AT TONY PASTOR'S, based on an original by Herb Mayes.

THE MAN THEY COULDN'T KILL, by Sidney Biddell and Frederick Frank, starring Edward G. Robinson.

IN THIS OUR LIFE, from the novel by Ellen Glasgow.

MISSISSIPPI BELLE, from a novel by Clements Ripley, soon to be published.

RHAPSODY IN BLUE, the life-story of George Gershwin.

THE CORN IS GREEN, from the current Broadway play success by Emlyn Williams in which Ethel Barrymore is appearing.

NIGHT FREIGHT, by A. I. Bezzerides, author of the recent film, "They Drive by Night." The same cast of principals that appeared in that picture, including George Raft, Ann Sheridan, Ida Lupino and Humphrey Bogart, will be seen in "Night Freight," and it will have the same director, Raoul Walsh.

SARATOGA TRUNK, from the novel by Edna Ferber.

QUIETLY MY CAPTAIN WAITS, from the novel by Evelyn Eaton.

HERE COME THE GIRLS, musical comedy.

CAPTAIN HORATIO HORNBLOWER, the C. S. Forester romance of the days of Nelson, in which Errol Flynn will star.

THE JOOK GIRL, from Theodore Pratt's forthcoming novel.

YOU'RE IN THE ARMY NOW, a comedy of America's citizen army of today.

THE LIFE OF JAMES J. CORBETT, which will star Errol Flynn as "Gentleman Jim."

"At least 20 other important properties are under consideration for the coming season," said Mr. Sears.

The 1941-42 line-up will be produced under the supervision of J. L. Warner, vice president in charge of production, and Hal B. Wallis, associate executive in charge of production.

The list of associate producers includes Bryan Foy, Henry Blanke, Jesse Lasky, Robert Lord, Robert Buckner, William Cagney, Robert Fellows, Edmund Grainger, Gordon Hollingshead, William Jacobs, David Lewis, Wolfgang Reinhardt, Jack Saper, Ben Stoloff and Jerry Wald.

In the list of stars under contract to Warner Brothers are Bette Davis, James Cagney, Errol Flynn, Edward G. Robinson, Humphrey Bogart, George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, Geraldine Fitzgerald, John Garfield, Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Ida Lupino, Brenda Marshall, Dennis Morgan, Wayne Morris, George Raft, Ronald Reagan, Ann Sheridan and James Stephenson.

Moray Lists Shorts for 1941-42

That Warners' Vitaphone will adopt a policy of screening groups of Warner short subjects at special trade-shows to be held in the company's exchanges, was announced Tuesday by Norman H. Moray, short subjects sales manager. It is planned to group together several shorts in a program which will run about two hours. Under this plan there will be approximately 12 such showings during the year.

For 1941-42, Warners will release 86 short subjects, of which 18 will be two-reel productions and 68 single-reelers. More than half of these will be in color.

Mr. Moray announced that, as of Tuesday, over 5,000 '41-42 contracts had already been signed. This marks the first time in the company's history that this many new season contracts have been closed by the end of July.

The complete program for '41-42 is as follows:

SIX SERVICE SPECIALS IN COLOR (Two reels): Each production will be accorded the cooperation of a branch of the United States Armed Service.

TWELVE BROADWAY BREVITIES (Two-reels): Titles are: "Minstrel Days," old-fashioned minstrel show, featuring a cast headed by Al Jolson and Eddie Cantor; "Ice Follies," musical comedy on ice; "Man From the F.B.I." an FBI expose to be produced with the cooperation of the Department of Justice; "West of the Rockies," western musicals with a "name" cast; "Wedding Yells," a Mack Sennett revival with dialogue added; "Here Come The Girls," a revue featuring song and dance favorites; "Perils of the Jungle,' 'a presentation of an African Safari; "Monsters of the Deep," fishing reel featuring the amateur sportsman, Mike Lerner; "Once Over Lightly," comedy featuring Maxie Rosenbloom. Three subjects in this group have been left untitled and will be announced at a later date.

TEN SPORTS PARADES IN TECHNICOLOR: Featuring sports sequences. The titles are: "Kings of The Turf," "Water Sports," "Hunting Dogs At Work," "Rodea Round-Up," "Breaking 70," "King Salmon," "Mountain Climbing," "Timing," "Winter Sports" and "Rocky Mountain Bear Hunt."

TEN MELODY MASTER BANDS: Director Jean Negulesco again handles the production on these musical reels. Bands names to be featured include: Leo Reisman, Emil Coleman, Richard Himber, Carl Hoff, Carioca Serenaders, Glenn Gray and the University of Southern California Glee Club, and Band.

SIX HOLLYWOOD NOVELTIES: Each subject is already finished. The series includes: "White Sails," "There Ain't No Such Animals," "Then And Now," "Miracle Makers,' "Points on Arrows," starring archer, Howard Hill, and "Hobbies of the Stars," showing polo as it is played by such film players as Jack Oakie, Buddy Rogers and Joe E. Brown.

TWENTY-SIX MERRIE MELODIES CARTOONS IN COLOR: Produced by Leon Schlesinger.

SIXTEEN LOONEY TUNE CARTOONS: Also produced by Leon Schlesinger.

High Admissions for "Sergeant York"

Following its national tradeshowing on August 4th, "Sergeant York" will be released as the first Warner attraction of the 1941-42 season for showing in theatres at the advance price scale of 75 cents to $1.10, it was announced by Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager of the company. This policy means that the picture will not be shown at any lower prices for the remainder of the year at least.

The only place where "Sergeant York" has opened to date is the Astor theatre on Broadway, New York, where the picture has played to capacity attendance at $2.20 top price since its premiere. On August 11th it moves to a larger Broadway theatre, the Hollywood.

It was reported that Warners already have some 300 contracts for the picture.

Sears Honored in Chicago

As the chief social event of the Warner Brothers sales convention at the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago, James E. Coston was to give a cocktail party and buffet on Thursday in honor of Gradwell Sears.

After a 13-year absence from Broadway's legitimate stage Eddie Cantor will return this fall to appear in a musical version of "Three Men On a Horse," first presented in 1935, and subsequently a film version of the new show, to be entitled "Banjo Eyes," to be made by Warners, according to an announcement from the company. The play is scheduled to open at the Hollywood theatre at 51st Street and Broadway, following the run of "Sergeant York" which moves into that house on August 11th. The stage version will be produced by Mr. Cantor and Albert Lewis.

Capra Film Scheduled

Frank Capra has been signed to produce and direct one picture—"Arsenic and Old Lace,"—for Warners, which will go into production within two months. The company made it clear the picture would not be made by Frank Capra Productions, Inc.

With Frank Capra away from Hollywood, a spokesman there said this deal does not preclude the possibility of his joining United Artists, but feeling that completion of the UA deal would be some time off, he wanted to make a picture in the meantime.

The first screen performance of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo will be presented in a series of three-reel Technicolor with full symphony orchestra accompaniment, according to the terms of a contract signed this week by Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production, and S. Hurok, representing the Ballet Russe.

West Coast Theatre
Long Beach, California

June 26, 1941

This picture is a sleeper. It received a sustained and a sincere round of applause. Displaying a job of perfect casting the picture presents a succession of perfect gems of acting. Charles Ruggles is superb and his makeup and characterization of a lovable old miner is delivered in sympathetic style that won the audience's approval right from the beginning.

Phillip Terry, playing the "Parson," should be in demand after the picture is seen by other producers. He is definitely headed for stardom. Ellen Drew was ideal in the role of a dance hall girl.

Any manager who plays this picture as an ordinary companion feature is missing on its value, for if handled correctly, there are additional ticket selling possibilities aplenty to be gained from properly publicizing its worth.

Comment cards were 100% complimentary, not one bad one being found. A well produced, pertectly cast action melodrama that was spotted with many laughs and excellently directed.

ALTEC TO SERVICE THEATRES WITH SYSTEM OF NEWS 'PUMPED' TO SCREEN

Local and National Advertisers Would Pay for the Service; New Transmission Unit Will Eliminate the Use of Slides

Headline reporting, growing importantly on the air in these days of unprecedented world wide headline making, is ready for the motion picture theatre.

First reported in these columns more than two years ago, an innovation in the presentation of news to patrons in feature-showing theatres is ready for testing and 25 cities have been selected in which the new method of transmission of news flashes and bulletins, 'pumped' into the house, will receive its first critical analysis.

Invented by Paul Davis, of New York, privately financed, distributed and serviced by Altec and reported by Trans Radio News, the new form of news transmission employs a regular teletypewriter in which a few changes have been made.

The exhibitor will pay nothing for the service, his payments coming from national or local advertising sponsors who, in turn, will be given free time on the exhibitor's screens with flash 'plugs' or advertising mentions of the sponsor's products. Negotiations are now under way with national advertisers.

Up-to-the-Minute News

Essentially, the scheme is to utilize film in the teletype in place of paper and the words are cutout for quick, legible presentation on the screen. Chief feature of the new plan is the method of transmission, by which the news is sent to the screen within a few minutes after it occurs.

Theatres throughout the country which subscribe to the new service would be tied in to regular leased news wires. Thus, the flashes on important news events would reach the theatres as soon as they reached the newspapers. The theatres could then schedule regular screenings or could interrupt their programs to present an outstanding flash.

Under the plan as set up as present, the teletype circuits to theatres would be cut in at regular intervals. During these periods, the top news events of the preceding few hours would be transmitted in a concise form—much in the fashion of headlines. It is expected that these flashes will be confined to approximately 30 words apiece, but more wordage can be arranged for if the news item is outstanding. If the news screening came between shows, most houses would use four transmissions daily. When the time came for the presentation of the news, the cut film could be taken from the teletype and inserted on a spool and shown—all in a matter of a few seconds.

Mr. Davis' invention is described as doing away with previous attempts to typewrite news flashes, and show them by means of a slide projector. Under the new method, the words are said to be clear and easily legible, and without blurry edges.

Technically, the invention involves the use of regular film in place of paper in the roll of the teletype located in the theatre. As the news is received, the teletype keys cut the film.

The length of the news transmission would depend upon the amount of time the exhibitor wishes to devote to the news screenings. Several 30-word items can be shown in a three-minute screening.

There will be no charge to the theatre beyond the lineage charges necessitated by running the teletype into the house. There will be no charge for the news, but advertising will be sold on a package basis. Tentative plans call for a 15 or 20-word commercial announcement at the beginning and end of each screening. The advertiser would be billed on the basis of the amount of patronage the theatre enjoys. For example, if six theatres in Idaho, with a combined pulling power of 500,000 patrons per week, used the scheme, the advertiser would be billed on the basis of 500,000 "readers." Similarly, if three theatres in New York drew 500,000 persons, the package rates for the three theatres would be the same as the package rate for the six Idaho theatres. The ad announcements could be at the beginning, in the middle, or at the end of each transmission.

The more advertisers interested in the scheme, the longer a screening period would be needed, as it is generally expected that the amount of news will be held almost constant. If it is ultimately decided that ten items of approximately 30 words apiece is enough, there will be 10 items on each transmission regardless of whether there are one or five advertising plugs during the screening.

The theatre manager's only worry would be in getting the film off the teletype and onto his projector for the screening. Under the arrangements which it is understood have been made, the news would be fed by the nationwide Trans Radio News syndicate and would be 'piped' to the theatre teletypes from the regional offices of the news service. Each transmission could include only top national and international news, or could include a number of items of statewide interest or even localized interest, if this was desired. The selection of the news items, it is said, will be left to the house manager. If the manager prefers the national and international news only, these items would be transmitted for each screening. It is understood that for the duration of the contracts, it will be impossible to make a change in the type of news desired. If a house contracts for strictly national or international news, this is the only material he will receive until his contract runs out.

The idea gives the theatres, for the first time, an opportunity to compete with newspapers and radio stations in serving the public. An example can be had with the recent speech of President Roosevelt. Thousands of theatre patrons remained by their radios to listen to the broadcast of the speech. With this new system, they could see the picture they wanted to see and still get complete news within minutes after its delivery.

The test screenings are expected to be held shortly. It is understood that Altec already has contacted many of the leading houses throughout the country and offered the system to them. The technical details have already been smoothed out and it is understood the plan is ready to function on short notice.

LOEW CAMPAIGN WINS ACCOLADE

In the case histories of noteworthy advertising successes compiled by the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, in New York, the newspaper campaign conducted by Donahue & Coe, Inc., for Loew's Theatres is included in the "Blue Book" published by the Bureau.

The campaign, replacing Loew's Weekly, which was previously distributed to theatre patrons, lists the theatres, pictures and the stars. Ads, ranging from 250 to 450 lines, were placed first in one daily, then in four, finally in eight papers in New York and Brooklyn. A score of suburban newspapeds carry local programs.

Oscar A. Doob, director of advertising and publicity for Loew's theatres, in the "Blue Book" said, "Our present newspaper schedule quadruples the amount of space we previously used, and brings us nearly six times the circulation we reached by the weekly bulletin . . . at no extra cost. And we 'contact' that circulation six or seven times a week instead of once. In fact we made this move, not to cut costs, but to get the maximum benefit from our advertising investment. . ."

Du Pont Seeks Pathe Stock

Pathe Film Corp. will be dissolved if the plan in negotiation for acquisition of Pathe's interest in the du Pont Film Manufacturing Corp. by E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. goes through as expected, it was indicated last week by Kenneth M. Young, president of Pathe Film. To iron out the plan 60 to 90 days more will be required, Mr. Young said, after which the matter will be presented to Pathe stockholders. Du Pont will offer to Pathe Stockholders du Pont common stock at a price of slightly more than $15 a share.

Net Profit, $23,007,636

E. I du Pont de Nemours & Co. and wholly-owned subsidiaries in report for quarter ended June 30, 1941, subject to year-end adjustments, show net profit of $23,007,636 after depreciation, obsolescence, federal income taxes based on law existing at June 30th, last, provision of $10,566,000 for excess profits tax and a $6,500,000 provision for contingencies, including allowance for unknown taxes, comparing with net profits of $23,126,507 in June quarter of previous year and $20,754,161 for quarter ended March 31st, 1941.

After deducting dividends on preferred stock and including $810,774 company's equity in undivided profits of controlled companies not wholly-owned, there was a balance available for common stock in June quarter of 1941 of $21,918,453, equivalent to $1.98 a share (par $20) on 11,050,987 average number of common shares outstanding during the period.

Mr. Young in explaining the du Pont-Pathe deal said taxes and other considerations had led to the move, and negotiations were progressing rapidly. Pathe Film owns 35 per cent and E. I. du Pont de Nemours 65 per cent of the shares of du Pont Film Manufacturing Co. At the completion of the deal the du Pont film company would be a wholly-owned subsidiary of the du Pont de Nemours company.

HOLLYWOOD PUTTING MORE COLOR ON THE SCREEN IN '41-42 SEASON

Present Plans Call for 23 Features for Year to Come from Seven Companies; Five in Production at Paramount

From HOLLYWOOD BUREAU

Exhibitors are going to have a bigger splurge of color—23 features—to throw on their screens during 1941-42, five more full color films than during the season just ending and 12 more than 1939-40.

The 23 features include three full length cartoons. Seven companies have announced color pictures; four others plan none. The later include Columbia, Republic, Universal and PRC.

Twelve of the color productions for the new season are either finished or in work now, a record for pre-season color activity. Another record was established by Paramount which currently has five color pictures in simultaneous production, something never achieved before by any single studio.

The company lineup is as follows:

Paramount plans a total of seven; 20th Century-Fox, four; Warners, RKO and Monogram, three each; M-G-M, two, and United Artists, one.

The 23 may be added to or subtracted from, depending upon exigencies of production, adaptability of the finished scripts' contents to tints, possible changes in budgetary confines, and the myriad "bugs" between a studio announcement and the actual start of shooting.

Roosevelt in Color

In Hollywood this week, it was reported that despite his duties in the Marine Corps, Capt. James Roosevelt is taking on a new film fling, as vice president of Gasparcolor, Inc., headed by George Converse. The company is preparing to announce a new color process for 35 mm. film. A. J. "Jack" Guerin, who was manager of International Cinema Laboratories which Pathe took over some time ago, is associated in the venture and Jean Goeller is secretary of the company. Gasparcolor refused to confirm or deny Mr. Roosevelt's connection. His last Hollywood association was with the now defunct Globe Pictures which produced "Pot of Gold" for United Artists.

Cinecolor is scheduled to announce a new three-color process on which it has been working for some time. Monogram is counting on using that for its three.

According to Technicolor's annual report, 70,126,156 feet of positive print, including features and shorts, was shipped by the laboratory; the 1940 total jumped to 80,632,168 feet of positive.

Paramount's seven for the new year includes "Mr. Bug Goes to Town," the cartoon currently in work at Max Fleischer's studios in Florida. The number next year compares to four during 1940-41, and three, including a full length cartoon ("Gulliver's Travels"), during 1939-40.

The four other Paramount color pictures currently in work are:

C. B. DeMille's "Reap the Wild Wind," with Ray Milland, John Wayne, Paulette Goddard, Robert Preston and Raymond Massey; "Bahama Passage," with Madeleine Carroll, Stirling Hayden and Flora Robson; "Louisiana Purchase," with Bob Hope, Victor Moore and Vera Zorina; "Her Jungle Mate," with Dorothy Lamour, Richard Denning and Jack Haley.

Others contemplated by Paramount for the new period are "For Whom the Bell Tolls," from the Ernest Hemingway novel, and C. B. DeMille's "Rurales," a story of Mexico's famed police. The studio last week reached a decision to film the Hemingway story in color, and DeMille is expected to rush production on "Rurales," as soon as possible because of the Pan-American 'good will' possibilities.

Twentieth Century-Fox, which last week at its Los Angeles sales convention announced only part of its new program, has four productions listed for color treatment, two of which, "Weekend in Havana" and "Belle Starr," have been finished and were shown in rough cut form to the salesmen. Also planned for coloring are "Sioux City," outdoor epic which may star Randolph Scott, and "My Gal Sal."

There is every possibility that 20th Century-Fox will add to its color category, inasmuch as the new program will be marked by a policy of flexibility. During 1940-41, seven color features were made by Fox, and in the season prior to that, five were released.

"Captains of the Clouds," story of the Royal Canadian Air Force with James Cagney and Dennis Morgan in the top spots, is already under way at Warners. Also planned in color are the musical, "Carnival in Rio," in which Morgan may have the top role, and "Saratoga Trunk," being developed by Casey Robinson, one of the lot's top writers, from the Edna Ferber story.

"Dive Bomber," Warners' sole color offering of the 1940-41 season, has an Aug. 30 release date. The preceding season saw only one tinted film, "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex."

On its new year's schedule, RKO has listed the two Walt Disney features, "Dumbo" and "Bambi," and the long projected David Butler picture on horse racing, "True to Form." For purposes of this survey, Disney's "Fantasia" was listed as a 1940-41 film. RKO during the year just ending also had two films with color sequences—"Irene" and Disney's "The Reluctant Dragon."

For its first color offering since the 1939-40 season when "The Gentleman from Arizona," processed by Cinecolor, was released, Monogram announces "Navy Bound," service story; "Land of the Sky Blue Water," which will utilize Charles Wakefield Cadman's music; and "Freckles Comes Home," from the Gene Stratton Porter story.

MGM, which now has in general release "Billy the Kid" and "Blossoms in the Dust," is currently editing "Smilin' Through," starring Jeanette MacDonald, Brian Aherne and Gene Raymond, for the new schedule. It is presumed for survey purposes that "The Yearling," started this year and dropped after several weeks' shooting, will be untangled and made for the 1941-42 term. The other color offerings from this studio during the closing season was "Bittersweet," and the general release of "Gone with the Wind."

Kipling Story Started

Alexander Korda's "Jungle Book," from the Rudyard Kipling pen and starring Sabu, is now before the Technicolor cameras for United Artists. "The Thief of Bagdad," from the same producer, was the only United Artists offering from 1940-41 in this category.

Universal, Columbia, Republic and Producers Releasing Corp. have listed no tinted productions, and have had none during the period covered.

Nineteen of the 23 color films listed will be distributed by the five companies which are parties to Consent Decree selling.

It is reasonable to expect that, after the initial uncertainties of the new method of merchandising are passed, program readjustments will be made.

And the odds favor an upward, not downward, move for more attractive "dressing" of pictures, and that means more color.

In four of its current (1940-41) engagements, Paramount's color film, "The Shepherd of the Hills" co-starring Harry Carey, Betty Field anad John Wayne, "is stocking up with the business scored by Paramount's 'Caught in the Draft' and 'Virginia,'" according to the home office.

COLOR PRODUCTION FOR THREE SEASONS

Following is a table of comparison of the new season's color production announcements with those delivered during the 1940-41 and 1939-40 terms:

Company	Promised 1941-42	Delivered 1940-41	Delivered 1939-40
Paramount	7(a)	4	3(b)
20th Century-Fox	4	7	5
Warner Brothers	3	1	1
RKO	3(c)	1(d)	0
Monogram	3	0	1
MGM	2	4(e)	1
United Artists	1	1	0
	23	18	11

(a) Includes one feature length cartoon.
(b) Includes one feature length cartoon.
(c) Includes two feature length cartoons.
(d) Includes one feature length cartoon.
(e) Includes general release of "Gone with the Wind".

Universal, Columbia, Republic, and producers Releasing Corp. do not plan, at least at present, color pictures, nor have they had them in the last two seasons.

Net $2,104,460 in Paralysis Drive

The 1941 celebration of President Roosevelt's Birthday to raise funds for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis produced a net total of $2,104,460.53, the President was informed last week in Washington, D. C. The total compares with $1,497,245.74 raised in 1940, the previous high mark.

The film, stage and radio industries contributed to the drive. Keith Morgan was national chairman, and Joseph M. Schenck was national vice-chairman and state chairman for California. Eddie Cantor was chairman of March of Dimes of the Air; Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, was chairman of the national radio advisory committee, and Nicholas M. Schenck was chairman of the motion picture theatres committee.

MAJORS CHARGE ANTI-BLOCKS-OF-5 LAW GIVES STATE POWERS TO OWNERS

Attorneys for Five Companies Seek Injunction to Stop Enforcement Until Test Is Concluded; Hearings August 8th

A charge that the Minnesota anti-consent decree law delegates to exhibitors the exercise of powers vested solely in the state's legislature by its constitution leads a barrage of grievances cited in court actions filed by the majors at Minneapolis this week, Warner Brothers raises the issue of illegally delegated power in its complaint.

Heavy calibre legal arguments were aimed at the anti-decree law as attorneys for all five consenting distributors sought first an immediate court order to halt enforcement of the law and then court rulings that the statute is unconstitutional. By Friday, July 18th, all had filed motions asking for injunctions restraining state officials from enforcing the law pending court test. Elaborate complaints citing alleged violations by the statute of the United States and Minnesota state constitutions ask a declaratory judgment against the law's constitutionality.

Hearing Postponed

Zero hour in the distributors' battle to continue operations from their Minneapolis exchanges in accord with the blocks-of-five and other selling provisions of the U. S. consent decree was postponed at the last minute until August 8th. The Ramsey county district court at St. Paul granted a request by the state and individual defendants that the initial hearing be postponed.

The distributors, each claiming no less than 20 specific causes for action against the Minnesota law, attack it as special legislation against a particular group, as depriving them of property and the right to do business without due process of law, and as direct interference with interstate commerce and the right to supervise interstate corporations reserved to the Federal government in the Sherman anti-trust act.

Named as defendants by the complaints are James F. Lynch, Ramsey county attorney at St. Paul; Ed J. Goff, Hennepin county attorney, at Minneapolis, and Thomas J. Gibbons, sheriff of Ramsey county. They are the officers who must enforce the law on the Minneapolis exchanges. The court is asked to permanently enjoin them, and their successors from doing so.

Arguments against the law's validity are based in the complaints in three general categories. The first attacks it as an unjust invasion of the distributors' rights to hold property and do business, as guaranteed equally to all by the U. S. and state constitutions. A second argument alleges unlawful interference by a state with the federal regulation of interstate commerce. Additionally, complaints accuse the Minnesota legislature of delegating its powers to theatremen, to the injury of distributors, thus causing discrimination.

Attorneys report that the case involves many fundamental issues, even renewing the state's rights vs. federal regulation controversy which has been at the basis of some of the most important and historic decisions handed down by the U. S. Supreme Court. A long battle over the law is seen in some quarters, with a prospect of ultimate appeal to the highest court.

THOMAS EDISON DAY APPROVED BY SENATE

A resolution proclaiming February 11th Edison Day in honor of Thomas Alva Edison, inventor of the motion picture, has been approved by the U. S. Senate. The resolution was introduced jointly by Senators Barbour and Smathers, both of New Jersey. A similar resolution introduced by Representative Vreeland of New Jersey had previously been adopted by the House.

Meanwhile, the distributors, caught between the September 1st deadline of the consent decree, with its compulsory trade shows and blocks-of-five limit, and the threat of prosecution from the Minnesota authorities ask the court to suspend the law until the case has been decided. Otherwise, they assert, they will have to suspend operations from Minneapolis exchanges and will suffer irreparable damage and financial loss during a long-drawn court test.

The first two complaints entered at St. Paul by Loew's, Inc., and Warner Brothers describe in detail the operation of the film industry in Minnesota. Emphasis is placed on the fact that all feature pictures are produced outside of Minnesota, usually in California, prints manufactured outside the state, and finished pictures shipped in continuous flow of interstate commerce to Minnesota exhibitors.

The Loew complaint, prepared under the supervision of J. Robert Rubin and C. Stanley Thompson, home office attorneys, notes also that the Minneapolis exchanges engage in interstate service to theatres in the Dakotas, and nearby Wisconsin, also exchanging and borrowing and lending prints with exchanges in surrounding states. Of 480 theatres in Minnesota, MGM sells to 328; to 102 of 162 in North Dakota; to 71 of 108 in South Dakota; and 61 of 77 theatres in the part of Wisconsin served by Minneapolis, according to the complaint.

Other sections of both complaints describe the methods of soliciting applications for licenses from Minnesota theatres by exchange salesmen and notes that all contracts with major companies are, and long have been, binding only with the approval of officers at New York home offices. Prints once purchased are in a continuous flow between the exchange and theatres in Minnesota and neighboring states, it is asserted. Furthermore the distributors note that all used film, at the end of run is returned to New York for salvage. They argue that the distribution of motion pictures is wholly interstate in character.

Revenue Loss Cited

The Minnesota law is also attacked as depriving exhibitors, without cause or due process, of the revenue accrued from spot-booking, split deals and special releases. The Minnesota law, requiring sale of a full season's product curbs these practices which the complaints state are essential to both distributor and theatre operator. Warners assert that over 20 per cent of its sales in 1940 were to theatres thus taking less than the full season's issue of 48 pictures.

Further the distributors claim the right to license less than a full season's product, to sell pictures cancelled by one exhibitor, and to determine the percentage of such cancellations.

Submitting copies of the New York consent decree, the distributors quote its provisions for block-of-five sales, trade shows, and the arbitration of disputed cancellations on moral, religious or racial grounds. The Minnesota law, it is asserted, contravenes the federal decree, made in process of enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust act. Arbitration machinery to settle cancellation controversies, and a complete reorganization of exchanges and selling methods in the Minneapolis area to meet the decree will be upset, at great cost, if the state law is upheld.

All the complaints assert that the distributors intend to comply with the federal consent decree and observe that the Minnesota law would place their officers and employes in contempt of Judge Henry M. Goddard and the federal district court at New York if they complied with the state regulations in violation of the decree. It is noted that counsel have advised the companies that they are not likely to secure relief from the decree under Section 23 on the grounds that it is in conflict with other legislation.

Penal provisions of the Minnesota law which provide fines up to $1,000 and imprisonment up to a year for violations are also attacked by the briefs as excessive and likely to impose a multiplicity of prosecution on officers, directors, and agents of distributors.

Discrimination Charged

The act is contrary to the Minnesota constitution, it is charged, because it bars a lawful and legitimate business, deprives property and contract rights without due process, curbs interstate commerce, does "not bear on public health, safety, or morals or to any other phase of the general welfare," is discriminatory class regulation and is not a valid exercise of the state's police power.

The Warner complaint further asserts "that said act attempts and purports to delegate to persons designated therein as exhibitors the exercise of powers vested solely in the legislature of the State of Minnesota under its constitution. The paragraph is directed against the 20 per cent cancellation clause embodied in the Minnesota law.

In naming the county attorneys, Mr. Lynch and Mr. Goff, and Sheriff Gibbons the complaints assert that the officers have notified the distributors that they are in possession of information regarding violations of the state law and are threatening indictment and prosecution. The enforcement and threatened action is causing the distributors irreparable damage, it is asserted, in asking a temporary suspension of enforcement until the law is tested.

If the Minnesota law is enforced compliance will result in either loss of a substantial portion of business in the state or violation of the consent decree, the summation asserts. Further it is stated that the law enables exhibitors to acquire more pictures than they need for the operation of their theatres, thereby restricting product for competitive houses.

Metro's lawyers note that after showing one group of pictures, not likely to exceed 25 per cent of a yearly output, in Minnesota in compliance with the federal decree it would be unable to sell any more pictures in the state during that year.

"Immediate compliance with the terms of the act and provisions of the consent decree will be detrimental to the public and exhibitors of Minnesota," they also say, in addition to causing large immediate pecuniary loss to the distributors. Noting that there is no course by which the distributors can avoid great and immediate danger of irreparable loss they ask an immediate temporary injunction to be followed by a permanent injunction against enforcement and a declaration that the law is unconstitutional.

PRC LISTS 42 FEATURES FOR 1941-1942; MGM ADDS 20% MORE SHORTS

Loew's Sets $2,500,000 for Advertising; Announces 28 More Field Promotions; Wanger Reports Four for New Year

With the announcement of higher budgets for its new product; a material increase in its sales force, and an announcement of 42 pictures for 1941-42, the first of a series of regional sales conventions of Producers Releasing Corporation gets under way at the Statler Hotel in Cleveland, on Saturday.

Arthur Greenblatt, general sales manager, will take charge of the proceedings after brief statements by O. Henry Briggs, president, and Leon Fromkess, executive vice-president in charge of operations. Franchise holders, branch managers and sales personnel from Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Pittsburgh and Milwaukee will attend.

4,000 Hold

Mr. Greenblatt said the company had 4,000 accounts on its books, and expected 6,000 next year.

"The company promised 38 in 1940-41, and has delivered 100 per cent on exact release dates promised," he said. "Thirty-four of the 38 have been delivered to date, and the remainder will be ready for release as scheduled."

Features for 1941-42 are grouped as follows:

SPECIAL: (4): "Girls' Town," "Jungle Siren," "Fighting Sons," "They Can't Get Away With It."

PACEMAKERS (8): "Duke of the Navy," "Hard Guy," "3 Men and a Girl," "The Ghost and the Guest," "Marines Take Over," "Light-fingered Ladies," "The Devil's Sister," "Honeymoon Island."

SPITFIRE ACTIONS (12): "Flying Fortress," "Broadway Big Shot," "Harbor Patrol," "The Mad Monster," "Today I Hang," "Wabash Cannonball," "Forward March," "I'm From Arkansas," "Flying Colors," "Dawn Express," "Law of the Timber," "Convoy Courage."

WESTERNS (18): 6—"Adventures of Billy the Kid," starring Buster Crabbe; 6—"Frontier Marshal" Series, with Bill Boyd (the Cowboy Rambler), Lee Powell (original Lone Ranger) and Art Davis (the Rhythm Rider): 6—"The Lone Rider" Series starring George Houston.

Mr. Greenblatt said production on the 1941-42 program was under way.

Franchise holders and members of the field organization at the regional meeting were: Lee L. Goldberg, Bernie Rubin, J. Lawrence, of Cleveland; Nat Kaplan, Joe Goldberg, Donald Duff, Cincinnati; Sam Abrams, Jos. W. Bohn, Indianapolis; William Flemion, Bert Foster, Carl Zipper, Detroit; Charles Miller and Victor Bernstein, Chicago; Ed Hickey, Milwaukee; Milton and Lew Lefton, Godfrey Lefton and Joe Fleshin, Pittsburgh.

The next regional will be held at Atlanta, August 9-10, with the following attending: Ike Katz, David Katz, B. S. Bryan, W. H. Rudisell and B. Elliott, of Atlanta; Ed Heller and E. Miller, of Charlotte. Fred Goodrow, Wm. Thomas and P. A. Sliman, of New Orleans.

On August 16-17, the third regional sales meeting will be held in Dallas, followed a week later, August 23-24, by a meeting in Kansas City.

Other meetings covering the remaining P. R. C. exchanges will follow at intervals of one week.

Following the regional meetings, Mr. Greenblatt will go to the coast to confer with George Batcheller, in charge of feature production, and Sigmund Neufeld, supervisor of westerns, on the 1941-42 program.

JUKE-BOX FILM GETS RECRUITS

A 27-minute free show on the training of the Army Air Corps, presented by a juke-box movie machine, has been installed in Pennsylvania Station in New York. Currently showing a film "Wings of Steel" the installation and presentation is designed to recruit young men for the air force.

MGM Raises Shorts List for New Year

"Anticipating greater competition in the shorts field than ever before," MGM will spend 20 per cent more on its shorts program next season with no increase in the number of subjects, according to William F. Rodgers, the company's general sales manager. The program calls for 78 shorts in 84 reels, in addition to 104 issues of News of the Day.

MGM's '41-42 shorts program provides for two main classifications of shorts, factual and fictional. First of the latter will be a two-reeler of Edgar Allen Poe's "Tell-Tale Heart," with Joseph Schildkraut. The factual subject is exemplified by another two-reeler, untitled which will serve as a report to the public on the progress of the National Defense program with OPM head, William Knudsen, and Army and Navy chiefs, General Marshall and Admiral Stark, explaining.

According to series, next season's Metro program will be divided as follows: Six two-reel specials, three of which will be "Crime Does Not Pay" subjects; and ((all single reelers) 14 "Pete Smith Specialties," 10 "John Nesbitt Passing Parade," 10 "Our Gang Comedies," 10 "MGM Miniatures," including another "Nostradamus" and other psychic subjects from Carey Wilson. In color will be 12 "FitzPatrick Traveltalks," 10 to be made in the United States and two in Canada; and 16 "MGM Cartoons," featuring the "Bear in the Army" series and the cat and mouse characters, "Tom and Jerry."

Dietz Announces an Ad Budget of $2,500,000

An advertising appropriation of approximately $2,500,000 was announced this week by Howard Dietz, executive in charge of promotion, as the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer budget for 1941-42.

A total of 145 newspapers divided between the major population centers of the eastern, central and Pacific Coast sections will receive the bulk of the newspaper allocation. Magazine circulation reached by the company advertising will be in excess of 55,000,000.

Twenty-eight additional promotions among MGM's field personnel were announced last week-end. This brings the total of recent advancements within the ranks to 119.

Eight men have been added to the selling staff. They are Thomas Aspell, Jr., San Francisco, formerly office manager; Arthur O'Toole, Chicago, from booker; William Potts, Chicago, from checking supervisor; Ralph Amacher, Portland, from second booker; Harry Blatt, Seattle, from first booker; Albert Adler, Kansas City, from student salesman; Edwin Moriarty, Pittsburgh, from office manager, and Thomas J. Connors, Jr., Pittsburgh, from student salesman.

Jay H. Zimmerman, former auditor, replaces Aspell as San Francisco office manager. John Zonmir, Pittsburgh, former first booker, is advanced to office manager at that exchange. Oliver Broughton, formerly checking supervisor at Milwaukee, is advanced to supervisor at Chicago, and Ken Vought, Milwaukee checker, replaces Broughton there.

With O'Toole's promotion to sales at Chicago, bookers Walter Bennin, Harry A. Hopkins and Clarence Keim all were advanced in that department. Another new Chicago booker is Frank L. Michels, formerly bookers' clerk.

At Kansas City, Roger Leaton, former shipper, becomes fourth booker. Replacing Leaton is his former assistant, Clyde Cox, and the latter's position has been assigned to Bernard Knight, who was a member of the shipping department.

Don Hiatt succeeds Blatt as first booker at Seattle, moving up from second booker, and is himself succeeded by Patrick G. Madigan, formerly a clerk.

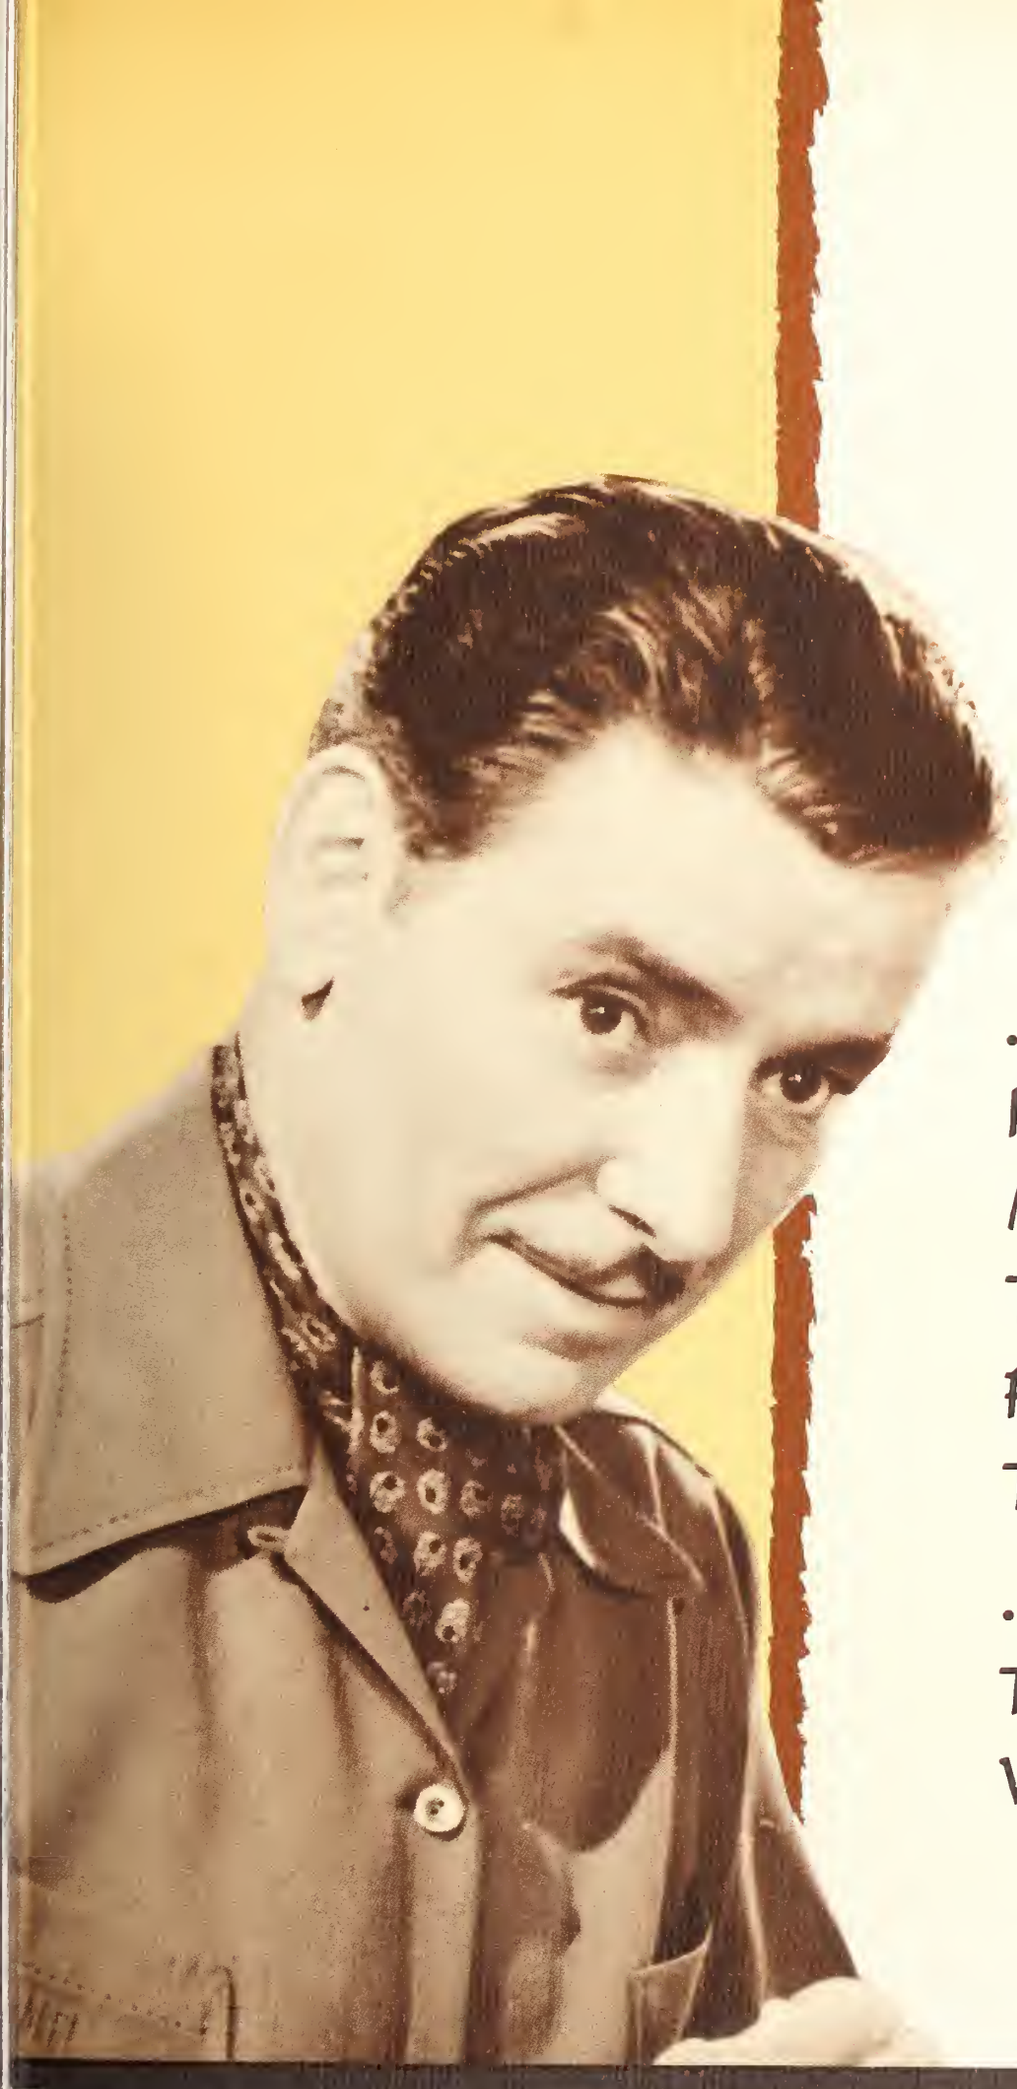
At Portland, Barry Carpenter, former head shipper, is promoted to second booker. Pittsburgh advancements include Max Shabason, from second booker to first booker; Irvin Jacobs, from third booker to second booker; Edward Micinski, from bookers' clerk to third booker, and Anthony Semplice, from clerk to fourth booker.

Mollye Davis is advanced from bookkeeper to assistant cashier at Cleveland, and at the same office Rose Silverman, formerly film inspector, becomes bookkeeper.

Wanger to Release Four Through UA

Walter Wanger has announced that he will release four productions through United Artists within the next 12 months, thus doubling his last season's production activity, UA reported in New York this week.

In 1940 Mr. Wanger made two pictures, "Foreign Correspondent" and "The Long Voyage Home," both voted among the year's 10 best films.



The Wanger studios are now in the fifth week of production on "Sundown," starring Gene Tierney with Bruce Cabot, George Sanders, Harry Carey and Joseph Calleia, under direction of Henry Hathaway. This film has as its background the Kenya-Somaliland border of Central East Africa, a locale never pictured before.

Ernest Lubitsch has been signed by Mr. Wanger to direct a comedy melodrama entitled "To Be or Not to Be," from an original story by Lubitsch and Melchoir Lengyel. Edwin Justus Mayer is now writing the final script, and production is slated to begin in late October.

The third Wanger production is "The Eagle Squadron." Within a few days Director Harry Watts with Ernest Schoesdack will begin filming scenes for it in England. Fourth of the Wanger films for 1941-42 is "Cheyenne," a Western action drama made as a successor to "Stagecoach."

Famous Players Executives Meet

Executive personnel of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation began a four-day meeting at the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec, Friday, to discuss the company's operating policy for the coming season. J. J. Fitzgibbons, president, was to preside.

WARNERS FOLLOW TREND TOWARD DECREE SCREENINGS IN EXCHANGES

Announce Trade Showings for Three Films; Offer Extra Showings If Exhibitors Are Unable to Attend Screenings

Following widespread lack of exhibitor attendance at the theatres in which majors are showing their first blocks of five under the Federal consent decree, and following the move last week by some majors' sales executives, with an eye to costs, to consider transferring such screenings from theatres to company projection rooms, Warner Brothers this week followed suit, and in announcing the screenings of its first three films in its first block of five, announced all of them for projection rooms, most of which are properties of other companies. Previously, 20th-Fox had used its own exchanges for first screenings.

At the same time, in an announcement apprising exhibitors of its policy, and of the screenings, Warners also invited exhibitors to request special private screenings, if necessary, when they can't attend the regular territorial showings.

The three first Warners films are "Flight Patrol", "Smiling Ghost", and "Navy Blues." In a box accompanying this article, their screening locations and times are given.

Attendance "Disappointing"

The announcement by Warners said: "Thus far, exhibitor attendance at other companies' trade showings has been admittedly disappointing. The reasons for this are open to argument. It appears evident, however, that with five major companies regularly tradeshowing their product, the average exhibitor will have to forego either the screenings or his business.

"We don't want either to happen. . . .

"Get to our screenings, if you can. If you can't, call or write any of our branch managers, and arrange a private showing, at your convenience."

With exchange trade show reports before him disclosing that less than one-fourth of the theatres on his company's accounts were represented at the first trade screenings an executive of one of the "Big Three" this week predicted a quick death to advance screenings in theatres. His company, with one of the largest exhibitor turnouts at its initial screenings has already decided to move from theatres to screening rooms for its second group of 1941-41 pictures.

Lack of Interest Cited

Attendance at none of the industry's trade showings was sufficient to justify the hiring of large theatres, or the use of special ballyhoo he observed. Pointing out the lack of exhibitor interest in the screenings, and the physical impossibility of seeing all trade shows, the sales official said that already criticism by the Department of Justice and other groups of alleged "blind selling" have been answered. Exhibitors he noted, will continue to learn about product through trade papers, and by its records during earlier runs.

Only in the case of controversial pictures, or pictures of doubtful ability will the ordinary exhibitor be interested in seeing it in advance, the executive remarked. "There is no point in seeing the A pictures or C's," he said, "but by seeing the B's an exhibitor might find points with which to exploit them to an A status". In the case of the controversial picture a theatre operator might want to examine it for the purpose of studying its suitability for his own community. Such screenings could almost always be arranged in the pre-decree era too, he noted.

The much discussed application of trade shows to selling and promotion is a fizzle according to the spokesman, long experienced in the field. Exchange screening room formalities will be the fate of trade shows he said, and possibly the whole scheme will be dropped when the time comes for the Department of Justice to review decree provisions.

In New York, sales executives of the majors studied the exhibitor attendance; but said little, beyond allowing the reports they were disappointed, and allowing their actions to speak for them; actions such as those by Warners and Fox.

MGM, however, through its sales manager, William F. Rodgers, announced it would not change its procedure until late next month, if at all. The company's showings were to be completed this week. All are in theatres.

Mr. Rodgers noted that attendance in some localities was good, admitting that in others it was bad. He also noted that the company has no further showings until next month; so it has time to change policy, if necessary.

Meanwhile, 58 exhibitors attended the Wednesday, July 23rd showings of "Charley's Aunt" and "Dressed to Kill" at the 20th Century-Fox exchange in New York. The morning showing of the same pictures drew 16 exhibitors to the exchange. An M-G-M showing of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" was held at the Astor Theatre at the same time.

The 20th Century-Fox trade shows were the company's first in New York. "Wild Geese Calling" and "Private Nurse" were shown at the exchange Thursday, July 24th, morning and afternoon. "Sun Valley Serenade," the fifth picture in the first block, was shown Friday, July 25th.

With an attendance of more than 200 film buyers and their guests, Paramount's first group of five pictures began their trade showings Monday at the Normandie Theatre in New York. First two pictures, in the group of five screened this week, were "Buy Me That Town" and "Nothing But The Truth."

Paramount trade showings Tuesday at the Normandie Theatre consisted of "Henry Aldrich

Trade Screenings Set for Three, All in Exchanges, on August 12th

Warner Brothers, on Wednesday, announced consent decree advance trade showings for its first block, of three pictures: "Flight Patrol," "Smiling Ghost" and "Navy Blues." Last week, Warner trade-screened a single feature, "Sergeant York."

All of the pictures are to be shown during one day: Saturday, August 12th, and nearly all of them in local film exchanges, most of the exchanges being those of competitive companies. The schedule follows:

Allied Asks Five Screenings a Day

for President" and "New York Town." The final picture in Paramount's group of five, "Hold Back the Dawn" was screened Wednesday.

Twentieth Century Fox completed the showings of its first five pictures in New York on Friday, July 25th, with "Sun Valley Serenade" at the exchange. About 65 exhibitors attended.

Connecticut Allied has asked the majors to screen their first block of five in one day; that is, each company to screen its product thus, so that an exhibitor can, in one week, by going each day to the exchange of a major, see the entire first blocks of five offered by all five companies in the decree. Suggested procedure was two films in the morning, one in the afternoon, and two in the evening.

The move was voted at the last week's meeting of the unit, which was to write each exchange.

First company to show two pictures in one day, in the New Haven territory, in which the unit meets, was Twentieth Century Fox. However, it was noted that at the afternoon screening, conflict arose because with an MGM screening.

Attendance in New Haven has been small.

Philadelphia Approves New Policy

Screenings in exchange projection rooms have the support of Philadelphia territory exhibitors, according to consensus. The Twentieth Century-Fox screening of last week was cited as a good example. MGM and RKO showed their features at the Aldine theatre—to seats mostly empty. About 150 exhibitors, 25 of whom were from out-of-town, attended the five Fox screenings, that company's room holding 26 seats. It was noted the smallness of a projection room minimizes interference from outsiders: relatives, friends, and kibitzers.

The Independent Theatre Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan is not only depending upon its own reviewing committee, to appraise films at trade screenings; it is also receiving reports from three other states.

The system now has reports from the anonymous committee of seven sent to members after each showing.

Rydell Quits 'Box Office'; Kennahan Joins Warners

With an employment contract still eight months to run, Lou Rydell, last Friday, resigned as advertising manager for Ben Shylen's Box Office, effective in two weeks. He previously held a similar position at Variety, joining Mr. Shylen three years ago.

At Film Daily, Hollis Kennahan, resigned from the editorial staff to become trade paper contact for Warner Brothers at the home office. He succeeded Don Carle Gillette, who was moved up to an editorial post with Mitchell Rawson, eastern publicity manager. Mr. Gillette was formerly with ASCAP and prior to that was with Film Daily.

Lou Davidson and Henry Sember are also additions to Mr. Rawson's staff at Warners.

James Stephenson, actor, died in Hollywood Tuesday of a heart attack at 52 years. He had expected to play in Warners' "King's Row," and had appeared lately in the company's "Flight Patrol" and "The Letter."

FCC Resumes Newspaper-Radio Investigation

Hearings on the newspaper ownership of broadcasting stations were resumed by the Federal Communications Commission Wednesday, in Washington, with staff witnesses continuing to present the basic facts regarding newspaper radio operations.

DeQuincey Sutton, Commission accountant, submitted financial data regarding the comparative investment ratios of newspaper-owned and non-affiliated stations showing that the most prosperous high-powered stations are those connected with newspapers, while network managed and operated stations lead in the less important frequencies, newspaper stations standing second in the regional channels and lowest in the local channels.

Mrs. Roosevelt Will Lead "Night of Stars"

Principal guest at the annual "Night of Stars," which this year will occur November 26th at the Madison Square Garden, New York City, will be Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, the United Jewish Appeal announced Tuesday.

Mrs. Roosevelt is to open the program, upon which stars of stage, screen, and radio will appear. Mrs. Roosevelt's invitation to appear, was sent by the Appeal's women's division, of which Mrs. Joseph Stroock is chairman.

Walt Disney will produce the cover for the souvenir program.

Sues Browne, Bioff for Loss of Union Card

Not only did they oust him from the union but George E. Browne, president, and William Bioff, Hollywood deputy of the IATSE, caused "humiliation and mental anguish" to George H. Davis, studio technician, according to a suit he filed against them and other union leaders, in Los Angeles Tuesday for $45,000 damages. The complaint charged they engineered his expulsion from Local 37 following a dispute between the IATSE and United Studio Technicians Guild. He asked $20,000 for the alleged mental anguish and humiliation.

GWTW in Archives

The National Archives in Washington has added a print of "Gone With the Wind" to its historical motion picture collection, it was reported this week. Official acknowledgement of the acquisition was made to David O. Selznick, producer of the film, in a message and certificate issued by Archivist R. D. W. Connor. The message read: "The enclosed certificate is tendered to you as evidence of my appreciation of your cooperation in making this excellent production a part of our historical motion picture collection."

New Golden State House

The Golden State theatre circuit will add its 96th house to its California chain on Friday evening when the new Del Mar theatre is opened at San Leandro, in the San Francisco Bay area. According to David J. Bolton, supervisor of the GS Metropolitan Oakland Division, the suburban house will seat 1,100 and is one of the most modern installations in northern California. Glenn Caldwell will manage the new theatre.

CANADIAN TRADE SEES U. S. DECREE SCREENINGS DYING IN FEW MONTHS

Dominion Exhibitors See Lack of Interest Killing Showings; Great Britain Would Move to Canada If Invaded by Nazi

by W. M. GLADISH
in Toronto

Canadian exhibitors are regarding the current compulsory trade show wave in the United States with some misgivings, the doubt being coupled with the casual prediction that the plan will meet a more or less natural death before many months.

The Dominion, with its British influence, would have seemed to have been the country where trade showings should have become an institution of the industry but, insofar as general exhibitor gatherings are concerned, they have long since been relegated to the storehouse of things forgotten. Even in Great Britain, according to wisps of information which have been wafted across over a period of years, the trade show practice has been spoiled to some extent because of abuses that crept in despite the organized efforts of exhibitors and distributors. The dead-head problem has become acute on occasion, for one thing, the hangers-on taking full advantage of opportunities to enjoy a preview for nothing—then becoming more critical than the critics with the result that neighborhood opinions regarding a coming picture reached a definite form long before release.

Private Screenings Held

There are private screenings in Toronto but no trade shows. And the screenings are strictly private, for a reason. There is a screening room at the headoffice of Famous Players Canadian Corp. but only company officials see the pictures in order to classify them for audience types and for allocation to certain theatre units where they may do well at the boxoffice. Somebody from the advertising department also takes in a screening to gather ideas for display advertisements, apart from what appears in the pressbook. At one time, Famous Players had a committee which viewed a percentage of films and then rendered judgment on the qualities of the individual product, the findings being mimeographed and sent out to the theatre managers, for the guidance of the latter. It was eventually discovered that the managers did not pay much attention to the committee's comment and the practice was dropped.

At Odeon headquarters there is a screening theatre where officials of Odeon and Associated Theatres screen various features and shorts to judge their suitability for different types of theatres. Very few exhibitors or theatre managers look at a picture before they get a booking, however. Occasionally there is a special screening for representatives of religious, educational or patriotic organizations but this is a matter of goodwill. One or two newspaper critics frequently ask for an advance screening of a film so that a review can be written to coincide with the picture's theatre opening. But the exhibtors—the great majority of them—do not want to take the time to watch a pre-release screening.

There are a few theatre proprietors who ask for screenings in order to judge the merits of a film for themselves. One of these is Simon Meretsky, owner of a group of theatres in Windsor, Ont., who makes frequent trips to Toronto for the purpose. His plan is justified because his different theatres cater to different audience types and the exchanges willingly co-operate with him in the matter of pre-showings. His judgment in the matter makes money for both parties in the long run.

Independent film distributors in Toronto have tried to organize trade shows on their own account many times. Invitations have been sent out, a theatre has been secured for the event, arrangements have been made for projectionists—and then a handful of exhibitors turned out. Last year a local distributor organized a trade screening in Toronto and the only one who turned up was the proprietor of the theatre where the picture was to be shown.

The consensus in Canada is that trade-showings in the U.S.A. are only a flurry and that they won't survive.

COOPERATIVE GROUP SET IN NOVA SCOTIA

A cooperative theatre association has been established in Amherst, N. S., to operate as a joint effort plans on booking, buying, renting theatre equipment of all kinds, advertising, etc. A. J. Mason of Springhill, N. S., is president and M. E. Walker, Halifax, vice-president.

Naming of a secretary-treasurer is in abeyance. The directors are, Fred Gregor, New Waterford, N. S.; Peter Leger, Bathurst, N. B., and Frank Sobey, Stellarton, N. S. Lined up with the new group are about 26 theatres, it is claimed, and additions are expected.

Canada's Position—If Britain Is Invaded

by PAT DONOVAN
in Montreal

As a result of the war, Canada has become excitedly more conscious of the motion picture.

In the beginning, the war materially improved the type of film product being produced by the National Film Board. This branch of the Public Information Department of the Dominion government has matured under the supervision of conscientious department heads and has given Canadians a national film, enjoyed and appreciated from coast to coast.

"Canada Carries On," the current propaganda series being distributed once monthly to Canadian theatre houses is not a pretentious undertaking, but possesses quality and interest value unknown in the earlier days of lethargy. "Canada Carries On," produced more conservatively, follows the pattern of "The March of Time," also seen in Canadian theatres.

The war has moved producers in the British Isles to consider moving their facilities to the new world and Canada. It has been pointed out in broad imagination that, if an invasion of British shores by Nazi forces should prove successful, and if the government, like the governments of other invaded countries, is forced to flee, Canada, closest Empire member will provide security for the refugees.

It is also presumed that in such an event refugees will include, as in other cases, motion picture people . . . technicians, actors and actresses. The United States film colony is presently playing host to a number of French refugee film principals.

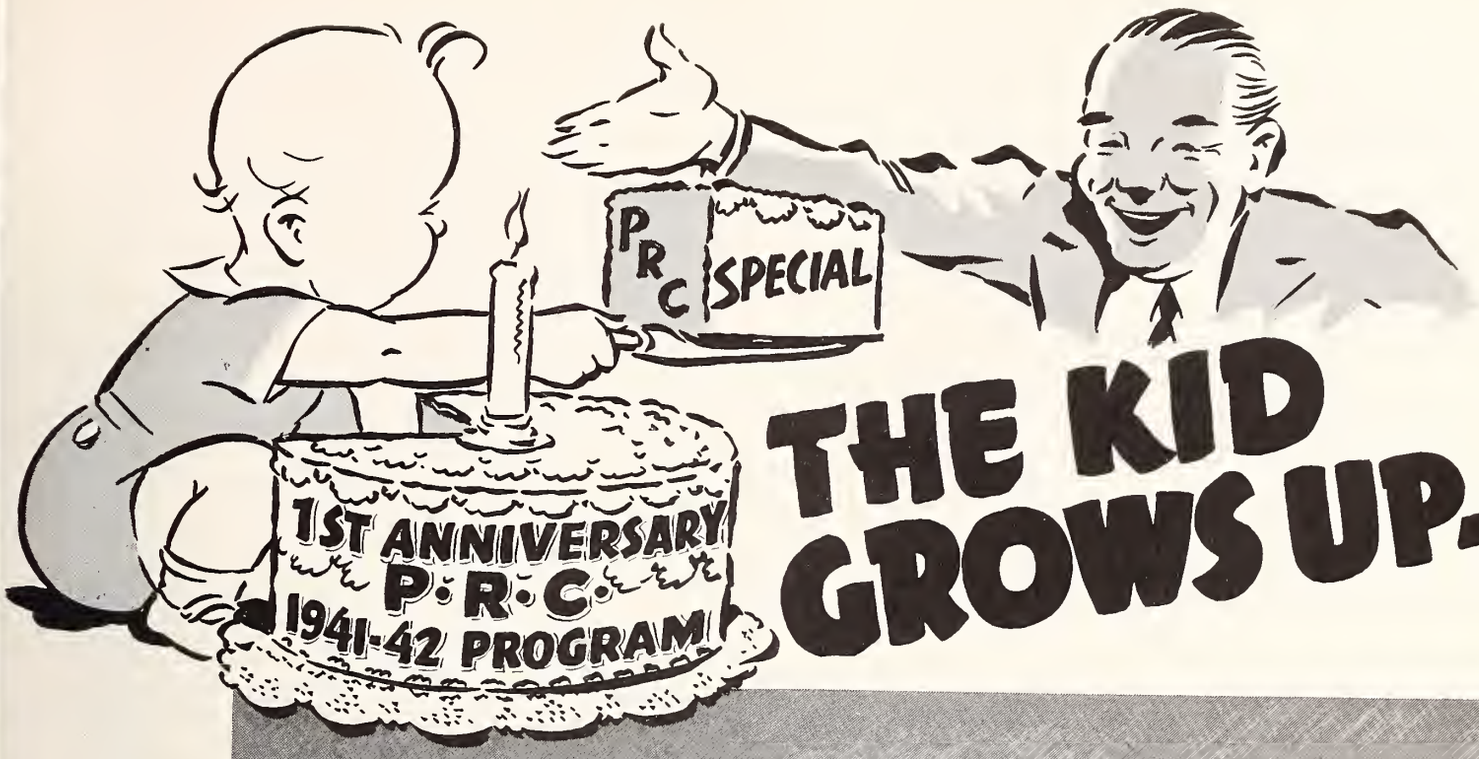
Present British near-mastery of the air over England has eliminated fears that public buildings and film studios would be razed by attacking Nazi planes, and for that reason, serious though of removing all production facilities to Canada has been abandoned.

One British film producer, Gabriel Pascal has reportedly made arrangements for production of an outdoor film in Montreal. Whether the entire production will be filmed here, or merely location scenes, is not known, but it nevertheless brings Canada more intimately in contact with an industry about which it knows little. Only previous experience with big-time movies was when location scenes were shot in Montreal for "49th Parallel," in which Raymond Massey is featured. Work on the film is continuing in British studios.

Further to this picture of growing Canadian interest in the motion picture, and the growing interest of producers in Canadian atmosphere was the recent announcement that Warner Brothers are to film "Captains of the Clouds," R. C. A. F. story, in Canada.

Work on location in Ontario air training centers is already in advanced stages. A special train from Hollywood bearing stars, technicians, equipment and other movie-making paraphernalia will, by this time have arrived on location.

"Quickies" Irk Canada



Canadians for years past have been irked by Hollywood "quickies" which have persistently portrayed them as fur-traders and Indian reserve agents. "Captains of the Clouds," although exploiting the Canadian air defense effort, will probably include scenes of Canadian life which should renew Canadian faith in Hollywood.

The motion picture is also playing an important role in training troops throughout the Dominion. This information was revealed in an earlier dispatch from National Defense headquarters in Ottawa. Projectors and other equipment have been supplied to various training centers for education of troops in matters military. It is understood that crack troops are filmed as they execute difficult "schemes." These are then played back to recruits in training camps where a detailed study of the "scheme" is made. Eventually the government hopes to have every camp supplied with motion picture apparatus. Film entertainment is also included in the plan.

"The Prime Minister," English-made film being distributed by Warner Brothers will have its premiere in Ottawa on August 13. The story is the life of Disraeli, Victorian Prime Minister of England. John Gielgud, noted Shakespearean actor, plays the leading role.

Arrangements have been completed to turn over the entire proceeds of the premiere to the Queens' Canadian fund. The Governor General, Prime Minister King and other government and civic leaders will attend the Ottawa event. The film will open in Toronto and Montreal on the 14th and 15th of August respectively.

In conjunction with the showing of the film, the Canadian Broadcasting Company plans a coast-to-coat broadcast of a story on the lives of various English prime ministers, including Winston Churchill. The radio program will be heard in the premiere house. Frank Wallis, CBC principal, is fashioning the script.

Hold That Ghost

(Universal)

Gangway for Abbott & Costello

Yes, Ladies and Gentlemen, they've done it again.

In fact, by count and with witnesses, the Messrs. Abbott and Costello got more, louder and longer laughs in "Hold That Ghost" at its Hollywood preview than they did in "Buck Privates" or "In the Navy."

Veritably, it is to be doubted if any two comedians ever got so many laughs in one picture any time anywhere.

There are a number of reasons.

The two principal reasons are Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, of course.

A third reason is that these gentlemen are at this time at that peak of public acceptance at which they can do nothing unfunny, nothing unsensational, even if they tried, and they're not trying.

An especially important reason is that the material they use in this outing is straight and unchanged from medicine-show days, absurd and fantastically forthright stuff about phoney ghosts in a candle-lit hotel on a stormy night, gaunt hands reaching out of nowhere, bodies tumbling from walls—spook stuff in its simplest and most hair-raising form.

Don't quarrel with the boys' stuff. Audiences don't. Why should anybody? Certainly it's corn. Has been for years. The boys know it. You know it. Maybe the public knows it. But the public loves it, wants it, and lots of it, right now. Maybe corn will win the war.

No need for telling the public that the 60-some minutes of this number during which the theatre walls vibrate and the rafters ring to the shrieks, squeals, howls and screams of the customers was filmed before "Buck Privates," held back, then fitted out with a fore-piece and an after-piece, more or less connected with the main body of the structure, in which Ted Lewis and his orchestra, together with the Andrews Sisters, entertain. That's none of the public's business, and the Lewis contribution to the proceedings is decidedly a plus in the audience's favor.

Burt Kelly and Glenn Tryon share credit as associate producers of the hit, and Arthur Lubin is entitled to a deep bow by reason of his direction.

Joan Davis, who shares a number of sequences with Costello on equal terms, rates a palm.

It's a film which all the family, from grandfather, who'll remember the material from medicine-show days, down to junior, who knows all about ghosts, can share with glee.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, to a mixed audience, paying and professional, which set a new high in Glendale annals for volume, consistency and duration of laughter.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Whistling in the Dark

(MGM)

Farce Melodrama

MGM has a new star and exhibitors have a picture that will make audiences stop sitting on their hands and worrying about all the cares and troubles they had when they entered the theatre.

The star is Red Skelton, and the picture is "Whistling in the Dark."

The preview audience in Glendale literally tore down the house in applauding both.

Given his first feature top billing, Skelton delivers a knockout performance, displaying remarkable ability in delivering the same type of comedy that marks Bob Hope's performances. He resembles Hope physically.

Taken from the play by Laurence Gross and Edward Childs Carpenter, the film's story is a hilarious concoction in which leaders of a racketeering "cult" kidnap a radio crime serial figure, "The Fox," and force him, upon threats to his and two girls' safety, to evolve a foolproof plot to kill the heir who stands in their way to a million dollars. "The Fox," played by Skelton, manages to prevent the murder and call police to the rescue.

Producer George Haight in his first achievement at MGM and director S. Sylvan Simon deserve the plaudits for a well rounded job. It's just about perfect for the type of zaney comedy it contains. Treated farcically throughout, the story nevertheless gave the audience the proper proportions of suspense, romance and action.

Supporting Skelton (he'll also be seen in the forthcoming "Lady Be Good" and from the preview reception, in many more films) are Conrad Veidt as the cult leader, Ann Rutherford and Virginia Grey as the two girls in love with "The Fox," Rags Ragland, Henry O'Neill, Eve Arden, Paul Stanton, Don Douglas and others.

Previewed at the Alexander Theatre, Glendale, to a reaction which can be described by all those Hollywood adjectives meaning colossal, and more. Lobby talk was that with proper vehicles, Skelton will become one of the top film comedians.—V. K.

Sun Valley Serenade

(In 20th-Fox first block)

Something to Rave About

Here is an attraction showmen can write rave ads about with confidence.

Items to rave about include:—

Sonja Henie at the peak of form on skates and skiis, and attaining at last a proficiency as an actress which might carry her far without the aid of runners;

Glenn Miller and his orchestra in the pink of melodic fettle, allotted an amplitude of running-time for their rhythms and recorded, both photographically and on the sound track, in a manner to thrill the youngsters and soothe the oldsters in about equal measure;

Mack Gordon-Harry Warren music, specifically four songs sung by various principals and played by the Miller organization in a manner to fascinate the most exacting and least informed audience alike;

John Payne in a romantic lead, also singing, which confirms all the expectations voiced by the experts who've been forecasting fame for him;

Lynn Bari in command of a secondary lead which calls for characterization as well as song;

The Nicholas Brothers in a dance routine, shared in part with a pert young woman whose way with a rhythm is much as theirs is, defying the laws of gravity and anatomical construction but never those of syncopation;

Milton Berle and John Davis in comedy roles held within check and profiting from the restraint;

Skating sequences, staged by Hermes Pan, eclipsing all of those in which Miss Henie glided previously into the ranks of the Ten Biggest Money-Making Stars;

Skiing sequences surpassing any ever filmed.

If these be not enough items for inclusion in the rave ads which the subject in full suggests, Milton Sperling's accomplishment as producer, in combining these quantities in a whole as snugly integrated as a stained-glass window, rates a rave of its own. Another is in order for H. Bruce Humberstone's self-effacing direction. Still another is merited by Edward Cronjager for photography which adds to the effectiveness of every scene and sequence.

The story presents Miss Henie as a Norwegian refugee arriving in this country consigned to custody of a bandsman, played by Mr. Payne, who has volunteered to sponsor a child but is compelled to carry on with the arrangement nevertheless. His band goes to Sun Valley, so does she, and the rest of the romance is played out more or less, but not too much, as expected.

Showmen who make it a practice to personally endorse one or two pictures a year in their advertising seldom find a film so suitable as this for the purpose.

Previewed in studio projection room to a small but unanimously gratified group.—W. R. W.

Franz Schubert's Life and Music

Here is the music of Franz Scuhbert, climaxed by the St. Luke's choristers' singing of his Ave Maria, brilliantly recorded in terms of narrative.

Here is the life of Franz Schubert, its tragic shadows relieved by patches of accompanying humour, fascinatingly blended with his compositions.

Here is, nevertheless, one picture, one entertainment, not two running alternately, rich in appeal to eye, ear and intellect, a tribute to the production and ability of William Sakely and his associate, Douglas Maclean. Ilona Massey, as the girl in the composer's life, Alan Curtis as the composer and Albert Basserman as Ludwig Von Beethoven contribute to the serious side of the story three performances that stamp it with dramatic appeal. Binnie Barnes and Billy Gilbert supply comedy interludes which afford sharp contrast to the essential earnestness of the production.

Director Reinhold Shunzel's control of cast and subject matter accounts for a balancing of values seldom if ever accomplished in this type of film.

On account of its subject matter and the quality of its music, the film offers special advantages to showmen who take steps to interest schools, churches, civic and cultural groups in its presentation. United Artist exploitation men have been campaigning in this way on behalf of the film, in advance of release, laying groundwork upon which local campaigns may be developed. Cultivation of this field of exploitation is clearly indicated by the nature of the attraction, a film of character and distinction.

Previewed under extraordinary circumstances on July 29th when Hollywood press and profession turned out en masse to attend "The last Hollywood press preview" at the Padre Vineyard, Cucamonga, Calif., with a champagne hour, a barbecue dinner and assorted suitable ceremonies preceding the screening and all hands expressing themselves as immensely pleased with the production.—W. Nothing but the Truth

Hope-Goddard Collaboration

Showmen who like to document their promises to customers can background their exploitation of this third collaboration of Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard by references to "The Cat and the Canary" and "The Ghost Breakers" as other stage successes which the pair have brought to the screen without loss of point or sparkle, with respect to this number, they can also remind their trade that the play itself has a triple past, having entertained not only as stage play and novel, but also, on two occasions, as a motion picture.

Promises made on the foregoing basis, or a basis in general kind, are warranted by the material which the paying guests will see on the screen. Promises couched in terms of comparison with "Caught in the Draft," on the other hand, are venturesome, less because of any discrepancy in the quality of the two pictures than because this one lacks the timeliness and the relation to national defense which Mr. Hope's current sensation possesses.

This story, it will be remembered, is about a young man who wagers that he can tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, for 24 hours. The scene is Miami, the people are millionaires or reasonable facsimiles, and the complications are mainly conversational, although there is one sequence in which slapstick gets an outing. The homour is of the saying rather than the doing variety, however.

Production by Arthur Hornblow, Jr., who also produced the two films mentioned, is of the best, and direction by Elliott Nugent, director of one of them, measures up.

Trade shown at the Ambassador Hotel Theatre, Los Angeles, to an exhibitor representation, augmented by wives and families, which laughed heartily at the picture and were overheard by your eavesdropping correspondent on the way out of the auditorium expressing enthusiastic approval of the project.—W. Buy Me That Town

(In Paramount first block)

Gangsters Go Straight

As paired, by coincidence of trade showings with "Nothing But the Truth," also reviewed in this issue, this treatment of the racketeer-regeneration theme proved itself a substantial program-balancer. Coming up first in the sequence of screenings, it stood on its own feet with nary a wobble and might do the same on most single bills.

Strength of the story emanates from a fresh basic situation, a racketeers' cash purchase of an unincorporated town, impoverished by closing of the factory which established it. His racket is to provide a hideout for wealthy men evading arrest, defaulters and such, by arresting them for speeeding and holding them in jail, safe against other claims upon their persons. He and his aides, who take the town positions of authority, are won over to honest ways by local associates, including of course a girl, and they repel a former pal and boss who attempts to take over, restoring the town to prosperity when they reopen the factory to handle a national defense contract.

Played for comedy rather than melodrama, although not neglecting this aspect, the picture ripples along its course without overdoing sentiment or the pastoral note. Lloyd Nolan as the chief racketeer and Barbara Jo Allen (Vera Vague) stand out in a well balanced and experienced cast.

Produced by Sol C. Siegel, with Eugene Zukor as associate, and directed by Eugene Forde, the production assays a high ratio of entertainment per dollar invested.

Previewed at the Ambassador Hotel Theatre, Los Angeles, as a runner-up to "Nothing But the Truth" in the company's first series of trade showings, the picture gave excellent account of itself before an exhibitor audience.—W. R. W.

Hold Back the Dawn

(In Paramount first block)

Love Story

Exhibitors will not have to hold back anything in exploiting "Hold Back the Dawn," for here is a picture that has all the ingredients of entertainment, almost of life itself. It is an exciting and dramatic story, with love as its motif; it has enough action to please even western fans and enough intelligent dialogue to attract those who wear their foreheads high. The cast is star-studded—Charles Boyer, Paulette Goddard, Olivia de Havilland, Walter Abel.

The very beginning of the picture is different and out of the beaten path. "George Iscovescu" (Charles Boyer) enters the Paramount Studio main entrance and crashes the set where Mitchell Leisen (the director of "Hold Back the Dawn") is directing Veronica Lake in a scene from "I Wanted Wings." He contrives to get the director into conversation and attempts to sell him a story, his own story, which then unfolds on the screen.

"Iscovescu" is a triple-threat man, a dancer, lover and scoundrel, and because he is true to character some situations confine the picture to adult entertainment. In attempting to get into the United States through Mexico, he marries "Emmy Brown," a school teacher, portrayed by Olivia de Havilland, merely as an expedient. His intention is to leave her almost immediately and continue an old liaison with "Anita Dixon" (Paulette Goddard), a former dancing partner. But fate and the scenario decree otherwise, and his eventual regeneration is brought about.

Boyer's performance is a distinguished one, executed with skill and sophistication. There should be no difficulty in getting the women to come to the theatre, with his name emblazoned on the marquee.

"Emmy Brown" is a tribute to both the man who created her and the actress who portrayed her. She is a woman of character, intelligence and indestructible loveliness. Beautifully enacted by Olivia de Havilland, it is not to be

Down in San Diego

(In MGM First Block)

Young America Adventuring

There's a lot of zip in the action of this adventure of young Americans, a heap of suspense as it nears the finish line and a sock in the ending. By no means the biggest picture in the first MGM block, nor the one the most talk's been about, it is nevertheless a trim and timely piece of merchandise.

The film has to do with the efforts of a band of adolescents to make good a young man's escape from the influence of gangsters who seek to continue their control of him after he has joined the Marine Corps. Believing he has committed a murder, he promises to take orders from a man whom he does not know is a foreign agent. The youngsters follow him to San Diego, obtain employment in the town, track down the foreign agent, prove to the marine that he is innocent of the murder, and are in at the roundup of the would-be saboteurs. The marine is killed in the finale, an episode in which Navy planes sink a ship by bombing, this tragic incident adding power and integrity to the story.

Direction by Frederick Stephani and direction by Robert B. Sinclair give momentum and importance to a tale which, under indifferent handling, might have fallen apart or strayed off into the realm of absurdity. Performances are uniformly adequate, that of Dan Dailey, Jr., as the marine, standing out under minor emphasis.

Previewed at the Ambassador Hotel Theatre, Los Angeles, to a morning turnout of exhibitors and trade press who indicated by audience behaviour a general approval of the production.— W. R. W.

Henry Aldrich for President

(In Paramount first block)

Comedy Leavening

This is a spritely, bright comedy having marked distinction as exceptional family entertainment. Third in the series of the "Aldrich Family" group, the film involves "Henry's" candidacy for the presidency of the high school student body. He wins the race but not until after outwitting the skullduggery of his rival and piloting an airplane to carry back the man who could reveal the plot against him.

The studio's new "Henry"—Jimmy Lydon—makes of the characterization a fully believable youngster who is not overly bright and who manages, sometimes not through his own fault, to tangle himself up effectively at the wrong times. Supporting him are Charles Smith as "Dizzy," June Preisser, Mary Anderson, John Litel, Dorothy Peterson, Martha O'Driscoll, Vaughn Glaser, Lucien Littlefield and others.

Coming from the Sol C. Siegel unit, the film was guided by Hugh Bennett who was elevated from film editor to director, having this as his first effort. Joseph Sistrom was the associate producer.

Outstanding is Bennett's direction, he having taken complete advantage of every situation to obtain more than its quota of laughs.

New York Town

(In Paramount first block)

Love Against Skyscrapers

Exhibitors should experience no great difficulty in exploiting a picture like this bearing a title, exciting in itself, and featuring a cast including Fred MacMurray, Mary Martin, Robert Preston, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman, Eric Blore and Fuzzy Knight.

The plot is comparatively simple and offers no apprehensions as to its eventual outcome. Yet, with the story unfolding against the great backdrop of New York itself, with its ceaseless flow of comedy, tragedy, drama, smiles and heartbreak, the illusion of substance is achieved.

"Victor Ballard" (Fred MacMurray) and "Stefan Janowski" (Akim Tamiroff) are business partners, the former snapping pictures and the latter painting enlargements. They befriend "Alexander Curtis" (Mary Martin), who is assigned to the selling of their art. Not being very proficient at selling, "Victor" conceives the idea that "Alexander" marry a wealthy man, (Robert Preston) in order to attain security and happiness. He does everything to make this possible, and then marries her himself, the meanie.

Highlights of the picture are a "Quiz Contest," which "Alexander" enters to raise cash to get her baggage from a landlady; the lunch to which "Victor" treats "Alexander," which is eaten at a counter where samples of food are distributed free, and a party on a boat which they crash, although they known no one and have no intention of sailing.

It is to be hoped that the radical theories about living in New York gratis, as here presented, do not have serious economic repercussions.

The performances are all good, with perhaps the characterization of Akim Tamiroff as an artist, and the comedy sequences by Fuzzy Knight as the progenitor of quadruplets, deserving special mention.

Wide Open Town

(Paramount-Sherman)

Cassidy Rides Again

Previous MOTION PICTURE HERALD reviews of Harry Sherman's "Hopalong Cassidy" westerns have pointed out the consistency of quality maintained by Sherman; his ability to improve with each picture the already high standards set by its predecessors; his skill in hitting upon story themes which have found wide favor in a market where cliches abound. "Wide Open Town," Sherman's last for Paramount's 1940-41 season, finds Sherman unrelaxed in his pitch.

William Boyd, named as Number Two Money Making Western Star in MOTION PICTURE HERALD-Fame's last poll of exhibitors, again appears as "Cassidy," being supported by Russell Hayden, making his last appearance as "Lucky," and Andy Clyde, whose role as "California" has been considerably built up for comedy. Others in the cast are Evelyn Brent, as a frontier town divekeeper and leader of a band of robbers and rustlers; Victor Jory, as her chief henchman; Morris Ankrum, Kenneth Harlan, Bernice Kay, Roy Barcroft, Glenn Strange, Ed Cassidy, and Jack Rockwell.

Sherman's veteran director, Lesley Selander, delivered a workmanlike job in telling the story of "Cassidy's" becoming sheriff of a frontier town in order to rally the honest townspeople to rid themselves of the criminals and find their stolen cattle.

Previewed at a Paramount studio projection room to a press and professional audience which enjoyed it thoroughly.—V. K.

Bad Men of Missouri

(Warners)

Outdoor Action

Terrific tempo marks "Bad Men of Missouri," a rootin' tootin' outdoor action picture which purports to tell the story of the Younger Brothers, Midwest terrors who are treated in the film as "Robin Hoods." Using physical rather than emotional impacts as attention holders, the film, with which historians may quarrel, shows the three brothers turning desperado after their father is killed and their home burned by a land shark, preying upon the wealthy to help their neighbors retain their tax burdened properties, and at its finish, lying wounded in a Minnesota prison where a posse's bullets put them and hearing that Missouri folk are starting a drive for a gubernatorial pardon.

Paralleling that theme is the romance of one of the boys and a townsgirl who attempts to use her influence to stop their depredations. This, however, is only a minor part of the film.

In directing the picture, Ray Enright, who had more or less of a straight narrative with which to work, successfully used a series of action packed incidents, that command audience attention to push the story along to a mounting climax.

The Younger boys are portrayed by Dennis Morgan, Wayne Morris and Arthur Kennedy. They are supported by Jane Yyman, Victor Jory, Alan Baxter, Walter Catlett, Howard da Silva, Faye Emerson, Russell Simpson and others.

The greater part of the picture was photographed outdoors. Harlan Thompson was the associate producer.

Previewed to the press at a Warners Hollywood studio projection room. Many comments on the fictionizing and whitewashing of the Youngers' "careers" were made. Despite this, however, the film gripped its viewers.—V. K.

Kisses for Breakfast

(Warner Brothers)

Comedy

Amnesia victims are peculiar people as witness the case of one of them in this comedy of errors. The victim in question marries not one but two wives. The net result is a story farfetched and much too fast moving. The capricious nature of the picture, however, draws attention to the action and away from the more fantastic aspects of the story. Then, too, the singing and engaging personality of the star, Dennis Morgan, adds the needed touch of reality.

Supporting Morgan are Shirley Ross and Jane Wyatt, wives one and two respectively; Jerome Cowan and Una O'Connor. Direction by Lewis Seiler was handled rather expertly considering the vicissitudes of the script.

Briefly the story has Morgan, who plays "Rodney Trask," marry "Juliet." After the wedding, "Rodney" is the recipient of a beating —this also involves a girl—and the evidence would indicate that he died in a fall from a cliff. But "Rodney" is quite healthy—except for that amnesia. He proceeds south, marries "Juliet's poor cousin, and—the truth will out—meets "Juliet" on his honeymoon up north.

There is one hilarious bedroom free-for-all, where the "Mrs. Rodney Trasks" try to regain their spouse.. It is handled merely for humor. It might be mentioned that "Rodney" pays dearly for his amnesia. He catches most of the blows in that free-for-all.

Father Steps Out

(Monogram)

Its story of the vintage produced by the public's awareness of the stock market following the repercussions of the 1929 crash, Monogram's "Father Steps Out" is a highly amusing story of a railroad president finding health inadvertently by his association, unlooked for at best, with two tramps, and overwhelming his rivals who attempt to take the railroad from him.

Paralleling this story and supplying the major motivation is the romance of a newspaper reporter, anxious to find out the circumstances of the change in ownership of the road, and the president's daughter. Principal characters are Frank Albertson as the reporter; Jed Prouty as the railroad owner; Lorna Grey as his daughter. However, carrying off thespic honors are Frank Faylen and Charles Hall, as the two tramps whom the road chief meets. Faylen enacts the more outstanding of the two comedy characterizations and does a job that will be long remembered.

Lindsley Parsons and his associate, William T. Lackey, produced the film, one of Monogram's best in recent months. Jean Yarbrough directed.

Sunset in Wyoming

(Republic)

Mount Warner Melodrama

With the towering peaks and the foothills of Mount Warner as the locale and enforced reforestation of land cut barren by a lumber company as the theme, Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette return in another Harry Grey production singing their cowboy songs and zestful ditties while furthering the cause of justice. With the usual Autry-Burnette action and comedy the film is swift paced and entertaining —typical of its predecessors.

Gene, as the leader of the valley ranchers whose homes are threatened by floods due to the lumber companies tree-cutting on the mountain, runs the gamut of adventure from fistfight to flood, in an effort to save the timber. It is not until the end when the expected flood has wiped out many of the homes that the officials of the company—one a pretty girl—realize what they have done.

George Cleveland as the powerless figurehead of the company renders an entertaining performance and handles his comedy—which he shares with Smiley Burnette—with experienced cleverness while the others in the cast, including Maris Wrixon, Robert Kent, Monte Blue and Stanley Blystone, aid in the progression of the theme and the eventual happy conclusion.

Direction by William Morgan and photography by Reggie Lanning does much to enhance the entertainment value and beauty of the picture.

Thunder Over the Prairie

(Columbia)

Melodrama Minus Motive

Columbia's second melodrama in the Charles Starrett series launched with "The Medico of Painted Springs" disappoints expectations prompted by that beginning. It is a collection of footage containing most of the materials common to westerns—ridin', fightin', shootin' and a portion of singin'—but lacks anything in the way of story to justify the activity.

The star dominates the fighting and riding sequences. Cliff Edwards and the Rhythm Rangers contribute the singing, a better grade of the stuff than common to westerns. Everybody in the cast participates in the riding, of which there is much, some without apparent reason, and the shooting is likewise general, also ineffective.

Attempt is made to correlate all this to a kind of story about some construction work, some Indians, some settlers and some wild horses, but the story doesn't hang together or get anywhere. Incidentally, there is no romantic undertaking of any kind to interest the distaff side.

Production by William Berke and direction by Lambert Hillyer are below their average.

Mystery Ship

(Columbia)

Melodrama

Replete with thrills, action and comedy, Columbia's "Mystery Ship" is solid topical entertainment throughout. The story deals with the United States deporting a group of saboteurs, subversives and spies to an unnamed foreign country or countries and their attempts to take over the ship in which they are confined on the high seas.

Paul Kelly as an F. B. I. man in charge of the prisoners, Lola Lane as a newspaper reporter to whom he is attempting to get married, Larry Parks making his film debut as another G-Man, Trevor Bardett, Cyrus Kendall, Roger Imhof and others constitute the cast.

Producer Jack Fier and Director Lew Landers have achieved an exceptionally well-made film offering. They had a substantial story to tell and told it concisely, excitingly and well. Lack of name drawing power is all that prevents the feature from being the top attraction in all situations it plays.

Bowery Blitzkrieg

(Monogram-Banner)

Melodrama

"Bowery Blitzkrieg" is the sixth of the series of melodramas featuring the "East Side Kids" that Sam Katzman's Banner Pictures is producing for Monogram release. The current film, which deals with the attempt of a gambling ring to fix a Golden Gloves tournament, and the reformation of a tough New York tenement youth, is easily the best of the lot.

Leo Gorcey, Bobby Jordan, Huntz Hall, Keye Luke, Warren Hull, Charlotte Henry, Bobby Stone, Donald Haines, Sunshine Sammy Morrison, David Gorcey are included in the cast.

Director Wallace Fox tempered the action with the comedy neatly, making the story quite acceptable film fare.

The March of Time, Vol. 7, No. 13

"Peace—by Adolf Hitler"

The latest issue of The March of Time, unfolding with a striking "V" and the opening bars of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, discusses Hitler's new propaganda offensive for peace. His career of conquest is reviewed, beginning with the annexation of Austria, and brought up to date with his attempts at victory in Russia and England. After each nation is brought under the Nazi swastika, the same words are uttered: "We have no more territorial demands." The subject frankly warns isolationists, Nazi-sympathizers in America, what a peace with Hitler would mean, if it could ever be arranged. On the other hand, the March of Time shows what President Roosevelt is doing to strengthen our own defenses and those of our allies, aided by the moral support of men like La Guardia and Willkie.—Running time, 18 minutes.

A Place To Live

(Irving Lerner Production)

Housing Documentary

Philadelphia is called "the city of homes." Its slum-dwellers use the phrase with irony; to its politicians and wealthy, mostly resident in suburbs, it is a good Chamber of Commerce slogan. Irving Lerner, independent documentary producer, in this picture, examines a report of the Philadelphia Housing Authority, and concludes that the slogan is archaic. The film urges replacement, or at least rehabilitation, of the city's miles of alley dwellings and warns that the slum-problem by endangering the health and moral growth of children threatens democracy itself.

The picture is well made, mostly on location, with good camera by Roger Barlow. A young boy and his mother, slum-dwellers seeking better conditions, are a story thread which gives the picture dramatic interest. Music by David Diamond and the narrative by Muriel Rukeyser and David Forrest are unobtrusive and effective. Editing is swift-paced, although the end, in a new housing project, is weak. The boy, William Kesselring, a non-professional, shows personality in a true-life role. Philadelphia audiences should find the picture instructive and it is suitable for other cities with housing problems of their own. Running time, 17 minutes.

Our School

(Realist Film Unit—British Ministry of Information)

Scholastic Documentary

A most enlightening study of education at a Senior School in Devon where the principles of democracy are directly applied to educational processes. The intermingling and reactions of the Devon children with the Cockney evacuees is handled with both purpose and wit. Though primarily propaganda it is direct and intelligent film reporting, all the more persuasive for its detachment and efficiency. Paul Rotha and Donald Alexander made it.

National Decency Legion Classifies 15 Pictures

Of the 15 motion pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week eight were approved for general patronage and seven were found unobjectionable for adults as follows:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage; "Hold That Ghost," "Man from Montana," "Medico of Painted Springs," "Raiders of the Desert," "Ruggles of Red Gap" (reissue), "Sing Another Chorus" and "The Story of the Vatican." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Bad Man of Missouri," "Dressed to Kill," "Hurricane Smith," "Jail House Blues," "My Life with Caroline," "Private Nurse" and "Ringside Maisie."

STRIKE THREATENS U. S. COMPANIES IN MEXICO

Film Workers Expected to File Demands for 50% Increase in Wages; August 6th Deadline

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

August 6th has been set as the deadline by the National Cinematographic Workers Union for a strike against the eight major American distributors functioning in Mexico—Metro, Paramount, Universal, RKO, Columbia, 20th Century-Fox, Warners and United Artists—to enforce the Union's demands for a new labor contract that among other costly clauses contains one which provides for a 50 per cent increase in the basic salaries of their employees. The basic pay is the straight wage, excluding allowances for overtime, etc.

No conversations are being conducted, thus far, to settle the dispute. The industry this week expected the Union to file a formal petition with the distributors and the Federal Board of Conciliation and Arbitration demanding a new contract. If the distributors refuse to sign the strike will be called on or about August 6.

If the distributors do not yield to the union it will be a heavy blow to the exhibitors, as, owing to war conditions, there will be an acute product shortage. There will be no major companies' products available and it is considered unlikely that the independent American producers will be of much help. There are no European pictures, only a few from the Argentine, and hardly any domestic production. Very old and makeshift films will be about all that are available.

Some sectors of the industry see the closure of most of the Republic's 851 theatres if the strike is called, and very poor business for those that do keep open. This shutdown, the exhibitors fear, will be much worse than the strike against the eight American companies that lasted for several weeks in 1935 and 1936. That strike ended in a complete victory for the workers.

Expectations are entertained in some quarters, though, that as the present Federal Government has demonstrated that it wants to be fair to capital it may act toward ending this conflict without the necessity for a strike.

Power Shortage Ended

Danger of local theatres and those of a wide adjacent sector having to drastically curtail their programs or perhaps close as a result of an acute shortage of electric power, has been eliminated, thanks to exceptionally heavy rains that have provided abundant water for the generating dams, and emergency works the Federal Government has performed to meet this situation.

Exhibitors had been worried by the power shortage which last spring had prompted the Federal and municipal authorities to exercise drastic conservation measures.

The Public Health Department has commissioned Daniel Manjarrez and Srita. Juana Roca, one of the few Mexican camerawomen, to make an odd scientific film covering onchocercosis, the terrible eye malady prevalent in Oaxaca, Chiapas and Vera Cruz states, southern Mexico.

At long last, picture production is showing activity. Five features are being made in local studios. It is indicated that Mexico will have a much greater picture production this year than in 1940 when the output was a mere 23, the smallest number in any year since modern film making was begun in this country in 1930 with the production of the first talkie by Antonio Moreno. There are some predictions that Mexican production this year will be about 40 features.

Among the bit players in "Simon Bolivar," the film story of the George Washington of South America that is in production here, is J. Chamorro, a son of the celebrated former President of Nicaragua.

Theatre Strike Threat Ended

Labor troubles for 11 Mexico City theatres as far as threatened strikes are concerned have been settled, for the time being, with the making of a new work contract that allows a substantial pay increase, from 15 to 25 per cent, and other benefits. This agreement replaces that which had been in force since 1939 and which the employees declared allowed them too low wages. The agreement was approved by the Federal Board of Conciliation and Arbitration and the National Cinematographic Workers Union has promised to abide by it.

The affected theatres are the Cine Palacio, one of the oldest first run houses here, and its circuit of the Cines Monumental, Granat, American, Odeon, Goya, America, Eden, Vencia and Rialto, owned by the Jose Echeverria Co., a Spanish concern, and the Rivoli and Roma, subsequent run theatres. The Union had threatened to strike against the exhibitors late in July unless they agreed to make a new labor contract.

The Cine Palacio has closed for modernization that will take about two months. The reconditioned theatre is scheduled to reopen for the national independence fiestas in September. The Palacio is the second old time theatre here to modernize. The Cine Olimpia, operated by Edmund B. Noonan, brother of Sally O'Neil, and the only American cinema manager here, recently underwent reconditioning after 20 years of continuous operation.

That pro-Nazi influence in Mexican theatres is not very strong nor extensive, is demonstrated by the fact that but one cinema in this country is mentioned on the American Government's black list of more than 100 companies and individuals in Mexico who have been found active in Hitlerists activities. The black listed theatre is the Salon Variedades in Monterrey, a northastern factory city. This theatre, which accommodates 1,200, is one of the 16 on Monterrey, which is Mexico's fourth largest city.

Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire and Charles Boyer are coming here during the national independence fiestas, September 14 to 16, officially announces Alejandro Buelna, director of the Federal Tourist Department, who has just returned from a good will expedition to Hollywood.

Miss Rogers and Mr. Astaire are to spend only 24 hours here. They will be tendered a reception by the civic government in the Palace of Fine Arts (National Theatre).

New Exchange Opened by Consolidated National

Ted Toddy, president of the Consolidated National Film Exchanges, in line with the company's program, has announced the opening of their New York exchange at 729 Seventh Avenue, and will serve their eastern territory accounts.

Consolidated National is the distributor in the United States and abroad of all-Negro motion pictures. The company's present line-up consists of 11 features and three series of short subjects.

Fire Damages Theatre

The Gem theatre in Almira, Wash., was slightly damaged by fire when a blaze broke out and destroyed 2,000 feet of motion picture film. Although the theatre was saved from serious injury, fixtures and booth equipment damages were in excess of $2,000.

Appel Leaves F.P.C.

Clair Appel, associate advertising manager of Famous Players Canadian in Toronto, Ont., Can., has resigned. It is understood he will join the N. L. Nathanson organization, but not with Odeon Theatres of Canada.

Gladdeck Joins Lewen Pizor

Fred Gladdeck, former exchange man in Philadelphia, has been named assistant booker for the Lewen Pizor theatres, an independent chain in Philadelphia and upstate Pennsylvania.

BRITISH WAR ON DOUBLE FEATURES IN MOVE TO CONSERVE FILM STOCK

Limitation of Programs to 11,000 Feet Suggested to Exhibitors; Circuits Adopt New Policy, but Independent Opposition Seen

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

With economy and conservation twin watchwords of the 1941 body politic and economic, it has surprised nobody in the industry that the call should now have gone forth for consideration of that problem in terms of film stock. Not least vital factor in the situation is that it has swiftly and directly brought to the forefront the controversial subject of single feature programmes.

Limitation of programmes to 11,000 feet has already been put forward to the exhibitor group as a potential solution of the problem—if problem it can really be termed. The circuits themselves, Associated British, Gaumont British and Odeon have more specifically gone into formal conference on setting up single feature bills over their 900 odd picture theatres. That there is yet to be considerable discussion between renters and exhibitors and among the exhibitors themselves on abbreviating programmes does not deter the farseeing prophet from suggesting that when it comes to a showdown little if anything is likely to be done about it at all.

Dissenting Factions Heard

There is not, it would seem, unanimity among the circuits themselves—there seldom is on crucial matters. Though the single feature bill has its champions and powerful ones at that within the distributor organization, a policy to that end is unlikely, and there is, despite the extence of support in one or two exhibitor areas, little enthusiasm in the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association itself.

With the realization of the obvious fact that conservation of stock is an industry rather than an exclusively distributor matter, the KRS instanter, worked out suggestions which were presented to the CEA for their consideration, and if approved, materialization. They were dismissed out of hand as inadequate and the case for their adoption unproven.

The scheme born out of the constructive genius of the KRS Council revolved around the London release system. London, first release point on the British picture house map, divides its releases into North and South, North London starts off with some 55-60 odd first run houses. South London's first run is the following week, with approximately 45 houses. The system thus calls for some 60 odd prints. The KRS scheme suggested an amendment of this system by the elimination of certain locations—mainly just outside the Central London radius—from the first run category. Twenty odd districts should run one week after release date in the North and 24 in the South. The saving on at least 25 odd prints at approximately 7,000/8,000 feet per print would, claimed the KRS, be considerable. The thesis was at first contested by the London CEA group, who with gallantry, offered themselves as open to conviction by statistical evidence.

From the CEA side, evidence of a sincere spirit of collaboration, came various alternative panaceas. They included the elimination of credit titles, the shortening of trailers, the omission of the redundant censor certificate from the screen, and last, but most significant of all, a reduction in footage per programme per cinema to 1,000 feet of film maximum exlusive of newsreel.

The Circuit examination of the question of single feature programmes came independently, and over and above the joint CEA-KRS talks.

Agreed on Three

To the first three devices there is thought to be little or no objection, either political or mechanical. To the fourth, the cutting of programmes, there is, as already suggested, plenty, not only in the CEA fold itself, but no less in that of the KRS. British exhibitors are probably in the main believers in the double feature bill, will take a great deal of persuasion and pushing to be moved from their regard for it. On the other hand, though certain leading U.S. distributors here have on more than one occasion publicly pleaded for the single feature bill, other members of the KRS, who market double feature programmes considerably, are not likely to agree to a policy which would cut across their commercial livelihood. It is understood, of course, that to cut programmes to 11,000 feet would inevitably mean a single feature and shorts.

On the other hand the exhibitors, from whose camp first same the initial suggestion, are chary about any move which might further aggravate the product situation, and lead to a greater shortage. The product shortage consideration is in fact thought by some to be the key of the whole matter rather than the established vogue of the double feature bill.

Circuits Blamed

A directly opposite view is taken by some exhibitors. There was a significant discussion this month at the South and East Lands Branch of the CEA, in which the view was expressed that the continued insistence of the circuits on double feature bills was making the whole problem of product more acute. Arthur Peel, independent of that area, prophetically asked the circuits to reconsider the whole question of double feature bills before the stock of available film was exhausted, pointed with both derision and mordancy, to programmes running for four hours and up against which it was difficult for the independent to compete. It would seem, however, in that area to have been less the problem of double features than of double supers, the circuits being allegedly able to skim the cream of the supers whilst the independent had to content himself with one "A" film and a re-issue.

Though the whole ground is to be gone over again, maybe more thoroughly this time than heretofore, any formula agreed upon to conserve film stock is more likely to take the form of a readjustment of releases and first runs rather than tampering with the programme. There are difficulties in this but no doubt they will be ironed out for the goodwill exists on both sides.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Goodwill Stuff

Hollywood has been attending to its goodwill duties with a will.

Last week Tuesday Louis B. Mayer was host at a dinner for Lord Halifax, English Ambassador to the United States, at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, industry leaders attending.

On Friday Darryl F. Zanuck was host at a dinner for Wendell L. Willkie at the Twentieth Century-Fox studios, with industry leaders in attendance.

Likewise on Friday Will H. Hays, president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, telegraphed Major General Kenneth Joyce, Commandant, Fort Lewis, Washington, remarking "we have been advised that Private Kenneth Wilkson has gained the title of champion movie goer of the U. S. Army. The people of the industry were intrigued by the soldier's observation: 'Movies make me forget all my cares'. We are therefore suggesting that he come to Hollywood as guest of the industry on a visit from July 27th to August 1st.

On Saturday General Joyce granted Private Wilkinson a furlough for a visit to Hollywood, and on Sunday Mr. Hays and Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, accompanied by a committee of stars, met the young man at the airport.

Likewise on Saturday Mr. Freeman, in his capacity as Chairman of the Hollywood Division of the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense, reported in response to "repeated questions from members of the committee on the subject of participation of motion picture people in the Camp Entertainment and Recreation Program" that "there will be no camp entertainment during the summer because of the extensive manoeuvres now either being prepared or in operation by the Army. We have been advised that the problem of recreation does not exist in as large measure during the Summer months as during Autumn and Winter because, during Summer, the men are able to indulge in outdoor activities."

Private Wilkinson's furlough was filled with hospitality. Fred W. Beetson, executive secretary of the Associated Motion Picture Producers, entertained him at his Malibu Beach home Sunday afternoon. Monday he visited the Warner studio, dropped in for lunch with Deanna Durbin at Universal and spent the afternoon at MGM. Tuesday morning he visited Paramount and at noon he met the press at luncheon at RKO and posed for the newsreels while being presented with a plaque. Samuel Goldwyn, Walter Wanger and Columbia were his hosts Wednesday. Thursday he visited 29th Century-Fox, caught the world premier of "Charley's Aunt" at Grauman's Chinese theatre in the evening and attended a party at Ciro's afterward. He was to fly back to camp and service Friday. All this welcoming of a visitor whose claim to distinction is that he has seen 310 feature pictures since enlisting in the Army last October, making him champion movie fan of the armed forces, took place a week after the studios placed in effect a 100 per cent ban on visitors, which still stands.

Current copies of each of Quigley Publications' periodicals were sealed in a time-capsule buried for 1,000 years at Cucamonga, California, Tuesday night.

Should the person who unearths the treasure on July 28th, 2041, chance to be a showman, he stands a good chance of being impressed by the appropriateness of the edition of MOTION PICTURE HERALD which he digs up to the amenities of time-capsule procedure and purpose.

For he'll read on the Herald's burnt-orange cover the legend:

EXHIBITION HAS NEW DAY WITH START OF SEE - BEFORE - BUYING TRADE SHOWS UNDER THE DECREE

The new day pertained to will be a very old day indeed, by then, but the edition which marked its dawning, containing the reviews of the first films offered in blocks of five, will acquaint him in a fulsome and informative way with what was going on and what had stopped going on and what was beginning to go on at a turning point in his industry.

Occasion for the burying of the time-capsule on Tuesday evening, in the courtyard of California's oldest and one of the world's largest wineries, the Padre Vineyard, was the preview of "New Wine," the Gloria Productions film for United Artists release.

This was, and is, expected to be the last Hollywood press preview, the last all-out presentation of product amid pomp and circumstance, the final gala screening for the ladies and gentlemen of the Fourth Estate at large, wherefore some 400 of these stood 'round about the capsule, heads bared to the cool of eventide, drowning their sorrow in champagne served fresh and copiously from the casks in the cellar. It was a large, round moment, significant or not, according to point of view, but sufficient, said all on hand, to itself.

There had been a parade, led by Leo Carrillo of course.

Cucamonga had declared a half-holiday, which ran into a holinight.

A barbecue followed the ceremony of the time capsule.

A preview of the picture followed the barbecue.

A review of the picture is published in this edition.

The person, showman or not, who digs up the time-capsule will not find in it a record of these subsequent events.

He will find some other things to give him pause.

He'll find a hat worn in a film by Gene Autry, a vest worn by Charlie Chaplin in his earlies and funniest comedies, a pair of gloves worn by Ginger Rogers in her Academy-winning picture, "Kitty Foyle," and he'll find a pair of stockings worn, somewhere and sometime, by Marlene Dietrich.

His reactions to these findings will be reported in the August 2nd, 2041, edition of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

In following a policy of building up its talent roster and grooming new star material, Warner Brothers since January had doubled the number of feature players under contract at the studio, according to an announcement from the company. The total now stands at 72, in addition to 21 stars, 18 directors, 15 associate producers, 6 composers and 55 writers, making a new record of 187 for contract personnel.

Things to Come

Time was when Hollywood took it easy in July, lightened its shooting schedule, sent the talent off on personal appearance tours, gave the executives a breather, reduced operations such an extent that the clerk who sold you groceries bemoaned the shutdown because it deprived a lot of his common customers of the wherewithal to finance purchase of his wares, and figured on getting back in stride come September.

It's different now.

This summer the grocers and their customers are doing all right.

Weekend witnessed 54 pictures in shooting stage.

Cartoonists Sign Truce with Disney

Striking cartoonists returned to work Tuesday at the Walt Disney studio, Hollywood, under a truce, after a strike of almost nine weeks: a strike marked by quite some name-calling, a split in Hollywood American Federation of Labor ranks, the entrance and hurried disappearance of labor leader Willie Bioff, and the use of sympathetic picketing of theatres showing Disney product.

The settlement of the strike, which was for a contract, recognition of the Screen Cartoonists Guild and other factors, is tentative, dependent upon arbitration by representatives of the United States Labor Department.

Pressure reached a crescendo in New York last week with the picketing of the Palace Theatre—showing "The Reluctant Dragon"—by numerous sympathetic unions, among them the Screen Publicists Guild, which two weeks ago won an overwhelming victory to represent the advertising and publicity workers of the majors' New York home offices in negotiations for a closed shop contract. Pictures of the picketing are on pages 10 and 11.

Vote This Week

The tentative strike settlement, it was said, not only called for return of workers to work, but for cessation of picketing and boycotting of Disney product in theatres. It was reached under the guidance of James F. Dewey, Labor Department arbiter, who last week began meeting with respresentatives of both sides. The Guild membership was to vote on the settlement this week. Terms, other than submission to arbitration of certain facets, were not disclosed.

The strike began May 28th, after the Disney studio refused to recognize the Guild as bargaining agent for its workers, and after formation of several unions called "company unions" by the Guild, and ruled out of existence by the National Labor Relations Board. The studio charged "Communism"; the strikers charged "unfair tactics."

When several AFL crafts unions allied with the Guild returned to work two weeks ago, Willie Bioff's hand was seen by the Guild. Bioff, under indictment for extortion and income tax evasion, and the late server of a prison term, was defended by Gunther Lessing, Disney attorney.

A portent of this week's settlement was the removal, last week, by the Los Angeles Central Labor Council, of the Disney studio from its "unfair list." That listing, and resolutions by various unions, CIO as well as AFL, in various cities, had been a means of pressure against the studio. Union members were being importuned to boycott and picket Disney product in theatres.

The New York Disney Strike Committee, organized by the Screen Publicists Guild, and participated in by the Screen Readers Guild, the League of Women Shoppers, and other "front" organizations, threw a picket line in front of the New York Palace on July 24th. On the line were seen members of the publicity departments of MGM, United Artists, Columbia and Warner Brothers. Donald Ogden Stewart, a director of the League of American Writers, was a picket on Sunday.

The pictures of the picket lines and "understanding" copy appeared twice in PM, a local "liberal" newspaper.

Sample copy, in the literature distributed by the pickets to passersby was: "The U. S. Government offered a plan to arbitrate the dispute. The cartoonists promptly accepted it. Disney refused to arbitrate, and called in the notorious Willie Bioff, labor racketeer and convicted panderer, to break the strike if he could.

"He can't—if the public will support the Screen Cartoonists Guild in its fight for fair conditions, and decency in employer relations."

More copy: "Disney's cartoonists make less than house painters. The girls are the lowest paid in the entire cartoon field. They earn from $16 to $20 a week, with very few earning as high as $22.50. And Disney took in $10,000,000 on 'Snow White' alone."

In Hollywood, the Screen Writers Guild this week polled members by mail on resolution to boycott Disney product.

AGVA Resignations

Wholesale resignations of officers of The Philadelphia American Guild of Variety Artists chapter marked the board of directors meeting Friday, July 25th. President Jimmy Walker resigned, as did first vice-president Robert Mack, both explaining that pressing outside affairs interfered with their union activities. Joe Campo, second vice-president, moved up as acting president until new elections will be held in the Fall.

Ad Heads Meet

Chiefs of the advertising and publicity departments of the majors' New York home offices met early this week to consider dealing with the Screen Publicists Guild individually, or as a group. The Guild won a National Labor Relations Board election two weeks ago, and this week was awaiting the NLRB's formal certification. Negotiations on a contract are expected shortly.

Film Union Buys Bonds

The Motion Picture Operators' Union, Local 154 of Seattle, has made an initial purchase of $3,000 of national defense bonds, according to announcement by Fred Jiencke, president. Additional purchases will be made regularly, Mr. Jiencke reported, as an investment source for the union's surplus funds.

Wall Street Figures Costs of Decree

The ante which the Big Five must put to meet consent decree selling costs is calculated at 1,800,000 blue chips, mostly cash in advance, by the New York Journal of Commerce. In a study, published Monday, of financing of physical operations of the "new order," the business paper says the sum represents only direct increased costs. Additionally, the arbitration system will indirectly add $552,600 to decree costs, plus unestimated, but sizable, legal fees.

Largest item in the budget is the $1,000,000 which will cover added selling costs, such as new salesmen, extra travel, bookkeeping, etc. Trade showings, the report estimates, will take $300,000 while advertising to the trade will cost about $500,000. The figures are called "conservative" by the Journal, which bases its calculations on an estimated average of $775 for each picture trade shown and sold through 31 exchanges. In some cases, however, trade show costs reached $2,500 for one picture.

National Screen Accessories, Advertising Accessories Merge

The National Screen Service Corporation has announced that National Screen Accessories, Inc. and Advertising Accessories, Inc. have merged into National Screen Service Corporation.

Hereafter, National Screen Service Corporation will carry on the business formerly conducted by its two subsidiaries. The business of National Screen Service will be divided into three divisions: a trailer division, a specialty accessory division and a standard accessory division.

'STRAWHAT' SHOWS BRING 40 NEW PLAYS, 70 PERENNIALS, 750 ACTORS

Summer Theatre Fertile Field for New Film Talent and Story Material; 125 Companies Operating in Barns This Year

The strawhat summer show season is at its height for the season and at a height for many seasons.

This fertile field for developing new Hollywood story and talent material for the screens of motion picture theatre owners already has brought out 40 new plays and 70 perennials—of which Hollywood has already filmed 35 and is filming another 11—and some 750 players of varying talent, and has brought, too, predictions of a $1,500,000 gross, with some competitive aspects for film box offices, particularly in New England.

Hollywood and home office talent and play scouts are reluctant to divulge the identities of actors, playwrights and directors in whom they are interested for contract offers because of competitive bidding and for fear that agents of those being considered would raise the ante on contract deals.

125 Companies Playing

Ever since the metamorphosis set in some 15 or more years ago when theatrical producers converted red barns into theatres, replacing contented cows with aspiring and perspiring Thespians, major film companies have reaped, in one way or another, benefit from the summer stamping grounds of young actors, directors and playwrights who look toward the straw-hat theatre as a springboard to Broadway and Hollywood.

This year, 125 summer stock companies are in operation, 82 of them under ruling of Actors Equity Association.

According to Arthur Willi, talent scout for RKO, his trek to the hinterlands has already reaped "one girl, one boy and a young director."

Last year, Mr. Willi reported, RKO discovered Jack Briggs in a Woodstock, New York, summer playhouse.

At MGM, Joe Pincus, talent scout, said last season, MGM discovered Ann Baxter playing stock in Dennis, Mass., and Nancy Kelly, another MGM player.

Motion picture companies are definitely interested in several of the season's new crop of 40 plays, a few of which were tried out last summer and five of which are slated for autumn Broadway openings. Metro, it is said, is interested in "The Rift in the Lute," a first play by Jackson Perry which was tried out at the Summer Field Theatre in Nutley, N. J. "Village Green," by Carl Allensworth, played at the Ridgeway Theatre in White Plains, N. Y., is another Hollywood hopeful. A third is "Broadway, 1941," a modernized version of the Philip Dunning-George Abbott hit "Broadway," which was presented at the Montowese Playhouse in Branford, Conn.

John Byram, play scout for Paramount, reported that "Out of the Frying Pan," successful Broadway show which Paramount recently purchased, had a strawhat opening last year at Ellicott City, Md. Mr. Byram recalled that Paramount also had bought "Double Door" and "Pursuit to Happiness," both of which played summer stock before going to Broadway.

Leda Bauer, RKO's play scout; Bertram Bloch, formerly with MGM and United Artists who now heads the play department for Twentieth Century-Fox; Jacob Wilk, Warner's play scout, and Eve Ettinger of Columbia, all reported that their departments have their eyes on new play-picture possibilities this summer.

This week MGM acquired the screen rights to "Mr. and Mrs. North," mystery drama which tried out last summer at Showhegan, Me. The play had 162 Broadway performances last season and was dramatized by Owen Davis from stories written by Richard Lockridge, drama editor of the New York Sun. Reported MGM purchase price is $30,000.

Last year Warner's bought "Four Cheers for Mother," by Philip Dunning, which tried out at the Red Barn Theatre in Locust Valley, L. I.

Factor in good box-office receipts of the strawhats this year is the line-up of Broadway hit shows of last season and previous years, including "The Male Animal," "Ladies in Retirement," "Skylark," "George Washington Slept Here," "Mr. and Mrs. North, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," "Out of the Frying Pan," "Little Foxes," "Charley's Aunt," "Nothing But the Truth," "And Now Goodbye" and "Smilin' Through." Of these, the following were purchased by film firms and are now in production: "Ladies in Retirement," Columbia; "Skylark," Paramount; "Little Foxes," "Charley's Aunt," Twentieth Century-Fox, ready for release; "And Now Goodbye," Columbia; "Nothing But the Truth," Paramount, ready for release; and "Smilin' Through," re-make, RKO.

750 Actors Working

According to Walter N. Greaza, assistant executive director of Actors Equity, about 750 actors are involved this season in bucolic boardtrotting, with many players appearing in more than one stock company. Mr. Greaza reported that last summer about 14 Hollywood stars and feature players went East to combine vacations with avocations, whereas this year the number has diminished, probably due, Mr. Greaza said, to the fact that Hollywood film commitments interfered with flings at summer stock.

Other Hollywood names whose summer engagements have been held are: Mary Boland, who appeared in "Meet the Wife" at the Maplewood Theatre, N. J.; Charles Butterworth, who took the lead part in "George Washington Slept Here," at the Bucks County Playhouse, New Hope, Pa.; Harpo Marx, Edgar Kennedy, Buster Keaton, C. Aubrey Smith, Gloria Stuart, Fay Wray, Adrienne Ames, Cora Witherspoon, Betty Furness, Elissa Landi, Anna Sten, Jean Muir, Conrad Nagel, Henry Hull, Alexander Kirkland, Bert Lytell and Karen Morley.

This season in New England the straw-hat circuit presented formidable competition for motion picture houses in that territory, with about 25 summer stock companies concentrated in and near Boston leading the big-gross theatres.

NO SEVEN COURSES?

A unique venture in the straw-hat circuit was launched last week when Jarvis Temple, producer of the Bedford Guild Playhouse in Westchester, N. Y., presented his first play of the season with a complete smorgasbord supper for every theatre patron. The audience sat at tables during the entire performance of "Hay Fever," a Noel Coward summer stock favorite. Lacking a Hollywood or Broadway big name to draw for his opening, Mr. Temple resorted to giving a meal with every ticket.

ROGERS MEMORIAL THEATRE OPENED

The new Will Rogers theatre, a 900-seat suburban house built by Griffith Southwestern Theatres, Inc., in Tulsa, Okla., was formally opened with dedication ceremonies last week.

About 75 members of the motion picture industry in that territory attended the opening ceremonies which were presided over by Lou Chatham, city manager for Griffith in Tulsa. Among those who spoke from the stage to the capacity-filled theatre, was Mayor C. H. Veale of Tulsa, L. C. Griffith, president of the Griffith Amusement Company, who dedicated the theatre to the memory of Will Rogers, David Milstein, Tulsa attorney, who read his poem written about Will Rogers and which has been designated the official Will Rogers poem.

OPENINGS FOR 'YORK', 'DR. JEKYLL' AND 'WINE'

"Sergeant" Captures Washington with Parades, Receptions; "Jekyll" To Open August 12th

Washington, the nation's capitol, received the film industry's typical world premiere lavishments Thursday evening and adjacent times, when Warner Brothers' 'Sergeant York" descended upon that city's Earle and Ambassador after "the most extensive round of welcoming and festivities in over 20 years," in the words of the company's press release.

The facts seem to substantiate the boast. Sergeant York himself arrived in Washington Wednesday, accompanied by Governor Prentice Cooper of Tennessee, and Jesse Lasky, producer of the film, and was greeted with the United States Marine Band, for the first time greeting an arrival on a non-state occasion; by Senators Tom Stewart and Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee; Major General George B. Duncan, his wartime commander; Senator Robert Reynolds, North Carolina, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee; and other notables.

The visit Wednesday began the festivities. Warner field men went into stride.

U. A., M.-G.-M. Previews

While all the related was happening in Washington, other film companies stunned other localities with picture openings, and planned more premiere fiestas. United Artists held a special preview of William Sekely's "New Wine" in no less a setting than the winery of the Padre Vineyards, San Bernardino, California. This happened Tuesday, in the presence of more than 100 Hollywood correspondents. M.G.M. on Monday announced its "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" would be presented to the general public for the first time on August 12th, at the Astor Theatre, New York, from which Warner Brothers "Sergeant York" will have to exit.

In the capture of Washington by "Sergeant York", the Sergeant himself was greeted by the celebrities listed, and by delegations and bands from the Tennessee States Society, the American War Mothers, Boy Scouts of America, American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Sons of the American Legionnaires, and Gold Star Mothers. From the Union Station, at which he arrived Wednesday, the news went on the air from station WWDC. The Sergeant, his companions, and the greeting celebrities and delegates, then paraded through Washington streets to the White House, at which Sergeant York met President Roosevelt.

At five o'clock that day, Messrs. York, Lasky, and Cooper were guests at a reception by the Washington press.

Thursday the Sergeant delivered the invocation in the Senate. He was guest of the American War Mothers, at a Carlton Hotel luncheon. Later that afternoon, he was interviewed by radio commentator Fulton Lewis, Jr. He was guest at dinner, of the Tennessee State Society, at the Willard Hotel. Later in the same location, he was feted at a reception by the Congressmen from Tennessee. There then ensued a parade to the Earle Theatre.

For the first time, the company believes, a theatre "upright," the marquee name—in this instance, 70 feet high—is being removed from Asbury Park's Mayfair Theatre, and in neon lights, "Sergeant York" and "Gary Cooper" have been substituted.

Meanwhile, from Chicago, at Warner Brothers' annual sales convention, Gradwell Sears, the company's sales manager, announced that the film, following its national trade showing next Monday, will be released singly as the company's first 1941-42 feature at an advanced price policy of 75 cents to $1.10.

The picture has been at New York's Astor Theatre on a road show basis, at a $2.20 top admission. On August 11th, it will move to the Hollywood Theatre, same city. Sergeant York, following the Washington interlude, is to assist arrangements of the annual convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, in Philadelphia, August 24th to 29th; and was to arrive in that city from Washington Friday.

He was to receive in Philadelphia a welcome approximating that he received in Washington; local contingents of war veterans, with bugle corps; reception by the Mayor; luncheon in his honor at the Ritz Carlton, with politicos and others of note attendant. It was expected Sergeant York will appear personally at the V.F.W. convention.

Jesse Lasky was also to be a guest of honor at the Ritz Carlton luncheon.

The picture opens in Atlantic City August 8th, at the advanced price policy set by Mr. Sears. There will be a notable opening. Lee Blumberg, of the company's home office, will handle it, assisted by Phil Engel and Mort Brill, of the city.

M.G.M.'s British made "The Stars Look Down", from A. J. Cronin's story, opened well last week at the Criterion, New York. The first day's business, Wednesday July 23rd, exceeded all openings but five, at that theatre.

"Ghost" at Atlantic City

Universal's Abbott and Costello feature, "Hold That Ghost" will be seen for the first time by the general public August 8th, at Atlantic City. The screening will coincide with the personal appearance of the comedy team at the Steel Pier.

RKO's Palace Theatre housed a new occupant Thursday, July 24th—Walt Disney's RKO release, "The Reluctant Dragon." Picketing was an accompaniment of the opening, and three ensuing days, because of the strike at the studio; however, the Disney New York office reported extremely good business.

Ten all-expenses-paid vacation trips of two weeks each will be awarded by Twentieth Century Fox, as prizes for the best local promotion campaigns on the company's "Sun Valley Serenade", it announced this week. The contest begins August 29th, ends November 15th. The five managers, promotion or advertising men who turn in the best campaigns during this time will receive certificates entitling them to two all-expenses paid round trips to Sun Valley, Idaho, and all expenses while at the resort.

Warner Brothers' "Dive Bombers" will have its world premiere August 12th at the Fox, State, and Plaza theatres, San Diego. The houses belong to the Fox West Coast circuit. All will continue running the picture, on a single bill policy. The premiere will be attended by, among others, Errol Flynn, Fred MacMurray, Ralph Bellamy, Regis Toomey, and Alexis Smith.

"Horsemen" Seen in New York

"Forty Thousand Horsemen," Australian film, was shown Monday to the press of New York, and was to open Saturday at the Globe theatre, that city. It had the cooperation of the Australian Government, was made by Charles Chauvel for Famous Productions, and is being distributed here by Regal, and in the Far East by Universal.

Boston Stage Season Gross Is $1,310,175

Forty-one legitimate theatre attractions proved a bonanza for Boston managers during the 1940-41 stage season, with six houses sharing in the $1,310,175 that poured into the tills during the 43-week season. Despite poor bookings and conditions which, at one time, found the Hub without a stage offering for a period of about four weeks, the total was generally believed to be the best in the past decade and theatre managers predicted the coming season would be even better.

The 41 attractions ran a total of 94 weeks playing time. Top gross for the season went to Oscar Serlin's "Life With Father," which chalked up a total of $303,475 for 22 weeks at the Civic Repertory Theatre, one of the smallest houses in town. "Panama Hattie" which took in $89,000 for 17 days took top honors for the best daily average gross. Second was "Lady in the Dark" with $51,550 for 12 days. Ed Wynn's "Boys and Girls Together" took third place with $63,000 for 16 days.

Films Bring Revivals

Film adaptions of legitimate offerings resulted in revivals of these shows and grosses higher than they had scored on previous Hub appearances. Katherine Hepburn, playing Boston within one week of the showing of "Philadelphia Story" in the film houses, found the stage version still profitable to the tune of a sellout $26,000 for six days at the Colonial Theatre. "Tobacco Road" also was brought back for another Hub stand, chalking up $32,000 for 12 days at the Plymouth theatre. These grosses were approximately 27 percent higher than the grosses for either of these attractions prior to the national release.

Movie stars making their local appearances were well received, with Louis Calhern and Dorothy Gish in "Life With Father" receiving most attention. Their stand lasted 22 weeks and made a phenomenal gross for the season. Gladys George in "Lady in Waiting" took in $19,000 for 12 days. Joe E. Brown proved a draw in "Elmer the Great," and could have grossed more than $21,800 if he had a better vehicle. Miriam Hopkins drew good crowds in "Battle of Angels" until the combined threats of the censor and the criticisms of the press drew the piece from the boards.

Of the six houses open, four were controlled by the Shuberts and the lion's share of the grosses went to these theatres. The Shubert took in $380,350 with 11 attractions during the season. The Plymouth garnered $200,400 from 12 attractions. The Wilbur took in $136,000 with eight shows and the Copley, during its six-week run under the guidance of Horace Schmidlapp and Joseph M. Gaites, took in $36,000.

The Colonial brought in $210,450 and the Repertory saw $303,475 pour into the tills with their single attraction. After the run of "Life With Father," the house went on a film policy.

Enterprising plans for the 1941-42 season already have been made and several bookings have been arranged. Several roadshows will make a brief stop in the Hub and at least three new shows are scheduled to have their premieres there.

Crescent Case Resumes with Circuit Books

The Government's first anti-trust "field" suit, against the Crescent circuit and affiliates, and three majors, United Artists, Columbia and Universal, in Nashville Federal Court, resumed Wednesday, with production by Crescent of the inter-office files of five of its affiliates, and the predictions that the case would last longer than expected.

Judge Elmer Davies on Friday, July 25th, ordered the brief adjournment, after some weeks of testimony by Government witnesses, both independent exhibitors, and sales officials of the major companies. He did it to give defense counsel time to obtain the records, and also to attend to other personal official duties.

Last week, third of the trial, saw no sensational testimony offered; all the testimony continuing the Government's contention of a conspiracy between the majors and the circuit and affiliates, to give circuit houses better product, and its charges the Crescent circuit aggrandized for years by methods unfair and intimidating.

Former Owner Testifies

One of the Government's last exhibitor witnesses testified Wednesday, July 23rd. He was Max Buchanan, of Corpus Christi, Texas, who operated a theatre in Athens, Alabama, in 1939, competing with the Crescent circuit's Muscle Shoals Theatres affiliate. He asserted after he opened his theatre, the Crescent affiliate remodeled its theatre, and then opened a third house in the town, which had only 5,000 persons. Later, he sold out to Crescent for $8,000, he said.

The defense attempted to show that Mr. Buchanan entered Athens with less than $1,000 as investment; that he complained to the Department of Justice one week after opening his house; that he asked for, and was granted, film rental reductions, and that he was able to obtain good films.

On Wednesday attorneys for both sides predicted early end of the case.

On Thursday, July 24th, Government counsel filed an amendment to the original complaint, alleging a continuance of the combination in restraint of trade, to the date of the trial. The suit was filed August 11th, 1939. Witnesses' testimony during the trial has concerned dealings after that date. Introduction of inter-office correspondence of Twentieth Centry-Fox, Universal, and United Artists, was also the last Government action, in its own presentation.

Four Fox witnesses that day were H. G. Ballance, southern district manager; Paul S. Wilson, Atlanta branch manager; Roland Fairchild, Tennessee representative; and T. W. Young, Memphis exchange manager.

When Robert Wright, Government attorney, moved to introduce Fox franchises with Crescent, Muscle Shoals Theatres, and the Cumberland Amusements Company, franchises dated August 11, 1939, Judge Davies ruled they might not be introduced until the Government brought in an amended complaint covering the period from then to the beginning of trial.

Mr. Young's testimony was given in absentia, with agreement of counsel, and by introduction of letters from his office.

On Friday, July 25th, Judge Davies confused the predictions of a short trial by ordering Crescent and its affiliates to comply with a subpoena duces tecum, to produce inter-office communications. He had before that reserved decision on this move, after Crescent counsel said the documents would work a hardship on the defendants. Five Crescent affiliates had already complied with the subpoenas. The Judge's order was directed at the other five.

George H. Armistead, Jr., chief of Crescent counsel, then asked for time to produce the records. The judge set next Monday as resumption of trial; but, after objections by distributors' counsel, and conferences between them and the defense attorneys, Judge Davies agreed to resumption of the trial Wednesday. Mr. Armistead promised many documents would be ready by then, and agreed to resumption Wednesday.

Records Produced

On Friday, July 25th, Louis D. Frohlich, Columbia attorney, attempted to clear the company of Government testimony against it, by producing records showing the company had granted E. W. Bozier, Earlington, Kentucky, a protection clause similar to one given Crescent for Madisonville, three miles away. This clause was given Mr. Dozier, he said, one year before it was granted Crescent. Furthermore, it was stated, Columbia sold to Mr. Dozier for seven years during which the Crescent theatre operated in Madisonville.

Judge Davies upheld Mr. Frohlich's objection against introduction of Columbia correspondence about negotiations with an independent theatre in Hopkinsville, Kentucky.

A witness Friday was W. F. Ruffin, president of Ruffin Amusement Company. He testified about his experiences as an independent, and then as part of the Crescent organization.

Another Friday witness was J. W. Baird, operator of the Newport Amusement Company, Newport, Tennessee.

Blake Shifts Territories

Foster Blake, new branch manager for Universal in Seattle, has re-arranged the territories of his salesmen. M. G. Whitman, eastern Washington salesman, will have northern Washington and Les Theuerkauf will have southern Washington, the state being divided hereafter as to the north and south districts instead of east and west.

More Theatres Cut Service Admissions

The already long list of theatres which have reduced admission prices for service men in uniform, is still growing. In St. Louis all first-run theatres offer a special reduced admission price while the Fanchon and Marco are offering half price for service men and their dates. The 13 Interstate theatres and Loew's State in Houston, Tex., now admit soldiers at 75 per cent of the box office price. The 20th Century theatre in Buffalo, N. Y., has put into effect a policy of 20-cent admissions any time for men in uniform. The Rifkin chain in Springfield, Mass., will admit the men at half price.

Reduced rates or service men have been announced at the Gables, Coral and Grove theatres in Coral Gables, Fla., and all will be admitted for 20 cents. The Rialto in Lewistown, Pa., has inaugurated the policy of admitting service men for 15 cents at all times.

St. Louis Business Good

While many theatre exhibitors are lamenting a drop at the box office, the outdoor Municipal Theatre in St. Louis is enjoying one of its best years. With half the season gone, more than 500,000 persons have witnessed the six productions staged at the huge theatre in Forest Park. Admission prices to witness the stage productions range from 25 cents to $2.00.

Belmont Theatre Leased

The Belmont theatre in New York has been leased for the new season beginning September 8th, to Kaybarr Attractions, Inc., headed by Edward Kern. Only English language pictures will be shown it was announced.

"A picture completely off the beaten track . . . A refreshing, delightful movie. Incongruity of the best laugh-getting quality!"

"HERE COMES MR. JORDAN"

Astor Pictures Corp.

BIRTH OF A NATION: Henry B. Walthall, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Walter Long, George Siegmann—This once famous success has been reissued with new laboratory prints and sound and music dubbed in. But the acting is very hammy and many walked out. as it does not compare in any way with present-day pictures. Also, the actors jumped about the screen in a grotesque manner because the projectors now run at 90 instead of 60 and this has not been corrected. Might play it as a novelty, but it won't please the young folks. Running time, 110 minutes. Played July 13-14.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Columbia

ANGELS OVER BROADWAY: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Rita Hayworth, Thomas Mitchell—Quite a number of dissatisfied patrons. Picture very ordinary at best.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

BLAZING SIX SHOOTERS: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—Average western.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

HER FIRST BEAU: Jane Withers, Jackie Cooper—A dandy little program picture that pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SHE KNEW ALL THE ANSWERS: Joan Bennett, Franchot Tone, Eve Arden—Comedy with plenty of laughs. This was enjoyed by all. Franchot Tone does a good job. Played on double and did fair business. Comedies are what the public wants these days. Running time, 85 minutes. Played July 17-23.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WILDCAT OF TUCSON, THE: Bill Elliott, Evelyn Young—This picture did nice business on week-end.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

First National

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—This year Warner hasn't the actors or the titles for their stuff. Story on this one was good, but the actors and the title won't bring them in.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

RETURN OF DR. X, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane, Wayne Morris, Dennis Morgan—Real good horror picture that seemed to satisfy.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SINGAPORE WOMAN: Brenda Marshall, David Bruce—A program picture which pleased. Fair business on Family Night. Running time, 64 minutes. Played July 8.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN, THE: Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day, Ronald Reagan—This picture sure disappointed my patrons, and no business. Metro should have shelved this picture. Terrible; if you haven't played it, keep away. Running time, 71 minutes. Played June 22-24.—Louis J. Frana, Olympic Theatre, Calmar, Iowa. General patronage.

BILLY THE KID: Robert Taylor, Brian Donlevy, Ian Hunter—Good picture and good business. Color also good. Running time, 95 minutes. Played July 16-17.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BILLY THE KID: Robert Taylor, Brian Donlevy, Ian Hunter—Exceptionally well received. Tops in western entertainment. Marvelous scenery, plenty of exciting action and that new and glorious Mary Howard looks and sounds great. This is the kind of a picture that brings people back to the movies. Running time, 95 minutes. Played July 13-14.—Frank Vesley, State Theatre, Hollister, Calif. Small town patronage.

Rockefeller Center, New York

MEN OF BOYS TOWN: Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney, Bobs Watson, Larry Nunn—An exceptionally good picture. Biggest business in two years. Makes you feel like staying in show business. Running time, 109 minutes. Played June 29-July 1.—Louis J. Frana, Olympic Theatre, Calmar, Iowa. Rural patronage.

Paramount

BUCK BENNY RIDES AGAIN: Jack Benny, Ellen Drew, Eddie Anderson ("Rochester"), Andy Devine—Beginning of this picture is dry, but winds up to a good finish. A pretty good second.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. Neighborhood patronage.

I WANTED WINGS: Ray Milland, William Holden, Wayne Morris, Veronica Lake—Good picture and good business. This has everything an exhibitor could ask for. Running time, 130 minutes. Played July 9-10.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LAS VEGAS NIGHTS: Constance Moore, Bert Wheeler, Phil Regan—A very good musical, suitable for a dual bill. Not much star value.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

LIFE WTH HENRY: Jackie Cooper, Leila Ernst, Eddie Bracken, Hedda Hopper—Aldrich Family series. Very good picture. Business was exceptionally good. Play it on your best date and advertise it. Running time, 84 minutes. Played July 13-15.—Louis J. Frana, Olympic Theatre, Calmar, Iowa. General patronage.

LIFE WITH HENRY: Jackie Cooper, Leila Ernst, Eddie Bracken, Hedda Hopper—Aldrich Family series. A natural. Pleased and did a good business.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

YOU'RE THE ONE: Bonnie Baker, Orrin Tucker and his Band—Why take a good band leader and good singer and try to make actors out of them? No story, no director. Colonna's low-hrow slapstick ruined a good possibility.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Republic

NEVADA CITY: Roy Rogers, "Gabby" Hayes, Sally Payne—Average western which pleased the week-end fans. Running time, 58 minutes. Played July 11-12.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PUDDIN' HEAD: Judy Canova, Francis Lederer—Good picture and good business, but my patrons all agreed that it was not as good as "Scatterbrain" or "Sis Hopkins." Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 20-21.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—His stories are getting weaker as he goes along, and the patrons also are beginning to notice it.—George Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

SUNSET IN WYOMING: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Maris Wrixon—Good picture and good business. Autry and Smiley Burnette always please. Running time, 70 minutes. Played July 18-19.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ALONG THE RIO GRANDE: Tim Holt—These "Holt" westerns are cheap and do not appeal. No production value whatever. Drop them, RKO. Poor business. Played July 6-7.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

ALONG THE RIO GRANDE: Tim Holt, Ray Whitley—A very fine western. Holt is coming and our patrons like him. Well made.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LUCKY PARTNERS: Ronald Colman, Ginger Rogers—Story weak. A let-down for Ginger Rogers. Very few enjoyed this one and I agree with them.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

PRIMROSE PATH: Ginger Rogers, Joel McCrea, Marjorie Rambeau—Good picture.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

VIGIL IN THE NIGHT: Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne, Anne Shirley—Good only to the women or nurses. Men didn't care much for this, but women enjoyed it. Running time, 96 minutes.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BLOOD AND SAND: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Rita Hayworth, Nazimova—A grand picture in color.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

GREAT AMERICAN BROADCAST, THE: Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, John Payne, Cesar Romero—Just grossed the film rental and did not please.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

JENNIE: Virginia Gilmore, William Henry, George Montgomery—Belongs in the low allocation. Just got by.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

United Artists

FOUR FEATHERS, THE: John Clements, Ralph Richardson, C. Aubrey Smith, June Duprez—An excellent feature for its type.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

GREAT DICTATOR, THE: Charles Chaplin, Paulette Goddard, Jack Oakie—Excellent production. Some liked it; some not. Business fair.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

GREAT DICTATOR, THE: Charles Chaplin, Jack Oakie, Paulette Goddard—Audience reaction divided after showing. During show, audience manifested their pleasure unmistakably. They laughed and laughed hard. This is one of the few pictures everybody has been waiting for and business was exceptionally good. Running time, 125 minutes. Played July 6-7.—Frank Vesley, State Theatre, Hollister, Calif. Small town patronage.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER, THE: Joan Bennett, Adolph Menjou—An excellent feature. Plenty of comedy which the audience enjoyed. Running time, 78 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

LONG VOYAGE HOME, THE: John Wayne, Thomas Mitchell, Ian Hunter—Enthusiastically acclaimed by the critics, I understand but, unfortunately, not a single critic lives here. Plenty of walkouts. No business. Running time, 103 minutes. Played July 9.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

SO ENDS OUR NIGHT: Fredric March, Margaret Sullavan, Frances Dee, Glenn Ford—Business good. This one was liked by all. It's swell entertainment. Fredric March gives an excellent performance. The newcomer, Glenn Ford, does very good acting and I believe he will be kept busy for some time making pictures. Margaret Sullavan is good, as usual. This picture should do business anywhere. Princess Juliana enjoyed it immensely. Running time, 120 minutes. Played July 7-16.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

THAT UNCERTAIN FEELING: Merle Oberon, Melvyn Douglas, Burgess Meredith—This picture misses fire. Not up to anticipation. Business only fair. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

TOPPER RETURNS: Joan Blondell, Roland Young, Carole Landis, Eddie (Rochester) Anderson—A comedy which gave the patrons plenty of laughs. A better 'Topper' than the last one, with good business. "Rochester" makes this one. He is terrific. All comments were in favor of this picture. Played week and a half. Running time, 88 minutes. Played June 30th-July 9th.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

TOPPER RETURNS: Joan Blondell, Roland Young, Carole Landis, Patsy Kelly—This "Topper" series is quite popular. Business fair.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Onatrio, Can. General patronage.

Universal

BUCK PRIVATES: Bud Abbott, Lou Costello, the Andrews Sisters, Jane Frazee—Universal certainly got all excited over this production. Although we bought this flat, they sent out a blind checker who arrived Sunday morning early enough to attend the First Mass. Universal would have done much better to have behaved like that ball player who played for me back in our high school days. He seldom got a hit, but when he did, acted as if he was accustomed to doing just that all along. Going in as a pinchhitter one day, he clouted the first pitch for one of the longest homers I had ever seen. Going forward to meet him as he crossed home plate, I expected to see a highly jubilant and excited lad. Instead, he was cool and unruffled. "Nice clout, Jim," I said. "Well, I'll tell you," he replied in a voice that reflected boredom. "That pitch just about fooled me; it sort of slid off the end of my bat." Now every story has a moral and the moral of this story is: "One swallow doesn't make a summer." Business above average.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

BUCK PRIVATES: Bud Abbott, Lou Costello, the Andrews Sisters, Jane Frazee—Very good and it did good business. Running time, 81 minutes. Played July 6-8.—Louis J. Frana, Olympic Theatre, Calmar, Iowa. Rural patronage.

RAGTIME COWBOY JOE: Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight—A surprisingly good western. Johnny Mack Brown is welcome back here any time. They may be running out of titles and this one has nothing to do with the story. However, the picture is good and pleased every one. Played on same bill with "Sunny." Running time, 60 minutes. Played July 12.—Frank Vesley, State Theatre, Hollister, Calif. Small town patronage.

SANDY GETS HER MAN: Baby Sandy, Stuart Erwin, Una Merkel, Edgar Kennedy—These Sandy pictures, not played too often, pleased very much.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

FLIGHT FROM DESTINY: Thomas Mitchell, Jeffrey Lynn, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Nothing to write home about. Business average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

FLIGHT FROM DESTINY: Geraldine Fitzgerald, Thomas Mitchell, Jeffrey Lynn—This is one of those unusual kind of pictures. Excellent performance by Thomas Mitchell holds the interest of the average and brings forth fine comments from the better class. Well done. Business only average. Difficult to sell such a title and Mr. Mitchell. Running time, 78 minutes. Played July 1-2.—Frank Vesley, State Theatre, Hollister, Calif. Small town patronage.

FOOTSTEPS IN THE DARK: Errol Flynn, Brenda Marshall, Ralph Bellamy—Very weak. They must have lost the script when they filmed this story. No business.—Played June 29-30.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

FOOTSTEPS IN THE DARK: Errol Flynn, Brenda Marshall, Ralph Bellamy—This picture did business in spite of heat wave. Worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

JUAREZ: Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Brian Aherne, John Garfield—Made my mistake; should have forgotten it. Played because of the cast, but the attendance was terrible on this one, and the story was weak. Running time, 127 minutes.—G. S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

NURSE'S SECRET, THE: Lee Patrick, Regis Toomey—A little program picture which got by on Family Night. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 15.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

INTERNATIONAL FORUM, NO. 1: Special—Ready-made audience can be easily reached to see this series. Dorothy Dorothy Thompson, Wythe Williams, William L. Shirer appear in this one, informally discussing the present crisis. We have heard them on the radio and many want to see as well as hear them. Running time, 15 minutes.—Frank Vesley, State Theatre, Hollister, Calif. Small town patronage.

BATTLE, THE: Miniatures—Very entertaining war subject. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

COFFINS ON WHEELS: Crime Does Not Pay Series—Another good one in the Crime Does Not Pay Series. Tells of dealers who buy wrecked cars, patch them up and sell them to the unsuspecting public, causing the driver and others to be killed. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

THIS IS THE BOWERY: Passing Parade—Interesting one-recler of life in a certain district of New York. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WILLIE AND THE MOUSE: Passing Parade—Very good one-reeler with some comedy. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

FORGOTTEN MAN, THE: Benchley Comedies—One of the best in the Benchley series. Certain to please all classes of movie fans. Running time, 10 minutes.—Frank Vesley, State Theatre, Hollister, Calif. Small town patronage.

RAGGEDY ANN: Special—Outstanding and exceptionally so. Worth advertising. Cleverly conceived, very entertaining and appealing to all, young and old. They'll mention this, as a "you must see it." Running time, 20 minutes.—Frank Vesley, State Theatre, Hollister, Calif. Small town patronage.

SPEAKING OF ANIMALS: Animated Antics—This is something new. Pleased and caused a lot of talk. Animals talked and brought the house down. Get out some more of this ingenuity and maybe business will come back.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Republic

MEET THE STARS, NO. 7: "Meet Roy Rogers"—Good star reel, introducing Gene Autry, Roy Rogers, Mary Lee, Billy Gilbert, Judy Canova and other stars at the opening of Roy Rogers' new Rangers' Trading Post. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 11: CHINA FIGHTS BACK—Will some of us exhibitors take the time and comment on these March of Time releases? Does the public still go for a hash of newsreel shots showing practically nothing, dramatically described by the same commentator? I may be unfair, but the average small town reaction is not favorable any longer. Running time, 17 minutes.—Frank Vesley, State Theatre, Hollister, Calif. Small town patronage.

RKO PATHE NEWS: Too much war in newsreels and people are awfully tired of it. We have a few that will not in until the news is over on account of war pictures. The producers should think that over.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ANZACS IN ACTION: The World Today—Entertaining reel showing war scenes in Europe. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOOD OLD IRISH TUNES: Terrytoons—Average black and white cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

UNCLE JOEY COMES TO TOWN: Terrytoons, Good color cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

HAL KEMP AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters Bands—Good orchestra reel. Running time, 10 minutes. —E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

INKI AND THE LION: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Very good color cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PORKY'S HOTEL: Looney Tunes—Fair. Running time, 7 minutes.—George S. Caporal, Yale Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

SHARK HUNTING: Hollywood Novelties—Outstanding, exciting short. Exceptionally well arranged. Shooting sharks with a bow and arrow is as exciting in this picture as "Billy the Kid" in action. This one is worth advertising as a special featurette. Running time, 10 minutes.—Frank Vesley, State Theatre, Hollister, Calif. Small town patronage.

SHOP TALK: Bob Hope Re-Issues—Good two-reel comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Havana Has New Production Plans

by RAMON PEON
in Havana, Cuba

Ernesto Caparros, local motion picture director, is scheduled to start his next film featuring Dn. Pancracio, a favorite radio personality. The picture will be produced independently and C. M. Q. Radio Circuit will finance the production.

Saica Films is now preparing two musical short subjects to follow "Cuban Rhythms" to meet their international contract with J. H. Hoffberg for the world distribution rights.

Gomez Castro of Continental Films also will go into production, having signed Ernesto Caparros for his first production, expected to be the first of a series. Continental Films is now handling a large portion of Mexican production which have had successful runs in Cuba.

Jorge Pineyro of Education Pictures of Cuba, is now in New York closing negotiations with DuPont and Victor to bring back to Cuba a complete developing plant and stock to develop 16 mm prints. Up to now only Eastern stock has been available.

Harry Weiner of United Artists, Havana's oldest foreign manager, will be awarded a gold medal by a local newspaper federation. The date for the event has not been set.

Golden To Aid O.P.M. On Picture Matters

Nathan D. Golden, motion picture consultant to the Department of Commerce, in Washington, D. C., has been assigned to assist the Office of Production Management in any matters relating to motion pictures which may arise under the defense program.

Mr. Golden was one of a number of industrial experts who will represent the department on advisory committees which are being set up in the Commodity Sections of the O.P.M. The department's experts will also work on the defense program in the course of their regular duties, advising the Government on industrial matters and assisting members of their industries in complying with the national defense program.

Diesel Operation Filmed

A new educational motion picture film showing the operating principle and development of the Diesel engine is being released by the United States Bureau of Mines. The film, available only in sound, makes clear to the non-technical observer the various details involved in the construction and operation of this machine, and its use in factories, industrial plants, locomotives and in ocean-going vessels. The film runs 19 minutes.

Film Council Elects

At the recent meeting of the Better Films Council of East St. Louis, Miss Elsie Clanahan was again elected president. Miss Clanahan founded the Council in January, 1933 and served as president for more than six years. The past year Mrs. Walter A. Renard has served as president.

HERALD PEOPLE

By Staff Photographer

SAM ABERMAN . . . Your name goes through his hands once every week, if you are a subscriber to Motion Picture Herald. Sam runs the addressing department and its mechanisms which put your name on the wrapper of the copy that comes to you. His office is a fortress walled with steel cabinets filled with the thousands upon thousands—about 18,000 active—of metal stencils that list the subscribers. So it figures out, what with subscribers and other circulation activities, Sam handles a matter of just about one million name impressions a year. He is married, lives in Brooklyn and considers baseball at week-end good entertainment. Where he works, up on the Herald's floor of the RKO building, he can see the Hudson highlands and the shipping traffic of the big North River. While the stencils hum through the addressograph, he dreams about sailing away some day on a ship to Everywhere.

Harris and Evens Shifted to Cleveland

Harold W. Evens, manager of Loew's Theatre in St. Louis for the past 11 years, will manage the Loew's State Theatre in Cleveland, it was announced this week, and James E. Harris, publicity director of the St. Louis theatre for seven years, will have charge of publicity and advertising for five Cleveland theatres, working under Charles Raymond, division manager. Rex Williams of Elkhart, Ind., will succeed Mr. Evens, and Wally Heim will replace Mr. Harris.

St. Louis Changes

Harold W. Evens, manager of the Loew theatre in St. Louis for the past 11 years, and James E. Harris, publicity director of the theatre, have been transferred to Cleveland. Mr. Evens will be succeeded in St. Louis by Rex Williams of Elkhart, Ind., and Wally Heim replaces Mr. Harris. In Cleveland, Mr. Evens will manage the Loew State theatre, while Mr. Harris will have charge of publicity and advertising for five theatres working under Charles Raymond, division manager.

Big Four To Aid USO Drive

Paramount, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warner Brothers, "four of the largest motion picture chains in the country," according to Thomas E. Dewey, national chairman of the United Service Organization, have promised to participate in the forthcoming film exhibitors' drive to be conducted in behalf of USO which is raising funds for recreational outlets for servicemen. The exhibitors' campaign will be held the first week in September, under the auspices of the newly-formed Motion Picture Theatre Committee of USO, headed by Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner Brothers Theaters.

In urging cooperation for the drive, Mr. Dewey said, "The success of this effort requires that 12,000 theatres be enlisted within a relatively short period. He urged local USO chairmen to cooperate in lining up theatres for the campaign and in providing workers to assist in the collection of money in the theatres.

A special film will be shown on the screen of houses in the big-four chains during the week of September 1st, to encourage contributions from theatre patrons.

Mr. Bernhard announced last Monday the appointment of A. P. Waxman as director of the campaign for his division. Harry Goldberg, advertising manager of Warner Brothers Theatre Circuit, will be associate director with Mr. Waxman. The drive will be featured as USO Theatre Week.

Jay Emanuel, independent circuit operator and publisher of "The Exhibitor" and Sidney E. Samuelson, business manager of Eastern Pennsylvania Allied, were selected to represent the Philadelphia area in the theatre drive.

Last week, it was reported from Chicago that Warner Theatres there suggested to their employees that contributions for the USO theatre drive amount to "at least two and one half per cent of one week's salary." Warner Theatres quota in the campaign is $700.

N. Y. U. Film Course Set

The New York University School of Education in cooperation with the National Board of Review will again this coming term offer a course on the motion picture. Given by well-known lecturers, the course will cover the artistic, technical, educational and social aspects of the industry and will be illustrated with many interesting and unusual films. The new season's course will be presented from 6:15 to 8:00 P.M. on Thursdays during the year instead of 8:15 to 10:00 P.M. as has been the policy in previous terms.

Beauty Judges Named

Among those from the picture industry invited to serve as judges in the Miss America Beauty Pageant in Atlantic City during the Sept. 1st week are Al Altman, Metro talent director; Vincent Trotta, Paramount art director; and Vyvyvan Donner, fashion editor for 20th Century-Fox Movietone.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

ABUSE WON'T DO IT

It's been quite a stretch since this observer has found occasion to finger-point at relations between district manager and manager, between manager and staff. Comment here over the last few years, for the best part has been directed at the harmony and team-work between personnel encouraged by district and theatre heads. It is to be regretted, therefore, that too many protests now reach this desk to indicate that all is far from serene.

Mostly, the complaints have a common form. They stress that too much whipping and too few soft words are used by the bossman in calling attention to errors, easy to correct, or differences in opinion. The alarming thing is that the complaints are general, from independent operations as well as circuits. They blame manager as they do supervisor.

Reasons for the disturbing change in these employer-employee relationships may be many. The wearing strain of war, conditions brought on by the national defense program, tension of consent decree operational changes, for instance, can be offered as causes. Whatever the reasons, the executive—supervisor or manager—must rise above them. That's why he is where he is.

The bossman's big job is to encourage every last bit of effort from his forces. That encouragement is effective only when workers are sufficiently content in their labors to try harder and harder. Whether or not they are depends almost entirely upon the attitude of the higher-up.

It is not sufficient that he be a producing showman well versed in the business of operation. He must be teacher, counselor. He must have tolerance, patience, understanding. And more, he must respect the other fellow if, in turn, he is to earn the respect his position demands.

Every executive does not come by these qualities naturally. But the smart lad will at least learn to take on their outward aspects, if for no other reason than good business in the face of today's rapidly mounting manpower problems.

The defense program and the draft are making deep inroads upon theatre personnel. This is competition that threatens to develop alarmingly unless there is an immediate overhauling of executive viewpoint where such negative conditions exist.

Sharp words, abuse and dictatorial bearing are crippling to morale and profitable operation. The executive who develops hard-hitting, ticket-selling manpower does so with a firm hand. Never a hard one.

In a recent issue, editorial comment was made on the advertising manual put together by Pat McGee for the managers of his Schine Ohio theatres district. It was aimed to assist the boys lacking drill in the fundamentals of newspaper advertising. Immediately, there were requests from the field to this department for copies of the same. So, on a following page, are set down the highlights of what Pat had to say on the subject.

There is a continuous search among theatremen for information to help them do a job. Most frequently, the Round Table is where they find it.

TELL 'EM AGAIN, AGAIN

Though the cooling plant at the Des Plaines, in Des Plaines, Ill., is well advertised, Manager Joe Feulner seized upon the recent heat wave to do an extra selling job on behalf of his air-conditioning. The Round Tabler blanketed the vicinity with window and pole cards, redecorated the front and lobby, planted feature "cool" publicity in the papers. The campaign proved well advised, according to audience reactions noted by the theatreman.

Too many managers, inclined to take for granted the virtues of the cooling plant, fail to follow-through in keeping this ticket-selling inducement impressed upon the public. Air-conditioning today is universal. Everyone has it. The manager must shout more often and louder in the process of pointing to his.

FOR theatremen in resort country not yet privy to the slant, cheerfully recommended is the card promotion offered by the Warner men of Sheboygan, Wis., and reported by Marlowe Conner. Carrying theatre copy on one side, reverse of the card is given over to a road map showing the encircling countryside and numbered roads leading right to the circuit's Sheboygan theatres.

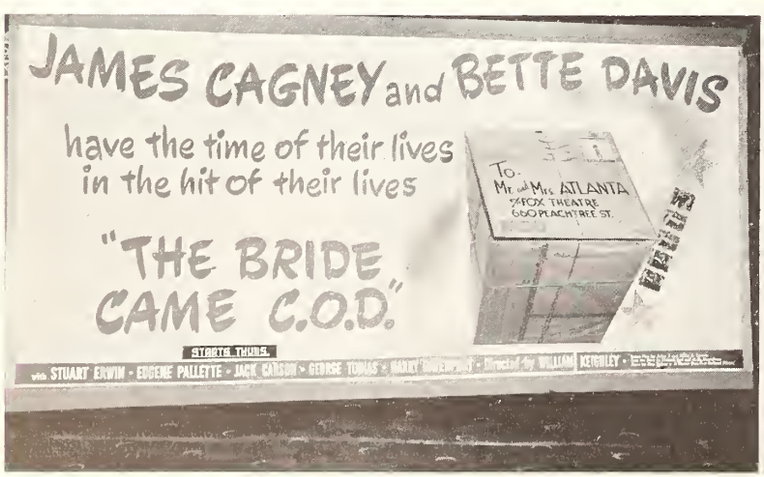
Round Table In Pictures

For "Stars Look Down" at the N. Y. Criterion, publicist Phil Laufer erected seven-foot shatterproof steel tank out front. Inside tank was depicted gripping scene from picture in which group of men are trapped in a mine and engulfed by avalanche of water. Centric pump sent rush of water over figures.



Self-explanatory was Sam Gilman's lobby gag at Loew's, in Harrisburg, consisting of artificial apple tree. Alongside was card with copy reading: "Adam and Eve, they met under this tree, but Gable and Russell, They Met in Bombay."

Mimature stage display was created by Lou Cohen in lobby of Loew's Poli, Hartford, to sell summer attractions. Doors swung open by concealed motor and interior lit showing off star heads, etc.

Unusually attractive animated display was arranged for "Bride Came C.O.D." by Tommy Read at the L&J Fox, Atlanta. Box was mechanized to open and close, photo at right shows result when box was opened.

Dollar Bill Stunts Build 'Dollar Baby'

Circulation of real United States currency is being stimulated these days in money promotions put across by Round Tablers on "Million Dollar Baby," currently reported being "dollar" tieins from Charlie Carden, at the Interstate Hollywood, in Fort Worth, Texas, and from Ed Dunn, at the Tri-States Paramount, in Des Moines.

Carden hooked a "lucky buck" search on the date with the local Press for six days of front-page, the opening day cracking a five-column break. Readers were invited to look for dollars with certain serial numbers, the numbers carried prominently in each day's story. Those coming in possession of the "lucky bucks" were asked to bring them to a designated bank where they would be "bought" for five dollars a piece.

On each of the five days, the paper put two new dollars in circulation through one of the staff, the serial numbers included in the daily story of the search. When any of the "lucky-bucks" were turned into the bank, their numbers were publicised as were the numbers of the dollars still in circulation. The picture tiein was stressed each day with mention of the attraction, theatre and theme of the picture which inspired the promotional activity.

Sells Dollars for 50 Cents

Folks in Des Moines were not at all skeptical of bargain prices for real money, as discovered by Ed Dunn in offering dollar bills for fifty cents as his buildup for "Million Dollar Baby." The Tri-Stater had the manager of a nearby five-and-ten recommend one of the sales girls who had looks, nerve and a "gift of gab." The girl selected agreed to peddle the dollars on a downtown corner during rush hour, and Dunn tipped off the newspapers, who went for the stunt with three-column shots and stories.

Wearing chest banners reading: "I'm a million dollar baby. Buy a dollar for 50 cents—no tax," the girl found ready takers in the traffic-stopping crowds which bought up her wares in a few minutes.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Report on Star Marriage Lands Page One on "Bombay"

Since Waterbury, Conn., is Rosalind Russell's home town, the recent report by Jimmy Fidler that the star was to wed proved an ace break for Ed Fitzpatrick, since the local papers broke the story and photo of Miss Russell on page one coincident with the run of "They Met In Bombay" at Loew's Poli, the attraction and theatre included in the yarn with appropriate tiein credits.

For his advance, Fitz featured a full co-op page published on opening day, the streamer at top illustrated by scene shot from the picture calling attention to gift values offered by participating merchants for local boys in service. To insure reader attention, the Loew-man offered guest tickets to readers reassembling cutout pieces of a Gable photo in the different ads. He also planted the four-column "Eyes Have It" portfolio pictorial strip.

LAST MOMENT "FLASHES"

To tap potential business among thousands of tourists on behalf of "Billy the Kid" at the United Artists, Los Angeles, Tom Soriero tied the Automobile Club of Southern California to a theatre exhibit of the famed Wheeler Illuminated Photo-Scenic transparencies, by promoting the Club to advise visiting motorists to take in the display, entitled "The Call of the Open Road." Since the transparencies were of actual scenic shots throughout that sector, the tiein was made so that tourists, calling at the Club, would be guided to the theatre to get a closeup of the various points of interest.

Soriero gave over his entire lobby to the showing, selecting scenes fitting the background of the picture, which was duly credited in the posters and other publicity. Further advertising was had at Club headquarters with 40 by 60's, and through other of the transparencies planted in windows of leading steamship and railroad offices. Excellent breaks were had in the papers and announcements made over four stations.

ABBOTT PROMOTES CITY BLACKOUT TO PLUG "WINGS"

Selling the Mayor, the local power company and other civic heads of Georgetown, Ohio on the value of a citywide "blackout" to support national defense, Manager J. Harry Abbott, of the Grant, and a member of the National Motion Picture Committee, arranged the sensational exploitation to take place on the night before his opening of "I Wanted Wings", the picture credited in the publicity for inspiring the promotion. Public address system set up in the court house tower broadcast airplane sound effects record and when the siren sounded for the blackout, all lights were turned off while the plane record was brought up to full volume. Aerial bombs spotted around town were fired off for added effect and at the end of the blackout, Abbott spoke over the p.a. urging support of the defense movement and getting in a strong plug for the picture.

Front page stories carried full instructions to the public on blackout procedure and in addition the Mayor issued a proclamation also carried in the dailies, the picture and theatre emphasized in all the breaks.

"THE BRIDE CAME C.O.D."—BY TAXI FROM NEW YORK

As related by the two-column story and cut in the Philadelphia Daily News, forwarded by Ev Callow, it seemed that a local girl—curiously enough named Bette—went to New York for a short trip the day before her marriage. It also seems that the girl's pocketbook was stolen, her predicament finally solved by persuading a taxi driver to drive her back to Philadelphia, "collect". The prospective bride then wired her boy friend to meet her at the City Hall and that she was coming "C.O.D." The story finished by noting that, after the wedding, the newlyweds saw "The Bride Came C.O.D." at Warners' Stanley.

RENO SELLS NEW STAR TO BUILD ONE-DAY DATE

Noting that a number of reviews on "Cowboy and the Lady" had praised George Montgomery, the male lead, Manager John C. Reno sold his one-day date at the Westbury, Westbury, Long Island, with a campaign aimed to plug Montgomery to the distaff side. This was done principally with a trailer headed "Girls, Girls", copy stressing the introduction of a "new heart beat" and inviting the women to "drop him a line" after seeing the picture. To further the buildup, Reno deleted all scenes in the prevue trailer in which Montgomery appeared with the exception of one closeup for identification. Success of the theatreman's efforts was evident in the business for the day which he reports doubled normal receipts.

SAUNDERS DISCOVERS LOCAL "BARNACLE BILL"

For communities situated on water and supporting commercial fishing, Matt Saunders reports a "space-stealer" which aided the advance on "Barnacle Bill" at Loew's Poli, Bridgeport. Saunders went down to the docks and when he discovered a local fisherman said to be a double for Wally Beery, the theatreman sold the local Times-Star on a four-column spread showing the double and his crew unloading the day's catch, plus another shot of the boys at a local bar refreshing themselves after the job was done. The accompanying caption of course tied in the theatre and picture, thus given a local angle which Matt feels was of assistance in "spreading the word."

Florida Visitors Told about 'Moon'

Exploitation coverage on "Moon Over Miami" is widespread according to reports from the field, with Marlowe Conner at the Sheyboygan, in Sheboygan, Wis., as an instance, making a direct tieup with the folks in his town who visited in Florida during the past year. With the cooperation of the personal column editor of the Press, who made up a list of over 100 families who had wintered in the south, Conner mailed a postcard with a hand-written message with copy along these lines:

"When you were in Florida, you undoubtedly had a lot of fun, well, you're going to have a lot more fun when you see," etc., etc. The snapper of the idea was the curiosity caused among the recipients who wondered how the theatreman knew they had wintered in Miami.

For the same date in Kenosha, Wis., at the Kenosha, Francis B. Schlax featured a number of stunts having to do with bathing beauties, using the girls in the theatre and also around town. Starting ten days ahead, the girls in swim suits and carrying white-lettered bags posed on a blacked-out stage. When the special intermission trailer was thrown on the screen, the girls were picked up with spots from the booth.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Jitterbugs Cavort on Street For Feldman's "Dance Hall"

Leaning heavily on the dance angles for "Dance Hall" at the Paramount, in Syracuse, Dick Feldman worked out a street stunt with a young couple dressed in jitterbug outfits making the downtown district during rush hours. Wearing banners selling the show, the youngsters every now and then would break into a few fast steps, repeating this as the occasion warranted to curious crowds.

For dance hall attention, Feldman sent cards around prescribing the picture and on the night before opening promoted a dancing contest at leading academy with prizes of guest tickets. Based on the book, "Giant Swing," the date was sold to bookstores and libraries with tiein copy.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Trousseau Contest Featured By Flex on "Bride Came COD"

Continuing his successes with contests on various dates, Jack Flex at the Keith, in Syracuse, sold "The Bride Came C. O. D." with a bride's trousseau contest in one of the papers, which invited readers to submit lists of wearing apparel for a bride about to go on her honeymoon. It was required that the articles be selected from among the ads appearing in the classified and advertising sections of the paper.

Flex also pointed the fashion background with newspaper layouts of Bette Davis in summer sports wear. This slant was promoted in a number of leading stores and for the information of males interested in what the well-dressed man was featuring, the Schiner planted star stills of Jimmy Cagney wearing new season's hats.

On Newspaper Advertising In the Smaller Situation

Round Tabler Gives Suggestions Aimed for Theatremen Lacking Basic Training

by PAT McGEE
District Manager, Schine Ohio Theatre

We noted recently there had been a decided acceleration in the advancement of younger men to the positions of Assistant Managers and Managers. It became quickly apparent these men had somehow not been given the basic training in the preparation of newspaper ads—they lacked drill in the fundamentals—so we started an intensive effort to supply this information.

Among other things we set forth as simply as possible the basic rules of writing ads and the reasons for them.

Most managers have the correct thought that their ads must tell what, where, when, and how much, but if that was all we needed, we could restrict our copy to about two inches of space a day and confine ourselves to a directory service only.

Ads Should "Make a Sale"

The fact that we try to make a layout and carry some sort of copy proves that we are also trying to sell those who casually stumble into our copy; to make a customer out of a reader who isn't thinking about going to a theatre. To do this requires plenty of thought, both about the illustration you need, the copy you use, and the ease with which the message is read and understood.

Indeed, we can do even more, make our copy stand out on the page. Literally reach out and drag the reader's eye right to our space. If the thought is right and the illustration appealing you can then make him curious about the program to the final thought of wanting to go to the show. In short, to make a Sale.

Advocates Plenty of White Space

We have seen as many as eight different mats in a single ad creating so much clashing of lettering, of reverses and illustration, as to make an ad that actually repels the eye. The manager simply followed the course of least resistance. He had the mats, so he used them and saved himself a little work, completely overlooking the fact that if everything in an ad is emphasized the net result can only be that nothing will have emphasis. When you appeal to the sense of hearing you change the tone of your voice for emphasis. In appealing to the eye you must arrange black against white and large against small.

A point most men never consider is that the artist who make the ads in the pressbooks designs each, even to the midgets, with the sole purpose of attracting attention as an individual ad. They contemplate their ad in the light of what it must compete with on the rest of the page.

Small communities, denied the use of engraving plants and without the services of an artist, have still a powerful aid—"white space." White space, used intelligently, will make even poor copy at least attractive to the eye. Like an island in the ocean, a bit of white space stands out from the dull gray sea of the balance of the page. That doesn't mean that you need simply to buy gobs of space and leave most of it blank. Usual space will serve very well if you'll learn to balance your copy and not to fill every bit of space with type. Learn to use guide lines to keep your copy condensed within certain limits. If you letter without guides you'll find your copy filling the available space, a course which the compositor is certain to follow when he sets up your ad, since he can only do what you indicate.

Many mediocre ad writers get very good ads because they are on friendly terms with their composing-room ad men, who take an interest in the ads of the theatre, and follow copy closely or even make suggestions on how to improve the layouts. Then some managers can't write their instructions on the copy but can explain what they're trying to get, and the ad-alley men remember when they work on the copy.

Experience has shown certain things which are very helpful in improving newspaper ads and a number are listed above.

McGee Ad "Do's" and "Dont's"

Get a book, or proof sheets, of the type faces available in your local newspaper plant so you can select your own type faces for contrast. Don't overdo this: simply mark the type face you want for the catchlines or titles, leaving the size to the compositor's option. Emphasize what is important; the mechanical department will follow.

Prepare copy several days in advance for composing room so it can have plenty of time to work on it. You can then have your proofs a day or so ahead of publication. Most sloppy and incorrect ads come from haste in composition.

It is helpful to write out all the copy you intend to use before you even attempt to make a layout. That way you'll have firmly in mind what you want to say and the sales points which you want to emphasize most.

Lay out your copy, using but a single illustration in the ad. When the exception demands a second illustration, try to select one that won't conflict with the other.

Balance up your copy, using white space to make a border between it and the rest of the ads on the page. After making your outline of size ad is to occupy, draw a light border inside and all around. Set all copy and illustrations inside this smaller layout and you will always have white space.

Never be afraid to use boldface type for the title of your picture in preference to a title in a mat which you have to squeeze into your space. A good Gothic type is almost always more readable than some fancy lettering. Stay away from too many capital letters in an ad.

Don't hesitate to have a large mat cast and mortise off just the part that you need for your ad. The mechanical department can do wonders in this way, even to the extent of setting up off-angle boxes.

Large heads as illustrations are usually better than action scenes, for a number of reasons: People like to look at other people. Star heads are quickly recognizable and thus help sell at a glance. They usually reproduce much better in the newspaper, and they are more easily handled in a layout.

Always make notes on the various items each ad must carry before you start your layout. A good habit is to make a rough quick pencil sketch of the layout you have in mind before you paste down your illustration; thus you can move the illustration around and decide how it balances best while keeping proper emphasis for your copy.

A single forceful word as a catchline is always effective but, if you can't find anything suitable, keep your catchline down to a few words which convey a meaning, and keep all copy to a minimum. Try to make your copy have some connection with your illustration so the whole thing tells a story.

Scan the ads in your out-of-town newspapers, particularly your big metropolitan dailies, and save every ad for filing you find that looks good or which has a different sales slant.

A good general rule is to use a "sig" cut one column smaller than your layout—a single-column "sig" in a two-column space, etcetera.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

For his "Captain Marvel" serial at the Lafayette, in St. Louis, Mo., Manager John Heflinger mailed cards to all boys and girls who had registered from a previous serial. Spaces were run for each chapter and to all kids attending 11 consecutive shows, guest tickets went for the final. In addition, John promoted soft drinks for all.

Peep-show angle was used for "Topper Returns" lobby display by Bill Johnson at Smalley's, in Dolgeville, N. Y. Door had copy lettered on it reading: "Look. Where is the lady when Topper Returns." On inspection, folks saw planted againt black background hat, gloves, legs and shoes.

For his Flag Day Matinee party at the Schine State, in Tupper Lake, N. Y., Clay Cornell decorated his front, marquee, lobby and stage with flags and bunting. Speaker was secured from the Legion Post to talk to the kids, the National Anthem was sung and the Pledge of Allegiance was given to open the festivities.

The old telephone stunt, with a novel twist, was employed by F. R. Jackson, St. Mary's, St. Mary's, Pa., for "They Met in Bombay." Members of his staff made phone calls to local residents, and those able to tell him exactly what picture was playing at his house received guest tickets.

Since the murder committed in "Trial of Mary Dugan" was committed by a left-handed person, Les Campbell at the Strand, in Trail, B. C., tied this sequence into a lobby contest. Left-handed customers were invited to sign their names in a book provided for that purpose, while Les offered ten dollars in cash to one of the lucky "signers." Papers picked up the stunt and gave it daily breaks.

Contest in conjunction with 15-minute radio program was run in connection with opening of "Philadelphia Story" at the Capitol, in St. Thomas, Ont., with Manager Les Preston offering guest tickets to those who could name as many picture titles as possible that the stars of "Story" had appeared in. Numerous stores came through with attractive window displays and special deluxe heralds were printed and distributed well in advance.

Ahead of "Philadelphia Story" at the Palace, in Antigo, Wisconsin, H. R. Simons printed up a letterhead, top of which carried cut of Hepburn, Grant and Stewart, side featuring title, complete cast and playdates. Body of letter called attention to the picture itself. In addition, special envelopes were printed with cut of Grant and copy reading: "There's something very confidential inside."

Plenty of picture and publicity breaks were grabbed off by Jack Harris, manager of the Affiliated Circuit's Avenue Theatre, Philadelphia, in inviting 39 selectees and the entire district draft board to preview "Buck Privates."

Tying in the "V" for victory movement to the date on Underground at the Fox Theatre, in Philadelphia, Ev Callow put out folder, front cover of which is here reproduced to note how tiein was made.

In connection with the reissue of "The Champ" at the Royal, in Enid, Okla., Roy T. Shield planted two large barrels in his lobby filled with envelopes addressed to the theatre. Copy alongside read: "Look two big barrels of requests received by us asking for the return of 'The Champ.' You asked for it; here it is." Caricature cutouts of Beery and Cooper were also featured.

To usher in his "Flying G Men Club" at the Princess, in Edmonton, Canada, F. Tickell had printed and distributed lucky numbered membership cards. Kids were instructed to attend all chapters at the last of which an air force outfit was presented to the holder of the lucky number.

PLANTS CREDIT LINE IN DAILY CARTOON

Hooking his campaign on "Blondie in Society" to the popular "Blondie" comic strip in the Cincinnati Enquirer, E. V. "Dinny" Dinerman, RKO divisional ad head, was able to land a daily credit line alongside the cartoon title for a week ahead and during the run of the picture at the RKO Keith.

Tying up with local restaurant, Marietta McCartney for "A Woman's Face" at the Jefferson, in Punxsutawney, Pa., promoted distribution of heralds which carried jig-saw scene still puzzle, guest tickets going to those cutting out pieces and assembling them correctly. Theatre and restaurant ad were included. In addition Mrs. McCartney recently held a cooking class on her stage through cooperation of local store, refrigerator was awarded and baskets of groceries promoted as extra prizes.

With a local merchant continually running the same type ad, Jim McDonough at the Grand, in Galt, Ontario, approached him with the idea of supplying cuts and movie copy to brighten the ads. Merchant fell for the idea immediately and now Mac gets in plugs for his current and forthcoming attractions.

Teaser heralds with the words "Guess Who?" on the front page were distributed by D. M. Dillenbeck at the Rialto, in Bushnell, Ill., to sell "Ridin' on a Rainbow." Inside spread carried cut and picture copy, back page devoted to restaurant ad suggesting that folks go there after the show. Store came through for part of printing and distribution cost in exchange.

Guessing the weight of a huge bin of tobacco in a local smoke shop window was one of the highlights of the "They Met in Bombay" campaign executed by Dave Boyd, Cabrillo, San Pedro, Cal. Guest tickets were awarded the men guessing nearest the correct weight.

For the appearance of George McCall's Revue at Warner's Columbia, in Erie, Pa., Round Tabler John Schultz landed top streamer of newspaper movie page in addition to scene mat and stories. McCall was interviewed over WLEU opening day, in addition the radio commentator appeared as guest speaker at the Lyons Club. Jumbo window cards were distributed as were heralds well in advance.

Pinch-hitting for manager Roland Haynes, recuperating from a serious appendectomy, assistant Nat Warshaw, of Warners' Keystone Theatre, Philadelphia, promoted a guessing contest for "Strawberry Blonde." Contestants were invited to send in as many words as they could make out of the title.

"Beware! Billy the Kid Is Coming!" was the copy used in a sidewalk stencil plugging "Billy the Kid" by Pat Notaro, Columbia, Sharon, Pa.

Two thousand samples of face powder were distributed by H. L. Stahl, Drake, Oil City, Pa., as part of his campaign for "A Woman's Face."

Running some old film upside down, Robert Bowman, Strand, Ridgway, Pa., appended the message: "If you think this is nutty, wait until you see the Marx Brothers in 'The Big Store.'"

Australians Hit Hard on Datings

That the intensive war activities in Australia have not been allowed to interfere with aggressive theatre exploitation is to be noted in the campaigns arriving from that sector and especially from Sydney, on "Northwest Mounted Police" at the Prince Edward and "Second Chorus" at the State.

On the former, under the guidance of Mel G. Lawton, general manager, and Hermann E. Flynn, Paramount publicity director, the newspaper publicity, in city, country and suburban papers reached a total of over 5000 column inches, a decided accomplishment in the face of rationing of newsprint and paper. The elaborate billing campaign, running from one-sheets to 24's, blanketed the entire area and at the leading beaches, boxkites carrying theatre credits were flown.

At the theatre, special displays were heightened with the addition of girls dressed in Indian costume, the usherettes also costumed accordingly. Radio coverage was featured with special recordings made by Cecil B. DeMille, producer of the picture, and various of the players. In addition, a 15-minute preview of the picture was also broadcast.

"Second Chorus" Dance Featured

Outstanding promotion for the date on "Second Chorus" at the State, Sydney, worked by Ted Lane, publicity director, Greater Union theatres and Hermann Flynn, was a tiein with the city's leading dance hall to have the "Dig It" number in the picture spotlighted and taught at night sessions. This brought heightened interest when hooked up to search advertised by the dance-hall for a partner for Fred Astaire. Winner selected by the audience was awarded a prize of five pounds with extra prizes of cash given in a novelty dance competition and jitterburg contest. Guest tickets were offered in addition and the picture further plugged with a demonstration of the featured dance by the dance-hall professionals.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

School Dress Designing Class Tied to "Ziegfeld" by Brien

Of no mean proportions was the high school tieup on "Ziegfeld Girl" arranged by Lige Brien at the Belmar, in Pittsburgh, with 140 students of the dress designing class submitting costume designs for the stars in the picture. These were placed in the local Carnegie Library for display purposes two weeks ahead. Highlights of the campaign consisted of entire student body of 3500 pupils marching to the Library to cast their votes for their favorite "Ziegfeld Girl" design. Winners received guest tickets, local dailies coming through with stories and art.

Metal signs with title were planted strategic spots around town, through tieup with local merchant imprinted cellophane bags containing peanuts were distributed copy reading "It's the nuts," etc. Through cooperation of five and dime store, guest tickets were offered to those securing weight cards bearing cut of any star appearing in the picture and four local plants came through by distributing salary checks in imprinted envelopes.

POLICY CHANGE ADS

When it was decided to reduce admissions at the Malco-Fulton, in Fulton, Ky., and to introduce double-features for Friday and Saturday, Manager Harold H. Thomas built an eight-day ad campaign. The first six were one- and two-column teasers, the price and policy changes announced on the last two days. Reproduced here are the teasers used the first five days.

Ackery Gives "Hudson's Bay" Well-Rounded Campaign

By permission of the City Council, the streets within a three-block radius of theatre and the main stem were decorated with flags and shields carrying "Hudson's Bay" copy in connection with that picture's opening at the Orpheum in Vancouver, B. C., as arranged by Round Tabler Ivan W. Ackery. Utilities company decorated theatre block with special design red and green streamer lights. Programs were arranged over CJOR daily for four weeks with special broadcast opening night, which was attended by local dignitaries, including the mayor and government officials. Westminster Regiment band performed out front and on stage, while frontiersmen were on hand to lend color to the festivities. Trappers and Indians also were invited guests of the management.

For his stage presentation, Ackery promoted the Hudson's Bay Choir of 75 voices, while officials of the Hudson's Bay company presented the Mayor with special blankets. The company also constructed a special front for the theatreman designed along the lines of a trading post with two men dressed as trappers on duty. Lobby was also dressed in keeping with fort, trapper dummies, trees.

Reserve Decision In Clearance Case

Judge Guy K. Bard, in U. S. District Court in Philadelphia, last Friday, July 25th, reserved decision on the motion for an injunction to restrain Columbia Pictures Corp. from booking the New Embassy Theatre in Atlantic City as a first-run house in the Atlantic Avenue zone. Of unusual interest to the trade in this territory because the complaint, a typical case for the arbitration board, was taken instead to court, the injunctive proceeding was initiated last week by Harry L. Waxmann, head of Hacco Theatres, Inc., operating an independent circuit in Atlantic City. Joined as defendants were the Wieland Theatre Co., also an independent circuit that includes the New Embassy Theatre, and the Warner Brothers Theatre Circuit Management Corp. The Warner and Weiland interests operate their Atlantic City houses on a pooling agreement.

A bill of complaint alleges that in its contract with Columbia, the Astor and Hollywood theatres, Waxmann houses, have clearance over all but the first-run house on Atlantic Avenue, and that clearance covers any new houses built in that zone. Weiland's New Embassy, replacing the circuit's dark Embassy Theatre, was opened on June 7th, 1941. Mr. Weiland's Colonial Theatre is the first-run for Columbia on Atlantic Avenue at the resort, Mr. Waxmann's Astor playing seven days after the Colonial and his Hollywood 14 days after the first-run house.

It is alleged that Columbia had booked into the New Embassy "They Dare Not Love" and "She Knew All the Answers," thus making the New Embassy a first-run house on Atlantic Avenue. Since Judge Bard has taken the matter under advisement both pictures are subsequently being shown at the New Embassy. As a result, the plaintiff made a motion to amend its original motion, which sought an injunction only against the two pictures in question, and now asks that its contract be protected on all Columbia bookings. The defendants ask that the motion be dismissed. Judge Bard has promised to hand down his opinion this Friday, August 1st.

William A. Wolff, Western Electric Official, Dies

William A. Wolff, 58, information manager for Western Electric and Erpi, died Thursday night, July 24th, while on a vacation trip in Maine. He had been ill several months at his home in Woodmere, L. I. Surviving are his wife, Dr. Harriette Hart Wolff, and three children.

Mr. Wolff was advertising manager of Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc., from 1929 until he became information manager in 1940. Advertising and publicity for Western Electric sound mation picture equipment were under his supervision from the time sound and talking films were first introduced.

George A. Ranshaw

George A. Ranshaw of the Nortown theatre in Detroit died in that city of a heart attack Wednesday, July 23d. Mr. Ranshaw started with Casino Feature Film Co. as salesman in 1914 and had been connected with the film industry in Detroit ever since, except for a brief period in Chicago as a salesman for Paramount. He is survived by his widow.

Albert E. Brown

Albert E. Brown, former theatre owner in Philadelphia, died Monday, July 21st, at the Presbyterian Hospital, Philadelphia, after a long illness. He was 73 years of age, and until his retirement several years ago, operated the Overbrook and Grand theatres in Philadelphia. His widow survives.

IN COURTS

Second Davis Trial Begins

For the second time in two months, former U. S. District Court Judge J. Warren Davis and Morgan S. Kaufman, former attorney for William Fox, went on trial Monday July 28th, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the United States Government. The indictments grew out of the bankruptcy litigations of William Fox, bankrupt film producer, who pleaded guilty to the same charges. The first trial ended May 29th, when a jury failed to reach an agreement and was discharged. Mr. Fox was a Government witness in the last trial and will again take the stand for the Government.

Judge Hugh D. McLellan, of Boston, is presiding at the trial, in the U. S. district court in Philadelphia.

Before the opening of the sessions, Walter H. Gahagan, Jr., Special Assistant to the U. S. Attorney General, announced that he expected the Government would take at least two weeks in presenting once more its evidence against the two defendants, precluding any possibilities of a short trial. In the first trial, which lasted only ten days, the Government presented its case in five days.

The selection of jurors occupied the court activity the opening day and the Government started its case on Tuesday. William A. Grey, noted Philadelphia criminal attorney, continues as counsel for Judge Davis, with Abe Salsburg, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., replacing Isador Gainsburg, of New York, in Mr. Kaufman's defense.

William Fox, who has pleaded guilty to the charges and is at liberty under bail pending sentence, was not in court for the opening session, but is expected to appear later in the role of star witness for the Government, as he did previously.

The indictment specifically charges that Mr. Kaufman was the go-between for Mr. Fox and Judge Davis, whereby the jurist borrowed $28,000 from the movie producer before the latter's litigation was in his court for consideration.

Claim Deadline Set

Chancellor W. W. Harrington has set October 1st as the deadline for filing claims by creditors and stockholders against Pacific National Theatres, dissolved Delaware corporation, in the chancery court in Wilmington. The chancellor also set September 15th to hear objections to petitions for fees filed. William H. Foulk, Wilmington attorney, who was named receiver last year for Pacific National, has requested the court for $5,000 in fees and total of $385.03 for expenses in a report submitted to Chancellor Harrington.

Tax Actions Withdrawn

Paramount Pictures on Friday, July 25th, discontinued two suits in the United States district court in New York which had sought a total of $106,100 in refunds from the United States Government. The company had claimed it had paid on behalf of itself and its subsidiaries the sum of $69,600 in 1934 for capital stock taxes and $36,500 in 1933. The suits charged that the tax laws of 1933 and 1934 were illegal and invalid. No reason for the withdrawal of the suits were given.

Plagiarism Suit Dismissed

Judge J. F. T. O'Connor on Wednesday, July 23rd, dismissed on ground of insufficient evidence the $400,000 suit of Juan Igual Montijo against Fox Azteca Film Distribution Co. and others for alleged plagiarism of Mr. Montijo's story, "Viva Madero," in the "Cisco Kid" series.

ABOUT SHORTS

SOME current announcements about increased appropriations and projects for special trade showings for short product would tend to encourage a hope that Production and Distribution are to come to a realization of responsibility to the audience across the whole program.

A minor fraction of the short output always, or nearly always, has been notably excellent, while a preponderance has varied from commonplace to worse.

Perhaps the most conspicuous attention to the short product in an organized fashion and with pointed recognition of the importance of the short as a component of the theatre program, in recent years, has been from the Interstate circuit in the Southwest. There in Dallas Mrs. Besa Short has conducted a bureau for the sifting, booking and exploitation of shorts.

Far too generally, shorts have been bought either as "forced" product or as "fillers", taken by the armload.

The short product department of the industry, ever since the rise of the feature drama, has lingered under the influence of heritage from the ancient General Film program, in both production and distribution, and too widely in exhibition also.

IT should be, and always should have been, obvious that the motion picture patron is properly inclined to hold the screen in front of him just as responsible for quality entertainment one minute as the next. The customer does not enter equipped with two states of mind, two channels of judgment—one for features, one for shorts. The customer goes to the movies, be they long or short. He hopes they will be good, long or short. The considerations of the processes of distribution are unknown and of no interest to the retail customer. Most unfortunately he has heard about "A" and "B" features, but he has not heard about "filler" shorts. That is a minor miracle.

As has been so often obeserved here before, the better showmen are those most concerned about shorts. For many years, starting with the dawn of the modern theatre, the late Mr. Samuel L. Rothapfel was the most outstanding exponent of competent short product competently presented. It is interesting that when he brought the motion picture to Broadway with the opening of the Strand theatre in mid-year of 1914, with great flourish and grandeur, he opened his show with a specially compiled Pathe Weekly, mostly of marching men, to give pretext to fanfare and music of pageantry, all so dear to Roxy and his customers. As often as not, Roxy delegated attention to the feature product in theatres under his administration, but always he screened newsreels and shorts.

It is to be said of shorts in general, and newsreel in particular, too, that they offer substantially the only opportunity for the theatre screen to serve the "non-fiction" interests of the audience. That area of interest is very much larger than the motion picture has ever permitted itself to realize.

THE short subject department has also always suffered from the constant draining off into the feature field of such special talent as shorts have developed. Keystone comedies delivered Mr. Charles Chaplin, who romped into feature-length pictures as rapidly as possible. The story was repeated for Mr. Harold Lloyd. Again, Mickey Mouse did so much for Mr. Walt Disney that his major attention and efforts have gone into features and super-features.

One large factor of influence in the direction indicated has been dollar pressure. The feature has promised more money for less work. It has not always, however, delivered. Also, there has been, in the main, more glory in features and their attendant promotions.

The box-office customers have always been more interested in shorts than the industry has been. If, by reason of collateral influences, the general stirring up of distribution and selling policies improves the attention to and position of shorts, the art and industry alike will have made a gain.

FREDERICK JAMES SMITH

WITH especial regret we record this week the abrupt passing of Mr. Frederick James Smith, these five and twenty years a friendly and able writer about the motion picture.

Mr. Smith was the perennial optimist in his work, the perennial romanticist in his living. He worked with gifted diligence; he lived and loved dangerously, adventurously, but with decorum. He believed in decency and the mores of a decent America. As a writer for the fan and lay press, beginning with the New York Evening Mail's motion picture department of 1914, he spoke fairly and as favourably as might be of what the screen offered. He ever gave the screen and its people the benefit of as much doubt as he might have had, sometimes more.

Fred Smith was one of those, along with Mr. Julian Johnson, Mr. Al Cohn and Mr. Randolph Bartlett, in the procession of editors of Photoplay Magazine, whom the late Mr. James R. Quirk brought to the glorifications of the art of the cinema for its mass public. In the death of Fred Smith, we and you and all the motion picture have lost a friend.

HOBLITZELLE

DOWN in Texas and the Southwest, wherever the flag of Interstate flies, it is Hoblitzelle month, memorializing his thirty-fifth anniversary in the showmanship of the motion picture.

Few, indeed, survive in active function and leadership in the screen theatre who were contemporaries of Mr. Karl Hoblitzelle in his initial year of 1906.

That was the year after the dawn of the nickelodeon. "The Great Train Robbery", in its majestic 850 feet, was the superpicture of the day. The years between then and now cover all the development that there has been in motion picture exhibition and cover, too, most all that has made the screen the dominant meoium of entertainment.

Along with the motion picture, Mr. Hoblitzelle has grown into both fortune and fame. In his own Lone Star state, from Texarkana to El Paso, he is known quite as much for his good citizenship, his patronage of all the arts, his social consciousness, as for his showmanship.

This Week in the News

No Rodgers for U. A.

William F. Rodgers will not be president of United Artists, for two years, at least.

This became apparent Tuesday, in New York, when Nicholas M. Schenck, MGM president, refused to release his general sales manager from a contract which runs two more years.

It became a certainty Wednesday when, in a formal statement, Mr. Rodgers said he "could not even consider the proposal without my companies full approval," and this, he added "the company felt it could not grant."

United Artists' three partners, Mary Pickford, Alexander Korda, and Charles Chaplin, for several weeks had been asking Mr. Rodgers to assume the United Artists' presidency, vacant since the departure, several years ago, of A. P. Giannini, although Murray Silverstone acted as general manager for several years, and Arthur Kelly is now acting chieftain.

Mr. Schenck is reported discussing a new contract with Mr. Rodgers, to run 10 years.

It is understood other majors' executives are now being approached by United Artists. N. L. Nathanson, former Famous Players Canadian president, denied reports in New York this week, that he would join UA, either as president, or financier.

David O. Selznick, one of the prime motivators to place William Rodgers at the head of United Artists and who is negotiating to join that company, said in Hollywood Wednesday that his negotiations with UA "are not affected, this despite the fact, that Bill Rodgers is, in my opinion, one of the most able men in the picture business."

Fantastic Figures

Two hundred and fifty million dollars for a lone million. That's the settlement price proposed Wednesday in New York by Westinghouse Electric and General Electric in offering to settle a quarter of a billion dollars stockholders' suit against them, RCA, RCA Victor. Suit was filed in the N. Y. Supreme Court by 11 minority stockholders of RCA.

Half of the original action, which asked $500,000,000, was dismissed due to the statute of limitations. Suit stated that General Electric and Westinghouse had sold worthless patents to RCA for $240,000,000 worth of stock; that losses of $82,000,000 were sustained in investment in RCA Victor; and $11,000,000 through investment in RKO. The defendants in making the settlement offer do not admit charges to be correct, but state that to continue the suit would take another three years and tie up executives needed in national defense.

'Big-5' Expansion

One of the largest—if not the largest—theatre expansions by a "Big Five" circuit since the signing of the consent decree and its attendant limitations, inferred and otherwise, on "Big 5" circuit expansion, will occur September 1st, when the Fox Wisconsin Amusement Corporation acquires seven Milwaukee and four other Saxe Amusement Management theatres.

The theatres are the Uptown, Modjeska, Garfield, Mirth, Princess, Tivoli, and Parkway, Milwaukee; the Oshkosh, Oshkosh; Jeffris and Apollo, Janesville; and Orpheum, Kenosha.

All theatres have been operating under a booking arrangement with the Warner Brother exchanges.

The acquisition will raise Fox's string in Wisconsin and upper Michigan, to more than 65 theatres when the deal is consumated next month.

Product Predicament

Charging that the Balaban and Katz circuit's influence alone in the Chicago territory is setting release dates, Jack Kirsch, president of the Illinois Allied, Wednesday, wrote to all distributors that members of his organization will be unable to buy the best pictures of the new season, if the situation continues.

Mr. Kirsch asserted the circuit established film combinations in first and second class houses; combinations in many instances not available for subsequent runs.

He asked formation of a booking committee, to set releases monthly—a system used before, but discontinued the past several years because of Balaban and Katz' asserted lack of cooperation.

Cock-Eyed

Sydney H. MacKean, long an editor of newsreels, is finishing an autobiography devoted to his personal contacts with world events from 1913 to 1930, and containing anecdotes of noted men who have figured in the news and newsreels. The book, entitled "Cock-Eyed Business," is not a history of newsreels and follows no chronological order but is said to promise a "somewhat facetious, sometimes exciting," account of Mr. MacKean's experiences in the 17 years in which he was variously news editor and editor of Hearst's International Newsreel, editor of Universal's Animated Weekly and Universal Current Events and news editor of Paramount News. It is expected that the book will be in the Fall list of a Chicago publisher.

First Soviet War Reels

After six weeks of a war "without movies," American newsreel companies issued on Tuesday and Wednesday the first newsreel shots of the Russian-German war. Soviet officials had released them to the British Government last week, representatives of American reels in London receiving the pictures last Saturday, and flying them immediately to the U. S. via Clipper.

Paramount News reported that the original films were flown from Russia to London by plane with General Golikov, who headed the first military mission from the USSR to England. The General previewed the reels for officials of the British Ministry of Information, who in turn approved the pictures for distribution throughout the British Empire. Both the Russian and British governments censored the reels for release to American news reel companies.

Movietone News, Pathe, Paramount News, Universal and News of the Day used approximately from 300 to 600 feet of the original 1,000 footage prepared by Red Army military and intelligence officers. All the American reels used practically the same shots.

Shown in theatres this week in the United States, the films depict Russian crowds receiving news of the sudden German attack; streams of Red Army motor division and infantry moving up to the front; civilian population preparing to dig trenches and back up river banks for troop movements; shots of Generals Voroshiloff, Timoshenko and Budenny, high-ranking commanding Red Army officers, reviewing troop movements; the Soviet air force bombing Nazi troops; Russian soldiers taking German prisoners; Russian civilian population being armed for guerilla warfare, and finally a shot of Sir Stafford Cripps and Stalin signing the British-Russian pact in the Kremlin.

Spy Notes in Film Cans

Nazi and Japanese film distributing exchanges in Brazil, Uruguay and Argentina are being used as headquarters for handling and routing of German-Japanese espionage communications in motion picture cans, Transradio Press reported last week-end over its Mutual network program, "Confidentially Yours."

Arthur Hale, commentator for the program, revealed that since the Russo-German war, "Germany was robbed of her shortest means of communication with her Axis partner, Japan, via the trans-Siberian Railway," and that now, "German material destined for Japan is flown to Buenos Aires, Santiago or Montevideo, encased in cans usually identified with movie films and bearing the bold stamp of UFA, the initials of Germany's largest motion picture concern. These cans are taken in charge by Japanese 'film exchange' officials and are rushed to some port on the west coast of South America, Santiago, Chila or Guayaquil, Ecuador, where they are placed aboard Japanese-bound steamers for the trip to Yokohama. The system works the same way, in reverse, when Japan forwards information to Berlin."

U. S. Intelligence Officers found in World War I that certain persons in this country sympathetic to the German cause were shipping certain rubber products in film cans from film offices in the U. S. to film offices in Holland.

'Birthday' Promotions

Theatre "birthdays," ranked high by showmen for wide promotional celebrations, become doubly so on the occasion of a 20th anniversary, such as the one sponsored by RKO in the New York metropolitan area at the Fordham Theatre. Supervised by Sol A. Schwartz, RKO division manager, and Harry Mandel, circuit advertising chief, a solid week of special events, prize contests and such was presented. Civic heads were on hand to inaugurate the festivities and vast crowds came to enjoy them. What was done and how is told in this week's Round Table, starting on page 59.

Taxes . . . if War Comes

Seventy-seven per cent of so-called "average citizens" interviewed by Fortune Magazine, for its survey on public sentiment for or against war—are willing to pay "double the present taxes on luxuries, such as movies, tobacco, liquor, etc.," if the country enters the war. The survey is in the August issue.

Specifically, the percentage is 77.7. The percentage of those who would pay such taxes "unwillingly" is 14.2. 3.9 per cent would "fight against" the taxes. 4.2 per cent didn't know what they would do.

New Taxes Nearer

The $3,529,000,000 U. S. tax bill this week got over its first hurdle—though not unscarred—and is now the subject of hearings before the Senate Finance Committee.

So far as the motion picture and broadcasting industries are concerned, the bill as passed by the House August 4th is practically unchanged, in that it includes both the lowering of the admission tax exemption from 20 to nine cents and the new taxes on radio advertising. Broadcasting, however, was given another, but not unexpected jolt, in the adoption of a committee amendment providing that the new five per cent tax on telephone bills shall apply to radio stations and newspapers.

Representatives of the various industries affected by the new taxes, including some film representatives, will appear before the Senate Finance Committee next week, at which time representatives of the broadcasters are expected to make a strong fight for elimination of the proposed levies of five to 15 per cent on net advertising income.

Abram F. Myers, general counsel for Allied, is to appear in Washington on August 13th before the Senate Committee to present Allied's plan to reduce exemption on admissions so that the tax will start with the first cent. Allied is seeking further lowered exemption in order to avoid threats of price-cutting to nine cents.

Broadway Blackout

Broadway lights went dark Tuesday night, theatre uprights, picture displays and others of "Mazda Lane."

However, it was not a war blackout; not yet. It was a union demonstration.

Amusement signs were turned off from 8:55 P.M. to 9:30 P.M., by Local 3, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, in sympathy with 8,000 unionists striking against the city's Consolidated Edison Company.

Crowds, curious, silent, witnessed the demonstration. So did extra police forces. So did city notables.

Among the famed signs and "outfronts" extinguished were the Wrigley, Planters' Peanut, Paramount Theatre, Chevrolet, Coca Cola, Wilson's Whiskey, Loew's State, et al.

The Mayfair, Capitol, Criterion and Roxy theatres maintained most of their marquee lighting. The Local's men do not handle such lighting; but the theatres "cooperated" in varying degrees.

Harry Van Arsdale, Local 3 business manager, called the event a "blackout of enlightenment."

Meanwhile, from Washington the word is blackouts of amusement signs and other commercial fronts may come because of a power shortage.

The exhibitors of the United States and Canada have delivered, available to Production and Distribution, through a Motion Picture Herald poll extraordinary, the guidance of their judgment, sitting at the box office, of the personnel prospects for the development and promotion of those who are promising as the stars of tomorrow.

Token of a new intensity of concern about product, the response to the questionnaires of this poll, both in volume and in the celerity of return, has been extraordinary, even in the experience of the Herald, with its long and especially successful series of annual polls on the "Ten Best Money Makers"—which, incidentally, will be again a piece of international news of renewed import at the end of this fateful 1941. Returns on this poll currently recorded have come in swift floods of thousands, beginning in a day of the first mailings. The exhibitor is anxious to have his say on this subject, feels deeply and writes earnestly and often with vigour.

No matter how the exhibitor buys, by program or block, with all due respect to decree-controlled positions, he sells picture by picture to his public. His convictions are many, acute, and in general his opinions are absolute. He enjoys no possibility of so intimate a knowledge of available story material, but he does know people, on the screen and in the seats in front of the screen. Those are two dominant factors of success.

The exhibitor, also, with more than a quarter of a century of familiarity with this medium of the Herald, finds it as convenient and available and expeditious an avenue of expression as of information.

It is clear enough that litigations and legislations and the agitations incident to those processes have made the exhibitor more product conscious, more eager for product information, more eager for responsiveness in production than at any prior period in the experience of the industry. He wants to hear and he wants to tell. In the Herald he does.

—THE EDITOR

HOW EXHIBITORS VOTE AND WHY

The HERALD questionnaire asked only for the top ten prospects for stars of tomorrow, but the returns brought, in all, 130 nominations. The count however found that a top group of ten, mentioned in at least one-third of all the ballots, did indeed lead all the rest by far. Women took the top three positions and the eighth, while the men held the positions four, five, six, seven, nine and ten.

Seventy-two hundred independent exhibitors and 5,500 operators of circuit theatres in all parts of the country and Canada were invited to participate in the poll, to give ten nominations for future stardom. As showmen they were to express the box-office point of view, their anticipation of the big marquee names in seasons to come. The response was widespread and enthusiastic.

Agreement on First Five

There was remarkable agreement on the leading candidates, although no name was without its ardent protagonist. Every ballot contained four or five of the top ten names, some many more. In fact, showmen commented that these names were already box office for them, and would be great stars if given suitable roles.

Laraine Day, ranking an easy first and named on three-fifths of the ballots, was a general favorite. The "Doctor Kildare" series has won her many admirers, and her portrayals in "My Son, My Son" and "Foreign Correspondent" have encouraged the idea that she should be given varied opportunities to prove her acting ability and audience appeal.

Rita Hayworth, in second place, was commended for her versatility, although some theatremen suggested that she receive more sympathetic roles than those in "Susan and God" and "Blood and Sand."

In urging the name of Ruth Hussey exhibitors frequently praised her performance in "The Philadelphia Story," and one admirer named her "Queen of the Well-done Bit."

Blonde by a Shade

Robert Preston and Ronald Reagan vied for first place among the young male leads. Very few votes separated them in the final count, blonde shading brunette by one percentage point. John Payne and Jeffrey Lynn were strong contenders for this position, as well. These promising male actors comprised a solid block of four to counterbalance female solidarity in the first three places.

Another young woman, a juvenile this time, Ann Rutherford, received next mention, and was the only other feminine player in the top ten. The "Polly Benedict" of the "Andy Hardy" series is proposed by many for more adult, romantic roles in the near future.

Dennis Morgan enthusiasts were particularly voluble. His performance in "Kitty Foyle" as well as his singing voice have gained him friends among exhibitors and patrons alike.

Jackie Cooper, the last name on the list of ten, is not a new name for the fans who have watched him since his appearances with "Our Gang." But it's a new Jackie Cooper now, undertaking juvenile leads and winning new admirers.

NEXT WEEK

Further analysis of the poll returns next week will set forth the several regional preferences between the divisions of the United States, and will also present the separate returns from the Dominion of Canada.

Additionally, the judgment of the motion picture critics of the leading papers of the United States, referred to and compared with the vote of the showmen, will be presented.

The recorded divergences of opinion will perhaps afford exhibitors and producers alike information of certain nuances of choice that may be indicative.

The total of 130 nominations offered in the naming of a list of ten makes clear a spread of categories of appeal, while the preponderant plurality of the top ten indicates a national and continental consistency of preference.

Long Shots

Of the next 15 names—all of which were mentioned on at least 15 per cent of the ballots—the first four are men. But, just as in the top ten, the other sex monopolizes the following positions, with two exceptions. It was among these names that the strongest individual recommendations were made. The feeling that many of these players were too new to featured roles to have gained general recognition may have prompted showmen to single out special talents and special performances. There was a "just-between-you-and-me" air to their predictions, a sense of crystal-gazing and backing a long shot. But they were rarely alone in their enthusiasm, and although no weight could be given to emotional quality, their favorites all found enough support to place well up in the top quarter.

The independent exhibitors and those operating circuit theatres agreed on the whole in their choices. The first twenty-five names on both lists were identical, and split as evenly between men and women as you can split twenty-five and remain a gentleman. There were, however, slight deviations in the order, only one of which made a difference in the top-ten ranking. Stirling Hayden made the first ten on the circuit theatre tabulation, although he was thirteenth choice among the independents. This might well be due to the fact that his debut in "Virginia" was recent, and his work is less familiar to some independent showmen. Most of the differences were minor, amounting to but a few percentage points.

Rapid Changes Seen

Twenty-five additional names were mentioned on more than five per cent of the ballots. Some of these were unfamiliar to exhibitors who are restricted in their product to certain distribution channels. Many were mentioned for their ability by showmen who did not give them top-ten ranking because their stardom seemed a little further off. Most of them were warmly praised by a few while many said they should be "watched." One exhibitor suggested that the next year should tell in many cases. He thought he would be revising his own list on the basis of already released pictures he had not yet shown, and product for the new year in which new faces would appear more often and those on the brink of stardom would be given their chance.

There was general complaint that a limit of ten names was too small, and perhaps the 130 different nominations bear this out. The poll asked only for "players of promise" for "promotion in, and to, starring roles," and drew wide variety. Some players had impressed with their performances in a single picture, some names were hardly new, and not all are younger actors. But the electors wasted no votes on whim or sentiment. Their ten held the most promise for them, and, it may be supposed, for their patrons. If a few more familiar names suggest comebacks rather than rising young players, they are still nominations for stardom, perhaps long overdue.

"Bad Day" Reactions

There were, of course, a few exhibitors who, in their attachment to various well-established stars, insisted they were the "Stars of Tomorrow" as well; and a few who felt that there was no discernible new talent. The latter reaction may be symptomatic of their recent business indices or perhaps a rainy Monday evening. But this was not representative of the great number of enthusiastic showmen who welcomed the idea of new names in lights, and in the affections of steady customers.

Most voters agreed generally that the choices were subject to revision according to the material given the promising players. Good parts, the showmen felt, could "make" any name on the list, and poor casting would obscure outstanding talent.

"Give us better pictures" they urged, and the stars would take care of themselves.

Exhibitors Nominate

1. LARAINE DAY. (MGM) *Best known for her role as the nurse in "Dr. Kildare," the MGM series. Descendant of Charles Rich, famous Mormon leader, she was born Loraine Johnson, in Utah. THAT 'NEW ORDER' BRINGS A NEW DAY FOR THE SHORT SUBJECT FILM

Decree's Provision Forbidding Forcing of Shorts Prompts Majors to Make, Sell Shorts with Special Attention

by JOHN STUART, JR.

Better days under the consent decree appear in prospect for the short subject departments, step-children in many distribution families until recently. Because of the decree's proviso that shorts can no longer be forced with features, the majors are going out to actually sell shorts, with special plans and promotions ahead.

Short subject executives report that contracts are ahead of all previous years, and beam over new account statistics and increases in production budgets. Now that the consent decree has forcibly divorced short subject from feature selling, it appears that the chief distributors are determined to give the short subject sales managers a free hand in exploiting the field.

Production also is lending new aid to the short subject, with more top directors, producers, writers, and even some top stars assigned to short subjects in between feature work. One studio, MGM, reports a production budget in advance of last year by 20 per cent. Other increases in the money, men and materials to be allotted to making numerous shorts are impressive.

Elimination of double features, formally proposed at the MPTOA convention in Los Angeles, and currently under serious discussion by various exhibitor groups and circuits, affiliated and independent, is a spur to the short story men who are convinced that they can supply brief product superior to some program pictures now in use. Likewise the decreased feature production schedules announced by some majors because of 1941-42 decree selling is viewed as opportunity for more and better short material.

Special Shorts Salesmen

Special selling efforts are marked by short subjects trade shows, by one company, and the inclusion of new shorts material with regular trade shows by several other distributors. In almost every exchange special short subjects salesmen have been appointed and will concentrate on this field alone. Home offices have hired special shorts promoters.

Advertising and exploitation of short subjects shows increasing interest all the way down the line from home office directors to theatre managers. There are signs of a drive to kill "Also Selected Short Subjects" lines in theatre advertising and marquees. Trials in billing and promoting by name the short materials on a program are reported to have uncovered unexpectedly strong boxoffice pull in the shorts of many companies.

Publicity material on shorts is being specially prepared by home offices, picking from each reel one point on which managers may build an effective exploitation effort. Press books, display material, mats and newspaper campaigns are being prepared for distribution through exchanges. In many cases this is the first time in a long, long time, if ever, any such effort has been made in behalf of the short subject.

"Institutional" campaigns, on a national basis are also reported brewing in several shorts departments. MGM and Warners both tell of "very special" short subjects promotion schemes set for launching in September.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, according to William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, will spend 20 per cent more on its short program, without increasing the number of titles, during the next year. The money will go into both production and selling. Recently MGM announced 78 shorts in 84 reels, plus 104 News of the Day issues.

New Shorts Competition

Mr. Rodgers also anticipated much greater competition next year in the short subjects market, observing that it "can only serve to improve shorts generally for the industry's common good." Foreseeing a return to single features in many situations he also predicted revived interest in shorts of two reels or more, occupying a position parallel to the short-short story in the magazines. MGM plans six of these two-reel specials for next year, led by Edgar Allen Poe's "Telltale Heart," with Joseph Schildkraut. There will also be a two-reel report on national defense.

According to Herbert Morgan, director of Metro short subject publicity, exhibitors are showing more interest and care in purchasing their short material. He cited a special interest in the "name" value of short subjects, noting exhibitor and audience preference for reels about personalities and subjects with which they are already familiar. The Metro lineup follows this thesis, introducing no new series, but extensively stressing in publicity and selling the "product familiarity."

Exhibitors are using commentator names extensively in their advertising, Mr. Morgan reported, using public familiarity with radio commentators and announcers who are featured voices in the Metro shorts. In many cases newspaper advertisements give up to half their space to strong shorts programs. He cited a particularly successful campaign by Interstate, in Texas, using top shorts to bolster weak program pictures.

Metro is not holding special trade shows of short subjects, Mr. Morgan said, but in the screening of its first group of three features it included shorts in almost all the 65 screening cities. From one to three samples of short subjects preceded the new feature. The practice will probably be continued at subsequent shows, following favorable exhibitor comment.

Paramount "Pre-selling"

Paramount, under Oscar Morgan, new short subject sales head, is also concentrating on "pre-sold" names and will introduce at least three new series to the public featuring familiar titles. Two, "Quiz Kids," and "Hedda Hopper," will be drawn from radio while a cartoon series on "Superman," of the comic strips, will be produced by Max Fleischer. Additionally the company will expand promotion of its new series of "Madcap Models," Puppetoons in color by George Pal.

Instead of trade showings, Paramount is trying its new season short product at special "sneak previews" in all sections. Audience reaction to the new reels is charted and used in presentation of the new material to exhibitors. Mr. Morgan reports that the method is more feasible and gives exhibitors a more accurate notion of audience value than do trade shows. He claims it makes it easier to plan programs with proper comedy balance.

Shorter program time in many theatres must come, and soon, according to Oscar Morgan. Pointing to four-hour double features in some sections he noted the extra cost for product, often inferior, and in some cases payment of overtime to theatre staffs because of competitive lengthening of programs. Feature product under the decree is already showing signs of being much stronger, picture for picture, according to Mr. Morgan and will militate against duals, at the same time providing increased demand for good short material.

Audiences are interested in short dramatic reels, and will demand them in increasing numbers if exhibitors put top production effort into them, the Paramount executive believes. The Paramount "Headliners" series this year is being extended to allow for dramatized biography and special short story treatment.

Trade Shows by Warners

Special trade showings of groups of short subjects are planned by Warner Brothers, Norman H. Moray, short subjects sales manager, has announced. The screenings will be arranged apart from the feature-product screenings, and will take place at approximately six-week intervals. They will be held at the company exchanges, with the first group tentatively planned to start before the

"MERCHANTS NIGHT" ATTRACTS PATRONS

To help large families see good pictures at a minimum cost to the parents, the Bay theatre at Bay St. Louis, Miss., has introduced a six-cent "Merchants Night" every Wednesday whereby coupons distributed at stores of the area and six cents admit the holders.

The Ortte theatre of the same community joined in the tie-up with a dozen business houses of Bay St. Louis in awarding each week a radio-equipped bicycle. Purchases at stores bring chance tickets which are deposited upon admittance to the theatre.

GASOLINE CURTAILMENT IS A NEW WORRY FOR EXHIBITORS IN EAST

Downtown Areas of Cities Are Not Concerned but Those in Outlying Districts See Carriage - Trade Loss

Gasoline, and just how much of it the public is going to get, became a concern for many theatremen in 17 eastern seaboard states this week, as they watched to see what effect on the boxoffice would result from the 7 P. M. curfew on gasoline sales ordered into force on Sunday by Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes.

Hopefully, managers, and distributors, too, watched to see if the curtailed use of the family car would result in increased patronage at the neighborhood theatre. Some operators predicted that restriction of the evening joy ride would prove a blessing to theatres, offsetting customary summer doldrums with an unequalled attendance rise.

Restrictions Studied

Anxiously, others in outlying sections watched to see if the curb on gas sales, and possible future restrictions would prevent patrons from reaching their theatres. Some houses, dependent on car trade for the most part, were even contemplating the institution of bus service in order to bring customers to the theatre. Others were fearful that their audience, deprived of the use of cars, would stay home to listen to the radio, read or otherwise make their own entertainment. Special advertising effort was in propect, to bring out such patrons.

Metropolitan operators, and theatres in small towns, were less concerned with the gas restrictions than the operators of houses in the suburbs of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington and other large cities within the oil-curb zone. They pointed out that the majority of city trade comes to the theatre in public conveyances, or walks. In small towns better than 70 per cent of patronage was said to walk to the theatre, car patronage consisting largely of residents of nearby rural areas.

Suburban houses however, drawing patronage by car from a wide area, studied the oil restrictions carefully. Some managers expressed the belief that ban would not be stringent enough to hurt attendance. Others planned free or cut-rate transportation tie-ins in case the situation becomes acute, and some even discussed special theatre bus service. Most likely to be hard-hit were the drive-in theatres, although optimistic managers pointed out that drivers could conserve gas if they parked to watch the outdoor shows.

Twelve-Hour Curfew

The Ickes curfew asked all gasoline stations East of the Appalachians, from Maine to Florida, voluntarily to halt the sale of motor fuel from 7 P.M. to 7 A.M. daily. The plan, originally set for August 11th, was placed into effect last Sunday. Shortage of transport facilities ordinarily used to bring fuel to the Atlantic coast has cut the seaboard supply by over a third. Sixty-four oil tankers were recently transferred to the British war service.

Success of the voluntary restriction on sales of motor fuel was still dubious at midweek. On Sunday, first day of the curfew, gasoline consumption jumped far above the daytime normal as motorists filled tanks to the brim and stored extra fuel. Monday sales dropped. But oil men said it would be a week before they could tell whether service stations were refilling storage tanks at a reduced rate.

Foresee Strict Rations

Strict rationing will inevitably follow the curfew, oilmen asserted, expressing doubt that the voluntary plan could meet the shortage of fuel in the East. Automotive editors of the New York newspapers predicted rationing by September 1st. Garage associations and individual service men also favored a ration system, pointing out that the curfew worked undue hardship on many retailers, and was not compulsory.

Administration of rationing, when it does occur, it was agreed will be strict. Some estimates place as low as five gallons a week, the weekly allotment for pleasure purposes. Cards probably will be distributed through state motor vehicle bureaus and local police authorities.

Figures on the use of automobiles by film patrons to and from the theatre are scarce. Traffic flow surveys conducted in New York by the police department, the Regional Planning Association, and safety councils note however that 20 per cent of the daily traffic occurs between 6 and 8 P.M. in central areas, with a lag of about half an hour in suburban sections. Engineers estimate that fully 98 per cent of the vehicles on the road during these hours are pleasure vehicles.

Theatre statistics show that the peak of boxoffice business also occurs between the 6 and 8 P.M. Many managers draw a direct relationship between the two figures. Traffic engineers however are less sure that the bulk of theatre patronage comes by automobile, pointing out that much evening traffic, according to motorist surveys, is engaged on shopping tours, or just pleasure riding.

In central New York a study made in December 1940 by the New York Police Department and the Regional Plan Association found that in 23 blocks in the theatre district 1,859 cars were parked at the curb between 8 and 9 P.M. An equal number used garages and parking lots in the area. The vehicles, they concluded brought but a small percentage of theatre patrons to Times Square. Parallel studies of subway and bus peaks indicated that most Broadway film patrons use public transport facilities. Presumably they, and customers in other cities, will continue to do so.

In suburban areas the use of cars by theatre patrons is considerably higher, the surveys note. Frequently patrons will drive five to ten miles to the theatre to see particular films, it was said. With gasoline rations they will probably concentrate patronage at their neighborhood house.

Duration of the oil curb is still a matter of speculation, although most oil experts agreed that it would be at least a year before new pipelines, and tankers could be constructed to replace the ships which have already been diverted to war service. Further diversion of transport will increase the replacement period.

Circuit Heads Report

A survey of circuit executives at New York revealed unanimous concern, but a wide variance of opinion, over the reaction of the boxoffice to the curfew on gasoline. The problem of obtaining fuel and heating oil also worried theatre men, who reported that dealers may not deliver through the winter months, nor will make price commitments in advance. Here are some typical exhibitor observations on the oil situation as follows:

Head of a circuit which depends upon car trade in about 85 per cent of its theatres in Long Island, Westcheester, New Jersey, and Connecticut, Joseph Seider, Prudential chieftain, said Monday, that he did not think "there is very much restriction under the present set-up," and added:

"The plan is not impractical; but it obviously is not saving much gasoline. And, obviously, a theatregoer is almost certain to have enough gasoline to get to the theatre; so it is not going to affect us. It certainly has had no effect so far."

Mr. Seider predicted that, under an atmosphere more restrictive than at present—an atmosphere of ration cards, and reduced deliveries by oil distributors—there will be greater use of the existing tie-ins between theatres and bus, ferry, and rail companies. In many of the circuits houses, he noted, there are tie-ups with such transportation companies, whereby the latter sell tickets combining travel with admission to the theatre. Pre-conditions of these arrangements are payment by the theatre to the transportation company of the patrons' travel fares.

Oil for heating? Mr. Seider remarked the situation is as it was before, when rumors of restrictions began: oil companies guarantee delivery, but not price. All of Prudential's houses are heated by oil.

Rations Will Hurt Box Office

Walter Vincent of the Wilmer & Vincent circuit, saw no diminution thus far, nor expected any in automobile traffic or theatre attendance; and doubted the practicability of the plan by which gasoline stations are closed 12 hours of each 24.

He said, however, that if the restrictions proved a hurt to theatre business, he would nevertheless favor such restrictions—if he thought them necessary for national defense; and that, thus far, they appeared to be necessary. Even if ration cards for gasoline use,

SCHOOL SURVEY REVEALS TASTES

In a survey of 436 elementary school children on "The Child's Day, Before and After School," conducted by Dr. Louis Monash, public school principal in the Bronx, N. Y., it was shown that with the exception of eight boys and ten girls, the children spent some time weekly at the movies. The range was from one every two weeks to three times a week. However, 92 per cent went to the movies once a week, spending four hours in the theatre. The five most popular pictures were "Comrade X," "Santa Fe Trail," "The Son of Monte Cristo," "Western Union" and "Four Mothers."

It was also found that all children, except two girls, spend some time listening to the radio—boys spent an hour and one-half, girls an hour and three-quarters. The five most popular air programs were "Captain Midnight," "Superman," "Mandrake the Magician," "The Aldrich Family," and "Baby Snooks."

PLAN WAYS TO MEET GAS BAN

foreseen this week, are introduced—and Mr. Vincent conceded these cards might have effect upon theatres with car trade—Mr. Vincent's attitude will be the same, he predicted.

The circuit head remarked that traffic bottlenecks in the New York metropolitan area—including highways in New Jersey, and parkways in Westchester and Long Island—were extremely wasteful of gasoline, not only ordinarily, but also during the weekend past, when the 12 hour closing rule was started.

Mr. Vincent said his circuit had no "plans" to deal with situations created by gasoline restrictions. If bus, ferry, and rail tie-ups or ticket giveaways are practical, the circuit will use them, he said, explaining that it was merely sensible to take advantage of all means necessary to maintain business. But, he noted, the Wilmer and Vincent circuit will not adopt any plan of bringing patrons to theatres, which will be wasteful of gasoline. Action in the present stage, is premature, Mr. Vincent concluded.

Loew's Circuit Unworried

Charles Moscowitz, operating head of Loew's metropolitan theatres, saw no immediately perceptible effect, upon theatre attendance, on Sunday night, or in the future. He asserted no gasoline is being saved by the "voluntary" closing plan; that as many cars as ever were on the road over the weekend; and that, if rationing cards do come, and less cars do travel, patrons can still reach theatres by commercial transportation mediums.

Mr. Moscowitz sees little effect upon theatre attendance, even with ration cards. People who want to see a picture will see it, in his opinion. They will use the subway, the bus, the train. Loew theatres, in any event, are in populated districts.

Mr. Moscowitz, questioned over a month ago, when the subject of gasoline restrictions for the Eastern seaboard was first bruited, at that time ruled out the possibility of his circuit, and even the others, using special bus lines to bring patrons to theatres. Such bus lines would nullify the object of the Government, he remarked; and probably would not be allowed.

Charles Koerner, RKO circuit head, who remarked a month ago that not over 15 per cent of the circuit theatres depended upon car trade—thus making it somewhat akin to the Loew circuit—on Monday remarked that:

"We're not going to do anything at all, for the time being. First of all, I just don't think the situation is that serious, for us. Some of our suburban houses may suffer. But we have comparatively few houses that will be really affected. Most of our theatres are situated so that customers may walk or use existing transportation lines.

"As to the hiring of buses, that, of course, is out. If they're going to ration gasoline, they're certainly not going to give it to us, for the purpose of bringing people to theatres. And, as to giving tickets for existing bus or other transportation lines, I don't see the necessity of doing that, at all."

Fabian May Try Buses

A. Gordon Reid, general manager of the Fabian circuit, said Monday that the circuit executives would meet this week to discuss plans for maintaining theatre attendance in the event of gasoline rationing cards. The present gas station closing plan, he dubbed "impractical", noting that it would induce hoarding, and consequent fire hazards. In any event, it was not hampering theatre attendance. Rationing of gas will hamper theatre attendance, he thinks. Many of the circuit's houses in New York and New Jersey depend upon car trade, he said.

Herman Becker, of the Rugoff & Becker circuit, with New York and Long Island houses, said that no plans were being made, because the situation "hasn't hurt us yet." He said all of the circuit's theatres depended to some extent upon automobile trade.

William White, general manager of the Skouras circuit, said Monday the gasoline restrictions were discussed last week, and were to be discussed again Tuesday morning, with many plans offered for maintaining patronage, but none at that time adopted, nor near adoption. The starting of a bus service was one of the methods weighed; but it was generally doubted, Mr. White admitted, whether the Government would countenance it.

Use of existing buses, it was found, was impractical in many situations because routes were not near enough to theatres.

The circuit, Mr. White intimated, will, in any event, await more specific action by the Government and oil and gasoline agencies, and effect upon patronage, before acting. Approximately 30 per cent of the Skouras theatres depend, mainly, upon a trade which arrives in private automobiles, Mr. White asserted. Only 30 per cent of the circuit's theatres are heated by oil, he said.

Frew Named Branch Manager

James Frew has been named branch manager of the Universal exchange in Cleveland, Ohio, filling a position that has been vacant for over a month since the death of Joseph Kaufman. Mr. Frew joined Universal as a salesman in the Toledo territory and was branch manager of the circuit's New Orleans branch until he was transferred to Cleveland last week.

Morning Matinees Set

Warners' Ohio theatre in Mansfield, Ohio, has inaugurated morning matinees on Tuesdays in each week, beginning at 11 o'clock, for the benefit of those whose industrial employment does not permit attendance at regular hours. The move follows a similar one by Warners' Ohio at Canton recently.

UNION ORGANIZES EDUCATIONAL STUDY

A new educational department has been created by Projectionists Local 273 of New Haven, to keep the member-projectionists abreast of new developments in visual and sound projection. Edward W. Boppert, Loew-Poli projectionist in New Haven, is chairman of the study group. Others serving on the committee are C. P. O'Toole and Donald Collins, Warner theatre department sound engineers, Fred J. Pfeiff, of Altec, and Myron Wheaton of the RCA sound service department. The new committee will sponsor frequent meetings with the membership to study latest developments in the projection field.

New Day for Shorts Seen Here

15th. One reel from each of the dozen series produced by Warners will be screened.

Accompanying the screening plan will be special sales efforts and exploitation and advertising campaigns boosting each series of brief pictures. Exhange managers are assigning special salesmen and bookers to concentrate on shorts. Advertising will be under the direction of Mort Blumenstock with a shorts publicity desk being set up by Morton Gerber.

Mr. Moray also reported new interest in the longer short subjects and reported that of the 86 titles planned for next year 18 will be two-reel productions, six in color. The series will include six national defense topics and a dozen "Broadway Brevities" featuring name performers.

Sales in short subjects this year, he reported to the Warner convention in Chicago last week, are far above all previous figures. To date over 5,000 short subject accounts have been closed, he said.

RKO Radio, concentrating on the series with which it has scored in the past, reports through H. J. Michalson, shorts manager, that it is well ahead of last year in closing new accounts and renewing old contracts. Production detail is getting increased budgets. Exploitation aids from the home office are also being widely used by exhibitors, according to Mr. Michalson.

He reports that exhibitors are keying advertising lobby and publicity display to "March of Time," "Information Please" and Disney topics with great success.

RKO combines shorts with features at the trade-showing of its first block-of-five in most cities, Mr. Michalson reported. One reel from RKO series will probably be shown at future trade shows too, although policy has not been definitely set.

Twentieth Century-Fox will not trade show its short subjects separately, although a home office spokesman said that exchange managers were being allowed to decide whether they wanted to add shorts to their regular screenings. The first block-of-five at Fox was screened in double feature trade shows and there were no reports of shorts being added.

The company is devoting new sales effort to short subjects, with special supervisors for the one-reel efforts in all sales territories. Publicity press books and advertising are also being expanded.

Hammond on Two Films

Len Hammond has been named associate producer of two films at Twentieth Century-Fox Studio, it has been announced. The pictures are "Swamp Water," which Jean Renoir will direct from the novel by Vereen Bell; and "Confirm or Deny," which Fritz Lang will direct and which will star Don Ameche and Joan Bennett.

INTERVENOR APPEALS NEW CLEARANCE ASSIGNED IN LOS ANGELES DECISION

One New Case, Two Appeals in Seventh Month of Arbitration; MGM Proposes Readjusting S. California Clearance Scale

The motion picture arbitration system entered its seventh month this week with only one new case and three awards and two more decisions of arbitrators carried to the Appeals Board in New York.

It appears increasingly likely that the fate of the consent decree arbitration system will be decided not in the 32 field tribunals of the American Arbitration System, but by the three members of the "high court" at New York.

Both of the new appeals involved fundamental interpretations of consent decree procedure for settling clearance and some run disputes between the Big Five and exhibitors. One appeal, from Los Angeles, marked the first time an intervening party has sought a reversal of an arbitrator's ruling. In the other appeal two distributors jointly are testing the merits of an Albany award.

RKO-Radio and Warner Brothers, defendants in two Albany cases heard concurrently on July 31st, appealed the decision of Morton J. Hall, arbitrator of the Clearance complaints of Alex Papayanakos, operator of the American Theatre in Canton, N. Y. On July 15th Mr. Hall awarded day and date clearance to the American. The Schine circuit's Strand and Pontiac theatres in Ogdensburg were the competitive houses cited in the two original complaints.

Appeal on Merits

According to William Zimmerman, KO arbitration attorney, the distributors are appealing the case "on its merits." He doubted that they would seek oral hearings before the Appeals Board. Rather, it was indicated, the board will be asked to reverse Mr. Hall's decision on the basis of evidence presented at Albany.

From Los Angeles, the Edwards Circuit, headed by James Edwards, Jr., an intervenor in the city's first complaint, clearance plea filed by O. W. Lewis, operator of the Mission Play House, San Gabriel, on Friday asked the Appeal Board to reverse the award. Herbert Cameron, arbitrator in his decision on July 15th dismissed the clearance request of Mr. Lewis, but altered the clearance of two Edwards circuit houses. The appeal challenges the arbitrator's power to change the intervenor's clearance status and to assess part of the costs against the intervenor.

The Los Angeles clearance situation came to the fore again this week, in indirect consequence of the Lewis case when a distributor's representative proposed readjustment of the existing clearance status.

MGM Asks New Clearance Plan

Declaring that Los Angeles first run theatres have the shortest clearance of any in the nation, George A. Hickey, MGM western district supervisor this week submitted proposals to revise the Los Angeles clearance and availability plan by setting all subsequent run houses back an additional seven days.

Mr. Hickey submitted his proposals to Fox West Coast, circuit, and to independent operators at Los Angeles. All placed the plan under consideration. The proposal concerns only Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product but presages action along similar lines by other exchanges if successful.

Rearrangement of playdates was proposed as follows: 40 cents-A theatres, 28 days after first runs instead of 21; 35 cents-B theatres, 42 days instead of 35; 30 cents-C theatres, 56 days instead of 49; 25 cents-D theatres, 70 days instead of 65; 20 cents-E theatres, 91 days instead of 84; 15 cents-F theatres, 140 days instead of 133; 10 cents-G theatres, 196 days instead of 189.

Mr. Hickey advanced his scheme because of the disparity of clearance in other territories. In San Francisco, the first runs have 42 days clearance. In Portland and Seattle 63.

Esquire Wins in New York

Clearance was cut from 30 to seven days at New York on Tuesday for the Esquire Corporation's Squire theatre, Great Neck, L. I., in a 21-page decision by George A. Spiegelberg. The arbitrator ordered the 30-day margin of the Skouras' Great Neck Playhouse reduced and eliminated a seven-day margin held by the Interboro circuit's Little Neck theatre.

The case, New York's second, was filed in February, by Herbert Scheftel, president of Esquire.

The Squire, which opened across the street from the Playhouse in January, argued that it was able to obtain only reissues and outdated product. According to the award, the Squire was losing $625 weekly, the Little Neck $40 weekly, while the Playhouse was annually earning about $12,000. Costs were divided among all parties.

Milwaukee, Philadelphia Awards

Declaring clearance of 14 days granted the Jeffris theatre, Janesville, Wis. by Paramount over the Rex in Evansville, Wis., is "in certain respects unreasonable," Thomas P. Whelan, arbitrator in Milwaukee's first case set maximum clearances of from 7 to 14 days between the two houses depending upon comparative admission prices. The decision in the case was announced August 4th by John L. Loell, secretary of the Milwaukee offices of the AAA.

Mr. Whelan ruled that in the future Paramount can grant only 7 days clearance to the Jeffris over the Rex for pictures where the admission price for adults after 6 P. M. at the Jeffris is the same as at the Rex; 10 days where the Jeffris charges 5 cents more than the Rex, and 14 days where the Jeffris charges 10 cents or more than the Rex for adult admission after 6 P. M.

A clause in the Evansville company's complaint charging Paramount with improperly refusing to deliver prints of pictures contracted for the Rex until such pictures had been exhibited at the Jeffris was dismissed by the arbitrator.

The decision leaves the Milwaukee board with a clear calendar. To date, just two cases have been filed and the second, also an unreasonable clearance action, was settled July 23.

The clearance complaint of Samuel and Morris Somerson, Philadelphia Case No. 5, operators of the Palm theatre, was dismissed on Monday by arbitrator H. Evans Rhell, local business executive. The complaint filed May 15th and heard on June 30th after two postponements, was directed against Metro, 20th Century-Fox and Paramount and involved the Stanley-Warner circuit. The subject clearance involved all theatres in the Kensington zone. The Somersons asked that clearance of the Warners' Kent theatre over their Palm be cut, charging their house is not in competition with the circuit's Wishart and Richmond theatres.

In his decision, the arbitrator praised the defendants presentation of the case and directed that costs be paid by the Somersons. He found that the present clearance set-up in the area was fair and just and that any change would work a hardship on all concerned.

First in Omaha

The first complaint entered at the Omaha AAA tribunal was filed Monday when Morris S. Cohn, operator of the Strand in Council Bluffs, Ia., just across the Missouri river from Omaha, filed a clearance complaint against the Big Five. He asks that the practice of holding Omaha first-run pictures 28 days before they can play the adjacent Iowa city be adjudged unfair and unreasonable clearance. The Broadway theatre, operated in Council Bluffs by Earl Kerr, is named as an interested party.

At New Haven, arbitrator A. G. Gulliver, dean of the Yale Law School, has entered his written award of dismissal of the complaint of Saybrook Theatre, Inc., vs. RKO, Vitagraph, and Loew's, third complaint in New Haven. At the hearing on July 22nd the arbitrator dismissed the complaint orally after a few hours, for "want of jurisdiction." This dismissal is affirmed in the award, and fees are assessed against the complainant.

Hearing of the clearance complaint of Fred Quatrano, owner of the New Newington theatre, Newington, under construction, third complaint to be filed in New Haven, was scheduled for 11 A. M. Thursday at the office of the local tribunal, with A. A. Ribicoff, Hartford attorney, as arbitrator.

Chicago

Sixteen theatres in central Illinois were notified this week that they were named in the clearance complaint filed last week at Chicago by Steve Bennis, operating the Lincoln and Grand theatres at Lincoln, Ill. The houses involved are the Esquire, Fox-Lincoln, Frisina, Amusement Company, Kerasotos Bros. Theatres, Inc., Orpheum, Roxy, Senate, South Town, State, Strand and Tivoli, all of Springfield, Ill.; the Irving, Castle, Front and Majestic, Bloomington, Ill., and the Vogue, Lincoln, Ill.

Confidence Note Stressed to 200 at Schine Meet

Self-confidence—"in our industry, in ourselves, and most of all in our country"—was the keynote on which J. Myer Schine, president of the Schine Enterprises, Inc., circuit, on Tuesday opened the annual convention of 200 managers and circuit employes at Gloversville, N. Y., Schine headquarters.

The annual meeting of circuitmen heard an identical note re-echoed in a series of speeches by exploitation, distribution, and production spokesmen during the three-day meeting. The managers were told that the motion picture occupies a key post in national defense by providing relaxation and public instruction.

A new bonus and profit-sharing plan, to be inaugurated in all Schine theatres at the start of the 1941-42 season, was also revealed at the convention by E. Douglas Leishman, personnel head of the Schine organization. An institutional advertising campaign was also outlined by Seymour Morris, new Schine advertising head.

Praise from Governor

Greetings from Governor Herbert Lehman, via a specially made sound film, were sent to the convention. He officially congratulated the Schine circuit for its policy of presenting weekly subjects on national defense, declaring it was good evidence of confidence in the United States. Other sound films also presented messages from the sales heads of all the major film distributors.

A-Mike Vogel, editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S "Managers' Round Table," on Wednesday told the managers that they must build the "confidence," theme of the meeting, on a self-confidence and faith in the motion picture industry as a whole.

"But feel that the screen provides vital recreation, entertainment, relief relaxation for millions upon millions, day in and day out," Mr. Vogel told the managers. "Armed with this you cannot be led astray."

Delegates to the meeting were welcomed to the convention by J. Myer Schine, president, and Louis W. Schine, vice-president, and founders of the circuit. Mayor Chauncey C. Thayer of Gloversville, in extending the town's hospitality to the guests also paid tribute to the two brothers and the enterprise which they founded there in 1918, remarking that the circuit's growth had been a fine example of confidence on the part of an American industry.

Spring Appreciation Awards were presented to managers and staffs of three Schine theatres by J. M. Schine and John A. May, comptroller. Harold Lee, manager, and the staff of the Babcock theatre, Bath, N. Y., tied for first honors with Marshall Gollner and staff of the Arcade in Salisbury, Md. The Babcock, Arcade and Piqua, Piqua, Ohio, won zone trophies. Prizes consisted of salary bonuses.

Personal messages, via sound film, were delivered to the convention by Nate Blumberg, president of Universal Pictures; James Grainger, president of Republic; Ned E. Depinet, vice-president of RKO; William Rogers and Howard Dietz of MGM; A. Montague, of Columbus, and others.

Plan Institutional Campaign

A discussion of advertising and promotion methods featured the session led by Seymour Morris, new Schine publicity and advertising chief. Lou Lazar, Ohio and Kentucky zone head, also discussed theatre operation. "Brass band" showmanship, Mr. Morris told the managers, is a thing of the past and must be replaced by a combination of merchandising and intelligent showmanship.

Major Louis Lazar, Ohio Division Manager, addressing the Schine convention on opening day. At his left are some of the Schine executives, including J. Myer Schine, president of the company; E. D. Leishman, personnel director; Louis W. Schine, vice president; George V. Lyuch, film buying chief; and Gus Lanpe, home office operations executive and head of the convention committee.

The public has learned to leaven the superlative type of advertising with a grain of salt, Mr. Morris warned. Describing new Schine advertising policies, he said:

"We propose an institutional campaign that, although it is institutional, it is to be coupled with your current selling. The theme that we have adopted is a follow-up on the 'Movie Vacation' campaign which recently has been so successful in our theatres, and throughout the nation. The theme will be 'Relaxation and Pleasure.' In all our media we will try to sell to the public the fact that we have the facilities to provide relaxation and pleasure at a lower cost and more thoroughly than any other amusement enterprise."

Pat McGee, Ohio district manager, followed Mr. Morris with a description of effective advertising appeal to rural audiences as practiced in his district.

From the Reverend Bernard F. Clausen, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Pittsburgh, and a noted radio speaker, the managers received an inspirational message. He stressed the need to look beyond immediate world and business or personal problems to the future, urging the managers to "think of life in terms of 5,000 years."

"Theatre men," the minister added, "can play a part in that future by distributing to all the people at the lowest cost the best in relaxation and enjoyment."

Hear from Home Offices

Wednesday sessions were marked by talks on advertising and exploitation by home office experts from nine film companies. Current exhibitor problems, and ways to relieve them through advertising and publicity were described by Robert Gillham, Paramount; Dave Weshner, United Artists; Earl Wingart, 20th Century-Fox; and H. M. Richey of MGM. Mr. Richey, citing the policy's success with Metro's field force, urged the Schine managers to join local civic and fraternal organizations where they can act as spokesmen and build good will for the industry.

Mr. Richey also took to task outsiders who tell managers how they should run theatres. "Theatre men on the whole are, and have been, doing a good job," he said, "which we in the producing end very much appreciate. Darn few pictures are produced in a year that don't have to be sold, and the managers are the men who sell them."

Other speakers and their subjects included Bill Graham, ALTEC, "Sound and Projection"; Maurice Glockner, "Real Estate and Candy"; Seth Field, "Expenses."

In addition, Alec Moss, Paramount, outlined Paramount's short subject plans for the coming season. Leon Bamberger, RKO, spoke on "Super-salesmen," stressing direct mail advertising.

Dave Weshner, United Artists, spoke on "Operation," telling of his own experiences as a theatre man. Earl Wingart, 20th Century-Fox, opened the afternoon session, giving his ideas on how to sell the motion picture to the public.

Mr. Vogel, in the summation address told the managers that much of the selling efforts in behalf of the motion picture must be devoted to selling it back to the industry itself. Lack of confidence in the motion picture and its future by those in the industry is one of the primary causes of current troubles, according to Mr. Vogel.

Motion pictures, he said, have always faced, and must continue to face, the complaints of outside critics. Carping and discontent of those within the industry cannot be endured in addition, he said. All film employes must believe in and defend the industry and seek to improve it, the Round Table editor asserted.

Theatre managers, according to Mr. Vogel, can do most to sell the motion picture back to the industry by expressing their belief in product to the public, their personnel, and their distribution contacts. Particularly, Mr. Vogel urged an example for all younger employes. "Those who are led by the manager to believe in the motion picture will stand ready to defend it when it needs defense," he said.

Final sessions on Wednesday afternoon and Friday were devoted to zone meetings and inter-organizaitonal conferences led by Schine department heads. Among those participating were George V. Lynch, chief film buyer; John A. May, comptroller; E. Douglas Leishman, personnel head; Seymour Morris, publicity; and Miss Florence Thompson, office manager.

National Decency Legion Classifies Ten Pictures

Of the 10 pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week seven were found unobjectionable for general patronage, one unobjectionable for adults and two were classified as objectionable in part. The pictures and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Charley's Aunt," "Father Steps Out," "Lone Rider in Frontier Fury," "The Masked Rider," "Officer and the Lady," "Son of Davy Crockett" and "Sunset in Wyoming." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Here Comes Mr. Jordan." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Bullets for O'Hara" and "Time in the Sun."

ASCAP ASKED 9 MILLIONS, SETTLING FOR THREE, CLAIM BROADCASTERS

Settlement Nets ASCAP $1,500,000 a Year Less Than Last Year's Air Collections; Provide for BMI Continuance

Financially, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers won no victory in settlement of its seven-month feud with the National Broadcasting Company, reached early this week. ASCAP stands to lose approximately $1,500,000 from its total annual radio revenue from the networks it was estimated by music authorities, when news of the peace-pact was announced. Last year the Society took $4,500,000 out of radio, but it is indicated that henceforth only about $3,000,000 radio revenue will go to the Society, which Victor Herbert founded in 1914 to "protect the rights of song writers and publishers."

Broadcast Music, Inc., said in a release issued to the press mid-week, that "starting out with demands of some $9,000,000 against the broadcasting industry, ASCAP has agreed to settle for an estimated $3,000,000, or almost 65 per cent of what it received from the broadcasting industry in 1940."

The new agreement, a contract for which is being drawn up by attorneys, was approved by the Society's board of directors over the week-end after several days' delay. As reported in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD on August 2nd, terms of the agreement provide that NBC pay ASCAP two and three-quarter per cent of its total net billings annually for a blanket license to use ASCAP music on commercial programs, and $200 per station annually for sustaining programs. In addition, NBC operated and managed stations will pay two and one quarter per cent on local and national spot business for commercial programs and a sliding scale for sustaining shows. If net receipts from local spots are over $150,000, the station must pay 12 times its half-hour rate for sustaining programs; if between $50,000 and $150,000, then 12 times the quarter-hour rate, and if less than $50,000, only a nominal fee of $12 per year.

The agreement, which will run until December 31, 1949 with provision for renewal for another nine years, did not cover television which will have to be negotiated by NBC and ASCAP on a separate contract basis. Short wave and FM broadcasting, however, was included on the same basis as standard broadcasting. Such stations will pay either two and three-quarter per cent or two and one-quarter, depending on whether the station is network or independent.

Need Affiliates' Approval

Following the ASCAP board's approval of the NBC contract, Niles Trammell, NBC president, wired all affiliate stations of the Red and Blue networks asking their approval of the terms. The network will require each affiliate, except those in states that have anti-ASCAP laws, to reimburse it for payments which NBC will make to ASCAP.

Before the music war began last Autumn, ASCAP formerly collected five per cent from radio stations but complained that it received nothing from the total network income. CBS and NBC took about two-thirds of the amount sponsors paid for each network station, and ASCAP asked for seven and one-half per cent of that amount. ASCAP's demand precipitated the battle and caused the radio industry to set up its own music organization, Broadcast Music, Inc. The latter will continue to operate, collecting two per cent of member station's income. Most of the BMI contracts run through 1941.

Until January 1st of this year, when the networks banned ASCAP music, the Society controlled virtually all popular music for the last two decades. Settlement of the dispute was greeted by the film industry with relieved sighs for resumption of ASCAP music on the airlanes will again enable plugging of musical films via radio. Industry circles attributed failure of some recent musical pictures at the box office to the lack of tune plugging on the networks.

The network music organization, however, in its press release announced that "BMI plans to continue its Hollywood office and will promote its tunes just as aggressively with motion picture producers as it has in the last few months. While many of the companies own their own music houses and will be inclined to use them as a means of exploitation for their pictures, BMI feels that it has an important job to do for the independents and that it can obtain promotion of their picture tunes far more extensively and much less expensively than they could obtain it themselves."

BMI also declared that it had "established an open door policy with the creation of BMI, that they intend to keep the door open and hope that never again will composers and publishers find their way blocked by the sefish demands of a monopoly.

With the ASCAP-NBC contract almost ready to sign, ASCAP catalog of 1,250,000 tunes probably will return to the NBC networks within a week, and CBS, it is indicated, will follow NBC in signing a contract based on the same terms. Mutual, however, which signed with ASCAP in May, will receive the more advantageous terms reached by NBC, as provided in its contract with the Society.

WFIL Makes Demands

Meanwhile, station WFIL in Philadelphia which signified acceptance of NBC's agreement with ASCAP, notified Mr. Trammell last week that it would stipulate several reservations to protect independently-owned stations. Roger W. Clipp, general manager of WFIL, NBC affiliate, said a first consideration would require that independent stations have the same options, at the same rates, to purchase ASCAP music as provided NBC managed and operated stations. Secondly, that no favors in fees be made for stations in states where refunds are prohibited by state anti-ASCAP laws; third, that the network re-affirm its pledge to the affiliates to maintain BMI; fourth, that stations taking blanket licenses obtain the same deduction for sales costs as granted the network; fifth, that opportunity be afforded for discussion between stations and the network for passing on to the stations part of the savings to NBC in deductions for sales and wire costs; and finally, that steps be taken to satisfy the stations that the settlement can be fully explained and is basically satisfactory and that stations are not being rushed into approving the agreement by telegraphic reply without opportunity of first seeing details of the contract. WFIL was the first affiliate to signify consent of the NBC contract. Independents can buy radio music from BMI at 1.60 per cent as compared to the two and one-quarter per cent payment to ASCAP, under the new terms.

Fair Trade for Music Dealers

Two recommendations were urged upon musical instrument dealers and manufacturers last week during the 40th annual Music Industries Convention in New York. Chris Koch, marketing counsel, told dealers that they should write to their suppliers suggesting that manufacturers put merchandise on a fair-trade basis. He pointed out that fair-trade agreements had proved of value to both dealers and manufacturers of the drug and other trades. However, he warned that such a move should be acted upon by individuals and that any attempt to bring about a fair-trade agreement through the industry's association should be avoided. Concerted action, he said, would be a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

DEFENSE NEEDS CUT MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

A serious reduction in the manufacture of musical instruments is expected this autumn as the result of a shortage of raw materials, it was reported in New York this week at the 40th annual Music Industries Convention and Trade Show. Production will be hampered at a time when demand will be at the highest level in years, manufacturers pointed out, although some of them believe that because music is important to maintain morale during the emergency, it may be possible for the industry to obtain some type of priority rating. Dealers estimated a 25 per cent increase this Fall over last year's volume of business.

Prices were up five to 10 per cent on quality merchandise and 10 to 15 per cent on low-end goods, it was estimated, as a result of raw material shortage. Producers of band instruments said that increased interest in martial music together with the shutdown of imports would increase demand for domestic instruments out of all proportion to the industry's ability to meet it.

NYE AND WHEELER AGAIN SOUND OFF AGAINST SCREEN AS A 'WAR MONGER'

Isolationist Congressmen Want to Probe the Industry, Charging That Pictures Are Waging "A Campaign for War"

From WASHINGTON BUREAU

The American motion picture industry this week and last became more than ever the target of isolationist Congressmen, whose thesis is the "movies" are campaigning for war, and whose objective appears to be a "probe" of the industry. Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Montana Democrat, assailed the industry, in a Senate debate last week over the extension of selectees' military service; and Gerald P. Nye, North Dakota Republican Senator, asserted in a St. Louis address Friday night, August 1st, that the film industry is leading the country "into a dance of death."

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in speeches and statements, has repeatedly denied existence of any film "war campaign," has asserted the aim of the industry is entertainment, and has campaigned for freedom of the screen.

Possibility of a Congressional investigation of the motion picture industry loomed this week, after Senator Nye revealed in last week's address that such moves were being pressed. From Washington, over the weekend, came news of a resolution introduced before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee by Senators Nye and Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, for a probe into alleged propaganda for war, not only in films, but also in radio.

Tuesday, Senator Clark was named chairman of a Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee to consider the resolution, along with Senators McFarland (Ariz.), Bone (Wash.), Tobey (N.H.), and Brooks (Ill.).

The attack by Senators Wheeler and Nye was the subject of a special meeting of industry leaders in Hollywood Wednesday.

Wheeler Leads Attack

Harbinger of the moves for a film industry raking were the remarks several weeks ago during the Committee's hearings on the new Federal Communications Commission hearing—comments by Senator Wheeler, chairman, who emphasized the partiality of radio and films for proponents of war. It was asserted in Washington that the Senator was angered by the refusal of many radio stations to broadcast his rebuttals to New Deal interventionists.

The resolution before the Committee points out that films and radio are "the most potent instruments of communication of ideas" and charges they "have been extensively used for propaganda purposes designed to influence the public mind in the direction of participation in the European war" and that "all of this propaganda has been directed to one side of the important debates now being held, not only in Congress but throughout the country." The resolution authorizes a full investigation of propaganda in the two mediums and of "any other activity of the motion picture industry to influence public sentiment" for war.

Senator Nye's attack upon films was delivered during an address to an America First rally Friday night, August 1st, in St. Louis. A large crowd responded enthusiastically to his charges. Senator Nye named eight films as instances of the industry's propaganda.

Name "Propaganda" Films

"Convoy", "Escape", "Flight Command", "That Hamilton Woman", "Man Hunt", "Sergeant York", "The Great Dictator", "I Married a Nazi". These, he said, were part of "an effort to drug the reason of the American people; to set aflame their emotions; to fill them with fear Hitler will come over and capture them."

He adverted to the President's message of commendation to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences several months ago, "explaining" the "lease-lend" bill, and to the Roosevelt reception of Sergeant York at the White House last week, at which, according to the Senator, the President told the Sergeant the Warner picturization of his life would "do much to rouse our people."

Senator Nye asserted films have "ceased to be an instrument of entertainment" and that "they have become the most gigantic engines of propaganda in existence to rouse the war fever in America.

The Senator intimated the industry's alleged drive might have as purpose the protection of foreign markets. He asserted a leading Wall Street firm told clients recently that if Great Britain lost the war, some of the majors would go bankrupt. In 1940, one film company, according to the Senator, collected $80,000,000. Of that sum, $8,000,000 was collected in England, he asserted, adding this sum was the company's profit for the year.

Senator Nye also charged that, according to information he received, the film industry has been ordered to fill all newsreels with 70 per cent war matter. The men directing the industry, Senator Nye averred, have been governing the alleged war "propaganda machine almost as if they were being operated by a central agency."

Senator Wheeler's assailment of the film industry was made during Senate debate on a resolution to extend selectees' military service. He charged that the Wendell Willkie speech at the Hollywood Bowl, for a "united front" for the New Deal's foreign policy, was delivered to an audience coerced into attending by the film companies. He read a letter from his son, thus:

"The studios formed parades to go to the Hollywood Bowl. Orders went out to employees, to participate. They had a tremendous luncheon the day before, at which the applause for Willkie was rather perfunctory. Then came the meeting, at which a popular film star was master of ceremonies. There were 30 other prominent film stars on the platform and participating in the program.

"In fact, they had everything but a crowd."

BOX OFFICE NEWS FOR EXHIBITORS

According to a survey made by the National Association of Manufacturers in 21 key defense cities, relief rolls have been cut more than half, employment is at its highest since 1929, and the already acute shortage of skilled labor would be doubly serious by winter.

In many cities, N.A.M. said, defense plant expansion has progressed so rapidly that manufacturers cannot fill positions calling for skilled labor, or even for a fair grade of semi-skilled labor. Vocational and factory training schools are running on a 24-hour basis in many places to overcome this shortage, it was reported.

Says the Public Likes Propaganda in Their Films

"Contrary to the recent assertions of Senators Wheeler and Nye," the American public prefers motion picture shorts and newsreels about the war in Europe and the nation's defense program, according to a survey conducted by the Committee for National Morale. Dr. Floy Ruch, associate professor of psychology at the University of Southern California, who directed the survey for the committee, released his findings to the press this week and revealed that the American public "doesn't care if there is some propaganda" in shorts and newsreels. "It wants to know what is going on and looks to the movies for information," he said.

Questions which determined results of the survey were:

"What kind of newsreels and short subjects do you like best?"
Those dealing with the war in Europe....26%
Those dealing with America's defense program 44%
Those dealing with non-military events...30%

"Have you been annoyed by any propaganda in the feature pictures you have seen recently?"
Yes 16%
No 77%
Don't know 7%

"Have you been annoyed by any propaganda in the newsreels and shorts you have seen recently?"
Yes 25%
Don't know 7%

The committee was founded a year ago by sociologists, social anthropologists, journalists, radio commentators and psychologists, "for the purpose of studying scientifically the various factors concerning 'public morale.'" Walter Wanger, Dr. James Rowland Angell, Herbert Bayard Swope, Gifford Pinchot, James Truslow Adams, Dr. George Gallup, Raymond Gram Swing, Elmer Davis, John Gunther, Elmo Roper and E. M. M. Warburg.

The committee is an affiliate of the Council for Democracy, headed by Dr. Frank Kingdon, which was organized for the purpose of combatting anti-Semitism in America, to further democracy in this country and in South America and to fight Fascism and Communism.

WAR WILL SLOW TELEVISION, BUT WILL NOT SHELVE IT, SAYS NBC

Morton Sees Material Scarcity Only Delay; Says Response from Advertisers and Public on Programs Is Satisfactory

War will not put television on the shelf, although its development will undoubtedly be slowed by national defense needs, despite previously expressed pessimisms from several television quarters. The new entertainment medium, now officially launched by the Federal Communications Commission as a commercial endeavor, will grow steadily, limited only by prior demands of national defense on equipment and personnel, according to Alfred H. Morton, vice president in charge of television for the National Broadcasting Company.

Discussing the first four weeks of commercial television at NBC's station at New York, WNBT, Mr. Morton said that the response of advertisers and audience was satisfactory. He admitted frankly that the company had feared that war production would limit the production of new sets so drastically as to discourage advertiser interest in the new medium. Despite the limitation, he said, there has been high public interest in the initial programs and sponsors are showing specific interest.

Forecasts Network Service

"No one can guess in the present situation how rapidly television will grow," he said. "It will, of course, be slower than under normal conditions, but expansion will continue." He forecast the early growth of regional television networks, particularly in the eastern states, and said that economic self-sufficiency in the infant industry was not far distant.

Technically, according to Mr. Morton, television has reached a completely practicable stage. Improvements in present apparatus will continue, he said, but there is no reason to foresee any changes in the basic principles, or the operating standards proposed by the national television standards committee and largely adopted by the FCC.

"Merchandisers and advertising agencies are showing a very specific and very serious interest in the selling values of television," Mr. Morton reported. He noted that a large percentage of inquiries as to television rates and facilities came from advertising groups outside of the circle of regular radio sponsors, although the latter group provided the first sponsors for WNBT, which now has five sponsor contracts.

Network links between television stations already established or under construction in some 22 cities are foreseen by Mr. Morton as the next major step in the growth of commercial television. The initial links in nationwide visual broadcasting, he said, will probably be welded along the eastern seaboard where there are or soon will be stations in New York, Boston, Albany, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington. Webs radiating from the large cities of the west and midwest will not follow until many more sets are available.

Automatic relay stations, developed by RCA engineers and successfully demonstrated over links as much as 54 miles apart will join television stations in metropolitan centers, he said. Coaxial cable, where already installed, as between New York and Philadelphia and Washington and Baltimore, will also be used, according to Mr. Morton, but he predicted that the radio relay system would prove more economical and as efficient as the wired network.

The economics of television network broadcasting, particularly along an eastern seaboard chain, where there are the largest concentrations of television receivers, present no problem, the NBC executive believes. A three hundred mile chain could reach an audience of 30,000,000 persons, he points out, and would cover what advertisers consider the country's greatest concentration of buying power. In order of national purchasing power, he noted, New York ranks first, Philadelphia third, Boston sixth and Washington ninth.

Local advertising and program material, however, will occupy a predominant position on the television stations, according to Mr. Morton. He foresees extensive use of visual broadcasting by department stores, and other shops and services whose selling efforts are locally concentrated. Likewise, experiments have shown there is a high audience interest in the telecasting of local events.

Meanwhile the NBC television staff last week moved to larger quarters at the RCA building in New York and announced two new sponsors for WNBT programs. Production plans continued on the pattern of the first month, with an increasing use of name performers and a reduction in the number of motion pictures used. Only five were scheduled this week. The shortage of film is reported to be growing acute, and production men pressed for a television agreement with ASCAP to free other available pictures.

Fashion Show Signed

Last week NBC signed a contract for the first sponsored television fashion show with Norman D. Waters and Associates, advertising representative of women's dress and accessory manufacturers. The firm will present a half-hour weekly program "Fashion Discoveries in Television" for thirteen weeks starting September 4th. It will be broadcast on Thursday afternoons from 5 to 5:30 P.M.

The program will feature merchandise from five or six makers of non-competitive women's wear, such as dresses, hats, shoes, and accessories. It is understood that it will feature "medium price" fashions rather than the Fifth Avenue styles which have appeared on experimental television fashion shows. A nationwide advertising and promotion campaign is planned among retail outlets to feature "Television Fashions" displayed on the WNBT programs.

Tuesday NBC reported that the Lee Hat Company had signed for a thirteen week half hour evening program of sports, interviews, films and commentary. The pictures will be industrial reels on Lee Hats produced by Pathescope for the television commercials. Neither of the new sponsors have used radio for advertising previously.

Columbia Broadcasting System on July 28th asked the FCC for a 30-day extension, until September 1st, of its program testing permit under which WCBW has been on the air daily since July 1st. Inability to obtain a mobile pickup unit due to priority restrictions, and the delay among set manufacturers in adjusting outstanding receivers to the new CBS channel were also cited in the request for a further delay in the start of full time commercial operation.

This week the FCC granted the CBS extension and also authorized daily test experiments in color from 4:45 to 5:45 P.M.

Adrian Murphy, in charge of television operation at CBS indicated that the time would be used in further developing the technique of studio programs which have comprised the bulk of the CBS programs. A note of informality will continue to mark the programs under the direction of Gilbert Seldes. The casual and intimate approach of the WCBW programs is reported to have won an excellent response from the limited number of listeners whose sets have already been adjusted to Channel 2.

DuMont Ready

DuMont last week filed formal notice with the FCC that it had received long-delayed equipment and was now ready to start commercial operation immediately. On Friday, July 25th, its station at New York, W2XWV, went on the air with a trial program. Since then engineers have been transmitting periodic test patterns. Officials said that the start of regular programs waited only on word from Washington.

The sales and advertising staffs of DuMont continued active, completing plans to distribute several hundred new sets which are being manufactured at Passaic from materials which were in storage. It is reported that there is sufficient demand to dispose of the sets on hand and the company will undertake no sales promotion until defense demands ease up.

In Los Angeles last week the Don Lee Broadcasting System asked the FCC to authorize its experimental transmitter W6XAO to change to commercial programs.

The General Electric Company at Schenectady last week received permission from the FCC to operate its station at Albany on a commercial basis starting September 1st. Alterations on the transmitter and new studio facilities are being completed. The station operates on Channel 3 with a population coverage of approximately 572,000. GE will also continue to experiment with color television, using its own system and the one developed by CBS and Dr. Peter Goldmark at New York.

The first program promotion and institutional advertising in behalf of a television station appeared last week from NBC. Taking special cognizance of the interest of taproom proprietors in television, and the number of public installations in bars the company published a full-page advertisement in the Beverage Retailer Weekly, trade paper published in New York. The number of sets in taprooms is variously estimated at from 500 to 700.

NBC is using the taproom field extensively to promote television and is distributing display cards, with sponsor cooperation, for taproom windows to advertise fights and special events.

RADIO STATION WMRF BANS FILM TIE-UPS

A "we want to be alone" policy has been adopted by station WMRF, newly opened 250-watt station in Lewistown, Pa., so far as local theatres are concerned. Since the station was first opened in July, the Rialto Theatre, which is presenting stage attractions with band and screen names, has offered its stage features for interviews and program guests on the air. Station officials said that they would be glad to broadcast anything the film house has to offer but it will have to be at regular commercial time rates, with time charges paid in cash and not in theatre passes.

TRADE SHOWS HERE AND THEY'RE A FLOP: MYERS AND KUYKENDALL

Exhibitor Organization Leaders Deny Operators Wanted Pre-Purchase Screenings, in Bulletins Criticizing the Practice

The consent decree trade shows are a "flop," says Ed Kuykendall.

Well, exhibitors didn't ask for them and shouldn't be blamed for not attending, says Abram F. Myers—who had campaigned for advance synopses, not advance screenings.

Thus, this week, spokesmen for the two national exhibitor organizations, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and the National Allied States Association, reflected the disappointment growing out of the poor exhibitor attendance at the trade showings of the first block of five pictures from the five majors in the consent decree.

Their trade-show opinions came in bulletins, touching upon a variety of subjects, but mainly upon the new sales practices enforced by the decree.

Mr. Kuykendall, MPTOA president, asserted that the "flop of this system (the trade showings) should convince even the most ardent Neely Bill promoter that small exhibitors, who were the only ones this plan was intended to benefit, will not, and cannot, look at all pictures, to select the ones they want. The circuit operators are organized to do this, and always have screened pictures before booking. They continue to do so with the required trade showings—at the distributors' expense, instead of their own," he charged.

Allied Fought Decree

Mr. Myers, director and general counsel for Allied, which supported the dormant Neely Bill, denied his organization wanted trade showings, and reminded exhibition that: ". . . exhibitors, with Allied taking the lead, protested against entering the decree. . . . Allied does not intend that the exhibitors shall be made scapegoats for failing to support a system they did not ask for, or for not attending trade showings when such attendance is not necessary."

Mr. Kuykendall charged that proponents of block booking legislation "many years ago" figured that if the exhibitor could see pictures before buying, he could then buy pictures approved by the "pressure" groups "promoting the law."

He added that proponents did not realize selection of the "best" pictures would require viewing of every one and that the exhibitor would "be compelled to spend more than half his working days screening pictures."

Mr. Kuykendall continued: "They finally devised the compulsory synopsis plan for such legislation. But, nevertheless, the consent decree went back to the old idea of requiring a trade showing in each exchange center before any picture can be licensed for exhibition."

Mr. Myers' rejoinder was that Allied did endorse synopses "which an exhibitor could study without spending a lot of time and money attending trade showings" and that the plan which Allied at the time supported "would have permitted the distributor to sell, and the exhibitor to buy, as many pictures at one time as they could agree upon."

That plan, Mr. Myers charged, "was fought tooth and nail by the distributors. Its defeat," he asserted, "paved the way for the imposition of the decree on the industry."

Mr. Myers went further on the theme of "no responsibility" for decree trade show failure. He said that the "political bickering and crying over spilled milk, that is going on, might lead one to think the calendar had been turned back several years." He reminded his readers that the industry crisis is still extant; that "business is not as usual."

Industry Still Faces Crisis

"There has been no frank recognition of the fact that attendance has declined alarmingly; that unless motion pictures can regain the favor of millions now shunning the theatres, the other matters now under discussion will become academic," he warned.

He decried the "revival of the attempt to cast upon Allied the responsibility for the selling method prescribed in the consent decree," and added:

"There has been no recognition of the fact that no substantial number of exhibitors wanted trade showings and blocks of five. The plan was developed at conferences between representatives of the Department of Commerce and the producer-distributors. The Department of Commerce evidently sold the idea to the Department of Justice and the latter was in a position to impose it on the industry."

Mr. Myers also disposed of the impression exhibitors may owe a duty of attendance at the trade showings. The "overwhelming number" of independent exhibitors, he said, will buy so late, they will have "accurate synopses in the form of trade paper reviews and reviewing committee reports before they do any buying." And in some locations, pictures will have had runs before the subsequent run exhibitor will come around to buying, he added.

"Under the circumstances," he remarked, "who can claim that any duty rests on the exhibitors to attend trade showings, which appear to have been arranged, timed, placed, and handled, largely with a view to discourage attendance?"

He also suggested a salesman carry prints for screening in localities he visits. "After all, he is selling the pictures, isn't he?", the Allied spokesman pointed out.

Importance of Trade Reviews

Mr. Kuykendall, in agreement at least on the failure of the trade showings to attract exhibitors, dwelt upon another facet: the trade press reviews, which he termed "of vital importance to exhibitors." He said:

"We see no objection, in fact a definite advantage to exhibitors, in screening new pictures for the trade press in advance of the trade showings required by the consent decree. If the proposed system of trade showing reviews by the trade press enables exhibitors to get these reports in ample time before the pictures are offered to the exhibitors for licensing, well and good.

"But these reviews and reports are most important to the management of theatres in buy-

"Attend Trade Screenings or Lose Them," Michigan's Ray Branch Tells Exhibitors

"What are you doing about it?"

With this question, Ray Branch, president of Michigan Allied, this week, in an open letter, castigated exhibitors who stay away from trade showings without financial or physical excuses.

Mr. Branch pointed out that distributors did not even request exhibitors to sit in projection rooms; they generally utilized theatres. He also noted the screenings are at reasonable times during each day, and so spaced during the week that the exhibitor need not spend "too much time". Then he remarked that he attended a screening at which there were "seven salesmen, one branch manager, and four exhibitors"; and he added:

"Maybe you do not care to look at the pictures and are willing to take someone else's word for them; but, if I don't miss my guess, this practice will soon be changed around—maybe the Court will decide that you were not so interested in seeing what you were buying.

"If you desire to lose the advantage of seeing before buying, just stay away from these screenings in large numbers—and you will get your wish."

Mr. Branch asserted some exhibitors have felt the screenings were designed to establish high rentals. "It may be that such a thing will happen," he said, "but if you really do get worthwhile pictures instead of a lot of quickies then you won't mind the change.

"I am skeptical of the fellow who sits back and claims that everything constructive is a trick. After all, the decree says you don't have to buy, even after seeing. How in the world are we ever going to know whether this thing will work unless we give it a trial?

"The exhibitor—meaning you and me—protested for years we were buying a cat in the bag; and now we are doing a swell job telling the world this plan is not what we wanted at all," he concluded.

SEES MAIN PROBLEMS UNSOLVED

ing, booking, and advance advertising of every picture, and must be available to exhibitors well in advance, even if it requires a special screening for the trade press alone. Their value lies in the accurate description of the picture, the detailed information on cast, director, story, production, running time, exploitation possibilities, and so on, from which exhibitors can judge the value of the attraction for their own theatres, rather than the personal opinions of the reviewer, which are sometimes colored by personal bias and prejudices. The reliable trade papers perform an invaluable service in providing such reports and descriptions."

Blocks-of-Five Benefits

Mr. Kuykendall also foresaw benefits, as a whole, from the decree selling system, thus:

"There may be a definite benefit to independent exhibitors from the consent decree system, not from the compulsory trade showings, but from the requirement that only completed pictures be licensed, and in blocks of not more than five, in that the exhibitor will have full and accurate reviews and descriptions by the responsible trade papers — not just a press agent's blurb or a tipster sheet's opinion—on each picture before him when the film salesman comes around with his asking prices. Smart exhibitors will make use of this information in buying product.

"Likewise, in cities and competitive areas where double features are really considered an evil by the theatre owners, not just something to yell about in publicity statements, the blocks-of-five selling plan may enable exhibitors to work out plans to curb and restrain double billing. Also it makes it possible for courageous exhibitors to experiment with single features on their own initiative. You won't be overloaded with product for months ahead any more."

A national advertising campaign—an "industry job"—is "needed," the Allied bulletin stated. The "job," Mr. Myers stated, "cannot be accomplished by the members of one branch without the help of the members of the other branches" and he advocated:

Pictures the public wants to see.

Cooperation between distributors and exhibitors.

Information from exhibitors to other film industry branches, about tastes of patrons.

An all-out effort to "sell and re-sell" films to the public.

A nation-wide joint advertising campaign: advertising of individual films, in local newspapers "concurrently with exhibition of the pictures."

Study New Contract Forms

New contracts of the majors came under Allied scrutiny, which called them "a disappointment." When all have been received, Allied will issue a pamphlet summary, Mr. Myers said, adding:

"Meantime, our only purpose is to call attention to the fact that whereas the RKO form provides spaces on the schedule for entering the terms opposite the title of each picture, the form still retains a provision for interchanging fees, viz:

> 'TWENTY-FIRST: The distributor may, in its sole discretion, interchange the license fees specified in the schedule to be paid with respect to any picture hereunder with the license fees so specified to be paid with respect to any other picture hereunder.'

"The Paramount form contains no express provision granting to the distributor the right to interchange fees. The spaces opposite the titles of the pictures are headed 'License fee or minimum guarantee on account of percentage of gross receipts per picture.' The words 'per picture' may be intended to imply that the fees are not permanently affixed to the pictures opposite to which they are entered. This would be a strained interpretation to put on the words, however, and it seems likely that if Paramount had contemplated interchangeability it would have used language appropriate to that end."

Mr. Kuykendall revealed no further information on the progress of the MPTOA Exhibitors Service Bureau, discussed at the Hollywood convention, beyond remarking:

"There are many questions to be determined: is the information collected by unsigned questionnaires reliable or misleading, does such information add anything to the information readily available in the trade press, would any additional information on arbitration under the consent decree be of any value to exhibitors, are there any national sales policies that a distributor is bound to adhere to, do reports on local conditions have any bearing in other localities, will the more important exhibitors reveal the terms of product deals to their competitors?"

Lists Unsolved Problems

Like Mr. Myers, Mr. Kuykendall noted many problems to be solved in the industry. He asked exhibitors not to "kid" themselves that "the consent decree and the long list of lawsuits pending are going to improve the motion picture business, or solve any important part of our trade problems." He added:

"Very few of the important questions with which we are faced are even considered in these expensive, long drawn out, legal processes." The "real problems," Mr. Kuykendall said, were:

Better pictures. Better merchandising. More effective publicity and advertising. Better management.

"It is quite obvious that the best legal minds in the world can't cope with these purely business problems," Mr. Kuykeldall said, and asked: "Why doesn't the management brains of the industry make some organized effort to study and solve these trade and business problems?"

He criticized the disposal of the affairs of the industry, to lawyers and courts, asking, "Is anyone satisfied with the results?"

NATIONAL ALLIED O.K.'S NEW YORK UNIT

The executive committee of National Allied has approved the application for membership of New York State Unit of National Allied, Inc.

As of August 1st, the new unit succeeds to the charter formerly held by Allied Theatre Owners of New York, which was expelled from membership in 1939.

The new unit has its office at Suite 200, Cannon Building, Troy, N. Y.

The organization will be conducted by Max Cohen, Brooklyn; Bob Goldblatt, Tarrytown; Leonard Rosenthal and Abe Stone, Albany; Al Francis, Buffalo, and H. P. Wallace, Auburn.

Mr. Kuykendall commended the more extensive advertising of product announced by some companies, saying "this is what we have been urging" and remarking that "such efforts will undoubtedly increase public interest in the new movies."

Other topics touched by the MPTOA leader were:

The short form of contract projected by Twentieth Century-Fox.

The loss to the organization, through death, of Judge Roy Walker, and Charles E. Williams, the former of Texas, the latter of Nebraska.

Consent decree arbitration, including excerpts from a speech at the Hollywood convention by E. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the American Arbitration Association.

Myers Commends Sears

The Warner policy, enunciated last week by Gradwell Sears, general sales manager—of providing private screenings for exhibitors unable to attend a trade show—received commendation Friday, August 1st, from Mr. Myers, in a specially issued bulletin from Washington, which said, in part:

"With all the criticism being heaped on exhibitors for failing to turn out in droves for the trade showings, it is gratifying to learn that one film executive realizes the hardships incident to attendance at the one-a-day screenings which have been held thus far."

Mr. Myers said it was "too bad" the distributors did not consult organized exhibitors before the trade showings, because "much money" could have been saved. He added there is "nothing in" the decree "that says a distributor may not run its pictures in its screening rooms or elsewhere as often as is necessary." Again, of Mr. Sears, he said that the Warner man had "shown the way," and "it is safe to say that others will follow."

Mr. Myers also predicted that the Government probably would not be able to impose a decree on Columbia, United Artists, and Universal, before June 1, 1942, thus making the present decree period experimental, and one during which all should, he urged, try to cause a minimum of hardship.

Greenthal Backs Myers' Plan

Monroe Greenthal, director of advertising and publicity for United Artists, on Monday endorsed the proposal of Abram F. Myers, Allied's general counsel, for cooperative advertising, in local situations. He qualified this, however, with the statement:

"We believe that the exhibitor should share in these local campaigns, but that, in sharing, he should guarantee and adhere to the policy of advertising cooperation with exhibitors."

Epstein Appoints Committees

Ely Epstein, RKO salesman and president of Motion Picture Associates in Philadelphia, has appointed the following committees: Constitution and By-Laws: Albert M. Cohen, chairman, Samuel Rosen, F. L. Rogers; Entertainment: Alfred Davis, chairman, Harry Blumberg, George Beattie; Welfare and Charity: Samuel Gross, chairman, Ulrik Smith, William J. Doyle; Membership: Frank Hammerman, chairman, John Golder, Edward Gabriel; Publicity: George Fishman, chairman; James A. Dalton, Paul Greenhalgh; Finance: Earle W. Sweigert, chairman, Jay Emanuel, Benjamin Blumberg.

TOP SALARIES TO COOPER, CAGNEY, FORD, WALLIS, ZANUCK, CROSBY

Robinson, Henie, MacMurray, Spyros Skouras, Ginger Rogers, Errol Flynn, Lombard Are Among the Highest Paid

Hollywood, in 1939, paid its 'Beau Geste' of that year a salary of $482,820.47. That's what Gary Cooper got, that same Gary Cooper who went a long way from the Cooper who first saw light 40-odd years ago, in Helena, Montana, as Frank J.

Gary headed the first list of persons receiving $75,000 or more from corporations in 1939, made public this week by the United States Government in accordance with provisions of the Internal Revenue Act. These U. S. salary reports are always two years behind.

Nearly one-fourth of the 571 persons listed in the upper brackets were Hollywood stars or film executives, producers, directors or writers. The full list, due from the Treasury Department in October, or thereabouts, is bound to raise the figure appreciably.

Taxes Not Indicated

Again, the Government bares to the world Hollywood's fantastic salaries, and again, it neglects to point up the large percentage of those salaries which go to taxes, both Federal and state.

Several of the major companies' salary reports were not included in this first report. In October, Louis B. Mayer's $697,048—the 1939 salary revealed earlier this year by another Government agency (the Securities and Exhange Commission) would top Gary Cooper's $482,820.17.

In addition to Gary Cooper, 12 persons in the motion picture industry were revealed as having received salaries of more than $200,000. James Cagney, earning $368,333.33, was sixth among the nation's highest-paid executives just reported; Director John Ford, with $320,000 was seventh. Others, in order, were: H. B. Wallis, producer, $265,000; Edward G. Robinson, $255,000; Darryl F. Zanuck, $255,000; Bing Crosby, $250,000; Sonja Henie, $249,167; Fred MacMurray, $240,333; Spyros Skouras (National Theatres Amusement Co., Inc.), $228,000; Ginger Rogers, $219,500; Errol Flynn, $213,333; Carole Lombard, $211,111.08.

Independents Listed

"Free lance" players and those "farmed out" to other studios are listed only by such studios as have paid them more than $75,000. In this way some stars listed by one company have earned additional income from another; and some players whose income from several studios may top $75,000 are not listed at all. As a trend, however, they reveal that 1939 salaries in the film industry were, in general, on the level of 1938. Some executives drew a smaller sum, and some stars enjoyed a more profitable year, but there were no signs then of a declining Hollywood or the long-promised "less work for less taxes." The new Federal tax bill, however, is another matter for the latter.

The industry names on the first salary list are given, with the amounts, in an adjoining column.

Mr. Samuel Goldwyn
Samuel Goldwyn, Inc.
7210 Santa Monica Blvd.
Los Angeles, Cal.

Dear Sam:

I have just had a very great experience...I have seen Bette Davis in "The Little Foxes."

I think it is your masterpiece.

The box-office value of this picture - from a famous stage play - with a star such as Miss Davis...and produced by you...was obvious before a camera turned. But you have given us something more than a certain success. You have given us a sensation.

"The Little Foxes" has all of the deep emotional quality of your greatest productions. And again you have given us a brilliant portrait of an unforgettable woman, as you did in "Stella Dallas".

This picture makes me prouder than ever of your associatcn with us - more confident than ever of other great attractions coming from you under the RKO Radio banner.

My congratulations to you are heartfelt. Will you please convey also to Miss Davis, to Director William Wyler, to Cameraman Gregg Toland, and to all of the members of your splendid organization, my admiration of their remarkable achievement in actually heightening the dramatic effect of Miss Lillian Hellman's already highly dramatic play.

And I am particularly grateful to you for introducing to the screen the seven newcomers, including Miss Teresa Wright, who make such brilliant debuts in this picture.

In conclusion, I want you to know that I am ready personally to assure any exhibitor, in any type of theatre, that he will get one of the soundest pieces of box-office merchandise in his career when he gets "The Little Foxes."

With kindest regards,

Sincerely,

George

Churchill Speech in Film

Prime Minister Winston Churchill's speech on the Battle of Dunkirk will be heard in "Captains of the Clouds," Warner Bros.' Technicolor story of the Royal Canadian Air Force, starring James Cagney and Dennis Morgan. One of the scenes of the film, which is being photographed on location in Canada, shows Cagney, George Tobias and Alan Hale listening to the Prime Minister over the radio. A record made in London at the time of the speech is to be used by the film company.

Bolivar Production Started

Gravas y Compania of Mexico has started production on "Simon Bolivar," an historical drama under the direction of Contreras Torres featuring highlights in the life of the Latin American patriot. Scenes of 19th Century Spain and her colonies in the new world are being produced in Mexico and Central America.

Wolfish Joins RKO

The RKO exchange in Philadelphia added Mike Wolfish to the staff as booker.

FP in Canada Has 4-Day Meet

Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Toronto, through its president, J. J. Fitzgibbons, called a special conference of all executives of the circuit and of theatre owners in partnership with the company, at the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec, from August 1st to 4th, to discuss developments in the theatre field of the Dominion and to deal with new measures for the operation of the circuit starting with the new season.

Representative officials of allied groups were among those who attended, upwards of 40 of the whole organization being on hand including a number of partners who recently joined with Famous Players. Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, flew from New York to attend.

Following return of company executives from the meeting with partners, the latter were said to have pledged full support to president Fitzgibbons and his policies.

The official statement also pointed out that Barney Balaban, Paramount's president, announced at the conference that his company would cooperate with the Canadian Government in showing the official British picture, "Churchill's Island."

Mr. Fitzgibbons announced continuance of the bonus system and group insurance for all managers. Adoption was made of a bonus-salary plan for all employees to meet increased cost of living under the Dominion's war administration.

No Increased Admissions

The statement also revealed that the circuit's admissions will not be increased, but that a survey was started on the effect of the Federal amusement tax which report will be presented eventually to the Canadian Government.

FPC also announced its decision to hold regional managers' conferences in place of its national convention.

Promotions announced were: Harrison Patte, promoted to eastern Canadian supervision of booking, with Sylvester Gunn, previously appointed as western Canadian booker; Bert Brown, manager of the Capitol Theatre, in Hamilton, promoted to the advertising department of the Toronto head office, and Jack Butler, owner of the Imperial Theatre at Moncton, N. B., who became an associate of the circuit.

Those present follow: Jules and Herb. Allen, Theatre Holding Corporation, Toronto; George Ganetakos, Allen Murray, John Ganetakos and William Lester, United Amusements, Montreal; J. J. Fitzgibbons, president, R. W. Bolstad, vice-president; J. Miles, Western Theatres, Winnipeg; J. Arthur Hirsch, Consolidated Amusement, Montreal; N. A. Taylor and R. Auerbach, Twentieth Century Theatres, Toronto; S. Bloom and S. Fine, B. and F. Theatres, Toronto; L. I. Bearg and Frank Gow, division supervisors, Vancouver; Morris Stein, eastern division manager, Toronto; Frank Kershaw, Calgary district supervisor; E. A. Zorn, division supervisor, Winnipeg; Don Gauld, suburban district manager, Winnipeg; W. P. Dewees, partner, Vancouver; Dan Krendel, western Ontario district supervisor, Hamilton; T. R. Tubman, district supervisor, Ottawa; N. G. Barrow, secretary; Jack Arthur, northern Ontario district supervisor, Toronto; James R. Nairn, director of advertising, Toronto; B. Geldsaeler, chief buyer and booker, Toronto; Sylvester Gunn, western division booker, Toronto; Robert Eves, suburban district supervisor, Toronto; R. S. Roddick, Maritime district supervisor, Halifax; R. F. Beauvais, Toronto head office; Clarence Markell, associate owner, Cornwall; Simon Meretsky, general manager, Paramount Windsor Theatres, Windsor; N. N. Lawand and E. M. Tabah, Confederation Amusements, Montreal, and Sam Weiner, partner, Winnipeg.

WITNESSES SEE REDS TAKING HOLLYWOOD

Charges About Moscow Money, Film Writers — and Bioff, Too — Fly in California Investigation

From HOLLYWOOD BUREAU

William Bioff, the Hollywood Motion Picture Democratic Committee, writers "who put strange dialogue in films," money from Moscow "finding its way to Hollywood," peppered the potpourri which made up the testimony given in Los Angeles last week before a California state assembly committee investigating subversive activities.

The testimony before the committee did not live up to advance reports of "hot" revelations which were to have been made about Hollywood figures.

There were stories that the Communistic party was using Hollywood writers to push its propaganda; that one Comrade Seminow had already been chosen to be commissar of motion pictures "comes the revolution"; that a mysterious signal flashed messages to ships at sea from the writers' colony at Carmel; that certain writers put propaganda in dialogue "and if the director was a fellow traveler, the lines stayed in"; that huge payoffs were made to name writers for penning propaganda leaflets.

Also charged were: that the committee, headed by Jack Tenney, state assemblyman and former president of Musicians' Local 47, was being used by persons with political motives; that William Bioff, IATSE labor leader, had motivated the investigation to "get" and discredit his enemies in Hollywood labor ranks; that Walt Disney, through a prominent lobbyist in Sacramento, state capital, had also aided in instigating the investigation.

After hearing testimony of various persons, including former Communist party members and AFL leaders, the committee adjourned until later this month, when, it was promised by one witness, names of Hollywood personalities who knowingly and unknowingly aided "the cause," would be divulged. The investigators, consisting of three state senators and three assemblymen, held one executive session from which the press and the public were excluded and at which testimony "of a highly startling nature" was given, it was hinted.

Hear Musicians' Union Testimony

The hearing opened with testimony on the infiltration of Communism into the ranks of the musicians' union, and the disclosure that Mr. Tenney, who was defeated in a sorely contested ballot two years ago while seeking reelection, was at one time considered "good material" for Communist party membership. He "did not react properly when the test came," Rena Vale, writer and former member of the party, testified.

It was charged frequently during the inquiry that politics motivated the probe. A former party member said the Communists had started the recall movement against former Mayor Frank L. Shaw and supported his successful opponent, the present Mayor Fletcher Bowron.

H. K. Sorrell, business representative of Moving Picture Painters' Local 644 and representative of the Screen Cartoonists' Guild, denied on the stand that he was a Communist, or had ever knowingly attended Communist meetings and said that his presence under subpoena was due largely to machinations of Bioff, whom he had opposed bitterly since 1937, and Walt Disney, against whom he had directed cartoonists' strike operations.

Answers for Bioff Attacks

"Every time I attack Willie Bioff I'm hauled up before one of these things," Mr. Sorrell said. Shown a photostatic copy of a party membership card, made out in the name of Herbert Stewart, Mr. Sorrell denied that it was his.

Aubrey Blair, AFL organizer, declared Communists were attempting to filter into Hollywood unions and gain control.

"It is the most dangerous evil in the film industry," he said. "Sometimes we think writers deliberately inject lines of Communistic propaganda into screenplays, and if the director is a fellow traveler, the lines stay in."

Jeff Kibre, who was a leading figure in the 1937 Federated Motion Picture Crafts strike and two years later in the United Studio Technicians' Guild fight with the IATSE, was described as the "number one Communist in Hollywood." Kibre, who quit the IATSE following the U. S. T. G. defeat in an NLRB election, is now an organizer for fishery workers in San Francisco.

From Captain Charles G. Bakcsy, former Hungarian nobleman, boxer and investigator, the committee heard that Ella Winter, widow of Lincoln Steffens and now wife of writer Donald Ogden Stewart, was the chief recruiting agent for the party in Hollywood.

"The Writers' League, the Anti-Nazi League and other Hollywood groups were to get money and other assistance through Miss Winter," Bakscy said. Also identified as a former party member was film writer Philip Dunne.

However, Miss Winter and Philip Dunne, in telegrams sent to the committee over the weekend, denied all connection, now or in the past, with the Communist party.

Mr. Dunne declared: "I publicly stated at frequent intervals my opinion of the Communists and their mental gyrations when they first tried to worm their way into the liberal movement disguised as perfervid lovers of democracy."

Miss Vale told of reported party influences in the federal theatre project and said that the Hollywood Motion Picture Democratic committee was "used" by Communists as part of the party transmission belt.

Hearings will resume in September.

EQUITY TO BAN ISMS

For the second time this year Actors Equity Association on Tuesday took steps to purge the "Communists" among its members. Equity's council appointed a committee to draft a constitutional amendment which would ban members or sympathizers of the Communist, Nazi or Fascist parties from holding office in or being employed through the actors union.

Last September, an Equity membership meeting adopted the proposal, but it never saw the light of day. Following the June elections, the committee appointed to draft such an amendment was wiped out. At that time a group of Equity officers and council members raised a vociferous protest and resigned, manifesting their opposition to those Equity members regarded as Communists who wished to gain control of the council.

Browne, Bioff Trial Set, August 25th

Date for the trial of George Browne, IATSE president, and William Bioff, Western representative, will be August 25th instead of August 18th, according to Federal Judge Edward A. Conger, who so informed defense counsel this week. August 18th is motion day in the Federal courts and therefore no judge would be available for the trial. Defense counsel previously had asked that trial be set for September, but indicated that it could be ready by the 25th.

Meanwhile, U. S. Attorney Mathias F. Correa said in court last Monday that unless Nick Circello, fugitive Government witness in the racketeering case against Browne-Bioff, is located by the date set for trial, he will ask the court to revoke the $50,000 bail bonds fixed for each of the union leaders when they were arrigned last June. Mr. Circello, described by Attorney Correa as a "Chicago individual who has been on Browne's payroll from 1936 to 1940, although he is not a member of the union," disappeared shortly after the indictment of the two defendants on May 23rd. Neither deputy U. S. marshals in Chicago or FBI agents armed with a warrant for Circello's arrest have been able to locate the Chicago witness. Defense counsel denied any knowledge of Cirello's whereabouts.

Earlier in the court proceedings, Federal Judge Simon Rifkind reserved decision on pleas to quash the indictments.

F.P.C. Promotes Gunn and Barker

Sylvester Gunn of Winnipeg, has been transferred to Toronto by Famous Players Canadian as head booker for the western division under the circuit's new system of zone booking departments. The system was established following the resignation of Ralps Dale as head booker. Mr. Dale joined the new Odeon circuit in a similar capacity.

Jack M. Barker has been promoted to the post of assistant advertising manager of FPC under James R. Nairn. He succeeds Clair Appel who resigned to join N. L. Nathanson's Esquire Films.

David Heads Northio

Harry David has resigned as vice-president and general manager of Intermountain Theatres circuit, a post he held since 1929, to head the Northio circuit, with headquarters at Cincinnati.

Major Companies Get Demands from 230 Press Workers

A closed shop, automatic raises, and job and wage classification led demands with which the Screen Publicists Guild confronted the majors home office executives Monday, as it asked reopening of contract negotiations, after winning a National Labor Relations Board bargaining agency election two weeks ago by a vote of 172 to 19.

The Guild vote was 90.5 per cent of the total. Approximately 40 others in the majors' home office advertising and publicity departments were ruled by the Board ineligible for voting; but the Guild will include them in its blanket contract. Some 230 home office workers are involved.

Other sections of the Guild seek hiring of advertising and publicity workers only through the Guild or from another film company with Guild contract; a ban against independent, non-Guild publicity services; permanency of employment after six weeks; a basic rate of $4 per hour for free-lance art work; "first class" living acommodations for workers traveling on company business or living outside of New York; space in each office for a Guild bulletin board.

Seven Publicity Classes

Press agents are classified by the contract in three grades of apprentice, three of juniors, and one senior. The wage scale provides $40, $45, and $50 weekly minimums for apprentices; $60, 65, and $70 for juniors; and $125 for seniors. Twelve months' service promotes a worker from one grade to another, except to the senior bracket. These provisions are conditioned, however, by another that, after two years in the third grade of the junior classification, a worker must receive $90, instead of the normal $70.

Provisions are made for a rise in living costs. Government indices are used as bases. Wages must follow rise in such costs. The contract asks a 40 hour week, time and one half for overtime, and double pay for Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays.

Signing of the contract, the Guild states, must bring a general 10 per cent raise, for all publicists.

Settle Disney Dispute

In Hollywood, the conferees on the settlement of the Screen Cartoonists Guild strike against the Walt Disney studio, continued their labors this week, after agreeing on a wage scale, and 12 other points, at last weeks' conferences.

It is now understood the wage scale will range from a $85 weekly minimum for chief animators, to $24 for inkers, and $22 for painters. The workers also won two weeks' vacation with pay, 12 days' sick leave, a 40 hour week, with overtime at time and a half, double pay for Sundays and other holidays, double pay for girl artists who work more than 10 hours overtime in any week, and two weeks' severance pay.

Further settlement factors: artists hired by the Disney studio during the strike, are to be discharged; layoffs must be by seniority; restoration of the April and May pay cuts will be arbitrated as will be cartoonists' pay increases, and compensation for time lost during the strike. Additionally under arbitration are the severance scale based upon length of service; compensation for military duty; and imprinting of the cartoonists' union insignia on product.

Representatives of both sides are meeting under the supervision of James S. Dewey, and Stanley White, counciliators of the United States Labor Department.

PARENTS 'PHONE SONS ON THEATRE TIEUP

With many of the neighborhood boys in service, Irving Lipnick of the Shore, in Chicago, promoted 'phone company for loudspeaker and receiver for stage use. Each Thursday night, a definite army camp is called at a certain time with parents among patrons invited to theatre to talk to their sons.

Snapper of the idea is of course that the audience is able to listen in on the conversation. Full cooperation from the commanding officers at the various army camps is helping to put the stunt over.

In New York Wednesday, the National Labor Relations Board conducted a bargaining agency election in the story reading departments of the majors' home offices. The Screen Readers Guild seeks certification.

The executive board of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes began its annual mid-summer meeting at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, Atlantic City, Monday. The meeting was expected to continue through the week. Lou Krouse, secretary-treasurer, was in charge of arrangements.

In Philadelphia, Fred Fortunate, booker at the Universal exchange, has been named acting president of the city's Film Exchange Employees' Union, Local B-7, in the absence of William Z. Porter, on the Coast for Monogram.

Republic, PRC Hold Regionals

Republic Pictures will hold the first of a series of meetings at the New York home office on August 12th. Producers Releasing announced the third of its regional sales conventions will be held in Dallas, August 16-17th.

James R. Grainger, Republic's president, left Hollywood last week by plane, en route to New York, stopping off in Chicago on Thursday, for conferences. Mr. Grainger will lead discussions of the company's new season products at the regional meeting. He disclosed that he had completed product deals with key circuits of every large west coast city, the last of which was a deal with Sterling Theatre Circuit, Seattle, which operates 18 theatres.

Among the eastern branch managers slated to attend the regional are: Morris Epstein, New York; Arthur Newman, Albany; M. E. Morey, Boston; Jack Bellman, Buffalo; Sam Seletsky, New Haven; and Max Gillis, Philadelphia. Franchise holders Nat L. Lefton of Cleveland and Cincinnati, J. H. Alexander and Sam A. Fineberg of Pittsburgh, and Jake Flax of Washington also are planning to attend.

Following PRC's announcement of 42 films on its 1941-42 program, which appeared in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD last week on Page 26, the second of its series of regional sales conventions was scheduled for August 9-10th in Atlanta, and a third for August 16-17th in Dallas. The Atlanta meeting will be held at the Henry Grady Hotel, with Arthur Greenblatt, general sales manager, presiding.

Northwest Allied, Virginia, Okla., Other Units Meet

A special "emergency" convention of Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest was called by Fred Strom, secretary, for Tuesday at the Hotel Nicolett, in Minneapolis, to discuss the Minnesota block booking bill, 16 mm. competition, admission taxes, blocks-of-five and film buying, trade showings and arbitration. Last week Northwest Allied issued a call for the "must convention" to muster support of the major-protested anti-blocks-of-five selling law which the "Big Five" are fighting in Ramsey County district court in St. Paul.

Majors' Efforts Studied

Northwest Allied took shots at the majors' effort to break the Minnesota anti-blocks of five law, and several majors' selling practices, adult taxes on student admissions and alleged extortion generated under the new blocks-of-five sales policy in districts outside of Minnesota.

Allied also denied allegations that it frowned on trade showings, and passed a resolution favoring them and urging members to attend as many as possible. Despite the fact members can't make all of them, the convention was that they are healthy.

Principal action was the membership's affirming of support of the Board of Governors in voting for an all-out defense of the anti-block-of-five law, which comes under fire of five majors in Ramsey county district court Friday. The group voted to raise a fund for the defense.

Following a successful legislative year for theatre owners in Oklahoma, the Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, Inc., an MPTOA affiliate, will this fall stage drive to increase its membership, according to Morris Loewenstein, president.

Membership dues are now $12 a year, Mr. Loewenstein said. The drive for new members will be carried on through directors in the various districts.

Association personnel for this year is as follows: Morris Loewenstein, Majestic theatre, Oklahoma City, president; Max Brock, Lawton theatre, Lawton, vice-president; Leonard White, Bungalow, Weatherford; secretary-treasurer.

Virginia Group Appointed

A legislative committee for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia was appointed Monday by William F. Crockett, president, for the coming year.

The committee consists of the following: Charles A. Somma, chairman; Morton G. Thalhimer, vice-chairman; Herman Rubin, Petersburg; Nat Glasser and A. Julian Brylawski, Washington, D. C.; Hunter Perry, Charlottesville; Ben Pitts, Fredericksburg; Charles Roth, Harrisonburg; Ellison Loth, Waynesboro; C. L. Abercrombie, Danville; Elmore Heins, Roanoke; R. C. Overbey, South Boston; Allen Sparrow, Harold Wood, Frank O'Brien and Sam Benrheim, Jr., Richmond; Rives S. Brown, Martinsville; C. C. Lincoln, Alexandria, and Sydney Gates, Norfolk.

Representatives of the majors and of exchanges in New York, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Washington are expected to be on hand. Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, is to address the convention.

WARNER BROTHERS, PARAMOUNT, RCA REPORT INCREASE IN EARNINGS

Keith-Albee-Orpheum Extends Offer of Stock Purchase to August 15th; S. E. C. Gives Report on Film Transactions

Warner Brothers, Paramount, and RCA this week reported increased profits, and the Securities and Exchange Commission reported from Washington, the heaviest trading, by principals in such companies, in entertainment stocks, in several months, July being the period covered.

Warners reported a net operating profit of $4,443,445 for the 39 weeks ended May 31st. Its last year's figure for the same period was $2,450,713.

Paramount estimated its earnings for the second quarter ended July 5th, at $1,904,000. This makes earnings for the first six months ending on that date, $4,379,000.

RCA disclosed, for the first half of the year, a consolidated net profit of $5,306,494. Last year, in the corresponding interval, it earned a net profit of $3,185,222.

Meanwhile, the Atlas Corporation, reporting for the six months ended June 30th, revealed it had bought 8,364 additional preferred shares of RKO, making a total of 43,845 now held. The company also holds 1,076,157 common shares of the picture company.

Warners Nets $4,433,445 Profit

Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and subsidiaries reported for the 39 weeks ending May 31, 1941, a net operating profit of $4,433,445 after deducting all charges including amortization and depreciation, a provision for contingencies amounting to $914,000 and normal Federal income taxes, as compared with a net operating profit of $2,450,713, after a provision of $175,000 for contingencies, for the corresponding period the previous year.

The realization of a tax loss arising from the sale of all the capital stock of, and advances to, Brunswick Radio Corporation, a subsidiary company previously consolidated, reduced the estimated normal Federal income taxes for the 39 weeks ending May 31, by $415,000. While the book value of the investment in Brunswick was adjusted each year for the losses of this subsidiary, not all the adjustments were deductible for Federal income tax purposes. Warner Brothers has offset its loss, resulting from the sale, including a substantial portion of the accumulated adjustments referred to above, against taxable income in computing its normal Federal income tax for the period, according to a statement from the company.

The additional provision for contingencies increased the reserve in respect of net assets of subsidiaries operating in foreign territories to $1,250,000.

The net profit from operations for the 39 weeks ending May 31, before charges for amortization and depreciation of properties and normal Federal income taxes, was $9,391,855.

The gross income, after eliminating intercompany transactions, for the 39 weeks was $76,609,471. The comparable gross income for the 39 weeks ending May 25, 1940, was $76,375,905.

Cash in the United States as at May 31, 1941, amounted to $10,284,296 as compared with $10,932,279 as at March 1, 1941.

SEARS PREDICTS NEW BOX-OFFICE UPTURN

Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager for the company, told Warner convention delegates last week that business in most situations is well above last year, forecasting a big box-office upturn next season.

Mr. Sears said he foresaw a strong improvement starting in the fall as a result of defense money and an increased number of big pictures.

Motion picture stocks are coming into increasing favor, as the industry continues to enjoy excellent business, the Wall Street Journal said on Monday. Current reports from Broadway indicate box office receipts are running as much as 20 per cent ahead of last year and although this may be too good to continue it points to a big fall business, said the financial publication.

On preferred stock to: $44.50 per share on 99,617 shares outstanding at May 31, 1941 (after deducting shares held in treasury). Dividends in arrears amount to $33.6875 per share.

On common stock: after allowance for current dividend requirements on the preferred stock to $1.12 per share on 3,701,090 shares outstanding (after deducting shares held in treasury) at May 31, 1941.

Current assets listed in the balance sheet items of Warner Brothers as of May 31st amounted to $29,089,433, excluding assets of $2,835,083 of its subsidiaries operating in foreign territories. Current liabilities of $14,449,308, did not include $1,563,439 liabilities of subsidiaries in foreign territories, which means that a total of $1,271,645 of current assets in foreign lands deducted in the Warner financial statement, therefore, were not subject to tax in the United States.

Paramount Estimates $1,904,000 Earnings

Paramount Pictures Inc. estimated its earnings for the second quarter ended July 5, 1941 at $1,904,000 after interest and all charges including provision for all Federal taxes, normal federal income taxes being computed at 30 per cent. This amount includes $231,000 representing Paramount's direct and indirect net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the quarter of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries.

Earnings for the six months ended July 5, 1941 on the same basis are estimated at $4,379,000, including $881,000 share of undistributed earnings of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries. No provision was made for Federal excess profits taxes for Paramount Pictures and its consolidated domestic subsidiaries since it is estimated that none have accrued.

Earnings for the quarter ended June 29, 1940 were $1,478,000 including $323,000 share of undistributed earnings of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries and $58,000 profit on purchase of debentures, while earnings for the first six months of 1940 were $3,084,000 including $1,039,000 share of undistributed earnings of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries and $66,000 profit on purchase of debentures.

There were outstanding as of July 5, 1941, 126,389 shares of cumulative convertible $100 par value 6 per cent first preferred stock and 531,620 shares of cumulative convertible $10 par value 6 per cent second preferred stock.

After deducting $269,327 of dividends accrued for the quarter on these preferred shares, the remaining $1,634,673 of estimated combined consolidated and share of undistributed earnings for the quarter represent 66 cents per share on the 2,466,692 shares of common stock outstanding on July 5, 1941, which compares with 48 cents per share for the quarter ended June 29, 1940. Computed on the same basis, the estimated combined consolidated and share of undistributed earnings for the six months ended July 5, 1941, represent $1.56 per share on such common stock outstanding, which compares with $1.01 per share for the six months ended June 29, 1940.

K.-A.-O. Stock Offer Extended

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation has extended until August 15, 1941, its offer to purchase the outstanding minority interest in the common stock of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation at $5.00 per share. The offer was made during the early part of July and was expressed to expire July 31, 1941.

Approximately one-half of the common stock of Keith-Albee-Orpheum held by the public at the time the offer was made has been acquired by Radio-Keith-Orpheum under the offer.

Some years ago the holders of the minority interest in the common stock of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation were entitled to exchange their stock, share for share, for the common capital stocks of the predecessor of the present RKO company, but such exchange is no longer available.

Atlas Adds to RKO Holdings

The report of Atlas Corporation, of which Floyd B. Odlum is president, for six months ended June 30th, shows that the corporation, a principal stockholder in RKO, bought 8,364 additional preferred shares of that company, making 43,845 held at that period. The company now holds 1,076,157 RKO common shares, an increase of approximately 75,000 shares over the 1,001,126 held six months previous.

Atlas sold 6,882 shares of Keith-Albee-Orpheum seven per cent preferred to RKO, retaining 118 shares.

The RKO-KAO transactions were listed among the major changes in Atlas Corporation's latest array of holdings. The six months' report also disclosed that Atlas had materially added to its interest in Hearst Consolidated Publications seven per cent preferred, now holding 94,373 shares, while it disposed of all of its 7,000 shares of General Theatres Equipment Corp. during the period.

Atlas holdings in RKO as of June 30th represented an investment of $5,993,938.35; with $12,862 invested in KAO, total was $6,000,800.35. Schedule of Atlas securities as of June 30th includes:

Preferred Stocks: 43,845 RKO 6 per cent Cum. Conv., valued at $2,279,953.57; 118 KAO 7 per cent Cum. Conv., $12,862; 2,000 20th-Fox $1.50 Cum. Conv., $37,000; 12,040 Walt Disney Prod. 6 per cent Cum. Conv., $63,210; 94,373

Hearst Consolidated Pub. 7 per cent Cum. "A," $672,407.63.

Common Stocks: 1,076,157 RKO, $3,632,031.84; 327,811 RKO option warrants, $81,952.94; 20,000 Paramount Pictures, valued at $217,500; 4,500 Madison Square Garden Corp., $57,375.

For the six months Atlas reports a net loss of $1,189,351.15, largely accounted for by the net realized loss of investments on the basis of average cost. Surplus on June 30th after deducting net unrealized depreciation of assets was $17,931,911.81.

Assets value of Atlas common on June 30th was given at $11.81 as against $11.43 a year ago.

At the end of July the Atlas board declared a 25 cent dividend on the common payable Septemper 5th to stockholders of record August 11th along with the regular quarterly dividend on the preferred, payable September 2nd to stockholders of record August 11th.

RCA's Second Quarter Profits, $5,306,494

The consolidated statement of income of Radio Corporation of America and subsidiaries, issued by David Sarnoff, president, shows, for the first half of the current year, a consolidated net profit of $5,306,494, after taxes and all other charges. This compares with $3,185,222 net profit in the six months to June 30, last year, an increase of $2,121,272.

RCA's profit for the first six months of 1941 is after providing $4,740,000 for Federal income and excess profits taxes, compared with $1,579,900 for the corresponding period in 1940.

Total gross income from all sources amounted to $72,583,659 in the first half of 1941, compared with $56,854,182 in the same period in 1940, an increase of $15,729,477.

After payment of preferred dividends, earnings applicable to the common stock were equivalent to 26.6 cents per share, compared with 11.3 cents per share in the first half of 1940.

Quarterly dividends of 87½ cents per share on RCA first preferred stock, and $1.25 per share on the "B" preferred stock, were declared this week by the board of directors. These dividends are for the period of July 1, 1941, to September 30, 1941, and will be paid October 1, 1941, to stockholders of record at the close of business September 5, 1941.

SEC Reports Heavy Securities Transactions

Officers, directors and principal stockholders of motion picture corporations engaged in heavier transactions in the securities of their companies in June than for many months previous, it was disclosed by the Securities and Exchange Commission this week in its first summary for the month.

The heaviest dealing was in Radio-Keith-Orpheum, where, in a series of transactions running throughout the month, Atlas Corporation bought 45,200 shares of common and 4,364 shares of preferred stock, at the end of the month holding 807,927 shares of common direct and 268,230 shares through the American Company, together with 127,812 warrants for common and 43,845 shares of preferred stock.

Atlas Corporation also was active in Keith-Albee-Orpheum, where the sale of 882 shares of preferred stock reduced its holdings to 2,618 shares held direct and 3,500 shares held through the American Company.

The SEC report showed that the Manufacturers Trust Company, New York, sold 15,000 Paramount Pictures 1947 debentures.

Continuing its acquisition of Loew's Boston Theatres common stock, Loew's Inc. acquired 56 shares during the month, bringing its total to 118,386 shares. In Loew's Inc., itself, J. Robert Rubin, New York, officer, disposed of 2,600 shares of common stock in a series of transactions, reducing his holdings to 21,315 shares.

The summary disclosed that Samuel Broidy, Hollywood, Monogram Pictures officer, acquired 3,300 shares of common stock of the company in May and another 3,000 shares in June, bringing his holdings to 7,900 shares held direct and 500 shares held through Monogram Pictures, Inc.

The only other film transactions were the purchase of 400 and sale of 200 Universal Corporation common voting trust certificates by Preston Davie, New York, director, who held 4,400 certificates direct and 26,500 through Standard Capital Company, together with 111,283 warrants for certificates, at the close of the month.

Reports on the interests of persons becoming officers or directors of corporations revealed that John J. O'Connor, New York, held no Universal Pictures securities when be became an officer, and that B. Machnovitch, New York, held 700 common voting trust certificates of Universal Corporation when he was elected an officer. Both companies held their elections June 30th.

In Columbia Broadcasting System, H. Bayard Swope, New York, director, reported the sale of 400 shares of Class A common stock, all he held direct, and 1,100 shares held through the Keewaydin Corporation, in which he had 2,500 shares at the end of the month. Leon Levy, Philadelphia, director, disposed of 541 shares of Class B stock by gift, holding 41,362 shares at the end of June.

Marvin Schenck to Produce "Night of Stars" Show

Marvin Schenck, Loew executive, has accepted the chairmanship of the producers' committee for the "Night of Stars" for the United Jewish Appeal for Refugees and Overseas Need, to be held at Madison Square Garden in New York on November 26th. Mrs. Leo Spitz is chairman of the women's division.

William Morris and Louis K. Sidney are co-chairmen of the producers' committee and Sidney Piermont is associate chairman. Ernest Emerling will head the publicity division. Others on the committee are Don Albert, Al Altman, Harry Rome, Ed Sullivan, Sidney Phillips, Benn Jacobson, Arthur Knorr, Larry Puck, Nat Kalcheim, Harry Kalcheim, Bob Weitman, Harry Mayer, Ruby Cowan, Sol Hurok, Max Wolf, Allan Zee, Frank Rohrendeck, Leo Cohen, Eddie Cantor and George Jessel.

Memphis Competition

The Memphis Open Air theatre, which Memphis exhibitors consider serious competition during its five-week run each summer, drew about 10,000 spectators for each of its first two weeks. The majority of the attendance is in the $1 seat class, although prices are scaled down to 25 cents. Exhibitors are also objecting to the support given the theatre by both daily newspapers, which give the project an enormous amount of free publicity.

Warners' Earle to Build Stage Band Policy

Warners' Earle Theatre, the only house in central Philadelphia playing stage shows, will pattern its stage policy along the lines of the Paramount in New York and build itself as a "band palace." After experimenting all past season with various types of stage presentations, featuring dance bands, personal appearances of screen players, regular vaudeville shows and even units, it was found that the name bands are consistently better gross getters.

In past seasons, bands like Glenn Miller and Benny Goodman have established box-office figures in excess of $35,000, and a decade ago, the Earle books show grosses in excess of $40,000. Only limitation is the fact that the house is closed on Sundays.

In line with the band policy, the circuit plans to provide the house with a better grade of screen feature. Until now, the emphasis has been entirely on the stage, so much so, that the film was never strong enough to warrant keeping the house open on a Sunday. Last month, the management experimented by booking "The Big Store" along with Harry James' band on the stage. With marquee value in the screen show, the added screen strength resulted in a $19,000 week, considered good for July. The house average when playing straight pictures without stage features was $14,000 for a seven-day week.

Better Pictures Booked

The booking of better pictures also comes as good news for the local exchanges. Until now, the booking of a feature into the Earle was practically a cue to neighborhood exhibitors to pass it up or to take it as a filler for a double feature or giveaway night. While the circuit's set-up in Philadelphia will not allow for a regular policy of better picture product, it is intended to route whatever is available for the house, especially when the band attraction is a lesser name.

In line with the avowed band policy, a parade of bands has been booked in, with attractions set until October. Following last week with Vaughn Monroe, Frankie Masters orchestra along with Dennis Day followed this week; Phil Harris for August 15; Cab Calloway and an all-colored show for August 22; August 29 week, taking in the Labor Day holiday, is tentatively reserved for Artie Shaw and his 35-piece orchestra; Tony Pastor with Jerry Colona for September 5; Alvino Ray and the King Sisters with Anita Louise making good a canceled booking earlier in the summer, for September 12; Jan Savitt for September 19; and Glenn Miller for September 26. Although definite dates are not set as yet, October weeks are reserved for Jimmy and Tommy Dorsey.

Since a steady parade of bands will leave the 28-piece house orchestra with practically nothing to do save entrance and exit music, it is believed that the policy will have a direct bearing on the Warner circuit negotiations with the Philadelphia musicians' union for a 1942 contact. The union has already appointed a committe, headed by Secretary A. Rex Riccardi, to begin negotiations with the circuit.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Scarcity Paying

Scarcity or plenty?—that is the question puzzling Hollywood's thoughtful at this point in a summer which has doublecrossed the resident prophets.

Scarcity has never had friends in the production community. Plenty has been a fundament of Hollywood policy and procedure adown the years, for reasons requiring no cataloguing here. But incidents having nothing whatever to do with anything that could be called a planned economy have conspired to give the thinkers some material to

The premiere of "Charley's Aunt," breaking a five months lull in the staging of gala ceremonies for picture openings, broke a four-year record for public turnout, according to police authorities, and tied Hollywood Boulevard traffic into such knots as only the most grizzled native son can remember the likes of.

The "New Wine" preview-junket upstate to Cucamonga, first enterprise of the kind undertaken since April, started out as a cozy little party for 150 guests and wound up with 600 in attendance.

In themselves, these seem to argue nothing more upsetting to the status quo than the wisdom of spacing the exploitation high-points a little farther apart than was customary a while back, but students of show business pursue the matter beyond this conclusion.

Other incidents outside of pattern complicate the reasoning of the studious.

It is not lost sight of that the wave of bad news which floated back from the box office front in April, May and June gave way to better tidings at about the time when the rough-house comedies, coming in the wake of the Abbott-Costello leaders, began to permeate the playing arears of the nation. It is most emphatically not lost sight of that it was not the million-dollar pictures, the confections of the apostles of plenty in the budgeting department, that were causing this change for the better. It is a highlight of last week's news that MGM's "Whistling in the Dark," one of its most modest offerings in point of investment, took the town by storm on the occasion of its preview, necessitating a re-preview for those who missed it.

Neither is it overlooked that there's been some switching to single-bill policy around the country at a time coinciding with the reported upturn in gross revenues.

It's agreed that it's early to be attaching much long-range significance to these seeming indications that the public is beginning to manifest, in its own effective way, some wishes and predilections in the matter of entertainment which do not coincide with Hollywood's concept of show business as it should be. Doubtless Hollywood will always agree that it's too early, or something, for the taking of steps toward fashioning the fare to the pattern of public approval, instead of attempting vice versa, but that's not news. The news is that the present trend of Hollywood's thinking is being determined by external eventuations. If anything comes of the thinking, that will be news indeed.

Irving Reis will direct "Gwangi" for RKO-Radio, a production mentioned as one of the company's largest and a film around which a publicity wall of mystery is being erected.

Sam Katzman has assigned Phil Rosen to direct "Ghosts In the Night", starring Bela Lugosi, for Monogram.

Benjamin Glaser will produce "Paris Calling" for Univresal.

Harold Hurley, former Paramount production executive, is reported forming an independent unit to produce four pictures for United Artists release.

Bud Abbott and Lou Costello are scheduled to fly East for a short session of personal appearances on completion of "Ride 'Em Cowboy", their Universal comedy now nearing completion.

Private Kenneth Wilkinson of Fort Lewis, Wash., champion movie fan of the U. S. Army and last week guest of Hollywood for that reason, returned to soldiering remarking, "Now I've got to catch up on my movie-going. I fell behind on my schedule and saw only four while I was here. That makes 314 feature pictures since I enlisted last September. It's the greatest cure for troubles or cares that I know of."

GOLDFISH BOWL CONCEALMENT

If you believe RKO's publicity about her contract, Gypsy Rose Lee's little sister, June Havoc, wants to get and stay away from all that sort of thing which made her big sister famous.

But if you believe RKO's publicity department is going to let her do so, read this excerpt from its press release announcing her arrival:

"Miss Havoc's contract contains clauses dictated by herself stipulating that she is, and will continue to be, an actress; that she is not to be exploited as to so-called leg art; that she will not be asked to do bubble dances and similar bits of terpsichore tormenting to the genus homo; in short that she is not be regarded in Hollywood as a tabloid edition of her big sister."

Nobody had sued anybody up to press time.

MGM Leads

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was leading the production rush at weekend with eight pictures shooting, all of them big in the budget sense.

Paramount and Warner Brothers shared second place with seven pictures before the cameras in each case, the production community in whole continuing in high gear with 51 films in shooting stage.

U. S. Completes Its Trust Case Against Crescent

The Department of Justice's "field anti-trust suit" against the Crescent Amusement Circuit, affiliates, and the "three little majors," Universal, United Artists, and Columbia, saw the completion Tuesday, of the Government case, and the beginning of the direct defense. Federal Judge Elmer Davies, in Nashville Federal Court, trial scene, on Wednesday, gave a final ruling admitting as evidence the Crescent company's income tax returns. Previously, inter-office communications and testimony about Crescent's growth had been allowed as evidence.

The government agreed that this disputed tax record would be submitted in confidence to the Judge and not entered on the record.

Judge Davies on Monday said precedental cases under the Sherman anti-trust act considered "the question of profits"; while Robert Wright of Government counsel, pointed out intent to show only the balance sheet of Crescent and affiliates, and income of certain persons.

Adding to the stream of testimony, during four weeks, from independent exhibitors anent Crescent's methods of acquiring theatres and buying product, the Government on Monday introduced distributors' playoff sheets, charging films were rented to Crescent in Kentucky and Tennessee at lower prices than to independent theatres with smaller houses in smaller towns.

Immediately following the end of the Government case four attorneys submitted dismissal motions in behalf of Crescent and affiliated exhibitors, the "Little Three" distributors, and personal defendants. The Universal Pictures Co., Inc., motion submitted by Edard Raftery for its subsidiary Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., was granted.

Arguments on the Columbia motion and a Columbia sales memorandum were taken under advisement by Judge Davies, after he had remarked that he thought the memorandum discussing next year's contract "is some evidence of conspiracy."

A defense motion for dismissal of the case was expected at mid-week, following the completion of the Department's testimony.

A vital ruling last week by Judge Davies was his admission that testimony repeatedly given by Government witnesses about Crescent's growth was important to the Government's monopoly and conspiracy case. The ruling came after objection by George Armistead, Jr., Crescent counsel, who deprecated contentions of Justice Department lawyer Allen A. Dobey, that "the bigger the circuit, the less possibility there is for any independent exhibitor to compete with it at any particular point."

The case resumed Wednesday, July 30th, after a short recess granted by the Judge to defense attorneys for production of inter-office files, demanded by the Government from five Crescent affiliates.

On Thursday, July 31st, the Government displayed a memorandum of a three-year franchise for Twentieth Century-Fox product, covering all towns of Crescent and nine affiliates, and signed by Tony Sudekum, Crescent head. The defense argued the deal comprised three franchises, to Crescent, Muscle Shoals Theatres, and Rockwood Amusements. The exhibit showed 78 theatres involved, with no remarks on affiliation of the theatres.

On Friday, August 1st, Louis Frohlich, Columbia attorney, deprecated the Government's contention income tax returns would show the "extent" of the Crescent operations, by pointing to the Federal consent decree's involvement of "4,000 of the best theatres in the country" affiliated with the "big five" majors.

He added that only last month, "they (the Government) allowed Paramount to purchase an additional 100 theatres in Florida."

Mr. Wright answered that the Crescent situation was "tighter" competitively than Paramount's.

In assailing the Government's intention of exhibiting Crescent income tax returns, Mr. Armistead on Friday, August 1st, asserted: "Every distributor in this case would be delighted to know what Crescent and affiliates have been realizing out of their business."

Prefect Asks Defense Motions' Dismissal

The Prefect Theatre, Inc., operator of the Pickwick, Greenwich, Connecticut, and suing the majors in New Haven Federal Court for $5,452,575 under the anti-trust laws, has moved for dismissal of defendants' "separate or special defenses."

The defendants' separate defenses, part of their answers to the Prefect complaint, had alleged that the Fairfield Holding Company, one of the plaintiffs, is a foreign corporation. The United Artists' special defense had maintained the plaintiff corporations lacked legal capacity to take court action.

Senator Connally Pays Tribute to Screen from the Floor of Congress

A tribute to "the grand work being accomplished by the motion picture screen" was incorporated Tuesday in the Congressional Record by Senator Tom Connally of Texas, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Coming at this particular time, the Senator's remarks were considered of more than ordinary significance.

Prefacing his resolution with the words that "he had just witnessed a grand and unusual motion picture which prompted his action", the noted Texan presented the following statement from the floor of the Senate:

"I should like to call to the attention of my colleagues the grand work being accomplished by the motion picture industry in recognizing humanitarian effort of Americans whose accomplishments have been bereft of public recognition. . . .

"Once again this great medium acquaints our citizens with another great personage—Edna Gladney—whose heart and soul and sense of duty have made great contributions to our civilzation. For 30 years this simple, courageous woman has devoted her energies to those dear little bits of humanity who come into this world unwanted. Out of her great love for children she established the Texas Children's Home and Aid Society at Fort Worth, an institution which has made happier thousands of childless homes and which has turned out thousands of fine, healthy, sterling citizens.

" . . . It is with enormous pride that I call the nation's attention to the commendable work of Edna Gladney and to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer motion picture, 'Blossoms in the Dust', which will serve as a monument to her work and, I am sure, as an inspiration to all Americans."

Frederick James Smith Dies of Heart Attack

Frederick James Smith, motion picture writer for Liberty Magazine, died suddenly Tuesday afternoon in the lobby of the Hotel Algonquin, New York. He was 55 years old.

Mr. Smith had been a writer on motion pictures and radio for many years, as managing editor of Photoplay Magazine, the Brewster Publications, the Tower Magazines and eastern editor of Fawcett Publications. After publishing his own magazine, Screen Weekly, he created and edited Radioland and Tower Radio Magazine. In recent years he has been a contributor to This Week, Silver Screen and other national magazines on film and radio subjects.

Allied Prepares National Meeting

Allied States began preparations Tuesday for its national convention slated for September 16-18th, at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, in Philadelphia.

"Let's Get Down to Business" was the convention slogan adopted by the regional unit which met. Following topics for discussion at the convention were set up:

"What happened at the box-office and what can be done to stimulate the public's interest?"; competitive entertainment factors including bowling, billiards and 16 mm. films, merchandising of pictures, arbitration, consent decree, trade showings, sales policies, relation of the theatre to the national defense program and annual reports of Allied leaders.

Sidney E. Samuelson, business manager of the Eastern Pennsylvania unit, was appointed general convention chairman and David E. Milgram was appointed treasurer. H. A. Cole, Allied president; Abram F. Myers, chairman and general counsel, and Martin Smith, national Allied treasurer, will assist Mr. Samuelson and Mr. Milgram.

The following were appointed to head committees: Morris Wax and George L. Ickes, attendance; Harry Perlman, decoration; Sol L. Stiefel and Michael Felt, display; David G. Milgram, entertainment; David Segal, gifts and prizes; David Barrist, honor guests; Fred A. Beedle, program; Cecil Felt, public relations; Joseph Conway, publicity; Jack H. Greenberg and Harry Fried, reception; E. B. Gregory, registration, and Melvin Koff, year book.

An equipment exhibit will be held in connection with the convention.

Tillie, The Toiler

(Columbia)

Comic Strip Personified

This personification of the Russ Westover comic strip by the studio which made a success in the same domain with its "Blondie" series comes off second best in the inevitable comparison, although rating well up among the minor comedies of the season and offering considerable promise for future items featuring the same characters. Preview of the first "Tillie" film did not evoke the gales of laughter which greeted the first "Blondie," but did keep the audience in good spirits, which sometimes bubbled up into substantial outbursts of merriment.

Witnesses addicted to the "Tillie" strip as daily diet asserting after the preview that Columbia has succeeded in casting the talent to fit the pen and ink cast almost if not quite as well as in the "Blondie" case. This would seem to level the principal hurdle which any enterprise of this character must negotiate.

Considered apart from its cartoon inception, the film is a flippant little comedy about a beautiful but dumb office girl whose blunders always turn out to be silver-lined. Principally concerned in the tale is a dress manufacturer whose business is alternately wrecked and salvaged by the witless but lucky secretary who is "Tillie."

Production by Robert Sparks is adequate but lacks the uses of trick photography and camera devices which distinguished the "Blondie" beginnings. Direction by Sidney Salkow is a bit uneven in some sections of the production and brilliantly effective in others.

Previewed at the Alexander Theatre, Glendale, to a mixed audience which received the offering cordially.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

(U.A.-Roach)

Streamlined Feature

All of Hal Roach's promises of a type of film to cope with the double feature problem were made good this week Tuesday when he previewed for press, profession and public the first in his series of streamlined features. Long enough to satisfy a public condition to double-decker programs, yet short enough to get the customers home by bedtime, it kept its audience in a state of hilarity throughout its fifty minutes and sent tradefolk away predicting that more and more of these are what the doctors will be prescribing for show business.

This first in the Roach series is timely as to topic and brilliant in the simplicity of its treatment. It presents the adventures of a draftee who, having been something of a quiz kid prior to enlistment, enters the military service with the manual of arms and other source books memorized better than the commandant knows them. His rise, over obstacles set up by his buddies and superior officers, is meteoric and mirthful, side-splittingly funny but within plausibility withal. As the hardboiled sergeant who makes trouble for him, Joe Sawyer is a standout in the humor department. James Gleason adds punch to the enterprise as the commandant and Noah Beery, Jr., also furnishes important support.

Production by Hal Roach is in the best Roach tradition and direction by Fred Guiol misses nary a trick. The picture is clean, fresh and funny in every one of its 50 minutes.

Previewed at the Alexander Theatre, Glendale, to a capacity audience composed of press, profession and public, the latter present to see "Manpower," which followed the Roach comedy in exhibition sequence. Laughter was general, steady, a rippling endorsement of the production and a rich promise for future films in the streamlined series.—W. R. W.

New Western Series

First of a new western series in which Bill Elliot and Tex Ritter will be starred, this film augurs well for the group. It is an excitingly entertaining combination of action and music, with the latter interpolated in such a manner as not to interfere with the former.

The locale of the story is Kansas; the period, 1861, is ruled by a ruthless criminal and his henchmen, who control virtually everything. "Wild Bill Hickok" is commissioned by the chairman of a citizens' committee to round up the gang, and after a misunderstanding with the sheriff, played by Ritter, who jails him for murder and other crimes, exposes the band and brings about its extinction with the aid of the townspeople.

Supporting Elliott and Ritter are Dub Taylor, who appears here as the cowboy relief and who appeared in the Elliott solo starring westerns Columbia made in 1940-1941; Janice Blair, Guy Usher, Rick Anderson, Kenneth Harlan, Perce Lyden, Francis Walker, Harrison Greene and Jack Rockwell.

Producer Leon Barsha and Director Lambert Hillyear score clean target hits in their departments, their efforts combining to make an offering to be relished by all western fans.

Previewed at the studio projection room to a press audience which enjoyed it. Some confusion existed concerning the title, for all of the action takes place in Abilene.—V. K.

Produced and released by Columbia. Leon Barsha, producer; Lamber Hillyer, director. Director of photography, Benjamin Kline. Film editor, Jerome Thoms. Assistant director, Milton Carter. Citadel of Crime

(Republic)

Gangster Melodrama

"Citadel of Crime," originally titled "Ten Nights in a Barroom," although it has no connection with the novel and stage play of the same title, is a story of hillbilly moonshiners, a gang of racketeers and revenue agents. With Robert Armstrong, Frank Albertson and Linda Hayes—the first two as the racketeering ring leader and the revenue agent and Miss Hayes in a rather unimportant romantic role—the picture is a simply told story of the lives and livelihoods of the mountaineers which progresses rapidly with the aid of swift-paced dialogue and an abundance of action.

It concerns a big-city racketeering ring and its domination of moonshiners in the hill country of West Virginia. Under suspicion by revenue agents, the moonshiners and bootleggers are eventually split when it is revealed that the city gunmen are swindling the hillbillys. The mountain folk in turn join the forces of law and order and aid in ridding the territory of the gangsters. A romance had developed in the meantime between the girl of the hills and the young revenue agent.

George Sherman, associate producer and director, in transposing the original story to the screen has added much in the way of interest and adventure to a story which in itself is compounded of events and situations used many times before.

The Terror

(Altiance Films)

Mystery—English Style

The fact that "The Terror," produced in London, is English in feeling, English in tempo, English in humor and English in accent, limits its appeal to American audiences.

Based on a mystery story by the late Edgar Wallace, of prolific pen, the plot centers around the theft of bullion, which is supposed to be split three ways, but which is appropriated in its entirety by "The Terror," and the attempts of the thwarted two to receive their share of the loot after they leave prison. In the incidental plot structure are an old English house, a few murders, a mysterious monk and a minor love story. The developments are not always clear, but, it turns out according to formula. The most innocent-looking character is "The Terror."

The players, Wilfrid Lawson, Bernard Lee, Arthur Wontner and Linden Travers, are not too well known in this country.

Highway West

(Warner-First National)

Gangster Melodrama

For exhibitors who enjoyed a profitable return or Warners' "High Sierra" and predecessor gangster films, the company again offers a production of similar theme and treatment although not quite so lavishly produced.

"High Sierra" dealt with a pardoned convict, his romances and his continuation on the road of crime. This film concerns an escaped prisoner and his undesired return to a wife whose love has turned to hate. Both pictures concern the domineering type of gangster, and the locales of both are in auto-camps of California. (The story is detailed on page of 170 of the June 28th issue of the Product Digest).

Utilizing all the elements which have kept Warners in the foreground as producers of the crime-does-not-pay type of melodrama—the elements of suspense, romance, swift action and comedy—the picture, based on a play by Leon Abrams and George Abbott, offers numerous exploitation possibilities to showmen whose audiences responded to the lead-chucking type of melodrama.

Under the direction of William McGann, Brenda Marshall, as the wife, and Arthur Kennedy in the unsympathetic role of the escaped convict, render impressive performances. In supporting roles William Lundigan, Olympe Bradna and Slim Summerville, as the boasting cowboy of the frontier days, do much to aid the plot and its rapid progression.

The Deadly Game

(Monogram)

Spy Melodrama

Efforts of Nazi agents to wrest from the inventor the secrets of a night plane detector constitute the background of "The Deadly Game," first Monogram production from the new team of Dixon Harwin and Barney Sarecky. Featuring Charles Farrell, June Lang, John Miljan and Bernadene Hayes, the picture tells the story of the agents being outwitted by government men and uses all the modern trappings of an espionage ring—mobile transmitting sets, hideout in an auto court, and the "front" of an art gallery for the spies.

Phil Rosen, director, guided the film which is marked by several deficiencies in the script. Harwin and Sarecky have given it a production sheen not usualy seen in pictures of its budget classification.

Bullets for O'Hara

More About Crime

Here is another picture about crime and punishment, from the Warner studio, which has made a practice of specializing in melodrama and action. This is a minor effort, however, and suffers in comparison with previous Warner melodramas.

It concerns "Patricia Van Dyne" (Joan Perry), who discovers on her honeymoon that her husband, "Tony Van Dyne" (Anthony Quinn), while very much in love with her, is a criminal. She proves her own innocence, and in order to bring her husband, who has escaped, into the custody of the law, divorces him and marries "Mike O'Hara" (Roger Pryor), ace detective and apparently a woman-hater. After a kidnapping and a fight or two, justice triumphs and the ace detective finds he isn't such a woman-hater after all.

While there is a love interest, and action of a sort, the entire procedure bogs down taken in its entirety.

Along with the featured players, Joan Perry, Roger Pryor, Anthony Quinn, Maris Wrixon and Dick Purcell, there are a number of old-timers present like Hobart Bosworth, Hank Mann, Kenneth Harlan, Frank Mayo and Leah Baird.

Social Documentary

A quaint but human glimpse of the problems of the billeting officer who deals with evacuees from the town to the country, places them in village homes, solves their problems and heals their sores. Hays Addresses AMPP Meeting

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, held in Hollywood Monday, leading topic for discussion was the development of a "forward-looking public relations policy" for the industry in view of recent published criticism. Will H. Hays, president of MPPDA, addressed the group.

Francis S. Harmon, executive assistant to Mr. Hays, gave a report on Production Code Authority activities, indicating that the PCA will continue for the present without a successor to Joseph I. Breen as administrator.

Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of MPPDA, also attended the meeting. He left Hollywood for New York the following day.

Charles McCarthy Leaves 20th-Fox

Charles E. McCarthy, advertising and publicity director of Twentieth Century-Fox for the last ten years, announced Monday morning that he had submitted his resignation to Sidney R. Kent, president, and that the resignation had been accepted "with regret." Immediately following, Maurice A. Bergman, advertising manager, also resigned.

Co-incidental with the resignations, it was learned that Hal Horne, recently with Walt Disney, had assumed an exploitation post with the company.

"Certain problems have arisen in the operation of the company which, to me, appear insoluble," Mr. McCarthy said. "Therefore, although I have a contract which has two more years to run, I asked Mr. Kent to relieve me of this obligation, as this would appear to be for the best interests of all concerned. Mr. Kent, with whom I have been associated for nearly 25 years, accepted my resignation with regret."

Mr. McCarthy's resignation punctuates a long tenure of service in motion picture advertising and publicity. He joined the old Fox Film company in 1916. He had been a reporter and editor for newspapers in New England, New Jersey and New York. In 1919 he became publicity manager for Famous Players-Lasky. He became director of public relations for Paramount-Publix, the successor company, and held that post until 1932 when he went to Twentieth Century-Fox with S. R. Kent as director of advertising and publicity.

Mr. McCarthy will remain at Fox until September 1st; Mr. Bergman is to leave Friday.

Mr. Bergman, prior to joining Fox, last Winter, was advertising and publicity director for Columbia for three years. Before that he had been an account executive with Lord and Thomas. advertising agency, where he specialized in motion picture accounts. He was former advertising director of the Brooklyn Paramount Theatre.

New "Con" Game in Illinois

From Carlinville, Ill., comes the story of a theatre manager, 22 years in the business, who last fall experienced her first "taking-over" by a salesman for one of the numerous "enterprise" concerns throughout the country.

The manager, Mrs. Frieda Paul of the Marvel, Carlinville's only theatre, reports the incident in which a salesman for a concern in Chicago contracted with her to furnish radio-bikes provided a sufficient number of local merchants signed up to cooperate in the deal.

When only two merchants tied up, the deal was not carried out, and the merchants who had paid the salesman turned to Mrs. Paul for reimbursement. The salesman had cashed the checks, departed. leaving no radio-bikes nor promise of making good. Mrs. Paul paid the amounts.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Carrying On

Among the British companies whose programs of forthcoming production are undimmed by the war is Associated British Picture Corporation, whose Welwyn Studios are, according to W. J. Gell, not to cease activity during the forthcoming year. Seven pictures are planned to be made there, all for release by Pathe Pictures. They include comedies, dramas and semi-documentary epics. First of the septette is a screen version of a stage farce which has scored in British theatres, "My Wife's Family." In this Charlie Clapham, comedy end of the vaudeville team of Clapham & Dwyer, has the leading role with, in support of him, a cast including John Warwick, Chile Bouchier and Patricia Roc. Walter Mycroft directed and produced the picture, which is ready for immediate trade showing.

Being prepared for its final screen version is "The Tower of Terror," a modern thriller devised around a mysterious lighthouse on the edge of the Welsh coast. Wilfrid Lawson and Movita have the leads in this John Argyle production, which is being directed by Lawrence Huntington.

Earlier this summer Associated British started work on another comedy, "Banana Ridge," in which Robertson Hare and Alfred Drayton, comedy darlings of the London stage, have the roles which they popularized on the stage. Lesley Storm, one of the most successful scenarists and dramatists in contemporary Britain, wrote the script, in collaboration with Ben Travers. This also is a Mycroft director-producer venture.

Set on the Yorkshire Moors "The Night Has Eyes," another mystery thriller, is scheduled to recreate the eerie atmosphere of "Night Must Fall," and it is hoped that Emlyn Williams will play the leading character in the film, which will be produced by John Argyle and directed by Leslie Arliss.

Norman Lee, producer, director and writer, is at present working on the scenario of "Canteen Kitty," an original dramatizing the role of the younger generation in helping to make the lives of Service men tolerable in wartime Britain. Settings scheduled for the film include a canteen in a main railway terminus, a military training center and one of Oxford's colleges.

Something of a documentary flavor will be found in the remaining two of Pathe's roster. One of these is "London Is Burning," a drama built around the work of the Auxiliary Fire Service and the tragic Fire of London etat 1941, which will be the highlight of the picture. Rodney Ackland, who wrote the script of "Hatter's Castle," is engaged on the scenario for this. In the other documentary drama, "Thrills in the Air," collaboration by the Ministry of Information and the Air Ministry is being afforded a film which will have as its inspiration the work of the Air Training Corps, official body designed to build up the younger generation for service in the Royal Air Force. Authentic backgrounds and detail are being incorporated in the picture which, while it will have a propagandist flavor, is centered mainly on its dramatic entertainment values.

Work is proceeding at Denham on Paramount's "Hatter's Castle," which Lance Comfort is directing under the production eye of I. A. Goldsmith. Reliable reports indicate that Robert Newton, who is the lead in the film, is giving the performance of his career. Cameraman Mutz Greenbaum has recently been at work on a set representing the town of Levensford which was so large that it necessitated the use of stages 6 and 7 at the studio. Two hundred extras were used in one sequence recently and camera cranes put into operation. Dramatic sequences for the film recently photographed by Greenbaum include a train wreck. The picture is set in the 1880's and is from the popular novel by A. J. Cronin.

One for Wanger

Though not strictly a British film, inasmuch as it embraces British Studios a picture currently being made in Great Britain for Walter Wanger, destined to dramatize the work and achievements of the Eagle Squadron, is entitled to report on this page. Making the film in Britain, and with the aid of two British cameramen is Ernest Schoedsack who arrived here via a U. S. bomber ferried across the Atlantic to Britain. Schoedsack has already taken considerable footage here and has brought back vivid material from his locations. The film will not be strictly a documentary doing for the Eagle boys what Schoedsack and Cooper did for their subjects in "Grass" and "Chang." United Artists will of course distribute.

Recording is going on at Denham now on "49th Parallel," the Ortus film for which music has been played by the London Symphony Orchestra and conducted by Muir Mathieson.

Another stage at Denham has gone into occupation recently for the production of "Hard Steel," the G-H-W production in which Wilfrid Lawson and Betty Stockfeld are being directed by Norman Walker. Claude Friese-Greene is in charge of the camera work on the film, much of which has recently been centered upon steel mills in Yorkshire. The cast includes many names well known to British audiences, viz.: George Carney, George Stuart, Hay Petrie, etc.

"Hi Gang" Set

British Broadcasting's long distance champion, the record run radio show "Hi Gang," is now in full swing at the Gainsborough Studios, Islington, which have been reopened for the first time since they were closed during last year's blitz. Most of the principals come in from the high spot of the British listening year, "Hi Gang," with, of course, Bebe Daniels, Ben Lyon and Vic Oliver to the fore. The vocal trio, the Greene Sisters, singer Sam Browne, and maestro Jay Wilbur and his band, all of whom played over the air and are now playing for the screen version.

Some idea of the popularity of "Hi Gang" as a radio show can be gained in that it was originally booked for six weeks, extended for three months and finally ran for twelve months: the longest run any variety programme has had over the BBC network.

Marcel Varnel is directing, and the story is by Val Guest, who, with Marriott Edgar, also wrote the script. Guest has also collaborated with Manning Sherwood on lyrics and music.

Stills man on "Hi Gang" is Cannons of Hollywood, who has recently been taken over by Bill Batchelor's publicity department.

Bill Sistrom, RKO Radio's production executive in Britain, has already started his unit to work on yet another "Saint" project, tentatively titled "Meet the Tiger." Paul Stein is to direct. Once again Hugh Sinclair, one of Britain's up and coming players, is to have the lead and will have in support a cast including Wylie Watson, Gordon McLeod, Charles Victor and Ben Williams. Production is at Denham.

Sistrom was enabled to launch production on this latest RKO Radio subject without delay by retaining the "Dangerous Moonlight" unit intact and setting them to work on the "Saint" film instanter.

Nearer London, at Ealing, Will Hay, the schoolmaster comedian of screen, stage and radio, is co-directing himself in "The Black Sheep of Whitehall." Basil Dearden is his fellow director. In many of the film's sequences Hay sports a women's wig and a nurse's uniform and wears these while he helps or is helped by Dearden in the task of directing the film—and himself.

Ealing, like Denham, has two features on the floor, for on another stage in the studio Cavalcanti, Public Documentarian Number One, is producing with the co-operation of the Ministry of Economic Warfare "The Big Blockade," a full-length documentary about Britain's Economic battle. Though the Ministry is aiding the film, it is being sponsored independently by Ealing, whose production chief is Michael Balcon.

$7,000,000 OF U.S. MONEY FROZEN IN AUSTRALIA

New Agreement Signed by American Companies Holds 62½% of Earnings There

by LIN ENDEAN
in Sydney

A foremost aspect of Australia-U.S.A. trading, the dollar exchange position, has resulted in considerable re-casting of the established routine of film distribution machinery in this territory, but by close co-operation with the Federal Government, and an appreciation of the nation's economic situation in a total war effort, by the American head-offices of the units handling pictures here, the situation has been worked out smoothly.

The distributors' hope is that conditions will not reach a point where further freezing of coin will be necessary, as on the present basis the American remittances are tremendously below what would be the case in normal times. Originally, the government made 50 per cent the proportion of remittance that could be sent to New York and, last month, a new wartime agreement was struck for film companies making 62½ per cent of the earnings to be held in Australia.

The money already frozen is a considerable sum—estimated to total, at least, 7,000,000 par dollars for 1940-41, and, naturally, this has brought about developments focussing Australia as definitely a more important unit in the restricted international scene of distribution than before. For instance, many exchanges are now exporting prints to the Far East, India and Egypt, territories formerly serviced direct from America.

Foreign Heads Arrive

Significantly, trade talk indicates the visits here of many foreign field executives—two to arrive being N. P. Pery (Columbia man, formerly European manager and now supervisor for Australia and the Far East) and Robert Schless (Warners' foreign field head), with the official statement on each being that they are here to study local conditions at first hand. Mr. Pery is reported to be scheduled for a twelve months' stay in this part of the world.

Distributors are carrying a heavy tax load, footage duty on local prints, alone, tallying up to $1,000,000 annually, and operating costs weighted to the maximum, but in the face of this the industry has not yet been drastically effected by war conditions. All of which is directly attributable to the fact that theatre business has been tops, particularly in first-runs and provincial centres. Confidence in the future is emphatically evidenced on the stock exchange, theatre operating companies' shares being in demand at best prices and few offering.

Inaugrated by Charles Munro, head of Hoyts, nationwide theatre circuit, the industry has moved on a drive for $50,000 to purchase Mobile Talkie Units, to provide entertainment for Australian troops abroad. This is but one of a number of patriotic efforts put in train by film folk, all of which have tremendous goodwill value in showing the loyalty and virility of the industry as a definite part of the nation's fabric. Incidentally, the idea of taking talkies right to the boys in action is unique as a modernization of the behind-the-lines concert parties of the 1914-18 dust-up.

New regulations, covering advertising accessories, and newspaper space rationing, have arrived as a major headache for the trade. Paper-rationing, both newsprint and quality lines, has been imposed on so severe a basis that all papers have cut to the limit in available space sizes and column-widths, and most film printing aids, including day bills, couriers and throw-aways have been reduced to a standard area and allowable only on a quota set on a base year.

Australian theatres have been leaders in big space motion picture advertising in newspapers all along the line—in fact, it was Bill Yearsley (noted American film publicist, here in the early golden days of the screen) who set a world precedent for Australia, when he used a full-page to boost a picture—and with the public schooled to this aspect of selling the search is on for ways and means to keep up the pressure. Radio and outdoor mediums are first thought, but with commercial advertisers also forced to turn more and more in this direction the airways and roadsides look to be in for a boom.

Actually, the radio stations are in a great spot, petrol rationing keeping the week-end car gadabouts at home and making them, more or less, radio listeners by compulsion.

A neat turn of showmanship worthy of recording stands to the credit of Julius Fisher, Capitol Theatre, Singapore. For the Australian film, "Forty Thousand Horsemen," he caught up on the prevailing interest by the presence of Australian troops there, by arranging for the star of the film, Betty Bryant, to fly from Sydney to Singapore, attend the premiere and visit the soldiers' camps. His enterprise caught the imagination of the whole of Malaya, and results were as to be expected—terrific. The distance between the two points is 4,669 miles!

This is not the first time Fisher has broken new ground, and he ranks with the front-rankers among international showmen.

Goldwyn Sets British Film

Samuel Goldwyn has announced for immediate production in England a new film to be called "Spitfire" starring Leslie Howard and David Niven and to be directed by Mr. Howard. The story is based on the life of R. J. Mitchell, builder-inventor of the Spitfire airplane, and a percentage of the profits will go to the inventor's widow.

FORM NEW MOBILE VAUDEVILLE UNITS TO HELP ENTERTAIN ARMY

Trucks with Complete Equipment Tour Camps; Music, Amateur Dramatics Encouraged; List of Theatre Facilities Concluded

While the United States Army, of 1,448,500 soldiers, continues with efforts not only to train its men and obtain equipment, but also to maintain and erect sufficient morale-building film theatres—the travelling vaudeville units, established some months ago by the Citizens Committee for the Army and Navy, Inc., and the United Service Organization, entered the army entertainment picture with films.

A sixth mobile theatrical unit, designated as "F", was formed last week, and will play in eleven Army camps until August 9th. Its first performance was given at Selfridge Field, Michigan, Friday, July 25th. In the troupe are Steve Evans, master of ceremonies; Beverley Whitney, singer; the Three Hylton Sisters; George Prentice and marionette dancers; Linda Moddy, dancer; Frances McCoy, swing singer. Among the camps this unit will have visited by August 9th, are Grosse Isle, Fort Brady, Fort Custer, in Michigan; and Fort Sheridan, Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Glenview Naval Air Station, Camp Grant, Savanna Ordnance Depot, Scott Field, and Chanute Field, in Illinois.

Mounted on Trucks

The mobile units are mounted on trucks self-sufficient for entertainment purposes; making the troupes independent of theatre facilities in each post. The Citizens Committee now has six complete travelling units playing Army posts and another is contemplated. All are managed by Harry Delmar, Broadway legitimate theatre producer. In the months they have been working, the units have appeared in 75 camps, as of last mid-week, and have played to 850,000 soldiers.

The units are mounted on specially designed vehicles, purchased by the Committee from General Motors.

The tour of the vaudeville units had been scheduled to end July 15th but general acclaim, and the permission of the Army Morale Branch, forced their continuance.

Meanwhile, that Morale Branch, with which the Committee is cooperating, and of which film theatres in Army posts are a part, this week listed the efforts it has made to make the "American Army" a happy army; and, as a corollary, an aggressive and competent army.

Included in the Morale Branch activities are the following:

The Army Motion Picture Service. This books films into Army theatres in the Continental United States, Alaska, and the Atlantic Base Commands. It administers, operates, and constructs theatres; procures and maintains film equipment; supplies pictures; and expands the service.

(Appended to this article is a listing of theatre facilities in Army posts—theatres existing and planned; their seats; towns nearest to posts; distances to those towns. As reported in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD of July 26th, this listing gives the exhibitor an idea of the extent of the Army's "circuit"; a circuit which may some day provide all the film entertainment for three million men, as it does, largely, now to one and one-half million men.)

Under the classification, "Amateur Dramatics," the Army Morale Branch encourages theatrical talent in each post, in special shows.

Music forms an important part of the morale program. The Army has published, and is distributing, a song book; it encourages mass singing—also military bands.

Athletics. Under this heading, the Army attempts voluntary physical build-up. Equipment is placed at soldiers' reach. Intramural games are encouraged.

Exchanges. This is an important morale-builder. Men converse in the post exchanges. They also buy merchandise at low prices. Exchange profits buy athletic equipment, and build more recreational facilities.

Service Clubs. In each post of more than 5,000, there is a club, with a senior, and two junior hostesses. The War Department lately authorized smaller clubs. These clubs provide and conduct social and recreational features. They are equipped for indoor games, and they have libraries, cafeterias, and reading rooms.

Day Rooms. Permanently posted troops have these rooms, for each company. The rooms are for reading, writing, and other non-active pursuits. Some 2,400 such rooms are also being built for 25 permanent tent camps.

Library Service. Books and magazines, chiefly, are provided, by this service. A large camp has about 5,000 books. Smaller camps and posts are visited by traveling libraries, headed by professional librarians.

Camp Publications. The number of these are increasing. Each camp is expected to have one. They are regarded highly, as morale-maintainers. The Morale Branch supervises them.

Guest Houses. Guest houses have been built in camps of 10,000 and more. They accommodate parents and other guests. They have sleeping rooms, at low rates, reception space, wash rooms, telephone and telegraph services, reading and writing rooms.

Recreational Areas. These are the "week-end" camps. They allow service men a week-end of relaxation at prices far below the equivalent services in towns. Thirty are in operation or projected. They are in all sections. They now accommodate 500 to 1,000 men each. Plans are for expansion of these capacities. In such camps, soldiers may enjoy tents, bedding, cots free, from the Army; food at low cost; outdoor sports; other recreational factors; and the entertainment afforded by the nearest town.

Cited above have been the entertainment factors given soldiers by the Army. It will be seen that the Army, as an entertainment entrepreneur, is a rival to estalbished film exhibition, not only as the operator of its own circuit, but as the provided of manifold other relaxations.

As noted, the HERALD herewith presents a concluding listing of Army posts, their locations, theatre facilities planned and operating. The first part of this listing is to be found in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of July 26th, pages 31-32.

JEFFERSON BARRACKS, MISSOURI

Industry Has 48 Special Defense and War Shorts in Circulation

The Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense, of which Francis Harmon, of the MPPDA, is cooperating, now has in circulation 48 trailers or short subjects in circulation in behalf of the defense effort. They are distributed without any rental charges to the exhibitor, designated exchanges in each key city handling the physical distribution and booking without charge and actual shipments, also gratis, are in the hands of regular film delivery services. The pictures, names of producers, subject description and length follow:

POWER FOR DEFENSE, 10 minutes, National Defense Commission. Power resources in the Tennessee Valley and how they are being used to run factories which are making various types of defense materials, arms, munitions, etc.

12 ARMY RECRUITING WAR DEPARTMENT TRAILERS, one minute each: Infantry, Air Corps, Flying Cadets, Coast Artillery Corps, Armored Force, Flying Cadets, Flying Cadets, Field Artillery, Foreign Service, Signal Corps, Medical Department, Quartermaster Corps. Made to stimulate recruiting in the various branches of the Regular Army.

CALLING ALL WORKERS, 160 feet, Social Security Board. The purpose of the trailer is to encourage the registration of all unemployed employables.

AMERICA PREFERRED, 372 feet, U. S. Treasury. A patriotic appeal in behalf of the purchase of defense bonds and savings stamps.

WHERE DO WE GO?, 162 feet, United Service Organizations. For the purpose of augmenting a nation-wide campaign by the USO to raise money for the establishment of 360 service clubs adjacent to camps, naval stations and defense industries throughout U. S. and overseas bases.

BITS AND PIECES, three minutes, OPM. To illustrate need for increasing defense industrial production through "farming out" defense work, and to aid the OPM in recruiting new sources of defense production.

AMERICA BUILDS SHIPS, three minutes, OPM. Illustrating merchant marine ship building program, with scenes from the Pascagoula, Mississippi, shipyards, indicating importance of the merchant marine ships as auxiliaries to the U.S. Navy.

ARMY IN OVERALLS, three minutes, OPM. Shows activities of the CCC in preparing military reservations for the new citizen army.

In addition to the above films seven tags ranging in length from 26 to 65 feet, designed to promote sale of the U. S. Treasury Defense Bonds and Savings Stamps were attached to prints of seven feature pictures released in June.

ARMED FORCES TAPPING STUDIOS FOR HUNDREDS OF FILM WORKERS

Many Prominent Names, Once Connected with Motion Picture Production, Now Serving Country's Defense Branches

Exclusive of the studio manpower engaged in making War Department Training Films under the aegis of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, the industry's 10 major production plants since the first Registration Day last October, have supplied hundreds of soldiers, marines, sailors and aviators to the Country's armed forces, included in which number are also publicists, medical corps men, army post theatre projectionists, anti-aircraft, tank and other specialists.

Top Names Represented

Such motion picture names as Warner, Freeman, Yates, Neilan, are among those serving, in the persons of Jack Warner, Jr., Y. Frank Freeman, Jr., Douglas Yates and Marshall Neilan, Jr. All 10 studios are represented, by men whose former film positions range from full fledged director, as in the case of RKO Radio's Garson Kanin, to props and grips.

Few of the men are commissioned officers, but there are lieutenants, captains, and majors to be found among them. These, of course, do not include such reserve officers as Colonel Nathan Levinson, of Warners; Lieutenant Colonel Darryl Zanuck, of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Major Sam Briskin, of Columbia, all of whom are subject to call on "M Day," or possibly before, to devote themselves exclusively to Signal Corps activities.

And, since MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S survey investigation was undertaken studio by studio, the listing does not include the many "free lance" members of the industry, such as the more than 50 extras and bit players already in service.

Following is a list, by studios, of men now serving in the armed forces. Their former positions, and where possible their present locations are given:

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ESCAPE: Norma Shearer, Robert Taylor, Conrad Veidt, Nazimova—Very good drama of the Nazi situation in Germany. Held my audience interested during the whole performance. Drawing power, "the stars," but business off. All young men gone to the Army, and Government 20 per cent ticket tax a killer for a small town theatre. Running time, 104 minutes. Played July 26.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

BORDER VIGILANTES: William Royd, Russell Hayden, Andy Clyde—Real hot wave hampered business, which was no fault of the picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

LAS VEGAS NIGHTS: Constance Moore, Bert Wheeler, Phil Regan—O. K. for this burg. Running time, 89 minutes. Played July 13-14.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

NIGHT OF NIGHTS, THE: Pat O'Brien, Olympe Bradna, Roland Young—A dry picture. Pat O'Brien slipped on this one. Too much talking and not enough action; in fact, there wasn't any action at all. Wouldn't stand for a Sunday program. Running time, 85 minutes. Played June 15-18.—Crist S. Caporal, Bison Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General and neighborhood patronage.

REACHING FOR THE SUN: Joel McCrea, Ellen Drew, Eddie Bracken—Better than we expected. Business good. Running time, 88 minutes. Played July 6-7.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

ROAD TO ZANZIBAR, THE: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—They turned out to see this on two very hot days. What more can one hope for? Running time, 91 minutes. Played July 13-14.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

VICTORY: Fredric March, Betty Field, Sir Cedric Hardwicke—Very good. Running time, 79 minutes. Played July 2-3.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

Republic

SIS HOPKINS: Judy Canova, Bob Crosby, Charles Butterworth, Jerry Colonna—My audience enjoyed this musical comedy. Struck me in a terrible heat wave, but held up three days to fair business. Running time, 98 minutes. Played July 19.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

MY FAVORITE WIFE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant, Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick—A swell comedy. This had everything but the drawing power. Cary Grant and Irene Dunne give a swell performance. Running time, 88 minutes. Played June 22-25.—Crist S. Caporal, Bison Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General and neighborhood patronage.

RENO: Richard Dix, Gail Patrick, Anita Louise—Story about Reno divorces. Late playing and it almost divorced me from business. Very poor attendance. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 31.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Small town and rural patronage.

SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON: Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best, Freddie Bartholomew—A great picture. Believe this would have done much better if the cast were better. Running time, 93 minutes. Played June 26-28.—Crist S. Caporal, Bison Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General and neighborhood patronage.

THEY MET IN ARGENTINA: Maureen O'Hara, Jimmy Ellison, Buddy Ebsen—Very good picture that did only fair business. Weather too hot.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Twentieth Century-Fox

THAT NIGHT IN RIO: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Carmen Miranda—Our crowd liked this one. Running time, 91 minutes. Played July 11-12.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

THAT NIGHT IN RIO: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Carmen Miranda—These Latin musicals have built up a following. The colors are tops. Running time, 91 minutes Played July 20-21.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

United Artists

OVER THE MOON: Merle Oberon, Rex Harrison—Positively the worst picture of the year. After showing it the first time on the first day, I changed it, and thank Heaven. These English pictures are rotten. Surprised me, for Merle Oberon usually makes good ones. Played July 10-12.—C. S. Caporal, Bison Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General and neighborhood patronage.

THAT UNCERTAIN FEELING: Merle Oberon, Melvyn Douglas, Burgess Meredith—Very good sophisticated comedy.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Universal

LADY FROM CHEYENNE, THE: Loretta Young, Robert Preston, Edward Arnold, Gladys George—The people did not care for this at all; the kids were restless and the adults just seemed bored. Running time, 85 minutes. Played July 20-21.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

NICE GIRL: Deanna Durbin, Franchot Tone, Robert Stack, Robert Benchley—A real fine picture, but for some reason or other, Durbin never has meant box office to us.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre. Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

FOOTSTEPS IN THE DARK: Errol Flynn, Ralph Bellamy, Brenda Marshall—A real good picture that did business in spite of the heat wave.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Short Features

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ABDUL THE BULBUL AMEER: Color Cartoons—Good cartoon. Running time, 8 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

MORE ABOUT NOSTRADAMUS: MGM Miniatures—Interesting. Running time, 11 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

PROSPECTING BEAR, THE: Color cartoons—Exceptionally good color cartoon. The bear series are next best to the Disney product and, in some cases, superior in cleverness and audience appeal. Did you ever think how much free advertising we get from the kiddies after they go home from a show in which we give them a good cartoon? Running time, 7 minutes.—Frank Vesley, State Theatre, Hollister, Calif. Small town patronage.

TIME OUT FOR LESSONS: Our Gang Comedies—Good kiddies reel. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

GENE KRUPA AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Tiresome. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

RED, WHITE AND BLUE HAWAII: Paragraphics—Disappointing. Running time, 11 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

RKO Radio

GOOFY'S GLIDER: Walt Disney Cartoons—Very funny. Disney's poor cartoons compare with what the majority of other companies consider good. Running time, 8 minutes.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 8: Australia at War—Very timely subject. Should be shown throughout the Empire. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Vitaphone

FIGHTING 69TH ½, THE: Merrie Melodies—Fairly good. Running time, 7 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

MATTL MALNECK AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters Bands—Terrible. Running time, 9 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theater, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

PORKY'S PRIZE PONY: Looney Tunes Cartoons—Good black and white cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SAIL HO: The Sports Parade—Just a filler in color. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SNIFFLES BELLS THE CAT: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Very good color cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

WATCH THE BIRDIES: Bob Hope Re-Issues—This is the fifth and last of the Bob Hope re-issue comedies. The kids liked them, but the grown-ups said they were old hat. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Serial

Columbia

SHADOW, THE: Victor Jory, Veda Ann Borg—Very weak and ham acting. An exact duplicate of "The Spider's Web" serial, Columbia. All I can say is pass this one up.—George Caporal, Yale Theatre. Oklahoma City, Okla. Neighborhood patronage.

Pennsylvania Has Model Law for Curbing Bookers

In classifying theatrical agencies and bookers with regular employment agencies, a new bill was passed by the Pennsylvania Legislature, in the closing days of its session, adjourned last week, designed to curb every possible evil or racket associated with the booking of all "live" talent. The bill this week received the signature of Governor Arthur H. James completing its enactment into law. Objections raised earlier by lobbyists concerned over private employment agency restrictions have been satisfied by amendments. As it stands, it is considered the most stringent of any State laws regulating show business and is designed to serve as a model for other States.

Most important, it places the activities and functions of all theatrical bookers under State supervision and inspection, requiring all be licensed at the $100 yearly rate of license fees, and curbing any outsiders from engaging in such activity here without license. The new law makes it a misdemeanor to book talent within State borders without a license, subject to fines of $25 to $250 and imprisonment up to one year.

Orchestras Included

Moreover, the law places band and orchestra bookers under similar restrictions, since the State does not recognize the licensing system of the American Federation of Musicians as a franchise to engage in bookings within the State borders. For the first time, a theatrical agency is defined by law, and the definition was made so all-inclusive that it covers every branch of show business dealing with live talent and performers. While it does not effect the motion picture industry, it does include those houses playing vaudeville.

The law requires that every licensed booker keep a case history on file of every prospective employer, giving information as to his financial stability, character of the place, character of the employer, whether he has been convicted of any law violations, working conditions at the place, and rate of wages. Two references are required and the onus is on the agent to make certain that the case history is factually correct. Such files are to be open to performers at all times upon request.

In addition, applicants for a booking license must post a cash bond of $1,000 and give proof of "moral character" and financial stability. If an agent's license is revoked for "just" cause, he is unable to engage in the booking business for a period of a year, nor can he join the office of any other licensed agent as an associate.

Other provisions of the law make agents liable to fines of $100 to $1,000 and up to a year of imprisonment for booking performers into a "house of ill-repute" or where there is gambling, ignorance being no excuse for violation since the agent assertedly has an accurate case history of every employer with whom he does business; permission must first be secured from the State before an agent can send any unit outside of the State borders, thus limiting the stranding of acts on the road; all contracts must be in triplicate, forms provided by the State, with signatures of employer, agent and performer; such contracts must state salary, transportation, working conditions, and commissions to be charged; contracts are to be filed with the State and no changes are permitted without permission from the State, thus curbing the practice of agents who split actor commissions with an employer.

Kastner Leaves UA's Foreign Sales Staff

Lacy Kastner, European sales manager for United Artists, resigned Wednesday, in New York. He was expected to leave that city at the week's end to join his family on the Coast.

Mr. Kastner arrived in this country two months ago, with a report to the home office on conditions in Europe. He had been stationed in Lisbon during the war, and before that, in London.

He had been with the company's foreign sales force for the past 13 years.

Hoffberg's Russian Film

"Inside Russia," a new feature-length production which was made, the J. H. Hoffberg Productions says, "not for propaganda, but as a fact revealing document of Democracy's new ally," will be released by Hoffberg according to the terms of a contract signed by William M. Pizer, representing the production company, and J. H. Hoffberg, representing the distributors.

William Porter Promoted

William C. Porter, booker at the Monogram exchange in Philadelphia and president of the exchange union in that city, is leaving to become a traveling auditor.

Fishman Joins P. R. C.

Bill Fishman, formerly manager of the Cayuga Theatre, Philadelphia, joined Producers Releasing Corp. in that city as salesman, covering the Philadelphia territory.

Special Matinees Build Attendance

Standard Theatres and Fox houses in various communities in Wisconsin are making bids for child patronage with special matinee shows both on Saturdays and midweek.

An example is a "Long John's" special vacation holiday show presented by Standard's Kenosha in Kenosha on a Wednesday at 1:30 P. M., which included, in addition to "Moon Over Miami" and "Kisses for Breakfast," five extra cartoons, a western, "Rocky Mountain Rangers," and free Lucky Giant suckers to all.

At Manitowoc, Fox's Strand, in connection with a special Saturday matinee show for children, offered two feature pictures, three cartoon comedies, "The Green Archer," other short subjects, free popcorn and a free bicycle. The circuit's Retlaw in Fond du Lac, advertised 25 cents value for only 10 cents and declared, "Here's what you get for your dime: 1. Large box popcorn, 10 cents; 2. Royal-Crown Cola, five cents; 3. Big show, 10 cents. Total value, 25 cents."

Standard's Bay in Green Bay, at a Saturday morning show sponsored by the Community Builders Independent Merchants of Green Bay, presented a children's revue and show of 10 acts on the stage, an hour of cartoons and comedies and a ruler or tablet to every child attending, all for five cents when accompanied by a token from a co-operating merchant.

Glenda: That rat's stood me up for the last time! I thought he'd get tired of all that milk and honey—but he laps it up faster every day. You've been claiming I could do you a lot of good, Slip—and Abbott a lot of harm—what do you want me to do?

LETTERS FROM READERS

Alex Schreiber of Detroit and Associated Theatres, a notably aggressive and articulate independent exhibitor, has taken his pen in hand to discuss with Jimmy Fidler certain aspects of the motion picture and its retail price scales that have been rather in need of just such exposition. With all of his vigour of expression, Mr. Schreiber is interestingly well tempered and poised in his considerations.—T. R.

To Mr. Jimmy Fidler,
Hollywood California:

In Saturday mornings Free Press, you carried an article in your column stating the reason the average working man who earns $125 a month is forced to pay from $1.25 up per week for his picture entertainment, is due to the major companies paying excessive executive salaries and spending so much money on pictures while in production.

I do not agree with you that we are charging high admissions here in Detroit, or 95 per cent of the theatres in these United States, and a lot of losses that the theatre owners are now suffering could be overcome if they charged a higher admission.

The salaried family you mention, that makes $125 per month, nine times out of 10 goes to his neighborhood theatre which is now providing him with double features such as "Strawberry Blonde" and "Buck Private," "Night in Rio" and "Great Dictator," "Sea Wolf" and "Caught in the Draft," "Penny Serenade" and "Footsteps in the Dark," "Road to Zanzibar" and "Kit Carson" for an admission from 15c to 33c, including tax.

Where else can this working family get better entertainment for such a small admission price.

We, here in Detroit, have been urging other theatre owners to raise their admission prices because of the high film rental we have been paying in addition to the increased labor and taxes and general overhead and unless we raise our admission price, I cannot see where we are going to make any reasonable profit on our investment and this during a period of mass employment.

Our first run theatres here in Detroit are getting 55c and 65c including tax and none of our downtown houses, to my knowledge, have been paying off their bond issues or bragging about any terrific business they have been doing. In fact, I have been in their houses many times when there has been more empty seats than paid customers.

When you realize that this same working family is paying anywhere from 10c to 50c admission as an entrance fee to beer gardens and road houses where amateur vaudeville is provided and in an environment not at all comparable with our present-day theatres and then are forced to pay from 10c to 30c for so-called soft drinks, how can anyone say that the most typical theatres do not give their patrons their money's worth?

These same families are also paying at the amusement parks around Detroit 10c and 15c for rides that last from one to three minutes. They spend perhaps two or three hours of an evening and I venture to say are from $2 to $5 poorer when they get out.

There is no other entertainment being sold today as inexpensive and no entertainment as beneficial to its patrons as the motion pictures, and if you think otherwise I am just curious enough to inquire of you where such entertainment exists.

I am not saying that the quality of the pictures produced can not be improved, but that is beside the point of discussion. Just think, for $1 an entire family of two adults and two children can be entertained in comfortable, air-cooled surroundings, sit on soft spring seats, listen to and see drama, comedy, music, the news of the world, yes, and still have a few nickels for candy and confections. The writer is interested in a number of theatres in and about Detroit, and knows whereof he speaks.—Alex Schreiber, Associated Theatres, Inc.

To the Editor of the Herald:

Just to keep the record straight—referring to your article "Long Range Theatre Circuit for Soldiers" in issue of July 26.

Ft. Clark is adjacent to Brackettville. Brackettville is a county seat town where the Army Theatre of Ft. Clark literally ran the town exhibitor out of business some years ago.

The writer opened a theatre in the town against the expressed determination of the Army Theatre management to run me out of business in two months.

I have been here almost seven years and recently completed a new, substantial theatre.

There is a point in the Army operation of theatres that is never mentioned in any article in your your valuable publication.

Army theatres are competitive at this point.

The most amazing thing about Army operation is this:—The admission here is by coupons which cost the buyer $1.40 for ten tickets, Jawbone—which is to say the cost to be taken from the soldiers' pay next payday. But the man who attends the theatre does not get tickets this way. The coupons are in many cases (probably more than I would care to state) sold to one man who draws them to sell so that he can get a few cents in cash. He pays $1.40 for the coupon book, but on credit. Then he finds someone who wishes to attend the theatre and sells the coupon book for (usually) 70c. Thus the actual customer of the post theatre (in this case) attends for an admission of 7c per adult or 3½c per child.

The number of men at Ft. Clark for the last seven years has been about 600 except for a short time last winter when a National Guard regiment was here—then there were 1400 as your article stated. There have been less than 300 men in Ft. Clark for the last two months—reliable information indicates that there will not be any increase before October.—Payne Kilbourn, Westex Theatres, Inc., Brackettville, Texas

Two Producers Set Films for P.R.C.

George R. Batcheller, for Producers Releasing, has closed with B. B. Ray for the production of a feature titled "Dangerous Lady." Neil Hamilton and Douglas Fowley have been signed for the leads.

A deal has also been closed with Martin Mooney and William Beaudine, co-producers, to produce "Mr. Celebrity" for PRC. Mr. Beaudine will direct.

Winn Named Detroit Manager

James Winn, formerly in Kansas City, has been appointed manager of the Warner Brothers branch in Detroit, succeeding Fred E. Norht, resigned.

Gillespie to Dallas

James Gillespie, formerly United Artists exploitation representative in Atlanta, is now company salesman in Dallas, Tex.

Interstate Is Celebrating

"It's Showtime."

With this greeting at the telephone, and with special bookings, special radio programs, increased newspaper lineage, and ballyhoo in trailers, lobbies, and billboards, Interstate Circuit, of Texas, is honoring the 35 years of its existence, and of Karl Hoblitzelle's career in the film industry.

This month marks the 35 years since Mr. Hoblitzelle incorporated Interstate, in Missouri, with the capital mainly coming from his brother, George; and since the circuit started "big-time" operations with erection of the Majestic theatres in Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, and Waco, in Texas.

Associate of Mr. Hoblitzelle in operation of Interstate is Robert, "Bob," O'Donnell.

The slogan, "It's Showtime" is being used wherever possible by the circuit, in the celebration. Newspaper advertisements are headed by it, with the notation of 35 years of business. Billboards in the Southwestern territory herald the same. Programs bear the slogan, over the "Lone Star" insignia of Texas. Newspapers have run leading articles observing remarking the anniversary, and Mr. Hoblitzelle's career. Sunday evening past, and for the remaining Sundays of this month, the circuit has sponsored a special broadcast, over the Texas Quality Network, including stations WFAA, Dallas, KPRC, Houston, WOAI, San Antonio, and WBAP, Fort Worth.

Mr. Hoblitzelle started Interstate Circuit in 1905, after holding an executive post with the St. Louis World's Fair of 1904-05. He began with theatres in Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, Waco, and San Antonio. Then came theatres in Little Rock, Arkansas; Shreveport, Louisiana; and Birmingham, Alabama. Vaudeville was introduced. The circuit grew. Headquarters were first in St. Louis, then in Chicago; finally, Dallas, in 1920, and now.

Moore, Donahue Honored

M. Moore, manager of the Interstate circuit's Worth Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas, and Bob Donahue, the chain's publicity director, have received M-G-M Honor Roll Buttons for their promotion of the distribution company's "Blossoms in the Dust." Highlights of that promotion were a well ballyhooed premiere, with a radio broadcast, and attending notables; distribution of 1,000 roses from the theatre roof, opening night, with guest tickets attached to 50; liberal use of 6-sheets and 3-sheets, window cards, and street-car cards; a pre-premiere banquet.

Republic Promotes Ray

E. L. Ray, formerly shipper, has been promoted to office manager and booker for the Oklahoma City, Okla., Republic exchange succeeding Fred Lawrence, who has resigned to return to Little Rock, Ark., where he is booking for the B. F. Busby chain of theatres.

War Restricts Films, Receipts In Dominions

Wartime conditions continue to affect the film industry in Britain's empire, according to reports from India, Australia, South Africa and the Straits Settlements published last week in the Foreign Commerce Weekly, issued by the United States Department of Commerce.

The production of films in Australia dropped last year from five to four features and the native industry showed little signs of making a place for itself in the world market, or in Britain, until after the restoration of peace, the bulletin reports. Only one Australian film reached the United States in 1940.

U. S. Product Leads

Importation of American-made pictures increased but slightly to 403 pictures from 400 received in 1939. Receipts were reported, higher, however, and Hollywood led all other sources of product. From England in 1940 Australia imported 76 pictures and eight from other countries.

Censors passed 338 of the 400 American films without change, ordered eliminations in 55, and rejected only 10. Forty-two British pictures were passed, 17 passed with eliminations and two rejected. Approximately 125,000 items of imported publicity, such as posters, stills, and press books, passed the censors during the year.

From India the Department of Commerce reports a 20 per cent drop in Calcutta film receipts during March, compared with a year ago. Grosses reached the lowest point in many months. Test blackouts, elimination of electric advertising signs, political tension and "the rather ordinary character of films shown during the month" were cited by Indian exhibitors as causing the slump, the Weekly said.

Native Indian production was assisted by the British government recently when it intervened with the Iraq censors to reduce curbs on Indian pictures, which had been banned as "legendary" and "magic" types. The report stated that modern Indian pictures can do two to three times as much as English language films in Iraq.

In Bengal the government this year allotted $60,000 rupees for the production of educational films. Calcutta producers will make 16 and 35 mm. films on public health, industries, agriculture, the cooperative movement, temperance, education, irregation, road building and other subjects. The pictures are reported to be very successful in instructing the uneducated native populace.

Successful application of films to military training is reported from the Union of South Africa, where the government has organized a Union Defense Films Unit to prepare motion pictures on aviation, infantry, artillery, and technical army subjects. They are used for training the Dominion's recruits. Recent field manuevers were recorded in color film for a study of tactics in the scenic South African country.

Straits Settlement censors are reported to have banned 10 motion pictures in the first quarter of 1941. Seven from the United States were rejected for excessive gunplay and gangster themes.

18 Different War Taxes, Restrictions in Canada

Theatre men of Canada have become hardened veterans of the war. Scarcely a week passes without some unexpected situation bobbing up to wipe off time-honored routine but the exhibitors are taking developments in their stride. After practically two years of war's complications, the case of the Canadian trade can be regarded as a guide for the exhibitors of the United States when—well, when everybody admits that the Republic is actually at war.

Amusement operators of the Dominion have survived the following, thus far:

Ban on the erection of any more theatres.

Restriction of remodelling jobs to a limited cost of $2,500.

Ban on the installation of equipment costing in excess of $5,000.

Federal amusement tax of 20% on the gross receipts of performances.

Permanent adoption of Daylight Saving time year round.

Comprehensive restrictions on the sale and use of gasoline.

Ban on the installation of new oil-heating equipment.

Blackout rehearsals in large cities and suburbs.

Heavy increases in personal and corporation income taxes and profits levies.

National Defense Tax up to seven per cent on wages and salaries with few exemptions.

Rising cost of coal and other supplies for maintenance.

Added work in connection with Federal tax reports and returns.

Withdrawal of employes for enlistment in the armed forces.

Disruptions of staff through compulsory military training and service.

Scarcity of potential ushers because of attractive munitions work.

Adoption of Federal unemployment insurance scheme for wage-earners under $2,000.

Important broadcasts by government leaders of Britain, the U.S. and Canada.

Calls for co-operation from all sides for war charities and government campaigns.

These are the features which have either made a difference for everyday operation of the theatre or have interfered with regular performances, regular attendance or physical expansion of the business.

The ban on new theatre construction undoubtedly has had an effect upon rival chain developments; the business has been under a severe strain through government levies and war taxes; patronage has been shot on blackout nights; previously, daylight saving in the summer months caused a drop in attendance but now its influence is felt all year; broadcasts by Churchill and Roosevelt have hit the theatres; the new Federal tax, which is virtually a levy on admissions, has made it difficult for theatre proprietors to adjust the boxoffice scale to meet rising costs of operation; the recent government order restricting the sale of gasoline is expected to affect attendance at downtown theatres and the tax report nuisance consumes time that could be devoted to the promotion of business. Yet, withal, the Canadian exhibitor has demonstrated that he can take it.

Already some of war's influences are being felt by theatre owners in the United States but they are not in it up to their necks like the Canadian exhibitors. But if the latter can keep his head above the surface and insist that the water's fine for swimming, others unquestionably can do it.

Montreal Restrictions Hit Tourist Trade

in Montreal

Montreal's recent sudden switch-over to the mode bleu has fashioned an enormous, disappointing picture for visiting American tourists. A provincial decree affecting local niteries, blocking liquor sales after 12:00 midnight, and forcing them closed at 2:00 a.m. has put the damper on local business and quieted the enthusiasm of visiting trade.

Increased week-end minimums and the enforced purchase of a forty-cent meal to accompany each bout of refreshment have combined in action that has already forced several night spots out of summer running, and threatens the profitable operation of many others.

The forty-cent meal provision particularly, has driven a good percentage of regular patrons away from the drink and entertainment establishments in quest of other amusement, and the motion picture house readily fills the gap.

Montreal exhibitors declare that, although the tourist season has not yet reached its height, a small percentage of daily receipts is found to be in American currency, proving that U. S. funds are being spent in Montreal, and that exhibitors are getting their share of the windfall. Foreign exchange is what counts here, with the ten per cent premium providing a lift over hot weather and tax burdens.

Newspaper Urges 'Movie Vacations'

"Don't sell the movies short," the Chicago Daily Calumet urged its readers in an editorial, "Vacationland—the Movies." "They are still the best care and trouble chasers for the money, especially now, when we need them more than ever."

The editorial, on July 18th, was written by John Burhorn, former field representative of Indiana Illinois Theatres, Inc., who is now advertising manager for the Calumet. Mr. Burhorn won the Quigley showmanship Award in 1939.

"To escape from thinking about the uncertainties of the future, from war headlines and the depressing daily bulletins, the relieve the mind and enjoy a period of respite from worry and anxiety", the editorial read, "seems to be more difficult from day to day. Did you ever watch a crowd of peole leaving one of our local movie theatres? Happy, relaxed, smiling, they seem to have found a solution to this seemingly difficult problem of seeking diversion.

"If the picture was a good comedy, you see them amicably discussing the antics of their favorite comedian. An action picture will have thrilled them and given them a new and different slant on life. A love story may have brought tears to their eyes or awakened fond recollections, but—watch their faces closely. You will see that they have enjoyed a few hours of relaxation and mental diversion that has put them in a frame of mind to send them back to their daily duties tomorrow with renewed courage and enthusiasm. It's been a complete change for them and the term "A Movie Vacation" is not misnamed."

The Calumet has been running a series of articles on "Movie Vacations" and has been making "an earnest effort to back up our local theatre men, whose business it is to provide a source of diversion that to their patrons has proven a sure method of getting away from every day troubles and cares at little cost."

Another reason, the editorial pointed out, "why the motion picture screen is deserving of support" is that, "dedicated to bring happiness and recreation to millions of show goers, wherever a national need demands it, the medium of the screen is given freely by its owners to promote the sales of governmental securities, to deliver important national messages or to raise local and city-wide finances."

Benjamin Organizes Midwest Circuit

The American Enterprises, Inc., with William Benjamin, president, has been organized in Kansas City, Mo., to form a circuit of theatres in that territory. The first, to open early in August, is the Dunbar in Wichita, Kan., now under construction, and will be used for Negro patronage exclusively. Another theatre contemplated but which is as yet not under construction will be for white patrons.

Mr. Benjamin plans to acquire other theatres which will be completely reconditioned. He also announced that he will continue his duties as vice-president and manager of the Monogram exchange in Kansas City, and intends to have Monogram product as part of the program for the opening of the first theatre.

Independents Want Duals!—Chadwick

Independent circuits are continuing to espouse double bills, I. E. Chadwick, president of the Independent Motion Picture Producers Association, said last Friday at a meeting of the group in Hollywood. The IMPPA has been campaigning for maintaining the double feature policy.

A proposal was introduced that directors working on pictures costing $15,000 or less be paid $600, and $800 for pictures costing between $15,000 and $25,000. The association is also seeking a reduction in the cost of viewing fees from the Hays office, which is charging $100 a picture.

Association members will be charged $10 a picture for dues, with a $100 initiation fee for new members joining after August 1st.

Barham with Intermountain

Tracy Barham, general manager Northio theatres, Inc., Cincinnati, left July 8th for Salt Lake City, where he took over management of Intermountain Theatres. Both companies are Paramount subsidiaries. Succeeding Mr. Barham in Cincinnati for the present is George Planck, formerly city manager, at Marion, Ohio, who is succeeded by W. O. James, moved from the Paramount, at Fremont, Ohio. William Yeakle, city manager, at Danville, Ky., was transferred to Fremont, and Richard Peffley, who managed the Gordon, in Middletown, Ohio, went to Danville. Marian Tasso, assistant at the Paramount, in Middletown, was given charge of the Gordon.

Metro Office Moves

The Cincinnati branch of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has moved its offices into its new building, almost directly opposite its former quarters in the Film Exchange Building on Central Parkway.

Variety Clubs Set New Events

Variety Clubs are furthering plans for summer social and charity work. In Minneapolis, the Twin City Variety will sponsor a baseball game August 21st for the Milk Fund, its own philanthropy. Ben Blotcky is chief barker.

The club will take over the Minneapolis-Louisville game. During 1940, the club paid for 75,331 quarts of milk for needy children. The club has a 120,000 quart quota for 1941.

A screen and stage show will feature the second annual Kansas City Variety Club picnic to be held August 11th at Swope Park Golf Course. A golf tournament will begin at 10 A.M. There will be games, contests and dancing. Net proceeds will be donated to charities.

More than 1,500 children have been given summer vacations at Camp O'Connell by the Pittsburgh Variety Club, Harry Kalmine has announced. The local tent will hold a charity picnic August 21st at West View Park for further support of the camp.

In Washington, D. C., Variety Club is completing arrangements for a "roundup night" August 21st at the Willard Hotel on the eve of the golf tournament at Manor Country Club. Hardie Meakin is chief barker.

A tent of Variety Club of Texas was inaugurated at headquarters in the Texas State Hotel in Houston, last week. Paul Short, chief barker of the Texas Variety Club, and R. J. O'Donnell, national first assistant chief barker, were on hand from Dallas.

Disney, Iwerks Aid Canadian War Films

Walt Disney Studios and U. B. Iwerks have volunteered to assist the Canadian Government with film production in connection with Canada's war effort, it was announced in Ottawa by Hon. J. T. Thorson, Chairman of the National Film Board.

Mr. Disney has offered his own cooperation and that of his studio staff. Mr. Iwerks and Robert Carr, a Disney studio representative, are in Ottawa from Hollywood to discuss two film projects with government officials.

Warner Changes

Homer Hisey, who has been branch manager for Warner Brothers in Memphis, Tenn., is on leave of absence and his place has been filled by W. O. Williamson, Jr., formerly manager in Kansas City. Russell Borg has been transferred from Omaha to manage the Kansas City branch, and Jack Shumow, former salesman in Chicago, has been promoted to the Omaha managership.

More MGM Promotions In Sales Forces

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer reported last weekend ten additional promotions among its field personnel, which brings the total of recent advancements, from within the ranks, to 129.

Foster B. Gauker, former office manager in Indianapolis, was added to the sales staff there. Succeeding Mr. Gauker is Valmar Klaiber, promoted from first booker at Buffalo. Myron Gross moved from second booker to succeed Mr. Klaiber and student booker Harry Buxbaum was advanced to the Gross post.

In Albany, former poster clerk Claire Avery became third booker. At Pittsburgh, Allan Douglas was promoted from poster clerk to booking clerk, James McGuinness from shipper to poster clerk, Joseph Stack from night shipper to shipper, Allan Tolley from assistant shipper to night shipper, and Raymond Nesbit from day inspector to assistant shipper.

Republic Deal Closed

United California Theatres of San Francisco, has signed for Republic's entire season program, it has been announced. James R. Grainger, president of the company, and Sidney Weisbaum, branch manager, represented Republic. R. A. McNeil and M. Naify closed the deal for the circuit.

Continue Chance Game Operation

An order granted by Justice David Diamond of the Buffalo, N. Y., supreme court, assuring operating of Bingo during the summer in two theatres and an amusement hall without interference brought prompt criticism of the corporation counsel's handling the case from Dr. Littleton E. H. Smith, crusading preacher. Justice Diamond continued temporary injunctions restraining the police from interfering with the game at the Old Vienna, the Academy theatre and Richter's Hall, pending trial in the fall of indictments against the operators.

The Connecticut legislature has passed a measure to permit the playing of chance games without annual renewal of local option approval in towns where it has been played for two successive years. Exhibitors of the state were opposed to the games legislation, which permits "charitable" organizations to operate games, and which are a serious factor of competition for the theatres.

Harry K. Smythe, former theatre operator and exploitation man, has established offices on film row in Chicago for the purpose of reviving the Bingo game in Chicago and surrounding territory theatres with United States defense stamps and bonds as prizes.

Numerically and financially, chance game parties in Cincinnati took a drop in June compared with the previous month's figures. Reports based on returns of sponsors, show 234 parties, with a total attendance of 283,143. Gross receipts were $194,881.35, and prizes, $46,798, leaving a net of $148,083.35 to the sponsoring organizations. The average net cost per player was 52.3 cents.

The city also reports that there were 262 chance game parties in May, with a total attendance of 299,932. The gross was $205,459.66, and prizes totaled $49,112.45, leaving a net of $155,347.21 to the sponsoring organizations, according to figures of Eugene T. Weatherly, chief of police, based on reports of sponsors to whom permits were issued. Average net cost per player was 52 cents.

These figures compare with the 222 parties in April, attended by 234,175 persons. Gross during that month was $164,337.15, prizes, $44,088.04, and net, $120,249.11. Average net cost per player was 51.3 cents.

In Butte, Mont., the Rialto, American and Fox theatres, all of the Fox Intermountain circuit, have discontinued weekly cash giveaways in compliance with an edict of John W. Bonner, state attorney general.

Wisconsin exhibitors who, several months ago, protested an announcement by the state tax commission that bank night expenditures could not be deducted from state income taxes, have now been informed by Elmer E. Barlow, tax commissioner, that such deductions will be allowed.

At the time of the original announcement, exhibitors pointed out that bank night was ruled legal by the state attorney general's office until a decision by the state supreme court approximately a year ago, when it was ruled a lottery and after which, theatres dropped the games.

In the light of the theatres' action in discontinuing the game following the high court's ruling, the expenditures are not taxable, Mr. Barlow ruled.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

NEW SEASON

As do other forward-looking merchandisers, theatremen these days are already up to their elbows in plannings for Fall grosses. This year there is more urgent reason for it. And that would be on account of the new selling plan. The readjustment of procedure will be successful only if exhibition displays keener and more aggressive showmanship, say distribution heads. Which, if so, throws most of the job, as always, into the lap of the manager.

It would then be in keeping here to set before the perennially harassed theatreman any extra ammunition that may aid his "shooting war" for bigger Fall business. Thus, on following pages are detailed ideas to make up a cross-section of what members have done in the past to start their Autumn bookings "in high".

The surest way to get folks back to the box office is to go after them. New season, new pictures, new expectations should be encouraging enough to bring every theatreman up on his toes to spread the word.

THEY'RE NEVER TOO OLD

This is directed somewhat at the member who told us about a very nifty publicity stunt which was set down in one of the late issues. The Round Tabler noted that it was an "oldie" and that he had reached way down in the bag for the slant.

Well, our answer to that one goes for other theatremen as well, and we say hell's bells, what difference does it make how venerable the idea if the thing clicks. The stunt broke for a lot of sweet publicity that informed a lot of people most profitably about the attraction, where and when it was playing. That's the general purpose of a plant, isn't it?

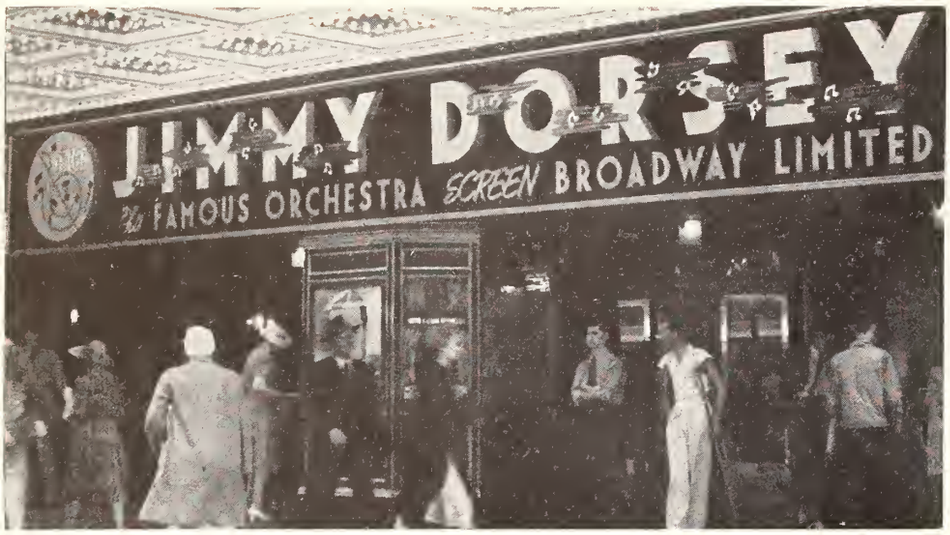
Let's all lay off the business of tagging a gageroo with wrinkles, since the wrinkles can always be ironed out by deft hands and an application of streamlined showmanship. That's being done every day in the year and more power to the boys who know how to do it.

Quick endorsement of last week's editorial on the values of personnel encouragement may be taken from three representative exploitations reported in this issue. They come from Managers N. H. Rubin, of Loew's Poli-Bijou, New Haven, Robert Busch, of Warners' Jeffery, Chicago, and from Marlowe Conner, of Warners' Sheboygan, Sheboygan, Wis. In each instance, their assistants were fully credited by the Round Tablers for the showmanship, as is duly noted.

Theatremen with the proper perspective realize the considerable returns to be had from the helping hand. Not only is this reflected in the actual grosses, but also in the added home-office prestige for the manager wise enough to regard the building of manpower as an important part of the job.

SELLING IT TO THE ARMY

In his position of theatre officer at the Indiantown Gap Military Reservation, in Pennsylvania, Captain Ken Grimes is aiming at his soldier patronage with the same effective showmanship utilized by the Warnerman in his theatre operations. This is noted in the various exploitation devices forwarded by the Round Tabler, among which is a calendar-program found much in demand.



Round Tablers assigned to theatre posts in military service have an unexcelled opportunity to do a job in exposing our new army to the influence of showmanship. The selectees come from all over, quite a number from places where there are no picture shows and others from situations where theatre advertising and exploitation is hardly a box-office factor.

THE theatreman's eagerness to get in line, the ease and dispatch with which he lends his good offices and his showmanship to communal activities is currently emphasized in the multitudinous reports on "Aluminum Matinees". In all parts of the nation, managers contributed theatres and services. In many instances they took complete charge. Their inspiration had much to do with the final fat returns.

Round Table In Pictures

(Above) Animation for the front sign on the Jimmy Dorsey date at Loew's Palace, Washington reported by Dan Terrell had the bars of music moving up and down and the music notes moving in different directions.

Ahead of Sam Fitzsimmon's "Double Date," opening at Schine's Strand, in Van Wert, Ohio, attractive girl toured downtown area distributing promoted candy dates. Chest banner featured tiein copy.

Street ballyhoo arranged by J. Calero Paz, Republic's distributor in Peru for opening of "Fu Manchu" at seven Lima theatres featured sandwichmen completely covered with Chinese costumes. Sound truck followed men, loud speaker announcing theatres and playdates.

In advance of "Tom, Dick and Harry" at the W. & V. Senate Theatre, in Harrisburg, Pa., Round Tabler Bob Sidman created novel front, box-office and side panels, converted as illustrated, into simulated house fronts. Peering from behind windows were cutout figures of Ginger Rogers with each of the male leads.

'Kartoon Karnival' Klicks for Harris

Unusual in that it is pointed also for the attention of adults and found by the theatreman to be distinctly "what the doctor ordered," is the weekly "Kartoon Karnival" held on Fridays and Saturdays at the Glendale, Fox West Coast subsequent run in Glendale, Cal., and reported by Manager Ed Harris. For the pleasure of the younger trade, Harris combines a cartoon coloring contest, the appeal of which is firmly established.

Cartoons are booked from all companies with the shorts, of course, featured in addition to the rest of the screen program. The coloring contest is put on every third week which, according to the theatreman, "acts as an exploitation — publicity-advertising campaign and entails no selling expense for the theatre." The contest further receives fullest cooperation from the schools, which before closing for the summer distributed coloring pages to all of the children. Women's club also voiced their approval.

Leading stores were also tied in weekly co-op page with each advertiser sponsoring a cartoon character carried in outline in the ad for coloring purposes. The carnival is also given full attention in the lobby displays, where Ed has been successful in securing original drawings from the cartoon studios featuring cutouts of such familiar characters as Minnie Mouse, Pluto and others.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Brien Promotes Baker On "Strawberry" Cakes

Through tieup arranged by Lige Brien at the Belmar, in Pittsburgh, for "Strawberry Blonde," local baker featured a "Strawberry" shortcake, Brien also promoting 25 dozen of these confections for giveaway two days ahead of opening. Heralds, entire cost of which were met by the merchant, were distributed by their drivers before opening with appropriate tiein copy. Another promotion was that arranged with local Westmore agent who donated "Strawberry Blonde" lipsticks, druggist tied in on the stunt, featuring the giveaway in window display. Drug fountain also featured a "Blonde" sundae.

BELL TIES PROGRAMS TO NATIONAL DRIVE

The government's current efforts to discourage waste of gasoline was tied in to the advantage of a recent week's programs at the Arcade, in Ft. Myers, Fla., by Manager Frank H. Bell through the medium of a small folder.

Copy on the cover read: "Suggestions for cooperating with the government in its program to reduce the consumption of gasoline for national defense." Pictures were detailed inside with banner line across top continuing with "Here's how. Bring the whole family to the air-conditioned Arcade to enjoy these fine summer entertainment features."

TRIPS TO SUN VALLEY

Round Tablers already are displaying mounting interest in the announcement by Twentieth Century-Fox of a theatreman's contest for ten two-week all-expense trips to Sun Valley for the five best campaigns combining local promotion of "Sun Valley Serenade" and the famed Idaho resort. Contest, open to managers and admen in the United States playing the picture, begins August 29 and winds up on November 15, 1941. Winners will have the choice of taking their trips in summer or winter.

Special press book which is being sent to managers lists details of the many tieups arranged by Twentieth Century-Fox with the Union Pacific Railroad and Sun Valley. It is not required that campaigns be limited to the pressbook, as exploitations originated by the entrants are encouraged.

Round Tablers Credit Assistants for Campaigns

Campaigns credited to their assistant managers in Reports by Round Tablers include a "John Doe" hunt put over by assistant M. J. Gorman in the absence of vacationing Manager Marlowe Conner at the Sheboygan, Sheboygan, Wis., wherein seven merchants contributed cash prizes, stores also taking co-op ads to further the stunt. The awards were given to those finding a "John Doe" in any of the participating stores and by identifying an article of apparel which he was wearing, in this case a black sash. A designated evening half hour was allowed for "Doe" to make purchases in the cooperating stores; during this time local radio station broadcast the hunt, keeping posted by special spotters who watched "Doe" as he went from store to store. Gorman had a large Buick properly bannered waiting in front of the theatre to take the winner direct to the radio station where he was interviewed and later introduced on the stage where the cash was awarded.

Reported by N. H. Rubin at Loew's Poli-Bijou, in New Haven, was student assistant manager Herbert Coleman's gag of boy seated atop stepladder reading a love magazine while sucking on a lollypop and swinging a baby rattle. Copy at base of ladder read: "Not crazy with the heat, just Love Crazy. Starts at Loew's Poli-Bijou Wednesday."

At Warners' Jeffrey, in Chicago, a revolving turntable used for "Dr. Kildare" date was credited by Manager Robert Busch to his assistant, Ervin Sedlack. Motor supplied animation with reverse side carrying additional copy on coming feature.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Holds Mid-week Matinees During Vacation Period

To give impetus to his proposed Wednesday matinees for kids during vacation-time, Irving Cantor at Schine's Palace, in Syracuse ran a contest in local dailies offering guest tickets to those submitting best letters on "Why I think the Palace should have Wednesday matinees during July and August."

With local businessmen of the community sponsoring a contest to pick the queen of his immediate neghborhood, Cantor made arrangements for the candidates to appear on his stage and be personally introduced. Girls paraded to theatre for the event, ballot boxes were available in lobby, winner being honored at carnival grounds and presented with cash prizes and merchandise.

Harris Gives "Drive-In" Gala Campaign Opening

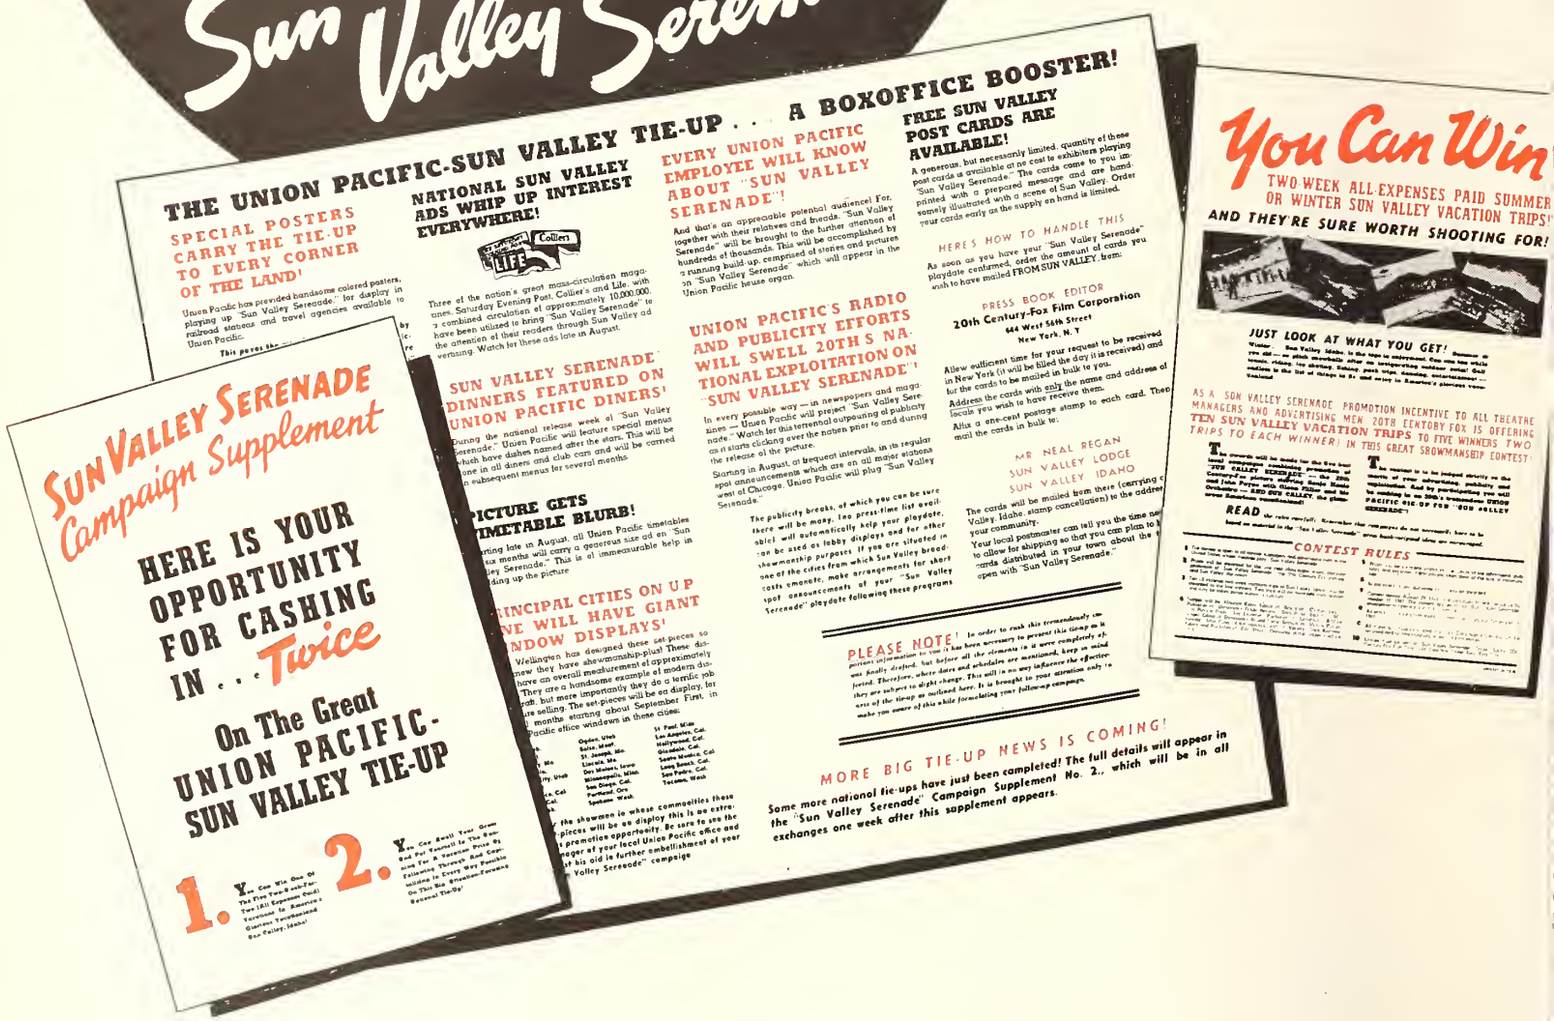
For the new Drive-in-Theatre, in Buffalo, Round Tabler Milt Harris put over a preopening night campaign, which was given over to a mammoth benefit performance for the local chapter of the USO. Tickets were sold for a dollar each to leading citizens and a tremendous parade was held from the City Hall to the theatre, which is on the road leading from Buffalo to Niagara Falls. A temporary platform was erected directly under the giant screen, where the Mayor greeted the audience and dedicated the new theatre.

Among the various stunts planned by Harris will be a plan, whereby they will present about three or four acts while it is still daylight and then go directly into the screen show. In addition, Harris is designating a night a week for each state in the Union, starting with Alabama, all cars in Buffalo that day bearing specified state license plate will be invited as guests of the management.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Street Stunts Aid on "Three Cockeyed Sailors"

For the Seattle premiere of "Three Cockeyed Sailors" at the Liberty Theatre, Leroy V. Johnson and C. C. Chellew report breaking every paper in town with art and stories for days ahead. Radio coverage included announcements over KRSC and KXR and street ballys included professional clowns dressed as sailors working downtown area and hotel lobbies, in addition to girls in sailor suits distributing heralds. Entire staff was dressed in keeping and display cards were planted in naval training station and main waiting room of dock.



NEW FASHION COLOR NAMED FOR "SUNDOWN"

As a direct promotion by United Artists for Walter Wanger's "Sundown," the title has been established as a new color fashion in fall accessories. This will be featured in department stores and specialty shops throughout the country to coincide with the picture's release.

POLICY ANNOUNCEMENT

Inauguration of what the copy termed a "most unusual new summer policy" at the Bonham, Fairbury, Neb., was announced in a four-page folder, which according to Jimmie Redmond, proved a "sensation." In addition to newspaper attention, house-to-house distribution was undertaken to excellent results. Much was made of "comfort in dress," among other features offered, all of which are here set down, quoting from the folder.

"We will not endeavor to offer you any better pictures than have been offered our patrons the past few months, because every week we give our public the very best in entertainment from every major film company in the United States.

"We invite our patrons to attend the theatre in cool and comfortable clothes. Why dress up to go to the movies, a place where comfort is being put first for its patrons? Slacks and playsuits are as common in the theatre today as at the picnic.

"A theatre club, known as the Bonham Theatre Kiddie Club, has been organized for the summer and fall months to entertain all children between the ages of 3 and 13 years. The meetings of this club are held every Saturday morning at 9:45. At each of the meetings the children are given a small favor; contests and games are held on the stage. Children with talent are given an opportunity to demonstrate their ability. Safety is taught. The club is organized with officers and regulations the same as any other club. Parents should encourage their children to take part in this children's organization.

"A new special summer price for the young Miss and Mister between the ages of 12 and 16 years will start on July 2nd. Young folks in this age classification will be admitted to the theatre at a new low price of 20c for our Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday attractions. For the youth who finds spending money hard to get, here is your opportunity to see two of the best theatre program changes at prices you can afford.

"A personal call will be made on every family in our city by a Bonham Theatre representative to endeavor to find all ways and means to better please our public and give them what they want in theatre entertainment.

"A Special reduced price guest ticket to the Majestic Theatre will be given to all patrons attending the Bonham Theatre on Fridays and Saturdays."

"We invite you to be our guest on your birthday. If you have a birthday coming up on one of these hot summer days, celebrate it with us. We invite you to see a show free with the payment of the Federal defense tax.

To encourage patrons to come comfortably dressed, an introductory offer of low admission was offered to those clad in slacks, playsuits, house dresses, overalls. This was plugged further with a double-truck centered around the above policy copy with the co-op ads taken by men's and women's stores which pointed to "cool clothes for summer wear." The price reduction for the 12's to 16's proved an immediate box-office builder and parent reaction to the kid club proved highly encouraging.

Wheeler Patrons Are "Caught in the Draft"

Teaser for advance on "Caught in the Draft" at the Pace Theatre, in Gordon, Neb., as used by Manager Herschel A. Wheeler consisted of calling telephone subscribers. When party answered, cashier would say: "Hello, Mr. or Mrs. Black, you are caught in the draft, your number is 10. If your number is posted in the theatre boxoffice, it will entitle you to two passes to see Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour in," etc.

Local Kiddie Dance Revue Held at Theatre by Fulton

In conjunction with his regular feature attraction, Bob Fulton at the Paramount Theatre, in Waterloo, Ia., presented a kiddie dance recital on his stage recently, talent supplied by local dancing school. Advance ticket sale was handled by all mothers of the 150 children participating. Since this revue on previous years was always held at the school auditorium, Bob snared it away from there and advertised the tieup widely. Papers came through with generous stories and Fulton secured additional publicity since he was named new president of the Lions Club.

Promotes Blooms for "Blossoms"

To usher in his date on "Blossoms in the Dust" at the Schine Paramount, in Glens Falls, N. Y., Round Tabler Bill Burke promoted roses which were given to the first 500 women attending opening matinee. Lucky number imprinted paper bags were used at local five and dime store, bag carrying cut of Garson and Pidgeon.

Aluminum Shows Aid Nation Drive

Judged by reports from all over the nation to this department, Round Tablers have done their part, and more, in collecting aluminum through a series of special matinees. Various devices were employed to advance the cause as is here noted in the outlines of what was done by theatremen in the different sectors.

In Wilmington, Ohio, for instance, Manager C. Arnold Skelly, long-experienced in community drives, was appointed chairman of the local and county collection. Working with his opposition, the Murphy, the New Lamax theatre manager, worked out a series of successful matinees. Publicity was in keeping and also carried over the wire services was a street stunt wherein those turning in aluminum pieces were allowed to take a "pot shot" at a Hitler effigy hung within a large cage which held the metal contributions. Stunt was covered by Universal newsreel which also made shots of Boy Scouts collecting from door to door.

Most popular spot in Belen, New Mex., on the local aluminum drive was the downtown "bull-pen" for collection greatly encouraged by the offer of Carmon Phillips of free admission to the theatre in exchange for articles of this metal. The articles so contributed proved to be more than half of the entire collection with Phillips' assist lending a number of page-one stories. Resultant buildup helped maintain a good day's receipts, Carmon reports.

Civic Organizations Cooperate

Also found important enough for page-one for three consecutive days was the matinee put on by "Kal" Kalberer at Switow's Indiana, Washington, Ind., the Round Tabler working closely with the county officials in charge. Packed houses were the result with crowds gathered out front to watch the unusual doings. The same reception is reported by Hiram M. Meeks who put on his show at the Malco Ritz, Russellville, Ark., in cooperation with the American Legion. Malco-man J. R. MacEachron, City Manager in Jackson, Tenn., worked directly with the Veterans of Foreign Wars for his show, the city giving permission for the Round Tabler to post signs on all sides of the square announcing the event. Here, too, newspaper publicity was generous. In New Haven, Lou Schaefer's Paramount theatre matinee was noted editorially in the local press which also carried lengthy stories on the event. That the aluminum matinee was not confined to the smaller situations is indicated in the cooperation of the New York Paramount where Bob Weitman tied in on the final day of Mayor La Guardia's drive by accepting pots, pans and other aluminum material as admission to "Caught in the Draft" for a three-hour afternoon period.

Keene's "Night" Contest

In connection with "So Ends Our Night," Lionel Keene at the Kirkwood Theatre, in Atlanta, Ga., offered cash and guest tickets to those submitting best letters on how they would like their night to end. To attract youngsters to his "Junior G-Men" serial, Keene instructed kids to retain cards distributed at each chapter. If attending all 10 and presenting complete set of cards at boxoffice, free admissions were given.

PRE-TESTED "NEW SEASON" BOXOFFICE PROMOTIONS

AS in past years, campaigns are now in the making to bow in the month of September as the formal opening of the new season. Elaborate promotions are planned to coincide with the coming releases of new product, to signalize to the public the advent of "bigger 'n better" pictures. Scheduled for use in various sectors are adaptations of successful exploitations which have served well for previous season openings. For the information of theatremen seeking additional ways and means to sell these "happy tidings," outlines of representative campaigns, taken from the files, are here set down.

The Fall season of 1940 was marked with "Laff Weeks," "Fun Weeks" and "Happiness Weeks." The Famous Players Canadian managers did very well with special bookings of comedy features surrounded with light entertainment shorts, band acts, cartoons, etc. Nothing of a serious nature was included. Trick laff trailers, ads and posters were provided. Managers were encouraged to use comedy gags in their exploitations, make radio tieins and other hookups in keeping.

Laff Festivals Favored

Marlowe Conner put on a "Laff Week" with such didoes as a tank of "laughing gas" in the lobby for "sourpusses" who could not "crack a chuckle" during the week. The Warnerman distributed privilege cards allowing patrons to laugh as much as they pleased. Copy invited men to check pants, belts, and loosen ties, women to check corsets with the maid.

Bill Burke's "Week" led off with a laugh trailer with shots of coming attractions highlighted with a laugh record dubbed into the sound track. Bannered barrels on street corners concealed small victrolas playing laugh records. Radio was tied in with a prize contest on "why I think laughing is healthy." Water carnival was crashed with an offer of loving cup for the funniest bathing suit.

"Back-to-School" Ads Aid

Last year, Schine's "Cheerful Show Season" also incorporated a "Happiness" theme, with Mayors proclaiming the event and merchants tied in to put on "Happiness Sales" with co-op ads furnished by the circuit. Newspaper contests included a "My greatest happiness" angle, open to readers, and photo slant for long-married couples asked to give their "happiness" recipe. Via the papers, the Schiners offered prizes for plans to make happier cities. Voting contests were put on for the happiest mailman, policeman, fireman, etc.

"Kal" Kalberer gathered a lot of returns with a combination "Back to School"—"Back to the Movies" Greater Movie Season drive which had the added weight of merchant cooperation to put it over. Local paper made up cuts and slugs for campaign and co-op advertising and the Mayor's proclamation was featured.

The big merchant cooperation by Kalberer was a "New Movie Treasure Hunt," stores coming in with ads and window displays. Stills of stars in coming pictures were planted in the contest windows, stills mounted uniformly on cards carrying contest and theatre copy. Paper carried stories on the coming bookings and contest required that stills be coupled with pictures in which the stars would appear, plus mention of merchant's window in which each still was found. To make it easier for the judges, contestants were also asked to submit 50-word opinion on which of the new pictures they felt would be outstanding.

"Employees Weeks" Draw

Extended term passes were offered last year in the slogan contest put on by the Loew Poli New England division. Contest was tied in with the dailies in each situation, readers invited to submit slogan ideas plus 25-word statements on why they selected the slogans. Five best entries were awarded prizes among the 3,500 judged. Full-page layouts devoted to the new season product with by-line stories by J. R. Vogel, Oscar Doob and Harry Shaw planted by the managers in each situation to build greater interest.

In Cedar Rapids, Iowa, it was "Cheer Up and Fun Festival Week" that clicked for the Tri-States theatres. Organized by Hal Sheridan with the cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce, merchants bureau, and civic heads, the "Week" was widely plugged. Street parade was featured, bannered open cars carrying models representing each store. Marchers in costume displayed banners advertising the coming pictures.

Relatives, friends and other well-wishers of Earle Bailey's personnel added to the grosses on the Harris manager's "Employes Week," wherein each of the staff served as manager for one day. In exchange, each day, Bailey took over the duties of the employe. Each "manager" worked out his own campaigns with the daily ads announcing the day's headman and lobby carrying photo of the incumbent. Publicity was in keeping and special electric sign on front of the house plugged the event.

Local clubwomen were organized by M. E. Ferrara to sponsor individual dates on coming product. Each of the top socialites invited to serve was asked to honor one program, the picture and sponsor's name coupled in the advertising and publicity. The idea was fattened with sponsors' invited to give theatre party to four friends to "here" picture. Material about the pictures for club discussion was also made available.

Annual Baby Parade by Warner Bob Kessler is a yearly feature, with prizes given for three best in prettiest, funniest, fattest classes, prize twins and and prize floats. High school girls act as hostesses. Procession formed in back of theatre marches twice around theatre block, passing judges stand. Arrangements start a month ahead with instructions to mothers and initial advertising. Dairies leave contest heralds with all neighborhood deliveries, and stores show prizes. Board of Health examines all entrants at local station, and in addition to main prizes, Kessler also promotes samples of "baby" products for mothers, cartoon books for all youngsters, etc.

Chamber of Commerce Cooperates

Comprehensive Greater Season campaign in Minneapolis a few years back, in addition to the newspaper advertising, radio programs and general posting, had the Minnesota Amusement managers working individual zones of the city, selling coming attractions to plants, factories, stores, etc. Theatre parties, block tickets and other devices were used. Campaign was plugged at picnics, band concerts, boat races. Conventions were contacted and induced to include theatre parties on their programs.

Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce was promoted to circularize membership stressing value of the "Season," letters including all circuit theatres in the city and coming pictures, with members urged to see as many as possible. Papers plugged the event with page-one boxes and ads on classified page.

"Happy New Movie Year" Attracts

Standard Theatres of Oklahoma City went for a "Happy New Movie Year," executed by then circuit ad head, Pat Patchen. Newspaper promotion was featured with color pages headed by slogan carrying scene and star cuts in color. Cooperating merchants were listed below under a "Best Wishes" head. Trailers carried typical New Year music and sound effects, lobby and front decorations were in keeping. All incoming phone calls were answered with "Happy New Movie Year."

"Back-to-School Jamboree" was the title Louie Charninsky gave to his promotion some years back when the two winners of an essay contest on "Why I want to go back to school" were allowed to act as one-day

ROSE DEVISES "HATE" CONTEST

For atmospheric buildup on his double horror show "Man-Made Monster" and "Horror Island," at Loew's Poli Globe, in Bridgeport, Harry Rose hooked one of the dailies to what he termed an "Unpopularity Contest," wherein on ballots carried in the paper, readers were invited to set down the names of someone they hated the most.

Since it was a gag with no prizes given, contestants' names were not required. To make it more important, Rose had a ballot box in the lobby to finish up the stunt which the paper gave a six-day run.

manager and assistant at the theatre. Platform of "thrones" for the winners were erected in the lobby wherein radio interviews with the temporary theatremen were broadcast. Special show was also offered with students parading to theatre where gifts were distributed.

The same slant also worked for Roy Hunt and Les Solberg, who hooked merchants to a series of special matinees to stimulate a "Back-to-School Merchandising Event." Morning shows for the youngsters were featured, the stores paying for the tickets distributed by the merchants to children applying in person. Local paper contributed full-page ad to announce the event.

Civic Heads Open Celebration

An All-Metropolitan Fall Festival for Loew's Theatres held some years ago also rates consideration. Running for six weeks, the theatres in New York, New Jersey and Westchester County obtained the cooperation of local civic heads to cut ribbons across lobbies to open the Festival. Parades headed by organizational bands and delegations of costumed marchers were held. Decorations included special street standards, electric garlands, burgees, and lobbies were treated with autumn leaf displays.

Up in Canada, Ernie Moule tied in leading merchants to a foyer fashion show plugged with a special five-page newspaper layout. Each page was roped with theatre streamer and included with co-op ads were photos and publicity on the coming attractions.

Harry Salisbury sold a "Fall Movie Jubilee" with a double-truck tied in with a scrambled-names contest. Entrants were asked to decipher star names in the ads and match these with names of coming attractions.

The "Color Week" put on by Billings Booth for one of the earlier technicolor attractions is also suggested, the Round Tabler tying the merchants on his block to a series of Color Sales, stressing the new styles. This led to windows and ads plugging the theme, the street also bannered with colorful lights and decorations.

Star Identification Contest

Unique identification contest by Charlie Schlaifer, planted in one of the dailies, featured cuts of stars when they were very young, with cash and ticket prizes awarded to those who could match the early photos to the stars' coming pictures during the new season.

Pet parade and contest used long time back by Guy Martin also has possibilities, local paper tied in to put it over. Any pet, bird or beast, was eligible, the prizes going for the prettiest, funniest, largest, smallest, most unique, etc. An idea of the entries is noted in the various pets which included dogs, cats, rats, chickens, alligators, lambs and geese.

The various "Manager's Weeks" promotions are also to be noted, an outstanding example noted among M&P theatremen who waged their drives with the aid of the personnel. In many instances, the staff was divided into teams, each with captain responsible to the assistant manager for tickets sold directly by each group. Prizes offered were of sufficient appeal to encourage these efforts, the employees also stressing the coming attractions to build further boxoffice interest.

"Get-Acquainted Week" was a contribution offered by Ben Katz to give manager and staff a better opportunity to become acquainted with patrons, old and new. For this purpose, Katz recommended that desk be moved out to the lobby where manager or assistant would be on hand to greet patrons as they entered. Background of trailers, windows, and ad mention could carry the idea further as might guest tickets mailed to new families in the neighborhood.

Impersonation contests directed at stars set in coming pictures are also favored. This has been put on via the "Hollywood Premiere" idea with entrants coming to the theatre dressed as the stars and so announced via loud speaker or broadcast. Impersonators are brought up on the stage where applause decides the winners. The resemblance contest is another reliable and put on usually with merchant and newspaper cooperation. Prizes are for those selected for best matching to stars in coming attractions. Photos are to be promoted by tiein with photographer and contestants represent the cooperating stores. Winners can be selected by final judging at the theatre or by patron voting.

Hollywood Premiere Clicks

Both angles, described above, were combined by Larry Stein years ago, with a huge board of photos of 20 stars placed in lobby. Next to each was an eight by ten space with question mark, intended for winner doubling for or imitating that star. Entries were solicited from music and dramatic schools, each photographed free of charge as result of tiein.

The climax came at the "premiere" with contestants brought to the theatre in promoted cars, led by sound truck covering the main streets. On arrival after the parade, the entrants were introduced, each responding in keeping with the character impersonated. The stage judging followed, with the "stars" singing, dancing, or reciting, with prizes promoted from the stores, credited in lobby and in special program.

Peffley Ties His Show To China Relief Fund

Extra publicity was accorded Richard Peffley's "In The Navy" date at the Kentucky-State, in Danville, Ky., through a pitch penny lobby gag, whereby guest tickets went to those successfully pitching coins in saucer floating in bucket of water. Those coins which did not land were collected during run of gag and donated to local China Relief Fund, and tied directly to "China Fights Back," second film. The Mayor and Relief Committee gave permission for use of their names in ads as highly recommending both pictures and urging all to attend the show.

Contests Aid Feldman on "Underground", "Breakfast"

To usher in his double bill of "Underground" and "Kisses for Breakfast" at the Schine Paramount, in Syracuse, Dick Feldman featured newspaper contests, one of which offered guest tickets to those submitting best suggestions on "How would you send messages to others if you were a member of Underground" and the other on "What would you do to get kisses for breakfast." All four radio stations gave spot announcements gratis on the show and WSYR followed their noon newscast with an interesting talk about espionage and fifth column activities during which "Underground" was liberally stressed.

Attractive 40x80 with Sevareid's photo, the CBS announcer who gave invaluable assistance in the making of the picture, was placed on curb in front of theatre with timely clippings from papers regarding espionage, etc. and editor of the Post-Standard was invited to a special show which brought editorial mention following day.

Tying in with a photographic supply and art store, George Peters, manager of Loew's Theatre, Reading, Pa., promoted a contest for the best specially posed "Ziegfeld Girl" pictures, or the best candid shot snapped from the screen. The winning pictures made for an elaborate display on the walls of the theatre's balcony. The camera store, apart from carrying elaborate window and counter displays on the picture, donated the three big prizes with the theatre giving guest tickets for the honorable mentions. In addition, he tied in with a department store for a "Name the Ziegfeld Girl Contest," awarding prizes for those who could accurately name the largest number of former Ziegfeld beauties.

For "Billy the Kid," Peters tied in with a department store, getting picture announcements on more than 30,000 store bulletins carrying the store's merchandise news. The store paid all costs of preparation, printing and distribution and also for nine pairs of tickets given store patrons who found their names hidden among the print on the circulars. Peters also printed up himself a trick circular, the typed letters outlining Robert Taylor's head and shoulders. The type concealed names of various cities and towns which offered "rewards" for the capture of "Billy the Kid."

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Blood and Sand" Trophy Given By Reisinger at Local Rodeo

With local Schrine holding a rodeo in Evansville, Ind., Bill Reisinger at Loew's Theatre tied in by securing nightly plugs over the public address system and presenting a "Blood and Sand" trophy to the winner of the "bull-dogging" contest. Stunt broke dailies, all of which gave generous plugs to the picture at the theatre.

Also recently started by Bill is what he terms his "Swing Band Contest." Running for five consecutive weeks, amateurs are eligible and well-known maestro from local night club acts as master of ceremonies and one of the judges. Three bands have been selected to play, regular eliminations held and newspapers have come through.

Draftees Driven To "Draft" Date

The hotel postcard mailing idea was switched to an army appeal by Harold H. Thomas for "Caught in the Draft" at the Malco-Fulton, in Fulton, Ky., the circuit city manager working it with penny postcards carrying messages about the picture written by members of the house staff. The cards were then forwarded to Camp Bowie in Brownwood, Texas, where a friend of the theatreman saw to it that they were mailed from the army postoffice. All cards were signed "Harry" and, according to the reaction of locals receiving the cards, the stunt attracted a lot of attention to the date.

Other army slants employed by the Malco-man had the American Legion post collecting books, magazines and periodicals during the run, which were later turned over to the Legion for distribution to the army forces, and duly commented upon in the papers. Mothers of local boys in training received personal letters from the theatreman to which guest tickets were attached. Exploitation in this direction was further explored when Thomas contacted all local boys who were drafted, selling them on the value of seeing the picture to guide them at camp. A gag stunt took the form of a weight guessing contest, a barrel of potatoes placed in front of the theatre week ahead and guest tickets given to those who came nearest exact weight of the barrel.

Atmospheric Window Promoted

One of the cleverest and most attractive windows obtained recently by the Malco-man featured decoration in water color. Center was occupied with large tent, opening flap turned back to reveal army rifles, service accessories and posters on the picture. Water color backgrounds showed rows of army tents and a drawing of a hard-boiled army sergeant issuing order via balloon copy, which, of course, had to do with the picture.

Outstander in the newspaper tieins made by "Kal" Kalberer for the date at Switow's Indiana, in Washington, Ind., was a tiein with the popular "Private Buck" syndicated cartoon feature. "Kal" arranged for a display ad on the date immediately below to take advantage of the high readerinterest in the cartoon.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Parade to Theatre Held By Matthews for "Privates"

A novelty herald in booklet form, depicting the various stages of the gangster burlesque coming to life and humorously so, was distributed in packages and store counters by Haddon Matthews, manager of Warners' 69th Street Theatre, Philadelphia, for "Tall, Dark and Handsome."

A huge parade to the theatre was promoted for "Buck Privates," and for a lobby display, Matthews used two private tents with the stars peeping from the canvas opening. In connection with "Nice Girl," he promoted a silver set from a merchant which he displayed in the lobby along with a scroll which patrons signed. The scroll was addressed to a newlywed in the neighborhood with a congratulatory note from "Patrons of the 69th Street Theatre."

BIG CAMPAIGN MARKS TWENTIETH BIRTHDAY

Anniversary of RKO Fordham Signalized with Elaborate Promotion; Civic Heads Aid

The twentieth birthday of a theatre is distinctly an out-of-the ordinary event which was duly recognized in the celebration of that anniversary at the RKO Fordham, New York, in Sol Schwartz' district and reported here by Harry Mandel, circuit ad head.

For three weeks ahead of the Anniversary Week, little was left undone to bring the jollification to the attention of the public. Trailers and stage announcements inaugurated the advance. Then, a week ahead, patrons were given pieces of string and asked to watch for the screen notice having to do with it. The copy advised the folks to "tie the string around your finger so you'll remember," etc.

Torchlight Parade Featured

Outside coverage was comprehensive. Ballyhoo sound trucks, net banners across the main business street of the sector, shields on telephone poles and torch-light parade on opening night of the Week were among the outstanders. The parade included many bands, companies of uniformed cadets, bannered new model cars carrying celebrities, bannered delivery trucks contributed for the occasion by leading commercial firms.

Newspaper cooperation was generous. In addition, publicity was gathered with a broadside of telegram messages distributed house to house, copy plugging the event and listing the activities of the Week. Similar handling was given a special two-color theatre newsette. Surrounding stores allowed imprinting of delivery bags and at the theatre the staff wore badges selling the Big Party. The theatre front was entirely decorated with garlands and lighting. In the lobby, quick attention was directed to the Week via a five-foot birthday cake contributed by leading restaurant.

A special 26-page souvenir program was published with enough outside advertising to more than pay the costs. The program was given significance by a page of star signatures, reproductions of congratulatory letters from civic heads, stories of the theatre's background.

Celebrating Merchants Cooperate

Leading stores celebrating their twentieth anniversaries also cooperated and for added publicity, it was arranged that guests of honor at the opening would include a couple who were patrons of the theatre during its lifetime and were invited to cut the ribbon around the boxoffice to officially open the proceedings. The boxoffice was completely wrapped in cellophane tied with a big red bow. All of this and more was brought to the attention of all businessmen in the area by a letter from the local Merchants Association, which urged cooperation. Stores responded with elaborate decorations, and each displayed Anniversary window strips before and during celebration.

PATRONS TRY SKILL ON BUCKING BRONCO

Much levity was engaged in through ingenious stunt arranged by Orville Rennie at the Fort, in Rock Island, Ill., theatreman planting a mechanical bucking horse in his lobby during engagement of "Billy the Kid." Guest tickets were awarded those who could ride the "critter" for a designated time.

Added attractions were many. These included souvenirs to women patrons and on opening night an address by the borough president over the house p. a. system Visiting screen and radio stars were introduced and members of the New York Giants were also on hand. During the week balloons with guest tickets were released, kiddie cartoon show put on for the youngsters, personal appearance of stage and radio stars arranged. Also featured was the cutting of the birthday cake on stage and distributed among the audience to the group singing of "happy birthday."

"Lucky" keys to a treasure chest in the lobby were given out in advance with hundreds on hand trying their fortune for the "treasure" of folding money. Two stage contests aroused further enthusiasm. One was a jitterbug competition, and on final day a bathing beauty contest. In both instances, audience applause decided the winners. As an extra contribution to the publicity, the theatremen also offered free admission during the week to those whose birthday came during the celebration.

Taylor Holds Screening For FBI Officials

Capitalizing on the fact that Buffalo and the Niagara Frontier is one of the most important areas engaged in national defense production, publicity director Charles Taylor of the Buffalo Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., executed a thorough press, civic, radio and direct mail campaign for RKO-Radio's March of Time, "Men of the F. B. I.—1941."

First item on the campaign agenda was a preview screening for John Madigan, special agent in charge, of the Buffalo F. B. I. field office and staff. Also present were representatives of the Evening News; local police and radio station officials; representatives from the larger factories engaged in national defense production, and executives of the Senior and Junior Chamber of Commerce. The former cooperated by compiling a list of factories to contact, and the latter sponsored a Civilian Identification Week which included a fingerprint display and a 40x60 poster in the theatre lobby. Five local stations plugged the March of Time subject on radio broadcasts, newspapers ran stories and art regarding the screening.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Reported as being highly successful was the cooking school sessions held on stage of the Haines Theatre, in Waterville, Maine, by J. K. O'Donnell. Numerous prizes were promoted by the theatreman with a grand prize of an electric range also awarded. Newspapers came through with stories and art during sessions.

Advance street ballyhoo for "The Reluctant Dragon" at the 20th Century Theatre, in Buffalo, as arranged by Ralph T. Kemper, consisted of horse and rider on principal city streets appropriately costumed and bannered to represent Sir Giles hunting the Dragon. Children's coloring contest was planted, numerous window displays landed and a word-building contest for cash prizes plugged over WKBW.

Tying in with local laundry, Leslie V. Campbell at the Strand, in Trail, B. C., imprinted shirt stuffers with "Ziegfeld Girl" copy. In addition, boards carried cut of Judy Garland and banner line across top reading: "You'll want to be dressed up to see this little lady."

A man parading the streets with a large, colorful umbrella—with copy on it reading: "Rain or shine, I am going to see 'They Met in Bombay,'" was arranged by Robert S. Taylor, Harris Dubois, DuBois, Pa., as part of his campaign for the film.

Effective lobby setpiece set against a black velvet drop was constructed for "Ziegfeld Girl" by Stan Lambert of the Venetian, in Racine, Wis. Measuring some 40 feet long by 25 high, display was hung on wall with cutout beaverboard block title letters measuring four feet. Cutout figures of the feminine stars, including two Barclay girls, were set before it on a platform. Figure of a girl sat on the letter "Z" and another on the last letter, "L." Two color spot wheels played overall.

A radio contest asking listeners "What do you see in 'A Woman's Face'?" was one of the highlights of the campaign for the film put over by Dave Murphy, State, Altoona, Pa. He also had a cowboy in a black outfit striding about the streets as a ballyhoo for "Billy the Kid."

Photos made by a roving street photographer were posted in the lobby of the State, Rhinelander, Wis., as a feature of the "They Met in Bombay" campaign put over by Sam Miller. Those persons identifying themselves received guest tickets.

For lobby display on "Knute Rockne" at the Capitol, in Chicago, R. T. Barry, from his personal collection, made up a display of old newspaper clippings of Rockne's last great championship team. A picture of each player on that team was displayed as well as stories and exploits of other Rockne teams. From the father of Tim Moynihan, who is a resident, Barry secured a football used in the Notre Dame-Army Game in 1927, this good for display and attention.

C. G. Keeney, manager of the Park, Reading, Pa., had a candle burning for more than two days in a downtown store window with prizes for those guessing how long it would burn in advance of "The Flame of New Orleans." The story of the wedding gown in the picture made for a radio dramatization, listeners invited to send in thrilling reports of their honeymoons for later broadcasts. Telegrams from film personalities at the picture's premiere in New Orleans were conspicuously featured in all advertising and displays.

Simulated cell was planted in the lobby of the Colonial, in Philadelphia by Stanley Benford for his date on "Man Made Monster," walls of which carried picture copy. Inside was an electric chair on which was seated a "home made" monster with buzzer arrangement which was used during peak hours, lights flashed on and off in addition. For street bally, robot with back banner performed in downtown districts.

"Wanted" heralds were distributed by Jimmy Redmond ahead of "Love Crazy" at the Bonham, in Fairbury, Neb., with copy directly under the "Wanted" word reading: "5,863 Fairbury people to see Myrna Loy and William Powell in," etc. This was followed by offer of the management to present tickets to the next attraction to those who could honestly say they did not laugh during the show.

Announcing a sale, but saying nothing in the ad about departments where sale items could be found, a large Kokomo, Ind., department store cooperated with Sam Neall, Sipe, in his "Big Store" campaign by having a man dressed as Harpo Marx as the source of sale information in the store. If the item were to be found on the first floor, "Harpo" blew a horn once; if on the second floor, twice, etc. The gag drew a great deal of word-of-mouth comment and laughs.

With local merchants holding their annual Dollar Day during Albert Davis' date of "Pot O'Gold" at the Englert Theatre, in Iowa City, Ia., the theatreman agreed to tiein on the Day, with stores agreeing to feature "Pot O' Gold" in money savings values as their slogan for the special event. Co-op ads all carried the line as did storewide displays, etc. To give the tiein impetus, local Merchants Bureau addressed a letter to each store calling attention to the stunt, theatre featuring a trailer in addition.

OBITUARIES

Moe Streimer, 59, Dies in New York

Moe Streimer, 59, United Artists' special home office representative, died Thursday morning, July 31st, after a long illness.

Moe Streimer joined United Artists at the company's inception in 1919 as manager of the New York exchange. He held that position until 1936, when he was appointed special home office representative for the New York territory.

Funeral services were held on Friday August 1st, at Riverside Memorial Chapel. Rabbi Bernard Birstein officiated. Burial was at the Mt. Hebron Cemetary, Flushing L. I. Over 400 attended the services, including the entire personnel of the company's exchange in New York.

Mr. Streimer is survived by his wife, a son and daughter, two brothers and seven sisters.

Eugene Clifford, Former Publicity Man, Dies

Eugene Clifford, 53, former film press agent, scenario editor and newspaperman died at Florida, N. Y., near Goshen, on Friday, August 1st.

For a number of years Mr. Clifford had been a financial writer for the New York Times. At one time was a scenario writer for Gaumont-British in London and occupied numerous publicity posts in this country. In 1921 he became eastern representative for Trimble Productions, Inc., and in 1924 was in Hollywood writing for First National and Fox. He was also connected with M. A. Schlesinger and General Talking Pictures.

Two brothers, George and Edwin S. Clifford, survive.

Major Adolfo Caruso

Military services were held in San Antonio, July 30th, for Major Adolfo Caruso, former New York theatre manager, who died in that city Monday, July 28th. Major Caruso was manager of the Forest Hills, N. Y., and other Long Island theatres of the Skouras circuit up to last fall when he was granted a leave of absence because of ill health.

The property included projection machines, parts for approximately 60 machines, not including motors and cabinets, and other equipment.

FCC Newspaper Hearings Postponed to Sept. 17th

Investigation of newspaper ownership of broadcasting stations by the FCC was in abeyance this week as the legal staff prepared court actions to force the appearance of four witnesses, two of whom last week ignored a commission subpoena.

As a result of the failure of James G. Stahlman, publisher of the Nashville Banner, and Edwin S. Friendly, business manager of the N. Y. Sun, to respond Friday, the commission went to federal district court for an order compelling the former to testify. Judge James W. Morris ordered Mr. Stahlman to show cause August 11th why he should not be required to appear. Meanwhile the hearings were recessed until September 17 when, it was indicated, they would be pushed through to a conclusion.

Last week's hearings were devoted to testimony on the operation of newspaper-owned stations and the relations between press and radio.

Friday, the commission was told by Paul W. White of CBS, that initial friction between the two agencies has been ironed out and today the U. S. is the best informed country in the world as a result of newspaper-radio cooperation in the dissemination of news. Lloyd Stratton, assistant general manager of the Associated Press, and Joseph V. Connolly of International News Service also testified that there is no restriction on the news available for broadcasting.

Activity by the American Newspaper Publishers Association, which once banned giving news to radio stations, were described by commission counsel, with some testimony by James W. Barrett, editor of the Press-Radio Bureau set up by the publishers' association in 1933-34, which, from the three major press associations supplied news to radio stations for $12.50 a month.

Chicago Censor Appointed

Sergeant Joseph F. Healy has succeeded Lieutenant Harry Costello as head of the Chicago Crime Prevention Bureau, under whose jurisdiction falls the censorship of motion pictures. Sergeant Healy has been Lieutenant Costello's assistant for several years and was considered the logical man for the appointment.

The Ohio censors reviewed a total of 562 reels in June from which 34 eliminations were ordered, and four reels rejected. This compares with 451 reels reviewed and 24 eliminations ordered in May. The figures for June, 1940, were 406 reels and 20 eliminations.

Globe Dormant

Information supplied by James Roosevelt's Hollywood office with respect to a report of his film interests published in the July 26th issue is to the effect that his Globe Productions, mentioned in the item as defunct, is in fact merely inactive at this time, and that his vice-presidency of Gaspascolor, Inc., dates from formation of the company a year ago.

Mohawk Releases Set

Negotiations have been completed by Jack Berson of Mohawk Film Corporation for the distribution of a second group of pictures of eighteen subjects with the Allied Film Exchange in Detroit. A group of sixteen features will also be distributed by the Bay State Film Company of Boston for Mohawk.

IN COURTS

Fox Denies Davis Charges

William Fox denied in Federal district court in Philadelphia, Friday, August 1st, that $27,500 in loans which he testified he made to former Judge J. Warren Davis were to influence the court's decisions or for any improper or corrupt purpose.

Mr. Fox, who has pleaded guilty to a charge of conspiring with Judge Davis and Morgan S. Kaufman, attorney, to obstruct justice and defraud the government, made his denial under cross-examination by William A. Gray, counsel for Mr. Davis.

In earlier testimony Mr. Fox asserted that in 1936, through Mr. Kaufman, he extended a loan of $15,000 to Judge Davis, and later in the year made a direct loan of $12,500 to the jurist, both at a time when Fox bankruptcy matters were before the circuit court.

When Mr. Gray questioned Mr. Fox's ability to name the exact place where, in 1936, the witness said he handed Judge Davis the $12,500, Mr. Fox replied that it taken to a mid-city street, corner, he could not only identify it, but also the corridor into which he and Judge Davis allegedly withdrew for the exchange of the money.

On Monday, Belle Fox, daughter of Mr. Fox, testified that she gave her father $27,500 in cash during the Fox bankruptcy proceedings.

The government contends that Mr. Fox lent that amount to the elderly jurist without security while the bankruptcy cases were before the appellate court.

Miss Fox said during her testimony that she didn't know what her father wanted the money for, but admitted that part of it was in thousand dollar bills. The prosecution says some of these bills were traced to the judge's daughter, Mrs. Mary Davis Firestone.

Judge Rules on Plagiarism Suits

Guilt of every participant in a copyright infringement—including exhbitors—was once again shown forcibly by a New York federal court decision Tuesday, July 29th, in the suit brought by Nellie Harris, widow of Frank Harris, writer, against Gilbert Miller, Norman Marshall, and Heron Productions, Inc., producers of the play, "Oscar Wilde," and against Leslie and Sewell Stokes, playrights. Federal Judge Vincent Leibell ruled that regardless of innocence of plagiarism, participants must account not only for individual profits, but also profits made by others in the disputed production. The court had already held the production mentioned an infringement upon Mr. Harris' biography, "Oscar Wilde, his Life and Confessions."

Protection of exhibitors by producer-distributors is not written into a film contract; it is "implied," a copyright lawyer said in New York last Wednesday. The valid assumption in an exhibition contract is that the seller owns the property he is selling.

Flynn Petition Filed

Errol Flynn, Warner star, has filed a petition in the United States district court in Los Angeles requesting dismissal of his $2,000,000 action, without prejudice, against Harcourt Brace and Company and Constancia de la More, et alius, Mr. Flynn had charged he had been libeled in a book written by the latter and published by Harcourt Brace.

ALMOST AN ANGEL (Universal)

Romance and Music

Produced by Joe Pasternak. Directed by Henry Koster.

SYNOPSIS

Multi-Millionaire Jonathan Reynolds (Charles Laughton) is dying when Jonathan, Jr. (Robert Cummings) arrives at his father's bedside. With death only minutes away, Jonathan Sr.'s last request is that he meet Gloria Pennington (Margaret Tallichet) socialite to whom Junior is engaged. Dr. Harvey (Richard Carle), family physician, advises Jonathan, Jr., to bring Gloria immediately. Junior goes to her hotel but Gloria is out shopping. In desperation, Junior asks Anne Terry (Deanna Durbin) attractive hatcheck girl, to pose as his fiancee in the emergency.

Anne agrees reluctantly. When Reynolds, Sr., meets her he approves of her completely. The Bishop (Guy Kibbee), a friend of the family, is there and Anne is forced to take part in a discussion of plans for the wedding of Junior and "Gloria." Anne remains while Reynolds, Sr., begins his slow recovery, stimulated by his growing attachment to Anne. Meanwhile Gloria and her mother arrive.

The butler (Charles Coleman) accidentally discloses to Reynolds, Sr., that Anne is not really his son's fiancee. The old man is heartbroken, but decides to do nothing until after a dinner party at which Gloria and her mother are to be introduced to him as "friends" of Junior. After meeting Gloria, Reynolds, Sr., knows that Anne is the superior girl in every way. He decides that if he can not have Anne for a daughter-in-law, he can at least help her with her musical career.

Reynolds, Sr., takes Anne out one night to introduce her to his friends in the musical world. They make a round of the night clubs, are photographed dancing together and arrive home early in the morning. Next day the newspapers break big stories about the Reynolds' family "scandal" involving Junior's two "fiancees," and Anne's "date" with his father. Gloria and her mother leave forever as Junior proclaims his love for Anne.

NAVY BLUES (Warner Brothers)

Comedy

Executive producer, Hal B. Wallis. Associate producers, Jerry Wald and Jack Saper. Directed by Lloyd Bacon.

SYNOPSIS

Cake O'Hara (Jack Oakie) and Powerhouse Bolton (Jack Haley) are slap-happy gobs attached to the battleship Montana, approaching Honolulu. Margie Jordan (Ann Sheridan) and Lillibelle Bolton (Martha Raye) sing and dance in a Honolulu night club. Lillibelle would like to get her hands on Powerhouse, who married her in San Diego and then, to be free of her, had her tossed into jail as an international spy.

Ashore in Honolulu, the boys run into Margie and Lilli. To escape destruction at the hands of Lilli, Powerhouse once more has her arrested as a Mata Hari. The boys next meet Homer Matthews (Herbert Anderson), the Navy's best gunner. When Homer reveals he has been transferred to the Montana, the boys hurry to bet on the results of the coming gunnery practice. They pawn the ship's trophies for money to cover their bets.

The boys get a shock when Homer later tells them that he's leaving the service. They appeal to the girls to help them but are brushed off. When the trophies are missed, Cake and Powerhouse are suspected. There is a chase that leads through a fashionable Luau, where Margie is dancing. Once more they appeal to the girls. Margie tries to influence Homer. Then Lilli tries her luck with Homer, berating him for breaking Margie's heart.

Homer is swayed first one way and the other. When the Montana steams out for gunnery practice, Homer is on the ship. He is still uncertain whether Margie is in love with him but all doubts are dispelled when she appears overhead in a low-flying plane and yells "Homer, I love you." The Montana wins the gunnery practice.

WHISTLING IN THE DARK (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Melodrama

Produced by George Haight. Directed by S. Sylvan Simon. Based upon the play by Laurence Gross and Edward Childs Carpenter.

Wally Benton (Red Skelton) is beloved by millions of radio fans. In his series known as "The Fox" he skillfully concocts and unravels crimes. He is engaged to his partner in the act, Carol (Ann Rutherford), but for business reasons has to court Fran (Virginia Grey) daughter of his sponsor.

Joseph Jones (Conrad Veidt) heads a mysterious "Silver Haven" cult, in which he and his unscrupulous associates victimize rich and gullible old ladies. One of the latter has died, leaving the cult a million dollars, but only after a nephew has had the use of the income from the bequest for life. Jones and his henchman consider ways and means of getting rid of the nephew and hit on the idea of having "The Fox" concoct a fool-proof method of killing the nephew.

Pretending to be rival sponsors, the schemers lure Benton to the "haven," and, not being sure which girl is his fiancee, also kidnap both girls. They tell him the nephew is to fly to New York the next day to claim his legacy—and it's up to Benton to think up the "perfect murder." Benton proposes that a tube of tooth paste be "doped" with cyanide, and put into the nephew's luggage. Benton switches the poison for a dummy package of sugar.

Then Benton learns that Thomas (Don Douglas), who is to plant the tooth paste, had lost the tube (containing the sugar) and has obtained more poison from the crooked druggist. Frantic, Benton attaches the wires of the telephone the thugs cut off when the three were imprisoned to a radio in the room and broadcasts for help. The police pick up the information and start for the hideout. Jones in New York also hears the broadcast, and with his henchmen also rush for the hideaway to kill the three witnesses. The battle is already waging by the time the police arrive. The intended victim is saved, and Benton and Carol are left free to marry.

INTERNATIONAL LADY (United Artists)

Espionage Melodrama

An Edward Small Production. Directed by Tim Whelan.

Tim Hanley (George Brent), an American G-man, is spreading a counter-espionage net for blonde Carla Nillson (Ilona Massey) in the blackout of London. Hanley poses as a lawyer on business for the U. S. Embassy and takes her to a smart night-club bomb shelter during a raid. She asks him to help her obtain a visa for the United States so that she can accept concert and radio engagements.

They are joined by Reggie Oliver (Basil Rathbone), apparently a newspaper critic interested in Carla, but actually a Scotland Yard operative assigned to watch her. Tim and Reggie decide to work together. Tim gets her a visa and they leave for Lisbon, to catch the clipper to New York. In Lisbon, Carla visits the music shop of Senor Bruner (Martin Kosleck), one of the sabotage gang. He provides her with a song arrangement which is a code whereby she can broadcast to members of the gang in America.

In New York the travelers—Reggie had joined them in Lisbon—are met by Mrs. Grenner (Marjorie Gateson), wife of Sidney Grenner (Gene Lockhart), a candy manufacturer who is to sponsor Carlo's radio debut, and, incidentally, head of the sabotage gang. The party goes to the Grenner's Long Island estate where the broadcast is to take place.

Reggie gets the sheet music and passes it to Hanley. Hanley finds the code and tosses his notes to a waiting FBI man in the garden. Grenner's butler, Webster (George Zucco), notes Hanley's action and knocks him unconscious. Carla rushes to his side and discovers an FBI badge. She hides the badge until Webster has searched Hanley and then restores it to him. Hanley is revived and manages to quiet the suspicions of Grenner and Webster.

The next day Carla confesses to Grenner and Webster that Hanley is a G-man. A plan is mapped out whereby Hanley is invited to her Fourth-of-July concert. Her singing is to be the signal to the saboteurs. Later she is to lure Hanley to a hotel roof garden, where Webster will shoot him. As Webster levels the gun, Carla throws herself in front of Hanley and receives the bullet. Meanwhile, the FBI has broken the code and set out to the old granary to capture the gang. Carla recovers.

ONE FOOT IN HEAVEN (Warner Brothers)

Drama

Executive producer, Hal B. Wallis. Associate producer, Robert Lord. Directed by Irving Rapper. From the novel by Hartzell Spence.

SYNOPSIS

The Morris family is at home in Newbridge, Canada, on an April evening in 1904. John Morris (Ernest Cossart) is reading the Toronto newspaper's account of the engagement of his daughter, Hope (Martha Scott), to William Spence (Frederic March), young medical student. Hope and Mrs. Morris (Nana Bryant) are listening to the reading, when Spence arrives and announces, to his astonished audience, that he is not going to complete his studies.

He has heard a spirited sermon by a Methodist revivalist named Hartzell and has decided to become a minister. Spence and Hope are sent to the sleepy village of Laketown, Iowa, to take charge of the parsonage. They are shocked to see the weather-beaten little frame structure they will have charge of.

Will and Hope find a happy life of service with the "good folk" of their first charge. A son is born to them, and is named Hartzell (Frankie Thomas) after the minister who converted Will. The son is followed by a daughter, Eileen (Elizabeth Frazer), and a second boy. They travel from parsonage to parsonage and eventually come to an ugly caricature of a church in Denver.

Will sets about to build a new church but draws the wrath of many of his parishioners. An ugly rumor starts that his son, Hartzell, has had relations with a girl of the village. At the moment, Will feels a defeated failure. He accepts an invitation to visit California and look over a new parsonage offered him. The church is beautiful but Will doesn't stay. He returns to Denver and succeeds in building his new church.

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH (Paramount)

Comedy

Produced by Arthur Hornblow, Jr. Directed by Elliott Nugent.

Steven Bennett (Bob Hope), his own business having failed, is taken into partnership by T. T. Ralston (Edward Arnold) and Dick Donnelly (Glenn Anders), who hope to have him unload $150,000 worth of questionable stock in a quicksilver mine, with which they're stuck. They are trying to sell any part of it to their best client, wealthy playboy Tommie Van Deusen.

Steve walks into Donnelly's office to find Linda Graham (Helen Vinson), actress, trying to get backing for her new play. The whole affair is shunted to Steve, who doesn't know what it's all about. Then Gwen Saunders (Paulette Goddard), Ralston's niece, walks in to raise money for a charity, and she, too, is shunted to Steve. He, knocked into a romantic trance by Gwen, promises to take the $10,000 she has already raised and double it for her. In an argument over the quicksilver mine, Steve bets Ralston, Donnelly and Van that he can tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth for twenty-four hours. He puts up Gwen's money.

When Steve tells two clients the truth about the mine, Ralston, Donnelly and Van grab him and rush him to a week-end party on Ralston's boat. En route they stop at Steve's hotel, where he bumps into Linda. He tells her he expects to come into a lot of money the following day. Then Gwen shows up. The head of the charity organization has given her until the following day to make good a note she has made for $40,000. Steve hides Gwen when Ralston, Donnelly and Van come in with a black lace nightgown.

They pry into his private life and Steve must answer under the agreement. Gwen, trying to get a better view of the proceedings, loses her balance and falls over the screen she was hiding behind. Gwen joins them in their trip to the houseboat. On the houseboat are Mrs. Ralston (Mary Forbes); Dr. Zarak (Leon Belasco), a psychiatrist; Mrs. Donnelly (Rose Hobart) and Van's parents, among others. Steve is forced to insult them all in order to keep his agreement to tell the truth.

Linda arrives in search of Steve. While she is enacting a scene of her new play for him, Mrs. Ralston and Mrs. Van Deusen (Catherine Doucet) happens along and arrive at the conclusion that Steve and Linda have been married and are estranged. They plot to patch up the "unhappy" situation, arranging for Linda to spend the night in a cabin adjoining Steve's. During the night, Steve manages to get to Gwen and convince her that he is not married, but he is discovered by Ralston, et al., and the ensuing events finds him in deeper water than before.

Ralston, Donnelly and Van in a last desperate effort set the clocks ahead fifteen minutes. The climax is a madhouse with half the cast turning the clock back and forward with Steve outlasting the competition.

LI'L LOUISIANA BELLE (Monogram)

Horse Drama

Produced by Edward Finney. Directed by Al Herman.

When Thad Terrill (Jack La Rue) framed and convicted on a murder charge, is released from prison he returns to the southern farm where his brother, Lance (Robert Kellard) raises horses. Lance welcomes Thad, but Lance's second wife, Margaret (Marian Marsh) resents the presence of the convicted murderer. Thad stays on, however, as a hired man. Soon a sickly foal is born on the farm, and everybody gives it up except Thad and Betty Jean (Mary Ruth), Lance's eight-year-old daughter.

Thad and Betty Jean, who owns the animal, develop "Jumping Jack" into a record smashing race horse. Matthew Brawley (John Holland) wealthy social climber and racing stable owner, wants to buy "Jumping Jack" but at first Lance won't sell because it is Betty Jean's horse. Margaret finally talks Lance into the sale. When Betty Jean learns of this she runs away with "Jumping Jack." In the wilds, a cougar attacks the girl and the horse kills the animal.

A searching party discovers the girl and her horse. Now, Lance repents the sale but Brawley forces the deal through and goes to the stable to take possession. Betty Jean pleads with Brawley, but he slaps her to one side. "Jumping Jack," aroused by the child's scream, attack Brawley and kills him. "Jumping Jack" is placed on trial, but it is proven the horse killed only to protect Betty Jean. Brawley's partner then proves that Thad was framed on the murder charge by Brawley, and this clears Terrill's name. Margaret repents of her mistakes and the family finally is united.

THE SMILING GHOST (Warner Brothers)

Comedy, Melodrama

Associate producer, Edmund Grainger. Directed by Lewis Seiler.

SYNOPSIS

Elinor Fairchild (Alexis Smith), beautiful and wealthy, has been a jinx to men who fall in love with her. Scandal sheets call her "The Kiss of Death Girl." Men who become engaged to her meet violent death. Only one has escaped so far, and he, Myron (David Bruce), has become an iron-lung patient.

Elinor's grandmother, Grams (Helen Westley), determines to do something about it. The family lawyer seeks a bold gallant to be engaged to Elinor for one month for the sum of $1,000. "Lucky" Downing (Wayne Morris), a newly graduated chemical engineer, accepts the offer. With Clarence (Willie Best), who was his valet in college, the bankrupted Lucky descends in style at Easthaven, and is overcome by the charms of Elinor.

When Elinor embraces Lucky, small-town newspaper-reporter Lil Barstow (Brenda Marshall), photographs the scene. Elinor smashes the camera and drags Lucky away. On arrival at the Bentley estate things begin to happen to Lucky and Clarence. Secret panels open, eyes gleam from them. Secret passages are traveled by a ghost with a smiling, dead-looking, bloated face. Norton (Alan Hale), the butler, is assigned to Lucky as a bodyguard.

In self-defense, Lucky plots with Lil to get at the bottom of the mystery. They visit a graveyard to see if Elinor's other suitors are still in their vaults. They find one of the coffins empty. Just then a ghostly figure slugs Lucky. When he comes to, he hears Lil call him "darling." Just the same he goes on with the wedding arrangements.

When the ceremony starts, Lucky hears a blood-curdling scream from Lil. He darts to her rescue, trapping the "Smiling Ghost"—who proves to be Myron, the supposedly paralyzed occupant of the iron-lung.

BADLANDS OF DAKOTA (Universal)

Western Drama

Associate producer, George Waggner. Directed by Alfred E. Green.

SYNOPSIS

The time is 1876; the place is Deadwood, in what was the the territory of Dakota. Deadwood was then a rip-roaring town, seething with the excitement of a gold strike, a lawless, wide-open, hell-roaring community. And the Bella Union saloon, Bob Halliday (Brod Crawford), proprietor, was the social center of the town.

With Bob is his young brother, Jim (Robert Stack), just recently out from the East. Jim is not the frontier type. Bob tells Jim he has a mission for him. He wants him to go back to St. Louis and bring to Deadwood Bob's sweetheart, Anne Grayson (Ann Rutherford), whom Bob hasn't seen since she was a girl. Jim had supposed that Bob was in love with Jane (Frances Farmer), a bull-whip, slinging, gun-totin' rough girl of the West, but Bob assures him he isn't.

Jim goes to St. Louis and starts back with Anne, who thinks she is in love with Bob. Really she is in love with the romantic West and her own idea of it. Jim tries to assure her that the West isn't romantic—that it is rough, tough and ruthless. And, after seeing men killed before her eyes, Anne admits he is right. Jim and Anne fall in love and before they reach Deadwood, are married. When Bob learns the news, he is furious. He goes on a fighting drunk, and, when that wears off, seeks out the outlaw element of the community and joins them.

Jim is appointed Marshal of the town. McCall, local bully, makes a fool of him and Jim wants to resign his post. Anne, however, encourages him. When stage hold-ups increase, Jim lays a trap for the Indians who are the supposed bandits. But he discovers that his own brother, Bob, is among them.

In a real Indian attack on the town, Bob and his cohorts attempt to raid the bank of its gold. In the big fight that follows, Jim corners Bob, calls on him to surrender. Bob refuses and is about to shoot Jim when Jane, to save him, shoots Bob, the man she loves.

DOWN IN SAN DIEGO (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Melodrama

Produced by Frederick Stephani. Directed by Robert B. Sinclair.

Al Haines (Dan Dailey, Jr.) works for a Los Angeles gang, keeping their slot machines in repair, and lives with his younger sister, Betty (Bonita Granville). Their parents are dead. Haines, facing the approaching draft, decides to join the Marine Corps, but members of the gang "frame" him, telling him that while intoxicated he killed a man. They promise silence if he will report to Henry Schrode (Robert O. Davis), head of a spy ring, when he gets to San Diego.

Betty's boy friend, Hank Parker (Ray McDonald), his pal "Snap" Collins (Leo Gorcey) and "Snap's" girl friend, Mildred Bennett (Dorothy Morris), observe that Al's actions are peculiar. "Snap" and Hank follow men who are seen talking to Al, and pick up the information that, when he reaches San Diego, he is to be approached by a man leading a dog with a torn ear.

Hank, "Snap" and Mildred go to San Diego. Betty finds out and later reaches San Diego herself. The kids all get jobs and live in an auto camp, and the boys watch for the dog with the torn ear. They find the dog and follow its owner to a barbershop and beauty parlor, which is the "front" for a secret alien radio installation. Schrode orders Al to steal one of the new mosquito boats and turn it over to their ship in a hidden cove. Al informs the Marine Corps Intelligence Department.

Schrode counters by kidnapping Betty and tells Al she will be released when the mosquito boat is captured. Al, meanwhile, has been instructed by Marine Corps officers to go ahead with stealing the boat. The plans are carried out, the Marines close in and, after a battle, capture the spy gang.

HENRY ALDRICH FOR PRESIDENT (Paramount)

Family Drama

Produced by Sol C. Siegel. Directed by Hugh Bennett. Sequel to the Clifford Goldsmith Henry Aldrich stories.

SYNOPSIS

Henry Aldrich (James Lydon) is a typical American boy who is always getting into trouble, usually at the instigation of his chum, Dizzy Stevens (Charles Smith), and getting out of trouble, also usually with the help of said Dizzy.

Henry's school class is to have an election for president, an election that appears to be in the bag for Irwin Barrett (Kenneth Howell) but Irwin wants to make a sure thing of it so he maneuvers to split the opposition. He wants Henry to run, intending thereby to split the votes that would have gone to Phyllis Michael (Mary Anderson). The school flirt, Geraldine Adams (June Preisser), convinces Henry and he enters the race.

Henry wins the election. However, there is a scandal attached to it and to clear this up, Henry gets hold of the itinerant printer whom Irwin had employed to turn out phoney election ballots. In this scene, played for comedy, Henry pilots a plane to get the printer to the town.

BUY ME THAT TOWN (Paramount)

Drama

Produced by Sol. C. Siegel. Directed by Eugene Forde.

Rickey Dean (Lloyd Nolan) succeeds to the leadership of a group of gangsters when Chink Moran (Sheldon Leonard) is drafted for Army service. Pinched for speeding in a speed trap operated by a bankrupt village, Rickey sees the possibilities of running his own private government and buys the village. The local justice of the peace, Judge Paradise (Richard Carle), agrees to remain, and his daughter, Virginia (Constance Moore), continues as court clerk.

At the town meeting, Rickey appoints Ziggie (Edward Brophy) police chief; Crusher (Warren Hymer), the arsonist of the gang, new fire chief, and Louie (Albert Dekker) as Rickey's associate. These appointments are applauded by Henrietta Teagarden (Barbara Allen—radio's Vera Vague), spinsterish boarding-house keeper. The boys take rooms in Henrietta's boarding house. Henrietta's hobby is collecting information about gangsters.

Rickey finds a number of wealthy men who, for a variety of reasons, find a stay in jail desirable as a means to avoid more difficult circumstances. Charging them a thousand dollars a week for "board," after conviction of reckless driving, Rickey finds the venture quite profitable. At the urgings of Virginia, he gives part of his profit back to the village.

Gradually the gangsters find a new attitude toward life and Rickey starts turning over most of his proceeds to the village. Then the gang's former chief, Chink, returns, having been discharged by the Army because of a heart ailment. He attempts to force the gang back to its old habits, but is thwarted.

NEW ORLEANS BLUES (Warner Brothers)

Drama with Music

Executive producer, Hal B. Wallis. Associate producer, Henry Blanke. Directed by Anatole Litvak.

SYNOPSIS

Jigger Pine (Richard Whorf), gaunt, talented piano player bangs out melody at the St. Louis Star Cafe in New Orleans. The cafe advertises hot food, hot drinks and hot jazz—all cheap. Jigger, whose genius at the keyboard, makes him heroic to Nickey Wiler (Elia Kazan), law student, and to Peppi (Billy Halop), drummer, smacks a drunk and they all land in jail.

There they meet Pete Bosset (Pete Whitney), fat, tough, amiable bass fiddle player, hear the jail songs of the southern Negro, decide to form their own band to play the kind of music they like. Next recruit is Leo Powell (Jack Carson), trumpet player. Leo has a wife, Character (Priscilla Lane), who sings. The Band beats its way across the country in freight cars, playing where they can for what they can.

When Del Davis (Lloyd Nolan), who is wanted by the police, appears in a freight car, Jigger conceals him, saves him from arrest. As Del departs, he thanks the band and gives them a New Jersey address to look up when they need help. Eventually, Jigger & Co. arrive at "The Jungle," drinking, dancing and gambling resort.

They discover that Del Davis has moved in on Sam Paryas (Howard da Silva), Kay Grant (Betty Field), his old girl friend, and Brad Ames (Wallace Ford), hack piano player in love with Kay, his confreres in former crimes. "The Jungle," with Jigger's band as the chief attraction, thrives. Leo makes a play for Kay but changes when he learns his wife is going to have a baby. Jigger falls in love with Kay and they leave the band.

Kay sticks with Jigger a little while, finally deserts him and tries to return to Del Davis. Jigger wanders to New York, tries to avoid his friends when he sees them on Broadway. He suffers a mental breakdown and is unable to play. When he recovers he returns to "The Jungle." Kay returns, making another try for Del Davis. They quarrel and Del kicks her out. Brad gets Kay in a car, races past the New Jersey Cliffs, swerves from the highway. Kay and Brad are killed.

The final scene is the interior of another freight car. The band is together again, playing the blues.

HOLD BACK THE DAWN (Paramount)

Romance, Melodrama

Produced by Arthur Hornblow, Jr. Directed by Mitchell Leisen.

George Iscovescu (Charles Boyer) gains entrance to the Paramount studio in Hollywood and tries to sell a director, Dwight Saxon (Mitchell Leisen), a story. It is the story of his life. . . .

Iscovescu's background as a dancer led him to the smart places of western Europe—Paris, the Riviera, the Lido. He had a way with wealthy women and lived accordingly. Europe's war brought him to a dusty little village on the Mexican side of the border, where he seeks admittance to the United States. He is told he may have to wait five to eight years for a quota number. The border town is crammed with people waiting to get into the United States.

Five months later, the United States' Fourth of July celebration is heralded by the sound of firecrackers and many American cars pouring into town. One of the cars, a station wagon driven by a young school teacher, Emmy Brown (Olivia de Havilland), crawls in the traffic. One of the kids in the car tosses a firecracker under Iscovescu's feet. An argument starts between Iscovescu and Emmy, which ends in her banging the car in front and springing a leak in her car's radiator.

Iscovescu retires to a bar where he sees Anita (Paulette Goddard), his former dancing partner, with a group of American tourists. Anita, an Australian girl of part-Polish parentage, confides that she got into the United States by marrying an American racetrack jockey, then divorcing him after she got over the line. She has given Iscovescu an idea. He courts Emmy, and swept off her feet, she marries him.

Emmy leaves for the States with her charges. Iscovescu returns to his hotel where he is congratulated by Anita. He and Anita conspire that once he is across the border he will drop Emmy and they will continue on to New York. When Emmy comes back to tell him that she has a week off for a honeymoon, Iscovescu hurries her out of town to keep their marriage a secret from Inspector Hammock (Walter Abel) of the Immigration Department, who has already warned Iscovescu of the marriage racket.

When they return from their trip, Iscovescu is in love with Emmy. Learning this, Anita tells Emmy of Iscovescu's past life and the reason he married her. Questioned by Hammock, Emmy covers up for Iscovescu and then, her heart breaking, departs for the border. She has an auto accident and it is Iscovescu who pulls her through her illness. When she is better, he leaves for Hollywood to sell his story. . . .

The story told, Iscovescu is accosted by an immigration official and returned to Mexico. When his entrance to the United States is legally accomplished he is met at the border by Emmy.

MAN FROM MONTANA (Universal)

Western

Associate producer, Will Cowan. Directed by Ray Taylor.

SYNOPSIS

At a meeting of the cattlemen, led by old Winchester Thompson (William Gould), pioneer Wyoming cow-country range boss, Bob Dawson (Johnny Mack Brown), sheriff of the community, tells the assembly he will be forced to uphold the legal rights of the wagon-train of homesteaders heading for the valley. Thompson defies the sheriff, making the situation extremely difficult for Bob who is in love with the rancher's daughter, Linda (Jeanne Kelly). Thompson is backed up by Sam Dunham (James Blaine), head of a ruthless gang.

With his deputy, Grubby (Fuzzy Knight), Bob rides out to meet the "nesters" and is greeted by old Joel Preston (Murdock McQuarrie) and his granddaughter, Sally (Nell O'Day). The sheriff warns them to expect trouble but pledges his support in the fight. Dunham details his lieutenants, Del Kohler (Dick Alexander) and Trig Salter (Karl Hackett) to a campaign to harrass both homesteaders and ranchers, blaming one group for the injuries inflicted on the other. The outlaw chief has Salter, a newcomer, kill Preston. Salter then tells Sally and Bob that Thompson's men were responsible.

Sending Grubby and Sally to bring the Thompson cowboys, Bob surprises Dunham in the act of paying off Salter. Dunham tricks the sheriff and, after a fight which carries them out onto the porch, Dawson sees Kohler and his gunmen approaching. Swinging back into the house Bob barricades the place, holding off the outlaws until Grubby, Sally and Linda arrive with help. Dunham and his gang are rounded up and Thompson decides to make a place for the homesteaders in the valley. Also, Thompson learns from Linda that he will have to make a place for Sheriff Dawson in his family.

DR. KILDARE'S WEDDING DAY (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Hospital Drama

Directed by Harold S. Bucquet. Based on the characters created by Max Brand.

SYNOPSIS

Nurse Mary Lamont (Laraine Day) has finally set the date of her wedding to young Dr. Kildare (Lew Ayres). Meanwhile, Dr. Gillespie (Lionel Barrymore), who has promised to give the bride away, has to spend a month in a sanitarium for treatment of cancer. However, Dr. Gillespie becomes engrossed in a peculiar case.

While attending a symphony concert one night, he notes that the famous conductor, Constanzo Labardi (Nils Asther), seems oddly nervous. After the concert he warns the conductor to see a doctor at once. Labardi calls on Dr. Gillespie, who diagnoses the condition as tinnitus. The next step is to discover a cure. Dr. Kildare is called in on the case.

Learning that Dr. Kildare's duties will prevent him from attending a bachelor dinner to be given by hospital friends, Mary decides to attend in his place and takes a train for the city. Crossing the street near Grand Central Station, she is struck down by a truck and dies in the hospital, soon after Kildare reaches her bedside.

Gillespie gets the grief-stricken Kildare to visit him at the home of an old friend, Cornelia Bartlett (Margaret Seddon). Kildare discovers Mrs. Bartlett is the mother of Gillespie's youthful sweetheart, who died before they could wed. Inspired by Gillespie's advice, Kildare returns to the hospital and finds a cure for Labardi, and, through another trick by Gillespie, finally finds his confidence has returned.

RAGS TO RICHES (Republic)

Melodrama

Associate producer-director, Joseph Kane.

SYNOPSIS

Jimmy Rogers (Alan Baxter), driver for a rent-a-car company, is accosted one night by two thugs and forced to help them steal valuable furs. He intentionally wrecks the car in order to let the police catch up. The two thugs are killed, and no one will believe Jimmy's story. When he is held for trial, his sweetheart, Carol Patrick (Mary Carlisle), goes for help to Marshall Abbott (Jerome Cowan), wealthy music publisher who has been sponsoring her singing career. Actually Abbott is the secret head of the fur smuggling gang of which the two thugs were members.

Abbott has Jimmy railroaded to prison. When Jimmy is paroled after slightly more than a year, he finds that Carol, with Abbott's aid, has become a musical comedy star. Jimmy and Ace (Eddie Acuff), another paroled convict, are hired as truck drivers by the Blue Streak Company, which is secretly owned by Abbott.

Glenda Hayes (Suzanne Kaaren), Abbott's former girl friend, bitter because of Carol, tells Slip Conlan (Ralf Harolde), a rival smuggler, how Abbott carries on his operations. Slip tries to hijack the truck driven by Jimmy and Ace, and in evading him they learn what their cargo is. It is then that they connect Abbott with the smuggling ring.

Abbott gets wind of Slip's operations and sets a trap. Glenda is wounded when she attempts to warn Slip. She manages, however, to call Carol and tell her the truth. The two gangs are fighting it out—with Jimmy and Slip in the middle—when Carol arrives with the police. Abbott and Slip incriminate each other.

LONE RIDER IN FRONTIER FURY (Producers)

Western

Produced and directed by Sigmund Neufeld.

SYNOPSIS

When elderly Jim Bowen, owner of the JB ranch, is shot by a mysterious gunman, Tom Cameron (George Houston), the Lone Rider, is blamed for the murder. The JB ranch is willed to Bowen's Chicago-bred niece, Georgia (Hillary Brooke), to the surprise of ranch foreman Clyde Barton (Archie Hall), who had expected to inherit it. Georgia refuses to sell the property to lawyer Case Murdock (Ted Adams), and arrives to take care of the ranch.

That night, while raiding the JB ranch kitchen, Tom is discovered by the girl, who feeds him, unaware that he has been convicted of her uncle's murder. Foreman Barton enters, followed by Loco (Budd Buster), a half-wit stable-hand, and they get the drop on the Lone Rider. However, he manages to escape and heads for Fuzzy's (Al St. John) camp. Meanwhile, Georgia discovers that Loco could prove Tom's innocence but is too frightened to inform on the real murderer.

Tom takes refuge at Wagonwheel Gap, where he earns the friendship of Midge (Virginia Card), daughter of Matt Malone (Karl Hackett). To have a private talk with Georgia Tom stampedes her horses, but reaches the ranch only to find some Gap outlaws set to kidnap her. Tom, plotting to free Georgia, is intercepted by Midge, who insists that she should accompany him. Loco arrives and as Case Murdock enters, reveals to Tom that the lawyer is the murderer. Captured by Case's men, Tom gains a free moment by tossing a match on blasting powder, and bars Georgia and Midge in the back room. But Midge receives a gunwound and is killed. Balls of flaming wool are tossed into the barricaded room. Tom prepares to go down shooting while Georgia breaks for the barn, but the desperadoes cease firing when they see a mob of ranchers and Fuzzy riding to the rescue.

PEACE—BY ADOLF HITLER (RKO)

March of Time, No. 13 (13,113)

The latest issue of The March of Time, unfolding with a striking "V" and the opening bars of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, discusses Hitler's new propaganda offensive for peace. His career of conquest is reviewed, beginning with the annexation of Austria, and brought up to date with his attempts at victory in Russia and England. After each nation is brought under the Nazi swastika, the same words are uttered: "We have no more territorial demands." The subject frankly warns isolationists, Nazi-sympathizers in America, what a peace with Hitler would mean, if it could ever be arranged. On the other hand, the March of Time shows what President Roosevelt is doing to strengthen our own defenses and those of our allies, aided by the moral support of men like La Guardia and Willkie.

YOUR LAST ACT (MGM)

Passing Parade (K-287)

In this "Passing Parade" subject, John Nesbitt, commentator, tells the stories behind some of the strange wills in history. Francesca Nortyuega, a reformer, in her last will left her entire fortune to a niece with one provision; that the family goldfish never be allowed to swim around in the nude. Louis Morely, a hardened criminal, bequeathed his eyes to a seven-year-old blind girl. Alex. Hartery of New Orleans, whose wife was in the habit of attending seances, hid half his fortune in a strongbox, the hiding place of which he will tell her if she can contact him through spirit mediums. In the last episode, Nesbitt tells of Charles Lounsbury, who had no earthly possessions, other than the flowers, the idle fields and friendship to bequeath children and young men.

STEEDS AND STEERS (RKO)

Sportscope (14,312)

Ever since Billy was a kid, the cattle country of the West has been the playing field of the sportsmen of the West. Roping, riding and wrangling are hard and dangerous work. The "Rodeo" (Spanish for "Round-up" and American for "Action") offers the American cowhand fame and probably fractures. The highlights of the short are bronco-busting, bulldogging and calf roping—and the only difference between bronco-busting and steer-busting is that it's more powder with a shorter fuse. The short highlights these sportsmen who carved the West out of the wilderness, with a rope, a spur, and a branding iron, and pays tribute to the men who have kept alive the traditional sporting team of steer and steed.

IT HAPPENS ON ROLLERS (WB)

Sports Parade (6409)

Some of the country's most talented roller skaters are starred in this one-reeler. Roller skating can be as graceful and beautiful to watch as ice skating as the subject demonstrates. The skaters peform trick dances, jumps and twists—with perfect grace and agility. Among the soloists is Gloria Nordskog who has toured every state in the Union to give roller skating exhibitions.

THROWING A PARTY (WB)

Elsa Maxwell (6103)

Elsa Maxwell wagers that she can take any unknown girl and with the proper handling get her on the front pages of the papers within two weeks. She gets an actor friend of hers to pose as Dr. Boris Ivanovitch, a famous explorer who recently returned from Sumatra. She runs a party for him and invites all of the outstanding socialites. The pseudo-explorer brings a beautiful "native" girl to the party. She is the one Miss Maxwell is planning to have spread all over the front pages of the papers. Miss Maxwell announces that she decided to make Reeka, the native girl, her protege. However, the newspaper boys have been tipped off about the bet and are prepared for some such trick as this. Not a single line about the party breaks in the papers. Elsa then tries another method. She takes Reeka walking in the park, both of them dressed up in leopard skins, and accompanied by a huge ape. Again not a word about Reeka in the papers. There are now only five days left and Miss Maxwell is getting worried. As a last resort she sets Reeka up in a tent in the City Hall lawn. Again she fails to get any publicity. But during the two weeks, the young man with whom she made the bet has fallen in love with Reeka, who turns out to be a waitress. He discovers this and marries her. But Miss Maxwell wins her bet because all the papers carry pictures of this socially prominent man and his bride.

THE CUCKOO I.Q. (Col.)

Color Rhapsody (2510)

Here is a quiz cartoon burlesquing quiz programs. It features the undaunted Professor Cornelius Van Goon, renowned mental giant, as the one and only expert on the Board of Experts. Questions are fired at the professor and he fires the answers right back—all wrong. The professor thinks that the sardine is the most ferocious fish, and that one and one make five—an idea of the professor's mental genius.

HAPPY FACES (WB)

Broadway Brevity (6209)

Remember "Small Town Idol" and "Love's Intrigue." "Happy Faces" is on the same order. It's in the typical tradition of all the old Mack Sennett comedies, featuring the chase, the villain and the spotless heroine. And, of course, there's the intrepid hero, who is never there at the right time, but always emerges on top. A light-hearted commentator and a playful sound man have combined forces to make this sound track the highlight of the film.

HOST TO A GHOST (Col.)

Andy Clyde (2438)

Andy Clyde is in the building business, but decides to change to the wrecking business when he is nailed inside a new house and the place has to be torn down to get him out. Andy's first job is to wreck a haunted house. On the way, he and Henry, his colored helper, have a series of misadventures with traffic police, and thus it's nightfall when they reach the house. Things start happening from the moment they enter. A ghostly voice says the home used to be occupied by a Confederate general and later by a Union general and that every night the two re-fight the Civil War. So it seems, as the panic-stricken Andy and Henry are driven from corner to corner by shots, bugle calls and fierce bickerings of the generals. At dawn, the two discover most of the sounds come from phonograph records. As they laugh over their fears, real bullets pepper the house. Deputy sherriffs are closing in on crooks who make the place a hideout. As the criminals flee, Andy and Henry, now thoroughly fed up with the wrecking business, lead the way.

THE MAN WHO CHANGED THE WORLD (MGM)

Miniature (M-237)

This is the story of James Hargreaves, a weaver, who accidentally hit upon the idea of connecting a second wheel to the first. Thus the machine can hold eight spindles. Life becomes easy for Hargreaves. But the increased production of thread made possible by his machines sends the price of thread down. His fellow villagers in Blackburn are starving and have come to hate him. He is beaten and his shop is burned. Hargreaves tries to destroy his machines but the bankers have now obtained control.

ROBOT WRECKS (MGM)

Our Gang (C-299)

The "Our Gang" kids in this issue of the series, construct a mechanical man to do their chores for them. Working with discarded radio tubes, stove pipes, inner tubes and rubber boots, the gang builds what looks like a robot but when they try to make it work, it refuses to move. Slicker, the gang's arch enemy, helps Boxcar squeeze inside the mechanical man while the gang is away and when they return he tells them he has used an invisible ray to make it work. The robot causes all kind of damage before the gang discovers Boxcar is the cause.

THE MUSICAL BANDIT (RKO)

Ray Whitley (13,504)

Ray Whitley and his Rhythm Wranglers are playing in a hotel on the border. Business is booming because of the band. However, the owner, Virginia Porter (Virginia Vale), is about to lose the hotel due to the foreclosure of a note owned by Scroggs (John Dilson). The sheriff (Lloyd Ingraham) serves Virginia with the papers, which shows that Scroggs has transferred ownership to his sister, Mrs. Winters (Jane Kigley). When Mrs. Winters arrives, Ray, dressed as a bandit, stages a wild show in which he and his band pretend to be killers. Completely frightened, Mrs. Winters signs over the hotel to Virginia.

USE IT!

On the opposite page appears the master index to Product Digest, a cumulative catalogue of all information available to date on 1940-41 product and which has been published in preceding issues of Motion Picture Herald.

Check the title of any feature that you want to look up, turn to the designated page or pages of your file, and you will find all buying and booking information available up to this very minute — synopses, casts, credits, release dates, production numbers, running time, review references, Round Table references and Legion of Decency ratings.

Product Digest is published every other week alternately with the regular Release Chart.

The Release Chart carries, as always, an alphabetical index of titles, a breakdown by companies, star information, release dates, running time and review references. The Release Chart, published every other week, is a compact compilation of certain important booking information.

Product Digest, on alternate weeks, is cumulative, a more extensive compilation of similar information. The Release Chart is complete in itself. Product Digest carries only current information, but if you maintain a complete file of Product Digest, you will have, at your instant service, synopses, casts and other detailed data which could not conceivably be compressed into one issue. The cumulative alphabetical index of Product Digest, however, is a reference to all information that has been printed to date in all the issues of Product Digest.

If you misplaced or have not saved any issue of Product Digest, write for duplicates.

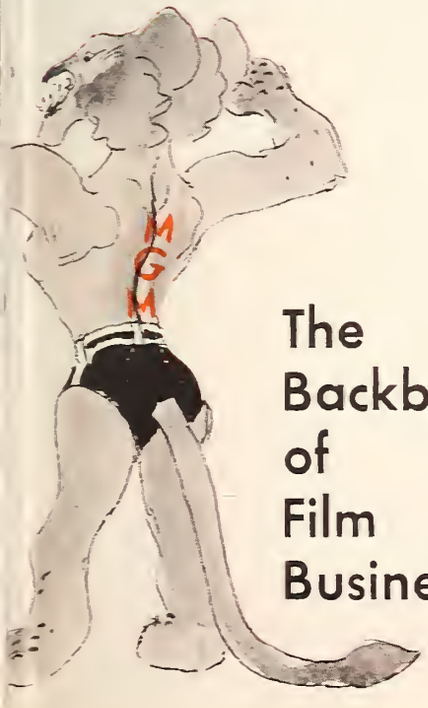
12,000 VOTES FOR M-G-M!



Leo is the sweetheart of the industry—
12,000 exhibitors say so.
That's a lot of accounts and Leo's so proud!
It's a new high for M-G-M and the industry.
Those 12,000 will be back again next year because Strong ties hold Leo and his customers together.
The mechanics of distribution may change—
But not Leo!
He represents something beyond a contract.
A spirit of good-will that seeks to make business a pleasure
And a mutually profitable enterprise.
Our current season ends in a blaze of glory:
"Life Begins for Andy Hardy" a summer sensation!
(Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland together again!)
"When Ladies Meet" a hot-weather life-saver!
(Imagine 4 big stars in one show—Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor, Greer Carson, Herbert Marshall)
Yes, Leo is your all-year-'round sweetheart. Look.

WAR & PROPAGANDA

A WIDE and abundantly uninformed confusion concerning the motion picture industry and the motion picture theatre in a world at war is currently being made conspicuous both externally and internally—all the while doing the institution of the screen no good.

Let it be set down here again, now, and as it will be on occasion in the days to come, that the proper function of the motion picture industry is the service of its customers with what they come to the box office to buy, which is entertainment. If that function fails, the motion picture fails, and with it all those who pertain to it, and no one and no cause is served.

The motion picture has never made a dime selling anything but entertainment.

The screen's entertainment has been successful only when it has been made to the standards, tastes and thought patterns of the plain and simply understood majority of the people of the whole United States.

There has been, down the years, ample experimentation, often at very large expense, directly, and indirectly perhaps costing even more. If there has to be an accounting entry, perhaps it can be called "education". That will depend on whether or not there has been education.

CONSIDERABLY the current concern in several sectors of the motion picture arises in sequel to expressions from Senator Burton K. Wheeler and Senator Gerald P. Nye, who have charged in substance that the screen is seeking to incite our public to war.

Citations which these statesmen have offered, to the even casually informed, will not prove highly convincing. There is, for instance, that case of "Sergeant York". When the project to make that picture began, the world thought it was at peace, and Herr Hitler was either hanging paper or fuming in jail. "Sergeant York" is Americana, not propaganda. If "York" is propaganda, then so are Davy Crockett, Natty Bumpo and Paul Bunyan, all his fellows in tradition. Then there is the reference to "The Great Dictator", which most of Mr. Charles Chaplin's contemporaries in Hollywood did not want him to make, considering that it would be no contribution to the status quo. Part of that picture was comedy, some of it tragedy, and where a dramatic climax might have been it culminated in a Chaplin curtain preachment for peace. It was entirely pacific, entirely Chaplin-in-person. Further, germane to the considerations before us now, it had only a little more than nothing to do with the main stream and flow of motion picture output. Certainly it sold no war.

It would appear that when Senator Nye made up his lists he did some broad conclusion jumping.

The militant Senators somewhat more than intimate that the motion picture is being told what to do and say. It has not been given any orders on ideologies from authoritative positions so far. That obtains almost exclusively in the totalitarian areas of Russia and Hitlerlands. It is probably equally undesirable that we should have Senator Wheeler and Senator Nye seek to tell the screen what to do, or not to do.

Emphatically the best way to preserve the screen for America and Americanism will be to let the customers run it the way they like it, as attested in long box-office experience. So long as the citizens retain the ballot at the polls, they can be equally trusted with the vote at the box office. Also by processes of their own, sometimes tedious but always inevitable, they make clear what they do not want on the screen. Then, by processes sometimes equally tedious, the motion picture makes its arrangements to realign.

So recently that the red ink is just on the back of the page, some of those who felt impelled to deliver pictures with messages and what they called "social consciousness" had their fling.

Right now Hollywood, in terms of picture at least, is almost exclusively concerned with selling some seats.

When real war fever pictures appear, it will be because a conspicuous majority of the customers already have war fever. All available reports of any authenticity so far indicate that in the United States war fever is decidedly localized, both geographically and politically.

MEANWHILE, there is need in several quarters for a recognition of that clear, if narrow, line which divides the propaganda expression from normal, wholesome American patriotism. No matter how narrow that line may be, it is as well defined as the edge of a precipice.

Competent showmen know those thin lines of demarcation. An excellent example is available in the career and works of George M. Cohan, greatest flag waver of them all. Examination of the record, however, will show that Mr. Cohan never tried to start waves or build tides. He rode them. Where American emotion flowed, there was George M. Cohan in midstream. He brought to entertainment a capacity to speak with and for his big public. It was always with and for that he spoke, not at them. He did not tell them what to think, what to say. It was his gift to know what they thought and to say it for them, with lilting lyrics and tuneful grace.

No one, except maybe pilfering playwrights, ever went to a Cohan show looking for ideas. The customers bought seats to hear themselves set to music.

Given the skill, that the motion picture may also do—and no more.

The customers of the motion picture are not looking for instruction from either Washington or Hollywood. They can do with some information, preferably consisting of facts, and they would like very much to have from both Washington and Hollywood what each has been engaged to do.

MARQUEE NAMES

ON examination of the talent rosters of 1941-42 production, the Herald's Hollywood bureau finds a total of 139 marquee names cast for 342 stellar roles in pictures made or in the making. Some of them especially in demand are in productions for several studios. So far the average

Propaganda Hunt

Washington Bureau

MEMBERS of the Congressional isolationist bloc are looking forward to a field day September 3 when a subcommittee of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee will open hearings under the Nye-Clark resolution for an investigation of motion picture and radio propaganda in behalf of United States intervention in the European war.

The subcommittee in charge of the measure, of which Senator D. Worth Clark of Idaho is chairman, met to consider its course August 7 and decided to call hearings. On the same day Representative William B. Barry of New York introducing an almost identical resolution in the House, declaring that the public is entitled to know "what persons or groups sponsor motion pictures that are obviously for propaganda purposes and not for amusement" and who is sponsoring radio propaganda.

The Senate subcommittee consists of Senators Homer T. Bone of Washington and Ernest W. McFarland of Arizona, Democrats, and Charles W. Tobey of New Hampshire and C. Wayland Brooks of Illinois, Republicans.

They agreed that testimony on film and radio propaganda should be secured from the executives of motion picture companies, broadcasting stations and networks, and radio commentators. Senator Clark expressed the desire to hear the most influential men in the industry, including Will Hays.

Preview Puzzle

LAY PRESS people attending the Monday preview of Samuel Goldwyn's "The Little Foxes," exhibited at a Hollywood theatre with nobody barred and quite as if no exclusion of newspaper and magazine writers from pre-release screenings of product distributed by consent decree signatories had been ordered as a trade rule, are wondering how come.

Lay press people keep none too abreast of trade news. Many of them didn't know that Mr. Goldwyn had switched release affiliations from the non-signatory United Artists to the signatory RKO-Radio until they saw the name of the distributing company on the screen.

Some newspapers called up the studio to inquire wherein the Goldwyn picture differed from other product distributed by the studio in point of lay press accessibility.

They were told that the Goldwyn picture or pictures would not be included in the distributing company's block-of-five, but would be sold on a different basis altogether.

They were told that's what makes the difference.

They don't get it.

indicates two and a half screen appearances per name.

Hollywood, rather unofficially, complains of a continuing talent problem. The problem, of course, is not in a dearth of skills but of accepted names—ready-made fame, cashable at the box office.

An important service of assistance toward enlargement of the talent rolls has now been offered to Hollywood from the theatre showmen of the United States and Canada, through the agency of Motion Picture Herald and its "Stars of Tomorrow" poll, recorded last week, and supplemented this week, by a geographical analysis—also a comparative poll of the motion picture critics of the newspapers.

This Herald poll constitutes the first exploration of the field of personalities of promise in anything resembling nation-wide research. The findings of the poll can immediately remove from speculation Hollywood's consideration of probable wide acceptance and effectiveness, promotional programs and plans for a whole array of rising talent.

Large significance attaches to the remarkably clear national unanimities of evaluation. The regional returns in this issue indicate that the box-office public, as represented by the exhibitor reports, is the same public from Maine to California, and almost equally from Hudson Bay to the Rio Grande. Further, the unanimity of the poll enhances its significance to Hollywood.

THE Rockefeller-and-Whitney program of good neighboring with the Latin lands to the south, which started ever so long ago with Señor Diego Maria Rivera's unborn gynecological mural for the RCA building, progressing thence through amazing shows of stone age grimaces at the Museum of Modern Art, has arrived at an ultimate something, utterly prickly, with a Mexican cactus show in one of the street level gardens of Rockefeller Center, alias Radio City. Fifth Avenue strollers are presented a display of two thousand forms of cacti, transplanted from their desert homes to a new synthetic desert down between the waffle-grids of one of our adjacent canyons. One look at it and you are optically stabbed with horticultural relations. Is that subtle?

THE acquisition of two million shares of Associated British Pictures, which has 400 theatres, from Mrs. John Maxwell, by Warner Brothers, an investment in millions, is a most explicit expression of an opinion that "there will always be an England".

Disney Problems

EVEN as Walt Disney rode the wave of the future below the Rio Grande, this week, an undertow formed at his Hollywood plant: the Screen Cartoonists Guild, accepting a settlement two weeks ago, of a 62-day strike, threatened to desert work again. Meanwhile came disclosure of dollar problems in the enterprise.

The Disney studio wants to discharge "temporarily" 207 returned strikers, 49 non-strikers. Gunther Lessing, Disney attorney and studio vice-president, explained funds must be conserved until completion of new financing, without which there will be no new production, he added.

The Guild objected to the ratio between strikers and non-strikers.

The dispute was put to J. R. Steelman, Labor Department conciliator, who engineered the strike settlement.

Mr. Lessing Tuesday charged the Guild with failure to observe several settlement points. The Guild was not to penalize non-strikers; Mr. Lessing said initiation fees were raised $20 to $85, over a previous two to five dollars. He also pointed out that persons to be dropped from company payrolls were chosen by a six-man board not including a company officer; that strikers had not been discriminated against by the studio, and that 116 employes had contracts with the studio, hence could not be laid off.

"Sweater Girl's" Sister

CHERRY PREISSER, daughter-in-law of Harry L. Hopkins, the same who now is "officially missing" somewhere between Russia and the U. S. in the same mystery as the President's cruise, is, according to Paramount Pictures, Inc., to make her film debut as soon as her husband, David Hopkins is transferred to the West Coast branch of the advertising agency with which he is employed. Miss Cherry was formerly teamed in vaudeville with her sister June. And June, incidentally, is now completing a starring role in "Sweater Girl," for Paramount.

Hollywood Journalism

A LIBEL suit, brought by W. R. Wilkerson, editor and publisher of the Hollywood Reporter, against Hanna Publications, and "Fraud and Answers" magazine, in which $100,000 damages was asked, came to light this week in Los Angeles Superior Court. Mr. Wilkerson and the Wilkerson Daily Corporation each filed action charging "wilful, false, scandalous and malicious" libel and each demanded $50,000 damages from Hanna Publications, the magazine, A. G. Stamm, Marcy B. Satin, Edward F. Whitman, Dan Paul and 15 Jane and John Does because of the article, "Hollywood Blackmail," which was published in the June issue of the magazine.

The defendants filed answer saying that which was published was a matter of "common knowledge" and "current public news," and that Mr. Satin was owner and publisher of "Fraud and Answers" magazine.

The article referred to told of "hidden taxation" of Hollywood figures, of invitations to "spend an evening of pleasure at Ciro's," cafe operated by Mr. Wilkerson, and of a "payoff" of $750 by one of Hollywood's studio comptrollers to Mr. Wilkerson, purportedly for a favorable review of a picture. The story said "any studio comptroller or publicity director" could testify to payoffs for favorable publicity.

The answer stated "all matters and things stated are currently reported and believed to be true in the State of California and throughout the United States and were published in the periodical, 'The Coast,' in August, 1938, and so communicated to these defendants and published by them as matters of current public news, they verily believing same to be true."

Blackton Dead

JAMES STUART BLACKTON, one of the founders of the Vitagraph Company, died Wednesday evening in St. Vincent's Hospital, Los Angeles, of injuries received in an automobile accident Saturday. He was 66.

Born in England and educated there, Mr. Blackton came to America in 1885. In association with William T. Rock and Albert E. Smith, he went into motion picture production in 1897, using a projector rebuilt as a camera. Vitagraph was incorporated in 1900.

Near the end of the silent picture era Mr. Blackton produced "The Glorious Adventure" with Lady Diana Manners. Made in England with the Prizma process, it was one of the first all color feature pictures.

Breen Policy

JOSEPH I. BREEN told a press audience, on assuming production command of RKO-Radio after resigning his post as Production Code Administrator, that, in his opinion, motion pictures were made or ruined in the writing, wherefore much of his time was to be spent in inspecting and advising upon the scripts of pictures to be made under his management.

This week Tuesday RKO-Radio announced establishment of a junior-writer group under the direction of Collier Young, Story Department head, placing young scriveners fresh out of college and elsewhere under supervision of experienced writers delegated to instruct and coach them in their work. Six juniors are in on the founding of the group.

RKO-Radio last week announced "All That Money Can Buy" as a new title for "Here Is a Man," which had been "The Devil and Daniel Webster" for a while, following a short career in work as "A Certain Mr. Scratch," the last two switches having occurred since inception of the Breen regime and to the general confusion of the resident press and the studio press department.

This week the Breen management tilted local eyebrows by changing the title of "Four Jacks and a Queen," now in work, to "Street Girl."

Out of the Frying Pan

WHEN Howard Hughes came to consideration of his production "The Outlaw," so the Hollywood pigeon post reports, he expressed some impatience with reactions from the Production Code Administration and decided to submit his picture to a number of state censorship boards in its pristine state. The consequence was, the story runs, that the state boards cut a deal more footage than the Code Administration had suggested.

WHERE THE MARQUEE NAMES ARE GOING IN NEW SEASON'S PRODUCT

Studios Have Assigned 342 Stellar Roles in New Season Product to 139 Top Names; 41 Have Two Pictures Each

by VANCE KING
in Hollywood

Productions and castings up to this week in Hollywood promise that the 139 "name value" players will appear in the new season's pictures an average of 2.5 times each. To date 342 top stellar roles have been assigned for 1941-42 product, including pictures completed.

The assignments are not completed, and some shifting may take place in the announced schedules; but it is evident that new conditions to be faced by the signatories to the consent decree have made Hollywood production "personality conscious" to a degree not quite achieved before.

The number of roles finished or assigned to the stars and featured players ranges from one to six each, with 41, the largest group of the 139 names, having two pictures apiece.

In order come: one picture assignment, 37; three picture assignments, 34; four picture, 16; five picture, 9; and six picture, 2.

Fluctuation in the various classifications may be expected, depending upon production exigencies, public demand via the boxoffice, "omnibus" star casting, the fitting of casts to literary properties acquired and already announced for production without players, the decision to "support" players being groomed for stardom with names, and many other causes.

Some Assignments Completed

As the new season gets under way, day by day announcements of further castings are expected.

Naturally, most likely to change their assignment numbers are those in the one- and two-picture groups. For example, Ingrid Berman, whose one announced picture, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," is already completed for MGM, may make a picture for David O. Selznick, who holds her contract, or be loaned out to another studio.

Clark Gable has no announced picture for the new season except "Honky Tonk," which is being edited. Joan Fontaine has completed "Before the Fact," at RKO, and Selznick, who holds her contract also, has not made any deals for further pictures. John Garfield, who has appeared this current season and last in a number of pictures for Warners, has only "Bridges Built at Night" set for him there.

Another case in point is Robert Montgomery, whose "Unfinished Business" (Universal) has been finished. Montgomery may not make another picture this year, having been named a U. S. Navy attache at London.

Among the two picture assignments are:

Don Ameche, having finished "Female of the Species," MGM, and now working in "Confirm or Deny," 20th Century-Fox.

Lew Ayres, set for two "Dr. Kildare" pictures at MGM.

DEFENSE COMMITTEE ADOPTS NEW NAME

The Motion Picture Production Defense Committee, headed by Y. Frank Freeman, announced last Friday that a new name was adopted for the committee, henceforth to be known as the Hollywood Division of the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense.

The Committee also announced that Robert Riskin, W. R. Wilkerson and Arthur Ungar were added as members to the group which represents the motion picture industry in all activities concerning the national defense program.

Jeffrey Lynn, who appeared in the past in quite a number of Warner pictures, and now working in "The Black Widow," having completed "Law of the Tropics."

George Raft, announced for "Night Freight," Warners, and an untitled vehicle at Universal.

Leading with the most assignments are Ann Sheridan and George Sanders, each of whom have six.

Having five each are:

Edward Arnold, three of whose are finished; Claudette Colbert, one of whose is finished and two quite distant; Bob Hope, with one finished, one in work; Chester Morris, scheduled for two at Columbia and three at Paramount; Pat O'Brien, scheduled for three at Columbia and two at 20th Century-Fox; Robert Preston, with three finished and working in one; Barbara Stanwyck, two completed and working in one; Lupe Velez, one finished and working in one.

Having four are Joan Bennett, Jack Benny, Humphrey Bogart, Bing Crosby, Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Paulette Goddard, Cary Grant, Ida Lupino, Ray Milland, Tyrone Power, Mickey Rooney, Randolph Scott, Penny Singleton, Gene Tierney and Jane Withers.

Names disappearing from the Hollywood production scene this year include Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier, who went to England for war work; the Marx Brothers, who have disbanded their cinema troupe; James Stewart, conscripted by the U. S. Army.

Following is an alphabetical list of the 139 marquee fillers and their commitments, some finished, some in work:

HOW CRITICS AND EXHIBITORS DIFFER ON STARS of TOMORROW

Three Women Stars Favored by Press and Theatremen for Top Places but Order of Placement Is Different

An exhibitor may take a critic's word for it about half the time, according to the statistical showing that emerges from a comparison of last week's "Stars of Tomorrow" poll of showmen with the total this week available from MOTION PICTURE HERALD's examination of the opinion of the picture critics of some five hundred newspapers of the United States and Canada.

Five out of ten choices for the "Stars of Tomorrow" by the critics were also among the exhibitors' top ten. Three men among the top ten just missed the showmen's list of favorites, having placed eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth. And two women, Betty Field and Geraldine Fitzgerald, well down in the "next fifteen" according to the combined vote of independent and circuit theatre operators, shine in seventh and eighth place in the critics' tabulation.

The critics were given the same opportunity to chart the course of future stars as were the exhibitors. They were to choose new box office names, although some insisted this was not their province, and made their selections on the basis of excellent performances. The distinction was theirs, one which the exhibitors had not made and probably would dispute.

They suggested few names not mentioned by the showmen, although their range of choice was quite as wide when the respective relative number of ballots is considered. Their favorites appeared with approximately the same frequency, gaining similar percentages of the vote.

Majority for Hayworth

At the top Rita Hayworth was named on many more than half the ballots, while the tenth choice, Louis Hayward, was mentioned on somewhat less than a third.

Forty-five names—with the exhibitors it was fifty—received more than five per cent of the votes, the first twenty-five all boasting more than fifteen per cent in both polls.

Laraine Day, the exhibitors' favorite, was a good second, and Ruth Hussey a strong third in both tabulations.

The ten were evenly balanced, three men following three women, and two pairs of each closing the list. Ronald Reagan gained ground over new rivals, William Holden and Stirling Hayden, both of whom had missed the exhibitors' top ten by but a few percentage points.

Betty Field was the real surprise. Twenty-fourth on the showmen's poll, she had been highly praised by a few admirers, but was seemingly unfamiliar to many. The critics, however, applauded her performances in "Of Mice and Men" and "What a Life." There were, in fact, a few side bets that she was "best of the lot."

Geraldine Fitzgerald also moved up into the critics' top ten. She was nineteenth in the combined exhibitors' ranking. Perhaps "Wuthering Heights" was more of a critics' picture.

Jeffrey Lynn and Louis Hayward completed the chosen ten. Well up on the showmen's honor roll, they were favorites in many regions of the country, and strong in Canada as well.

There were few new names in the next fifteen, and but two in the following twenty who had not received as much as five per cent of the exhibitors' votes. Several of these are newer players whose pictures have not reached all the showmen, but who have earned the praise of reviewers on the country's leading newspapers.

Few showmen had considered the motion picture critic in their appraisals, but the

Favorites Are Favorites In Spite of Geography

The "Stars of Tomorrow" poll indicates that geography has little bearing on the relative popularity of players with their audiences and, consequently, with the exhibitors who show their pictures. Analysis of returns reported in the HERALD last week indicates that Laraine Day, who received 60 per cnt of the votes of independent exhibitors and circuit theatre showmen combined, led in five of eight sections of the country, and in Canada as well. She was, in fact, among the top ten in the vote from every state.

Rita Hayworth, who placed second in the combined vote, was the favorite in New England and in the West Central States, while ranking third in the ballots from exhibitors in Canada.

The Mountain States, in keeping with their vaunted ruggedness, were alone in showing preference for men. Robert Preston gained first place there, although four women trailed him closely.

The Canadian favorites included Louis Hayward, Gloria Jean and Lucille Ball, as well as seven of the first ten in the combined exhibitors' poll. Louis Hayward was especially popular in the vote from the Dominion, placing a good second after Laraine Day.

Stirling Hayden, William Holden, Eddie Bracken and Louis Hayward, although not among the ten "Stars of Tomorrow" in the combined vote, all made the top ten in several regions.

The ranking ten in each of nine geographical divisions are listed below:

How Critics and Exhibitors Differ

critics were generally conscious of the important part played by the exhibitor in justifying their selections. One went so far as to say that the paucity of stars was the fault chiefly of the exhibitor whose caution kept the same names on the marquees. Critics too were sure that stars could be "made," and felt that the man who runs the picture and tries to induce the customer to see it, does the making, or should do it. Others insisted that the responsibility should rest on the shoulders of production.

Casting was given as a paramount factor. Not only should parts suit the performers, but their promotion to stellar roles should be properly timed, critics argued.

The critics, were, in general, as enthusiastic as showmen over the idea of new names and new faces. "If any five of these make it, it will be terrific for Hollywood and the fans," was a typical California comment. There were few die-hards among them who found no one on the horizon to take the place of their personal favorites, although several suggested that their choices were not "the type they are going for now."

"These are not choices of showmen," one critic announced. "Chosen for their ability, not box office," warned another. The critics seemed to feel that there was an indefinable quality apart from talent, beauty and personality which made public favorites, and they considered themselves less able to gage it than the exhibitors whose esthetic appreciation could be more easily divorced from business interests.

The results, side by side, tell quite a different story. With few exceptions, and with due regard for the eclecticism of critics, the same players were favored with the votes of both groups. Whether you call it box office appeal, screen glamour, or dramatic presentation—and it was called all of these—you get much the same answer.

Federal Agency Bill Exempts Talent

Employment agency legislation in Congress which would have brought talent bureaus and actors' agents under Federal control, requiring payment of an annual fee of $100 and posting of bonds ranging from $3,000 up, has been amended so as to exempt professional talent, it was disclosed Monday in Washington, D. C.

The bill originally was introduced last May by Rep. John H. Tolan of California, principally to control private employment agencies supplying common labor. Talent agencies, however, found that the wording of the measure was such as to bring their activities within its scope and made representations accordingly to the Congressmen.

As a result of these representations, Rep. Tolan has introduced a revised bill specifically providing that it shall not apply to "any person who is engaged exclusively in offering or attempting to procure or in procuring employment to employees in any bona fide professional capacity."

The measure applies to employment agencies engaged in interstate commerce.

REPORTS IN ON LATIN LANDS, BUT WHITNEY GOES TO SEE "FIRST HAND"

Film Head of Coordinating Committee To Consult with Exhibitors and Distributors on New Plans for Cooperation

Of direct significance to the motion picture industry is the announcement this week from John Hay Whitney that he will leave by plane from Miami on August 20th for a three-month safari into South America. Mr. Whitney is chairman of the motion picture division of the Rockefeller Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs. He has had many reports. Now his purpose in visiting Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru and Uruguay is to conduct, "first hand," a fact-finding survey to determine the Latin American film market and to observe audience reaction and preferences for Hollywood-produced pictures. Mr. Whitney intends to speak directly with South American exhibitors, leaders of picture studios, representatives of United States film companies in the the various republics and with government officials.

It is reported from Buenos Aires that executives of Argentina's five leading film producing firms are hopeful that Mr. Whitney will be able to work out with them a joint distribution plan whereby pictures made in Latin America will be distributed throughout the republics and the United States by Hollywood companies.

Reports indicate here that Mr. Whitney and his committee have been less than satisfied with the various surveys conducted by individuals operating independently of the Whitney division, and that his sojourn aims to solve the problem of Hollywood film-fare for the Americas in the hope of avoiding such conflicts and adverse reactions as have greeted two recent releases. At mid-week, it was not decided whether or not Francis Alstock, Mr. Whitney's assistant, would accompany the division chief or whether Mr. Alstock would remain in charge of activities while the "boss" was away.

Brazil First

First stop in the Whitney itinerary will be Brazil, where his arrival will coincide with the opening in Rio de Janeiro, on August 23rd, of Walt Disney's "Fantasia," released by RKO. "Fantasia" will open in Buenos Aires, Argentina, on September 9th. Mr. Disney and 16 members of his studio staff are now on their way by plane, for a two-month journey in South America, where they will put into work a series of short animated films incorporating Latin American literature, legend, humor, music and customs. The Disney project will be conducted in cooperation with the short subject-documentary film department of the Whitney division, headed by Kenneth MacGowan, former Twentieth Century-Fox producer. Mr. Disney's Latin American tour was delayed when his studio strike broke out.

Portuguese and Spanish versions of "Dumbo" and "Bambi," two forthcoming full-length Disney features, and a Portuguese version of "The Reluctant Dragon" will be dubbed during the time Mr. Disney and his crew are in South America. The itinerary calls for a ten-day stay in and around Rio de Janeiro, then to Buenos Aires, where the group will maintain headquarters. After a month in the Argentine, the crew will trek via plane up the west coast of South America, through Central America and Mexico and then return to the United States.

Shortwave Interest Roused

Another project in which the Rockefeller committee is more than casually interested is the Pan-American network which the Columbia Broadcasting System is setting up to provide short wave broadcasts by the network in America to be picked up by Latin American stations and re-broadcast over long wave. CBS has already sent powerful receiver sets to 67 stations in the Americas to insure perfect reception. By November, CBS hopes to have 100 Latin American stations lined up for the re-broadcasts. Meanwhile, Guy Hutcheson, CBS engineer, left last week-end for a six-month 20,000-mile tour in South America to visit the 67 stations in 20 republics which are planning to re-broadcast. Mr. Hutcheson will survey reception conditions and facilities and will consult with radio engineers.

It was reported in New York early this week that CBS president, William S. Paley, had a meeting with officials of the Rockefeller committee to determine the extent of financial assistance which the committee might provide for Pan-American unity through the airlanes.

In Mexico City last Thursday a three-day conference, the first of its kind, was conducted by the Columbia Broadcasting System's "School of the Air of the Americas," at which educators and government officials of all American countries joined with radio engineers and technicians. The Mexican Government, officially acting as host to more than 1,000 delegates from Canada to Chile, provided the Mexican National Palace of Fine Arts for the meeting place.

Representing the Rockefeller committee at the conference was Dr. Carleton Sprague Smith, music director, who arranged music demonstrations for the meeting and whose program "Music of the Americas" will be broadcast next autumn. The committee provided traveling expenses for the Golden Gate Quartet and Alan Lomax, director of the Archives of American Folk Music of the Library of Congress, so that they could participate in the meeting. Part of the three-day program was broadcast by the CBS network in the United States and short-waved to Latin America. Speakers included Dr. Luis Sanchez Ponton, conference chairman and Mexican Secretary of State Ezquiel Padilla. Sterling Fisher, CBS's director of education, assisted in arranging the program.

THEY FINALLY GOT AROUND TO IT

Linotype operators for the trade press, newspapers and magazines will greet with cheers news that the Nelson Rockefeller organization changed its official title recently, slicing it from 13 to eight words and from 82 ems to 44 ems. Original committee name was: Office of the Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations Between the American Republics. Now it will be known as: Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs. The public, probably, will continue to refer to it as "that Rockefeller outfit."

Wonder what's going to hapen to the stacks of letterheads, envelopes, inter-office memo pads, gold-lettering and other paraphernalia ordered under the old regime?

Reisman to Rio for RKO Convention

Phil Reisman, RKO Radio Pictures' vice president in charge of foreign distribution, will leave by plane from Miami on Wednesday, August 20th, en route to Rio de Janeiro where he will hold a convention for the company's South America sales force at the Copacabana Palace Hotel. Mr. Reisman will travel with John Hay Whitney, chairman of the motion picture division of the Rockefeller Committee. While in Rio, Mr. Reisman will confer with Walt Disney who will attend the convention, scheduled for August 23rd.

Bruno Cheli, managing director for RKO in Brazil, and Ben Y. Cammack, RKO manager in Argentina are in charge of all convention arrangements.

Other South American delegates attending are: Rene Glucksmann, RKO distributor in Uruguay, who arrives in Rio de Janeiro on Wednesday, August 13th. On August 20th are due Aldo Cozzani, manager of the Buenos Aires Exchange; Guillermo Reich, sales manager and supervisor of branches in Argentina and Net Clark of the Argentina office. Daniel Greenhouse, RKO manager for Chile, will be present as well as the following delegates from the Brazilian territory: Dino Dinelli, assistant sales manager and branch managers Nelson Ozorio, Pedro Esperanca, Waldemar Bard. Jose Maria Henriques, Jefin Ranowich and Mario Perfetti.

Crown Joins MacGowan

Al Crown, formerly with Grand National in Europe and Latin America, has joined the Rockefeller Office for Improving Cultural and Commercial Relations with the American Republics. He will serve under Kenneth MacGowan in handling distribution of films in Latin America.

MYERS GIVES SENATORS 'FAIR' TAX PROPOSALS

Allied Chief Attacks Free Shows, Juke Boxes; Asks Child Ticket Exemption

A four-way tax program designed to insure the Government a maximum of revenue from motion picture exhibition while at the same time protecting theatre owners from unfair competition was laid before the Senate Finance Committee Wednesday by Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States Association.

The Allied program provided for total elimination of the exemption from admission tax for adult admissions; exemption from the tax on children's tickets selling for not more than 10 cents; application of the coin-machine tax to juke boxes and extension of the tax to so-called "free" shows. Mr. Myers told the Senators, engaged in considering the tax bill as passed by the House of Representatives, that exhibitors have not opposed reduction of the present 20-cent exemption "because they recognize that the Government must increase its revenues."

"They feel strongly, however," he said, "that the exemption of nine-cent adult admissions is arbitrary and unworkable and may result in some cases in the reduction of adult 10-cent admissions to nine cents in order to avoid the tax. Also, we have received word that a few drive-in theatres have lowered their admissions to five cents, and these should not go untaxed."

The Allied representative pointed out that children's admissions in neighborhood and small town theatres are more or less stabilized at 10 cents, and that to apply a tax would bring the charge above the level which many parents can afford, with the result that theatres would have to cut the admission to nine cents, with the Government deriving no revenue.

Sees Protection for Revenue

"Little or no loss to the Government would be involved in exempting children's 10-cent admissions," he argued. "On the contrary, coupling such an amendment with the total abolition of the exemption on adult admissions would protect the revenue."

Asserting that the House bill's language applying a tax to coin-operated amusement and gaming devices was vague as to its imposition on coin motion picture machines, Mr. Myers urged that all "juke" boxes be specifically included in the provision.

"These machines, mostly located in taverns, bar rooms and resorts, exhibit motion pictures on a small screen and are, strictly speaking, motion picture shows," he said.

"They not only compete with theatres, but compete unfairly, since the legitimate motion picture industry, through the Production Code Administration in Hollywood censors its own pictures and observes standards of decency.

"This new juke box industry observes no such standards and its films are obviously dedicated to the bar-room trade. The movie juke boxes are no more bona fide vending machines than are the pin ball and slot machines specifically described in the bill."

Mr. Myers told the committee that "free" shows operate to the disadvantage of both the Government and legitimate exhibitors.

"An itinerant exhibitor owning or leasing a projecting machine, sound apparatus and some film (usually quite old) will arrange with the merchants in a town, or with an individual merchant, to give a free show as an advertising device to attract people into the town or into a particular store, tavern or eating place," he explained.

"These free shows compete directly and seriously with the theatres and tend to cut attendance at theatres and consequently to reduce the Government's yield from the admission tax. The exhibitors suggest that a tax of 10 per cent be imposed on the amount of the compensation received by such itinerant exhibitors.

"Super Network" Planned for All Radio Stations

Plans to bring every broadcasting station in the United States into a "supernetwork," were outlined last week by the Defense Communications Board, Washington. The results of months of study, the plan contemplates that stations shall remain in private hands, excepting those in possible battlefields.

Roughly, the scheme asks individual, and small groups of, stations to sound air raid warnings and carry local messages, the supernetwork transmitting important communications.

Coupled with these methods are plans that stations shall remain in continuous operation despite breakdowns of power or communication lines.

Of approximately 880 standard stations, nearly 500 are connected to telephone lines on which the supernetwork would be based; an additional 132 have studios in cities served by the lines, requiring only local links to come into the net; 240 others are along the lines and could be tapped in.

Only 12 stations are away from regular program lines; even these could be hooked in by ordinary telephone interconnections.

"The program transmission network is also available for instantaneous warnings to a particular station that it is in danger of becoming a beacon for enemy aircraft," the board noted, and added that, however, even with every station in the circuit, certain rural areas would be without reception. Plans for service to such sections are under consideration.

Considerable thought has been given to break-downs. Preliminary reports indicate reliability varies from station to station, but that high freedom from interruptions can be attained.

Power failure is the most frequent cause of interruptions, accounting for 50 per cent. The board is studying safeguards, such as emergency gasoline or steam-power generators. About 10 per cent of all stations have such equipment; some others are served by two or more independent sources of public nower.

Other measures outlined by the DCB include adequate replacement parts, reduction in antennae vulnerability, standby transmitters, alternative links between studios and transmitters.

Paramount's Second Block Announced

On Wednesday, Neil Agnew, general sales manager of Paramount, announced the company's pictures and dates for the second block-of-five showings. All screenings will be held in the company exchanges in the 31 key cities. The pictures are:

"Birth of the Blues" and "Among the Living," September 2nd; "Night of January 16th" and "Glamour Boy," September 3rd, and "Skylark," September 4th.

P. & S. Acquires "Journey"

The Northern California distribution rights to Theatre-on-Film's "Journey to Jerusalem" have been acquired by Photo & Sound, Inc., of San Francisco. The picture features the original Broadway cast of Maxwell Anderson's play of the same name and is a stage version on film, not a film version of the play.

PUBLIC WELFARE NOT JUST PROFITS ARBITRATION FACTOR DECISION SAYS

Myers Wins Washington Argument; Award Alters All Clearance in Virginia Town; Squire Award Cites 'Public Interest'

Substantial slashes of large circuit clearance in three arbitration awards, each affecting the operation of intervening theatres, and in one case completely rearranging a whole town's clearance, marked decisions published by New York and Washington arbitrators this week.

At Washington Abram F. Myers, general counsel of National Allied and a frequently outspoken critic of arbitration, scored a substantial victory in behalf of a client, L. W. Lea, Danville, Va., independent, when Judge Bolitha J. Laws on Monday cut deeply into the clearance margins which large circuits hold over the Lea and Schoolfield theatres in Danville. The two cases, Washington's fourth and fifth, were filed together in mid-May and were heard successively.

Unreasonable Clearance Ruled

Judge Laws ruled that Mr. Lea's first complaint, in behalf of his Lea theatre, had proved that the clearances granted by MGM, RKO, Warners and 20th Century-Fox to the Danville Enterprises' Capitol, Dan and Rialto theatres, and houses of the S. W. Craver circuit were unreasonable. He ordered that clearance between first and second runs be not more than 40 days and that no more than 14 days elapse between second and subsequent runs. In the past the third run Lea has been between 71 and 190 days behind Danville first runs, although contracts set a 60-day margin, Judge Laws found.

A second portion of the complaint charging that the distributors refused to license product as requested was dismissed by Judge Laws on the grounds that it involved specific run, which, under Section X of the consent decree is not arbitratable until September.

The second clearance complaint, for the Schoolfield theatre, operated by Mr. Lea in a converted YMCA auditorium in a milltown adjunct of Danville, won a reduction between first and second run Danville houses, from 60-90 days, to 40 days, paralleling the companion case. Existing clearance of 14 days between second and subsequent runs was maintained.

Judge Laws found that in practice the Schoolfield has been unable to obtain pictures until 119 days after the Danville first runs and commented that "this length of time is greatly in excess of what is required to protect the first and second run theatres."

Paramount, originally named in the complaint was dismissed on the grounds of affiliation with the Danville Enterprises. The latter is a Wilby and Kincey subsidiary and is included therefore in the list of Paramount exhibitor partnerships.

The decision by Judge Laws observed that all of the theatres involved in the arbitration had resorted to business stimulants, such as giveaways, games, and price cutting in a trade war prior to the action. During the hearing the practices were condemned by witnesses for both sides in the action.

At New York this week George A. Spiegelberg, attorney who arbitrated the clearance complaint of the Squire theatre, Great Neck, L. I., released the text of the 21-day decision in which he ruled against the consenting five, Skouras Theatre, operator of the Great Neck Playhouse, and Northern Amusement Corporation, operator of the Little Neck Theatre.

The award, which ended the longest case on the arbitration record to date, reduced the Playhouse clearance over the Squire from 30 to seven days and eliminated all clearance held by the Little Neck over the Squire.

Attorneys who examined the award reported that it was of precedental importance to future arbitration proceedings in its rulings on the status of interested theatres not party to the complaint. Also, they pointed out, it was the first award to expressly stipulate that public interest as well as business factors must be taken into consideration in arbitration proceedings.

Observing that the consent decree was entered by the Federal court to end "practices inimical to the public interest," Mr. Spiegelberg said: "The arbitrator must assume that the welfare of the public is to be given great consideration as well as the welfare of the distributors and that neither the financial returns of the distributors nor those of the exhibitors are the sole criterion by which the arbitrator is to be guided. . . ."

In contrast to the Virginia decisions of Judge Laws, Mr. Spiegelberg specifically restricts the rulings to the theatres which intervened in the complaint. Noting that theatres in Port Washington and Manhasset might be affected by an award, he observes that the term "theatres involved" as used in Section VIII of the decree is restricted to the houses which, intervening, submit themselves to the jurisdiction of arbitration.

Reviewing the history of the two theatres, the arbitrator found that the Skouras Playhouse had enjoyed a monopoly in Great Neck since 1923, despite the town's growth from a population of 7,000 to over 21,000. Further, he asserted the playhouse management had enjoyed preferential clearance which "was not arrived at on any reasonable basis of competition or negotiation." The arrangement, as well as new clearances following the erection of the Manhasset theatre by the same management, was acquired, the arbitrator adduced, through the pooling power of circuit operation.

Following personal inspection of the theatres, Mr. Spiegelberg observed that the complainant Squire was the most attractive of the three theatres involved, while the Playhouse, renovated following the start of construction on the Squire, was almost equally so. The Little Neck, he said, is "completely undistinguished" and "dingy." These physical factors were considered in reducing the clearance he noted. He further observed that the Little Neck resorted to games and other inducements.

Following a lengthy examination of the interlocking corporate status of the Skouras circuit's Playhouse, he also observed "home office overhead of approximately $5,000 a year should be disregarded. On this basis, as an individually operated theatre, the Playhouse would show profits of $12,000 a year rather than the loss indicated of $10,000."

While not "in any way undertaking to affect the run in the district under consideration," he concluded: "Though it is obvious from the decision herein rendered that for practical reasons existing clearance between the Playhouse and the Little Neck may have to be altered if, as a result of negotiation between the distributors and those theatres and the Squire, the distributors deem it to be their best interests to maintain the present order to run."

Chicago Settlement

Richard F. Kuhns, Chicago arbitrator, on Tuesday dismissed the Lawn theatre's clearance complaint against five decree majors and three interested theatres, following a compromise settlement acceptable to all parties. It provides that the Lawn will now have pictures in the fourth week of Chicago general release, instead of the seventh. James Steininger operates the Lawn.

The Portage theatre clearance complaint hearing, also at Chicago, was set for August 25th, with Thomas McConnell as arbitrator. The majors and three Balaban and Katz theatres are named.

The clearance complaint of Edward I. Singer, for Hill theatre, Philadelphia, was disallowed on Monday by arbitrator W. A. Wiedersheim. In Philadelphia's sixth case, heard on July 7th, the complaint was directed against Paramount, Warners and RKO, with the Affiliated Circuit's Rialto intervening. The complaint asked the arbitrator to set a maximum clearance for Warners' Sedgewick, which has seven days over the Rialto, which in turn has seven days over the Hill.

Mr. Wiedersheim found that the seven days clearance between the Rialto and Hill is reasonable, adding "and this be true even though the said seven days clearance follows seven days enjoyed by the Sedgewick over the Rialto." Costs were ordered shared equally by all parties.

At Los Angeles, also on Monday, the tribunal's third case, clearance petition of A. L. Sanborn, operator of the El Monte theatre in El Monte, Calif., was dismissed after all parties had reported a settlement. Mr. Sanborn had sought first run and 63 days protection for his theatre. The Edwards and Fox West Coast circuits had intervened.

Three New Clearance Cases

Three new clearance cases were filed this week in San Francisco, Buffalo and Dallas. Two asked day and date availability; one asked the clearance that was available at theatre when the owner assumed it in 1939.

In Dallas, the fourth arbitration case was filed by the Overton Amusement Company, Overton, Texas, which asserted the Gem and Strand theatres, that town, had unreasonable clearance over its Overton, and asked for day and date availability. Warner Brothers, RKO, 20th Century-Fox and MGM were named.

In Buffalo the fifth arbitration case was filed by the Dipson Theatre Corporation, alleging its Bailey theatre, Buffalo, had better clearance in 1939, when Dipson took over, than it had now, and asking for a resumption of that situation.

San Francisco's third case was filed by the Harvey Amusement Company, operator of the Westwood Theatre, Westwood, that state. It asks day and date availability with the Sierra Theatre in nearby Susanville.

Kansas City's second case, and the 100th arbitration complaint was filed Wednesday by the Dickenson theatre, Mission, Kan., against Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, RKO and Warners. It asks a cut from 56 to 14 days in Kansas City first runs' clearance.

New Haven

At New Haven, hearing of the clearance complaint of Fred Quatrano, owner of the New Newington theatre, Newington, Conn., under construction, against the consenting distributors, was continued to August 20th after a full day before arbitrator A. A. Ribicoff, Judge of the City Court of Hartford, on August 7th.

Motions of the respondents to dismiss the complaint because no actual contracts had been sold, no fixed clearance established, and no experience existed as to policy, competition, etc., were overruled by the arbitrator. Attorneys for the respondents and Warner circuit, operator of the New Britain first runs, which under terms offered by exchanges would exert 30 days clearance over Newington, cited the "Colony," Sayerville, N. J., and "Ken," Chicago cases, and argued that under section VIII of the decree all these factors should be considered.

Since no theatre ever operated in Newington before and no contracts had been entered into for current product, the respondents claimed the arbitrator would enter into a "hypothetical survey," on which it was unfair to base clearance. George S. Ryan, for the complainant, maintained that the decree provides for the consideration of "clearance applicable," which in this case was shown by certain "deals" and applications for contracts, or notices of availability which had been given the complainant, locally, though still unconfirmed by home offices, Peter Perakos, operator of the Palace, New Britain, second run, contended that he had to follow first run by 30 days, and that the New Newington should not be placed in a position preferential to his theatre with which it would compete. Fourth New Haven complaint, that of College Open Air, Middletown, against the consent distributors for "some run," will be heard Thursday, August 4th, before Herbert McDonald.

Hearing of the fourth New Haven case, some run complaint of the College Open Air theatre at Middletown, against the Big Five, has been postponed from August 14th to October 6th by Herbert McDonald, arbitrator, on application of the complainant, Salvatore Adorno.

Cincinnati

Two clearance complaints by F. W. Rowlands of Columbus, Ohio, against the Neth circuit and Big Five were taken under advisement by Fred W. Koch, and Anthony B. Dunlap, arbitrators, at the conclusion of hearings last week at Cincinnati. Both cases seek an adjustment to seven days of the 21-day margins held by Neth's Eastern theatre over the Parsons and Neth's Markham over the Main.

Troy A. Feibel, Columbus attorney, represented Mr. Rowland, operator, and John A. Connro, Columbus, and Judge Edward A. Dixon, Cincinnati, were counsel for J. Real Neth. Fred Pride, of the 20th Century-Fox legal department, represented the five consenting companies.

Those testifying included P. J. Wood, secretary ITO Ohio; Homer Bloss, manager of Rowland's Main, Mr. Rowlands and Mr. Neth. Other witnesses were: Edwin M. Booth, MGM exchange manager; Joseph J. Grady, 20th Century-Fox manager; Stanley C. Jacques, RKO manager; R. H. Dunbar, Warner manager, and Joseph J. Oulahan, Paramount manager.

Philadelphia

Robert J. Callaghan, Philadelphia attorney, who was arbitrator in the district's first arbitration case in April, was selected as arbitrator for cases Nos. 10 and 11, the clearance complaints of A. M. Ellis for his Liberty and Parkside, in Camden, N. J. The Liberty complaint will be heard on September 16th and the Parkside September 19th. Both actions name Metro, Warners, RKO, Paramount and the Warner circuits, Stanley, Grand and Lyric, in Camden.

Philadelphia's case No. 9, also filed by A. M. Ellis, will be heard on September 24th. Calvin H. Rankin, professor at the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania, who arbitrated case No. 3, which was settled before it came up for hearing, was selected as the arbitrator for this complaint. The case involves Mr. Ellis' Board theatre, Philadelphia, and is directed against Warner Brothers, Paramount, RKO and the Warner circuit.

DEFENSE STAMPS ADMIT CHILDREN

Furthering nationl defense efforts, the Victory theatre in Tampa, Fla., has inaugurated a policy of admitting children who show the doorman at the theatre a United States Defense saving stamp.

The policy is designed to aid the sale of these stamps and get the children interested in investing their dimes and quarters in stamps. To make it doubly easy for the children, they don't have to go to the local post office to buy the stamps. The theatre has them for sale at the box office.

Universal Quarter Profit Estimated at $1,200,000

Current calculations place Universal Pictures Company's earnings for the third quarter of its fiscal year at $1,200,000, with probable earnings for the 39 weeks ended July 27th estimated at $3,000,000. These figures indicate a gain by the company in every quarter for the past three years and also promise that Universal will set a new record of earnings for the 39-week period.

The company reported earnings of $780,802 for the third quarter of 1940, and earnings of $2,161,804 for the first 39 weeks last year. Last year, the 39-weeks' net earnings after Federal taxes and special amortization charges, was $1,771,804.

Universal describes the estimated third quarter earnings this year, which exceeded by more than $100,000 the earnings for the second quarter, as its best result for a single quarter in the past 10 years.

FCC Newspaper Fight in Court

Authority of the Federal Communications Commission to investigate newspaper ownership of broadcasting stations was considered by Judge James W. Morris of the District of Columbia Federal Court this week, following a hearing Monday on the FCC application to force James G. Stahlman, publisher of the Nashville Banner to answer a subpoena.

Mr. Stahlman, with Edward S. Friendly, business manager of the New York Sun, refused to testify before the commission July 31, Elisha Hanson, counsel for the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, explaining he had advised them to ignore the summons because, since the commission had no authority, its subpoenas were invalid.

FCC counsel charged in court that the hearing had been called to inform Congress on the newspaper-ownership situation.

This is the first intimation that the commission is investigating for legislation. FCC chairman James L. Fly, at hearings last month, said such a report might be made, but he indicated that it would be alternative to orders by the commission.

Mr. Hanson, opposing compliance with the commission's subpoena, told Judge Morris Supreme Court decisions held the FCC without power to investigate the business practices of station owners.

FCC counsel urged the court not to be influenced by possible effect of the inquiry. They pointed out the FCC might not act; that it could issue regulations, a statement of policy, or a report to Congress.

Meanwhile, Mr. Fly, in Washington, Monday, predicted settlement of the dispute between the FCC and the broadcasters, over the former's anti-monopoly regulations of some months ago.

Minnesota Outing Set

The Minnesota Amusement Company of Minneapolis on August 29th will stage its second annual northwoods fishing trip for newspaper men of the territory. The party will go to Lake of the Woods, Ontario, Canada, for three days of muskie fishing. Included are Charles Winchell and Everett Seibel of the Minnesota Amusement Company; Barrett Kiesling of MGM, Hollywood; Bernie Campbell, Minneapolis Times, and Bob Murphy and David Silverman, Minneapolis Star-Journal.

Hiram Brown in New York

Hiram S. Brown, Jr., associate producer of the recently completed serial "King of the Texas Rangers," starring Sam Baugh, ex-all American football star, arrived in New York this week for a five weeks vacation. When he returns to Hollywood Mr. Brown will take up his new duties at Republic as associate producer of feature productions. He is the son of Hiram S. Brown, Sr., former RKO president.

Robert Benchley Signed

Robert Benchley will have a featured comedy role in Columbia's Loretta Young-Frederic March co-starring vehicle, "Bedtime Story." Alexander Hall, who made "Here Comes Mr. Jordan" for the company will direct, with B. P. Schulberg producing.

SELLING UNDER NEW ORDER SLOW, EXECUTIVES TAKE TO THE FIELD

Sales Heads on Road with New Product Blocks; MGM, 20th-Fox Have Second Groups Ready for Trade Showing

With just two weeks remaining before the start, on September 1st, of "new order" operations under the consent decree the sales offices of the five consenting companies this week were busy hives. Generally, the source of all the humming was obscure.

All companies admitted they were busy at the work of selling contracts for the first groups of new season pictures, recently trade shown. The methods of operation appeared to vary widely, and details were cloaked in a "confidential" status. It appears, however, that the majors are faced with a task of heavy salesmanship. Exhibitors, generally, do not appear to have beaten their doors in for the first block-of-five product. Even among the scant proportion of theatremen present at trade shows the "show' em and sell 'em" operations have not been combined as readily as many salesmen had hoped.

Generalissimos of the home office sales departments in many cases are taking a direct hand in field selling of 1941-42 pictures. Some are in key spots endeavoring personally to sign major circuit and key first run accounts. Others are directing operations, after studying many and long bulletins from the field, behind home office desks and doors.

MGM Sells First Three

Figures on sales for the first blocks-of-fives were released by no company. All claimed "very satisfactory" progress in both first run and subsequent accounts. At least one company was ready to announce its second group of pictures for trade showing and others were expected to follow before September 1st with their second blocks.

At Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sales chiefs were reported in the field, overseeing selling of its first three new season pictures, trade shown during the last two weeks in July. William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, this week visited Chicago and closed a deal with Balaban and Katz for the first three pictures of the new season's product. He is also negotiating with Great States circuit. E. W. Aaron, assistant to Mr. Rodgers is supervising circuit and key first run deals in the east.

Last week Metro announced trade show dates for its second group of 1941-42 pictures, containing four titles. The quartet will be double featured in exchange projection rooms in 31 cities. The first Metro group, with three titles, was screened in 65 cities, chiefly in theatres. "Married Bachelor" and "Honky Tonk" will be paired for screenings through the Metro exchanges starting on August 25th while "Smilin' Through" and "Female of the Species" will be shown together starting on August 26th.

At Paramount, Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of sales, said his company's sales efforts were being directed along regional lines with a wide latitude in methods and policy in each district to meet local problems. One result of the new era selling, he said, was the institution of district release dates. These, however, are not expected to vary widely, Mr. Agnew says. In certain territories, he indicated, release dates will not be set until the block is at least 50 per cent sold to prospective accounts. Promotion and advertising will be keyed to fit the localized selling and exploitation problems in each exchange area.

Twentieth Century-Fox on Tuesday announced its second group of new season pictures would contain only two titles, "Belle Starr," and "Charlie Chan in Rio." The former picture, color drama of the Civil War, will be shown on August 22nd, the Charlie Chan on August 21st.

Screenings will take place in the Fox exchange projection rooms, as with the first block-of-five which was screened during the week of July 22nd. Local managers will be permitted to combine the pictures in a dual showing, or move the screening date, to suit local situations, a home office sales chief reported. "Charlie Chan in Rio" is set for release on September 5th, "Belle Starr" on September 12th.

RKO on Wednesday announced that "The Little Foxes," Samuel Goldwyn production, will be released for the current season, and sold singly. National release has been set for August 29th. The second RKO Radio block of new season product will not be announced for another week or ten days, it was reported.

"York" Sold Singly

Warner Brothers meanwhile continued trade screening "Sergeant York" throughout its exchanges. The picture is being sold singly. At Dallas the Warner home office reported the best trade-show turnout to date. Exhibitors representing 516 theatres with a capacity of 435,000 seats were present in behalf of every important circuit and independent operator they reported. Colonel H. A. Cole, president of National Allied States Association and Texas Allied, also attended.

Circuit executives included: Interstate Theatres, R. J. "Bob" O'Donnell, general manager; Raymond Willis, assistant general manager; John Q. Adams, secretary to Mr. O'Donnell; P. K. Johnston, head booker; Harry Sachs, key city booker; Charles Freeman, roadshow booker; James Cherry, Dallas city manager, and Jack Chalman, advertising; S. L. Oakley, Dallas manager of Jefferson Amusement Co.; Andy Sisk, Wallace Blankenship Theatres; "Buddy" Harris, Harris Theatres; Aaron Kahn, Underwood and Ezell Theatres; Harold Robb, Don Douglas, Adrian Upchurch, and Bill Sims of Robb and Rowley Theatres; Ray Higion, R. I. Payne, Lynn Stokard and H. M. Lockhart of R. E. Griffith Theatres; Red Daniels and Ed Loder with the U. S. Army Theatres.

Warner's "Sergeant York" screening in Oklahoma City on August 4th was attended by aprpoximately 20 exhibitors, including Pete Crown, Crown Theatres; Forrest Swiger, Standard Theatres; Athel Boyter, of Boyter Booking Agents; and other circuit and independent buyers.

From the 20th Century-Fox exchange at St. Louis it was reported by Ben Reingold, manager, that salesmen had selling underway in record time following the screenings two weeks ago. Eleven contracts had been signed within an hour of the last block-of-five screening and within a week 80 deals were closed. Eight circuits with 91 theatres were among 111 deals listed in two weeks.

The circuit contracts included Fox West Coast Circuit, 11 theatres; Rodgers Circuit, 8 theatres; Frisina Circuit of 28 theatres; St. Louis Amusement Company, 26 houses; Pirtle Circuit, 7 theatres; Barber Circuit, 3 theatres; Tanner Circuit, 3 theatres; Gasconade Circuit, 5 theatres.

NO "SLUMP" IN ARMY EXHIBITION

Who said that there was a slump in the box-office? Operating seven days a week, the two movie houses at Indiantown Gap, Pennsylvania, military encampment, are averaging a daily attendance of 700. Moreover, two additional houses are being constructed at the camp, one to seat 1,038 and the other with 400 seats.

U.A. Sales Soar in First Half of 1941

Sales of United Artists product throughout the world rose $3,600,000 during the first 28 weeks of 1941, compared with the same period last year, Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president, announced on August 7th. The figures represent one of the most active and successful half-years in the company's 22-year history, he said.

Played and earned figures for the same period, ending July 12th, increased $2,844,000 over 1940. Reports covered U. S., Canada, Central and South America, and all other foreign sales. "The health of United Artists has never been better," Mr. Kelly observed, paying tribute to all of the company's sales staff.

J. R. Grainger, president of Republic Pictures, has closed a deal with Mike Naify and R. A. McNeil to show Republic product in the 75 houses they control and represent in the San Francisco and northern California territory. Included in the deal are theatres of the Golden State, United California Theatres, and T & D circuits. Sid Weisbaum, 'Frisco branch manager for Republic, negotiated the deal for the company.

P. R. C. Meets in Atlanta, Dallas

Producers Releasing Corporation opened the second of its series of regional sales meets at the Henry Gady Hotel, Atlanta, on August 10th, with southern franchise holders and salesmen in attendance.

Delegates included Ike Katz, David Katz, B. S. Bryan, W. H. Rudisell, and B. Elliott of Atlanta; Edward Heller and E. Miller of Charlotte; and Fred Goodrow, William Thomas and P. A. Sliman of New Orleans. Arthur Greenblatt, PRC sales manager, told the agents that the company will adhere precisely to its 1941-42 product announcement with all pictures to be delivered on the national release dates as originally set. Action pictures will be stressed.

At the regional meeting of Producers Releasing Corporation, held in Dallas August 16th-17th, Arthur Greenblatt, general sales manager, announced the company will have completed production of four features and one western on its 1941-42 program by September 1st. The two-day meeting was held at the Adolphus Hotel in Dallas.

Mr. Greenblatt said the first feature would be released on October 3d, and the first of the new "Billy the Kid" series, starring Buster Crabbe, would be ready for release October 10th. He also announced that the first special on the new program was set for October 17th, with the initial production of the new "Frontier Marshal" series starring Bill Boyd, Lee Powell and Art Davis, to be released October 24th.

Franchise holders and salesmen attending were: Jack Adams, Sr., Jack Adams, Jr., Robert Adams, Walter Quade and Chick Turner, of Dallas; E. B. Walker and Bob McGraw, of Oklahoma City; B. Busby, D. Jones and F. Lawrence, of Little Rock.

The next regional meeting will be held by PRC in Kansas City, August 23-24th, with representatives from exchanges in Kansas City, Denver, Salt Lake City, St. Louis, Omaha and Minneapolis attending.

Republic Announces 17 for Next Quarter

Republic opened its second quarterly regional sales meeting for the New York region on Tuesday at the New York Athletic Club. Home office executives, eastern franchise holders and branch managers attended the two-day session headed by J. H. Grainger, president.

The midwest and southern meetings were to be held at the Drake Hotel, Chicago, on Thursday and Friday.

At the meetings Mr. Grainger announced eight features, eight westerns and one serial for production during the next 13 weeks. The schedule follows:

Features: "Marines on Parade," with Al Pearce and his Gang, produced by Fanchon & Marco; "The Big Bonanza," "Yokel Boy," "Mr. District Attorney" (No. 2), "The Carter Case," "Chatterbox," starring Judy Canova; "Affairs of Jimmy Valentine," "The Third Alarm," and a Gene Autry special, "Call of the Canyon."

Westerns: Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette in "Prairie Serenade" and "Valley of the Moon"; Roy Rogers in "The Man from Cheyenne" and "Red River Valley"; The Three Mesquiteers in "West of Cimarron" and "Riders of Sunset Trail"; Don "Red" Barry in "Stage Coach Express" and "A Missouri Outlaw."

Serial: "Dick Tracy Versus Crime, Inc.," starring Ralph Byrd, in 15 chapters.

Mr. Grainger also reported that the Fabian circuit of Albany, New York, had signed for the Republic 1941-42 product this week. Arthur Newman, Albany branch manager, joined Mr. Grainger in negotiating the deal with Si Fabian and Sidney Deneau of the circuit.

Warners Sell 1941-42 Product to F. P. C.

The complete Warner Brothers catalogue of 1941-42 feature pictures, short subject and trailers was contracted for by Famous Player Canadian for its chain of 170 theatres in a deal signed at New York on August 9th, Gradwell L. Sears, general manager announced on Tuesday. It is the first pact for new season product from a major company for FUC.

Carl Leserman, assistant Warner sales manager; Roy Haines, eastern and Canadian division head, and Wolfe Cohen, Canadian district manager, represented Warners in the negotiations. J. J. Fitzgibbons, FPC president, and Ben Geldsaler, chief buyer, signed for the circuit. It was the first Warner product deal for 1941-42. Canadian sales are not affected by the consent decree restrictions.

After its first Manhattan trade show of more than one picture, Warners on Tuesday reported that their exchange screening quarters had been filled to capacity by representatives of more than 500 theatres. Circuit heads and buyers, and many independents from the New York area saw "Navy Blues," "The Smiling Ghost" and "International Squadron."

Atlantic City Theatre Presents Foreign Films

The Embassy Theatre, former Weilland-Lewis house in Atlantic City, was re-opened Wednesday, August 6th, as the Empress Theatre for the presentation of unusual and foreign pictures. M. E. Blatt, Atlantic City department store head, leased the house and it is being operated by Seymour Vorziner, Oliver Unger and Levine, all of New York City.

In Philadelphia, Murray Diamond, premium supply house executive, and Bill Fishman, former manager of the Tioga Theatre in Philadelphia and more recently salesman for Producers Releasing Corp., formed a partnership for the operation of the New Ideal Theatre in Philadelphia. Mr. Diamond at one time operated the house.

Other changes in theatre operations in the territory finds Mrs. Elva Krouse purchasing at a public sale the Roxy Theatre in Ephrata, Pa., for $58,050; and John Rose taking over the operation of the Strand Theatre, Bethlehem, Pa.

Advance Release for "Texas"

"Thumbs Up, Texas," the new March of Time two reel subject scheduled for national release August 29th, began pre-release engagements in first-run theatres in 36 Texas cities on Tuesday, August 12th. The Interstate Circuit has booked the picture for everyone of its first run theatres. ("Thumbs Up, Texas" is reviewed in this copy of MOTION PICTURE HERALD in the Showmen's Review section.) The film will have pre-release runs in 65 Texas communities before beginning regular engagements throughout the country.

Patriotic Songs in Short

American patriotic songs are featured in Columbia's first "Community Sing" for the new season, which was released August 15th. This subject has Don Baker at the organ console, playing such numbers as "Sing, America, Sing," "He's My Uncle," "You're a Grand Old Flag," "My Old American Home," "America, the Beautiful" and "Yankee Doodle Boy."

Benet Story Title Change

Stephen Vincent Benet's Saturday Evening Post story "The Devil and Daniel Webster" will come to the screen under the title of "All That Money Can Buy." This RKO Radio release was recently trade shown under the tentative title of "Here Is a Man."

Young Leaves Universal

Arthur Young, with Universal for the past 20 years and office manager in Cleveland for the past nine years, has resigned. He is succeeded by Herbert Horstemeier, who has been operating a local booking agency. This is being taken over by Carl Hohage.

Arthur Donovan Signed

Arthur Donovan, who has refereed many championship prize fights, will be the third man in the ring with the fight sequence of "The Pittsburgh Kid," starring Billy Conn. goes before the camera at Republic studios in Hollywood.

Poll Shows 4 to 1 Against War Films

Do motion picture audiences want to see feature films "dealing with the lives of people in wartime?" No, says the Committee for National Morale, in announcing results of a survey based on this query. Eighty per cent of the public wants feature films "dealing with the lives of people in peacetime," with only 20 per cent preferring war subjects in features. These figures were released on Monday by Dr. Floyd Ruch, research consultant for the committee who, last week, announced the first half of a nationwide survey on the subject of public taste for war and defense propaganda in newsreels and subjects, as reported in the MOTION PICTUGE HERALD, August 9th, page 26.

Dr. Ruch believes that the survey demonstrates that audiences prefer "entertainment in their feature pictures" and look to the newsreels and shorts "when they want to be informed." Substantiating his theory, he said, were results of another query included in the questionnaire polled. To the question, "what kind of feature picture would you like to see the next time you go to the movies," replies were as follows:

"A picture that makes you laugh (comedy)"—48 per cent.

"A picture with action and adventure that excites you (adventure)"—29 per cent.

"A picture that keeps you in suspense (mystery)"—13 per cent.

"A picture that makes you feel like crying (tragedy)"—9 per cent.

War vs. Peace Films

The question dealing with war versus peace plots was worded as follows: "In general, would you rather see: a feature picture dealing with the lives of people at war?" (20 per cent). "A feature picture dealing with the lives of people in peacetime?" (80 per cent).

Dr. Ruch pointed out, however, that "it would not be fair to assume from the 80-20 per cent ratio that a good picture dealing with a war subject, for example, 'Sergeant York,' with a popular star, good cast, good direction and good exploitation, would suffer at the box office."

The committee is planning to make further studies on the subject of war motifs in feature length, shorts and newsreels, in order to determine "public morale" in connection with the motion picture medium. A plan also has been discussed by members of the committee to award each month "the best picture for morale," but in awarding the "bests," Dr. Ruch declared, "selections will be based on a positive rather than negative" basis. Films which the committee does not consider "good morale builders" will not be mentioned or given adverse publicity. "It is the aim of the committee," he said, "to utilize these awards only to encourage the public to go to see good morale pictures."

According to Ladislas Farago, member of the executive committee and chief of the German information investigation staff for the committee, Warner Brothers' "Underground" is one of the films which the committee would like to nominate as a good morale builder. Mr. Farago, who left Berlin in 1936 and knew "first hand about the underground radio which operated in Germany in spite of the Gestapo," said that the picture was "an amazingly accurate" portrayal of the situation which existed in Nazi-land. He said that if every "Nazi sympathizer in the United States" could see the film, America would not have to fear the fifth column, and that "if every German in Germany could see 'Underground,' I believe Hitlerism would be overthrown."

DISMISSAL OF COLUMBIA MAY AFFECT ALL U. S. SUITS

Lawyers Interpret Interruption of Nashville Case as Sign of "Weakness" in Prosecution

The Government's field anti-trust suit against the Crescent circuit, Nashville, its affiliates, and Columbia, United Artists, and Universal, was interrupted Friday, August 8th, in Nashville Federal Court, when Federal Judge Elmer Davies dismissed Columbia and two Crescent affiliates, Nu-Strand Corporation and the Strand Enterprises, as defendants, and then adjourned the case until next Monday to give remaining defendants further time to present their case. The Government, for the past several weeks, had presented its case, with testimony by numerous independent exhibitors, inter-office documents of Crescent and the majors, and testimony by some of the majors' sales officials.

Dismissal moves by all defendants, a usual course after presentation of the plaintiff's case, occurred last week, amidst optimism by the battery of New York and local lawyers assembled by the defendant circuit and majors. The Judge had indicated favoring the defense at several points during the trial, questioning the credibility of some witnesses, and remarking upon the meagerness of the Government case. On Thursday, August 7th, he remarked Universal motion had "more merit" than Columbia's.

Attorneys See Weak Case

While Nashville observers were reported regarding the dismissal of only three defendants a major victory for the Government, which had admittedly narrow cases against the three majors, film attorneys in New York professed to see the dismissal of Columbia a confession of weakness in the Government's case against Universal and United Artists, not merely in the present case, but also in the forthcoming anti-trust prosecution of the three in New York City. That prosecution is a concomitant of the Federal consent decree entered into by the other five film companies. It must be successfully made by June 1st, next year, or else the selling and trade showing provisions expire.

These attorneys, additionally, predicted Universal and United Artists will be able to win dismissals during the second half of the Crescent case, which begins next Monday. They noted that Columbia's legal strategy differed from that of the other two majors. Louis D. Frohlich and Herman Finkelstein, Columbia attorneys, queried each Government exhibitor witness specifically on his relations with Columbia and there was developed a record of few complaints against the company. United Artists and Universal did not do this.

Judge Davies, in granting the Columbia dismissal, reviewed the two instances connecting it with Government charges. He noted the clause in the Columbia contract with E. W. Dozier, independent exhibitor of Earlington, Kentucky, providing that Mr. Dozier might cancel if Crescent bought the company's product for its theatre in Madisonville, three miles distant. The Government had introduced communications from the company's Indianapolis office purporting to show that part of the Dozier contract was drawn at the insistence of Toney Sudekum, Crescent head.

Of Universal, Judge Davies remarked: "There is evidence in the record of an isolated transaction pertaining to the negotiations of Mr. Henry (a Government exhibitor witness) and Universal, through its branch manager at Memphis.

"I have read it two or three times, and I can't escape the conclusion that the evidence establishes on its face, prima facie, that Universal had taken application from Mr. Henry for the 1938-39 season's product, with a rider for the next two years, and that this application was approved and forwarded to Memphis. Mr. Henry was notified by telephone it was approved and that he could come by for it. He did come by and the manager was not there, but his secretary said it was there.

"A week later Mr. Henry returned to Memphis and the manager told him the contract had been held up by negotiations with Crescent. Mr. Henry made several trips to Memphis, and not getting satisfaction, he called Mr. Graham (Harry Graham, Southern district manager) at Atlanta, who said he never heard of him.

Asks Explanation

"The court thinks that contract should be explained. The court cannot say there is no evidence in the record that would tend to establish a conspiracy. Furthermore, the court has no reason, particularly at this time, for reflecting on the credibility of Mr. Henry with respect to that transaction. The court feels that the evidence does constitute prima facie evidence and the motion of Universal is denied."

Judge Davies first heard the dismissal motion arguments Wednesday, August 6th. Edward Raftery, counsel for United Artists and the other majors, remarked:

"It is common sense to use a 'closed' situation to get into another competitive situation, and vice versa; but the Government says that we must sell one run or one situation at a time, and shut our eyes to all the rest."

On that day, defense counsel were optimistic about their moves. They thought the whole case might end with the dismissals. Robert Wright, of Government counsel, admitting a meager case, suggested the court grant "relief to the extent of the interference with interstate commerce."

Judge Davies ruled that day that the only injunctive relief independent exhibitors might expect from the court, concerning the "little three," was an enjoining of them from violation of the Sherman Act.

On Thursday, August 7th, arguments on the dismissal moves ended, with the judge remarking: "I had considered the other day that the motion of Universal had more merit to it than Columbia's. After reflection, however, I am inclined to think Columbia is in a better situation than Universal, because there never was any restraint in that case. Earlington, Kentucky, continued to receive Columbia pictures; whereas in Union City, Tennessee, Mr. Henry had his Universal contract tentatively approved, but never was able to get the pictures first run."

Judge Davies also commented that the complaints against Universal and Columbia by independent exhibitors appeared "isolated."

William Waller, arguing for dismissal of Crescent, said: "The Government has failed to produce a single instance where an independent came into town and offered equal competition with Crescent or its affiliates."

Pickwick Hearings Set

The motion by Prefect Theatres, Inc., to dismiss the special or separate defenses of the majors, in the $5,450,000 anti-trust suit against them by the Pickwick Theatre, Greenwich, Connecticut, will be heard in New Haven September 16th. Prefect operates the Pickwick.

Doubles Liked In St. Louis Poll Indicates

Six of every ten St. Louis residents prefer double feature programs, according to a survey completed last week by Henry C. Riegel, Jr., manager of the St. Louis theatre, and his staff, who convassed from house-to-house.

Thirty thousand questionnaires were filled out. Sixty-four per cent favored double bills; 25.3 per cent, single; 6.2 per cent, triple features; four per cent, one hour of short subjects with a single feature.

Mr. Riegel reported that 69.4 per cent—nearly seven out of 10 St. Louisans—were in favor of stage shows. In response to a direct query, questionnaires revealed 69.6 per cent of those in favor of stage shows desired this entertainment with a single feature film program, while the remaining 30.4 per cent wanted stage shows with double-feature film programs.

Giveaways Disliked

As to contests give-aways and premiums, 89 per cent voted against such forms of competition among exhibitors, 6.5 per cent preferred this practice, while 4.5 per cent failed to vote.

The poll was undertaken by Mr. Riegel to provide his superiors, officials of the Fanchon & Marco, Inc., with information concerning the tastes of moving goers. To assure prompt response, persons who sent or brought their questionnaires to the theatre were given passes to the house. The poll will be continued to determine the type of film program most desired.

The net results of the poll are to be given Harry C. Arthur, Jr., president and general manager of the Fanchon and Marco circuit.

Illinois Bill Up

Leroy Sandquist, Illinois representative, said in Chicago recently he would renew his fight in the state legislature's next session, for a law limiting screen shows to two hours, 15 minutes. He called attention to a newspaper poll, which, he said, showed that in 1,000 persons queried five to one favored single features.

In Syracuse, the RKO-Schine-Paramount theatres revived their policy of showing the feature of a coming week, on a Tuesday evening, together with the feature of the week ending.

This is not a "double bill"; it is a "preview." But it is reported arousing concern among exhibitor organization of New York State. The local unit of the MPTOA was said especially concerned.

In Detroit, plans apparently have been dropped for the while, to enforce single features. Local exhibitors were to cooperate.

Michigan Variety Sets Outing Plans

Tickets are now on sale for the combined picnic, field day and moonlight dance and barbecue scheduled for Monday, August 18th, to be held at Riverside Park. The affair is being sponsored by the Detroit Variety Club.

The advisory committee for the outing inclues E. C. Beatty, president of Butterfield; Ray Branch, president of Michigan Allied; Carl W. Buermele, Co-operative chief; John Howard, Paramount manager; Karl J. Hudson, president of United Detroit Theatres; David N. Idzal, managing director of Fox theatre, and Lew Wisper of W & W Theatres.

ALLIED WARNS OF DECREE SELLING END; URGES EXHIBITOR ROUND TABLE

New Call for "Cooperation" Is Issued; Failure to Complete Case Against "Little Three" Would Kill Decree Next Year

Amplifying its reminder of a few weeks ago, that the industry's need is cooperation of all its factors to solve problems unsolvable by the courts or legislative chambers, the National Allied States Association, in a bulletin last weekend, called for a "standing national committee to save the industry many costly blunders."

The organization also reminded exhibitors and others of the forthcoming all-industry convention to be held by it in Philadelphia September 16th through 18th—a convention at which, the bulletin suggested, the committee proposal should be discussed.

Warning that unless liaison between different branches of the industry is improved, it will "face—and invite—disaster," Allied asked that duly appointed representatives of each of the typical organizations in the several branches of the industry form a "joint committee . . . to meet from time to time, to discuss matters of mutual interest and problems affecting all."

The bulletin specified that participant organizations should at least be interstate, preferably national; and that they should appoint their own representatives; for, it warned "the best results are not obtained when some outside agency undertakes to say who shall represent a particular organization."

Warns on 1942

Allied also repeated its prediction of a previous bulletin that the Government's anti-trust suit in New York against the little three majors not in the consent decree would probably fail to be settled by a decree before June 1st, next year.

It remarked:

"The final decree contemplated by Sec. XII (e) of the Consent Decree is one entered on mandate after an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. For such a decree to be entered in the time specified would break all records for speed in litigation.

"Therefore, in all probability, the provisions for trade showing and selling in blocks of five, will 'be suspended and . . . of no binding force and effect upon any consenting defendant' after June 1, 1942.

"What form of selling will the consenting distributors adopt in lieu of the Consent Decree method, which will no longer be binding?

"Will the mistakes of 1940 be repeated and a selling method be devised without consultation with the organized exhibitors?

"The exhibitors will be vitally affected and their views and wishes should be considered.

"Also, the industry will be confronted with additional proposals for taxation, for cooperation in the defense effort, possibly for regulation.

"Must the several branches and organizations go it alone, or will function through hand-picked groups, without the advice, cooperation or participation of all substantial, representative organizations?"

Meanwhile, this week, from the national convention committee of Allied came some notes about the agenda, the convention committees, events, and other detailed items of pertinence.

On the agenda, among other things, will be discussions on: the film industry's share of the public's amusement dollar; effects upon the box-office of defense spending; methods of stimulating public interest, so the films can recapture a "lost" audience; competition between amusement mediums, and between amusements and other industries; merchandising of pictures; factors of the consent decree—arbitration, trade-showings, sales policies of majors, trade cooperation; relationship of the theatres to the defense program; the effect of that program on theatre equipment; effect upon audiences of certain types of pictures.

On the convention committee are: Sidney E. Samuelson, Chairman; David E. Milgram, Treasurer; H. A. Cole, National President; A. F. Myers, General Counsel; Martin G. Smith, National Treasurer; Morris Wax, Attendance; George L. Ickes, Attendance; Harry Perelman, Decorations; Charles L. Stiefel, Display; Michael Felt, Display; David E. New York Allied Gathering Members

The newly formed New York State unit of Allied, lined up with the national organization, is gradually picking up membership throughout the local exchange territory, according to exhibitors checking in occasionally for local booking.

Albany exchange territory members of the temporary organization committee are Abe Stone, who operates the Eagle here and Leonard Rosenthal, Troy attorney active in film legal mattters.

Temporary by-laws adopted at the organizational meeting held in the DeWitt Clinton Hotel here last January call for a statewide convention in October when the group is to take on permanent status and elect officers.

A new national exhibitor organization, proposed by Harry Brandt, president of New York's Independent Theatre Owners Association, has been endorsed by 60 exhibitors in 30 states, Mr. Brandt said in New York Tuesday.

FIRST OWNER ENROLLS IN FILM USO DRIVE

Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner Theatres and chairman of the Motion Picture Theatres Division of the United Service Organizations, reported this week that Martin D. Harris, owner of the State Theatre in Hartford, Conn., is the first independent exhibitor in the U. S. to enroll in the campaign.

The drive, which will be held in theatres throughout the country, will be conducted during Labor Day Week. A special short subject is now being prepared in Hollywood, which will be supplied gratis to all exhibitors enrolled in the drive.

Cincinnati Exhibitors Study Tax Increases

The Greater Cincinnati Independent Exhibitors League, at a meeting last week, formulated tentative price increases for downtown and outlying houses charging 20 cents and less, to be put into effect if and when the Federal admission tax becomes operative. The revised schedule calls for 10-cent admissions being raised to 11 cents, and two cents added to the 17 and 20-cent admissions.

The organizations also went on record as favoring a centralized location for trade showings, in preference to screenings at miscellaneous places. The Terminal theatre, having less than 200 seats, located on the concourse of the Union Railway Terminal, was suggested.

The Little Foxes

(RKO-Goldwyn—1940-1941)

Character Drama

Samuel Goldwyn's first picture in 18 months falls into your choice of many classifications, according to opinions expressed by preview witnesses.

It is a performance picture, a prestige picture, a women's picture, an artistic triumph, masterpiece and, in the opinion of many, a box office picture by reason of being all these things at the expense of none of them.

It is, in any case, a Bette Davis picture, like most Davis pictures in that it furnishes the star plenty of scope for exercise of her talent in the field of emotionalism, and unlike most of them in that it surrounds her with people, mostly unknown to pictures, who give her plenty of competition. Half a dozen of these, from the Broadway cast of the play, take over and hold the center of attention with no regard whatever for the amenities of star billing. Herbert Marshall, portraying an invalid, is also pressed for performance honors by players whose roles demand more of them than does his.

On the basis of their work in this picture, Patricia Collinge, Teresa Wright, Charles Dingle, Carl Benton Reid and Dan Duryea may be expected to go far in films.

The play, a Broadway hit of proportions, deals with the malevolent schemings of a Southern family, two brothers and a sister, in connection with a milling enterprise in a Southern city in 1900. Pettiness, deceit, avarice, envy, conspiracy, theft, parental indifference and an equivalent of murder are the principal factors in a story which serves mainly the purpose of depicting warped and decadent characters. It ends inconclusively and on a sombre note after ranging a wide scale of sordid incidents and situations played out for the most part in dialogue. There is no humor and little relief from emotional tension.

As to mood, manner and general tone, the picture may be likened in a general way to "Wuthering Heights" and "Rebecca."

Direction by William Wyler, who handled "Wuthering Heights," is steadily effective and without fluctuation.

Previewed Monday afternoon at the Four Star Theatre, Hollywood, to an invited audience made up of press and profession, perhaps a majority of those present being women, although the film did not have them weeping at any point, it held attention steadily throughout its extraordinary length and evoked applause for a bit of acting by Miss Collinge in mid-picture. There was indication that the ending seemed to leave the story unfinished, although there are dialogue hints of retriubtion in store for the successfully covetous heroine.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

International Squadron

(Warner Brothers, 1941-42)

Wartime Aviation

Here's one right off the front pages and into the groove of today's thinking, living and dying.

Here's intimate participation in the bombing of a munitions concentration on the French coast by an American flyer in the R. A. F. who doesn't come back.

Here are today's thrills, for today's audiences, all wrapped up in a story that could be true and may have been many times since September of 1939.

This is, if trade show response be considered reliable, the best of three pictures screened for exhibitors of the country this week under consent decree selling conditions.

Timeliness of subject matter, commonsense realism in handling, balanced performances and restraint in the matter of heroics are strong points of the offering.

Ronald Reagan, named last week in MOTION PICTURE HERALD's Poll of exhibitors as a Star of Tomorrow, is given top billing in this and rates it by a convincing portrayal of an American aviator who enlists in the R. A. F.

The late James Stephenson, as his commander and friend, distinguishes his memory and the picture by a powerful enactment of a British officer.

Cliff Edwards supplies comedy relief, which emphasizes the seriousness of the work in hand. Olympe Bradna and Joan Perry dispose of the feminine leads, which are secondary, adequately.

The story, detailed as of "Flight Patrol" on page 196 of your Product Digest, surpasses most of its predecessors in kind as to plausibility, logic and singleness of point.

Direction by Lewis Seiler is of the best.

Edmund Grainger, as producer, has a film to be proud of.

Navy Blues

(Warner Brothers, 1941-42)

Musical Comedy

The Warner Brothers have gone back to the musical comedy format which they pioneered, and at which they were never bested, for this entry in the service-comedy sweepstakes of the period.

When the picture goes musical, which is often, it measures up to this rich Warner precedent.

When it goes comic, which is in between these all-out splurges of eye and ear entertainment, the production invites comparison with some service-comedies now in exhibition and pays a stiff price for following them.

Jack Oakie and Jack Haley are in and all over the picture as two sailors whose troubles on shipboard and ashore provide the incitements to laughter. The boys work hard and it is neither their fault nor Warner's that two other comedians portraying two other sailors have just completed convincing the nation that no other pair ever was or will be so funny in that particular variety of enterprise.

Ann Sheridan and Martha Raye are in the picture somewhat less constantly as night club employees whose interests are entangled with those of the sailors, both girls dominating the singing and dancing numbers more successfully than the intervals between.

Musical numbers by Arthur Schwartz and Johnny Mercer add much to the picture. Some comedy dialogue and some gag situations of equivalent quality would have prospered the proceedings considerably.

Scene of the film is San Diego, shipboard and Honolulu, where some hula dancing including the pre-publicized solo by Miss Sheridan, nothing to shock the natives, occurs.

The story has to do with the efforts of sailors, who have wagered money to retain in the service a champion gunner determined to return to civilian life.

Jerry Wald and Jack Saper are down as associate producers, and Lloyd Bacon as director, Wald also sharing a writing credit with several other gentlemen, which spreads it pretty thin.

Tradeshown in the Paramount projection room, Los Angeles, to a capacity audience of perhaps 50, most of those present declaring themselves in favour of shortening the picture considerably.—W. R. W.

Life Begins for Andy Hardy

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—1940-1941)

The Hardy Series Goes Adult

Put this one down in your memory book as the installment in which the Hardy Family series turned, for better or worse, away from the broad field of good, clean fun for the whole American family and into the narrower audience-band of adult entertainment.

You'll be putting it up on your marquee, of course, as a double-decker attraction offering, for one and the same admission price, not one but two of the Top Ten Money-Making Stars of 1941 in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD-Fame poll—Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland.

And you'll be warranted in giving some special billing to two newcomers featured in the film—Ray McDonald and Patricia Dane—whose personalities and performances crowded Mr. Rooney and Miss Garland for top attention of the post-preview crowd and in the lay-press write-ups of the picture next day.

That you'll be warranted in underwriting the performances of the regulars in the Hardy Family ensemble—Lewis Stone, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford and Sara Haden—goes without saying at this point in the career of the series. Ditto, naturally, the direction of George B. Seitz.

You may or may not be wishing, later on, that the House of MGM had not chosen to divert the series from the wide channel of universal family-interest into a numerically smaller audience-bracket. So may, or may not, the House of MGM. This will depend upon how the parents of the nation, whose unrestricted endorsement of the series has prospered it above all others up to now, turn out to feel about having exposed their young to some of the material presented in this number.

In one sequence Lewis Stone as "Judge Hardy" instructs Mr. Rooney as "Andy" on the merits of pre-nuptial continence as a preventive of emotional unrest subsequent to marriage. Without questioning in any manner whatsoever the gist of Mr. Stone's address to Mr. Rooney, or the manner of its delivery, it may be mentioned that the imparting of information and advice on this subject is and has been regarded in large and important sectors of the population as a function best performed by parents or their chosen delegates at a point in the individual child's development considered to be propitious. "Judge Hardy's" acquired following embraces all the age-brackets.

In another sequence, closely related to the above and supplying the story with its turning-point, a married woman takes "Andy Hardy" to her apartment under circumstances and to an accompaniment of dialogue and business which puts his father's counsel in re continence to direct test. Humor is side-tracked for the purposes of this sequence and the handling of the episodes provides no basis for optional interpretation by the kiddies in the auditorium.

This is not, of course, the first time the young hero of the series has been depicted as coming into contact with feminine allure above his age-level. There was, you'll recall, that time he fancied himself in love with the understanding school teacher who let him down easy. The difference is that the girl in this case is no school teacher, although understanding enough, and has different ideas about what to do with a young man in the throes of emotion.

The story picks up "Andy" the day after his graduation from high school. His father wants to enroll him in college. The boy holds out for a try at earning his living without benefit of further education. He is granted a month in which to make up his mind and goes to New York to get a job. Most of the things happen to him there are in the tradition of the series, some amusing, some pathetic, and most of the episodes are extremely entertaining. He returns home, following the married-woman interlude mentioned above, ready to enroll in college.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, to a mixed audience which laughed at the humorous passages in the happy manner of all followers of the Hardy Family series, literally screamed at some of the comedy lines uttered by Judy Garland, and sat in strained silence through the sequence in which "Andy" ultimately decides to forego the amorous matron's inducements, rebounding to normal Hardy Family audience attitude in response to a typical comedy fadeout.—W. R. W.

Rags to Riches

Crime Melodrama

Under the guiding hand of associate producer-director Joseph Kane, Republic brings to the screen another of the familiar melodramas of a young man convicted and sent to prison for a crime of which he is innocent while his bride-to-be gains stardom and riches for her singing talents. Alan Baxter is seen in the role of the wrongly accused man, and Mary Carlisle as the singer who attains success.

Having no connection with the famous play, "From Rags to Riches," this film presentation of like title is a simply told story of a boy who, after serving time, is released from prison and later proves his worth—characteristically, if not financially—for his potential spouse. This romantic end, however, is not attained until he has exposed and captured the fur-stealing racketeers responsible for his imprisonment.

Jerome Cowan in a supporting role gives a performance that overshadows the dull and unemotional portrayal or Alan Baxter. Others in the cast aid in keeping the action, for the most part, swift paced and in bringing the picture to its familiar end.

Reviewed in the Republic projection room in New York at a screening for the trade press and other who watched without comment.—GEORGE SPIRES.

The Story of the Vatican

(RKO-March of Time—1940-1941)

Documentary of Rome

At a time when most of the world is wracked with a second World War and the eyes of many nations, directly or indirectly engaged in the conflict, are turned toward Rome awaiting spiritual and diplomatic guidance, March of Time, under the initial producership of Richard de Rochemont, presents this documentary study of the Papal state, its personalities and institutions.

Prior to the opening of European hostilities in September, 1939, March of Time was granted permission by the Vatican to make a documentary study on film. Some 32,000 feet of film were exposed. From this a two-reel short subject, as part of the company's regular schedule, was released in February, 1940, followed by a feature-length edition produced in Spanish for the South American market. The film's success in the Latin countries resulted in this American feature version of the subject and is considered to be the most representative camera record of the Vatican City which has yet been made. For this latest production, Monsignor Fulton J. Sheen was chosen to speak the descriptive commentary, since he is familiar with the subject and also familiar to millions of radio listeners as the principal speaker on the Catholic Radio Hour. His narration is one of the many highlights of the presentation and is a factor worthy of any showman's exploitation.

As to the picture itself, it is a 54-minute subject, sepia tinted, and remarkably representative in its study of the Vatican. Not only is the spiritual significance of St. Peter's Cathedral portrayed but also the architectural and artistic treasures of the Vatican museum and the governmental and industrial aspects of the Papal state. The camerawork is effective in capturing the splendors of the Basilica of St. Peter's, the murals of Michaelangelo in the Vatican galleries. Visits of inspection are made to the Vatican library, the crypts beneath the Cathedral where the deceased Pontiffs are buried, the Papal radio station, post office and shops. Of especial interest is the camera study made of the late Pope Pius XI and of Pope Pius XII and other Vatican dignitaries. The subject will be of importance and interest to many audiences.

Previewed in the Radio City Music Hall at a screening for daily and trade press film reviewers, all of whom watched attentively the story as it unfolded on the screen and expressed particular satisfaction with the excellent commentary of Monsignor Sheen.—GEORGE SPIRES.

Produced by the March of Time and distributed by RKO. Richard de Rochemont, producer. Commentator, Monsignor Fulton Sheen. Camerawork by Marcel Rebiere. Director, Jean Pages. Running time, 54 minutes. Release date, July 18th, 1941. P. C. A. Certificate No. 03158. General audience classification.

Dive Bomber

(Warner Brothers—1941-42)

Aviation Medicine Saga

Warners' reputation for the excellence of its service pictures is well known and herein the studio immortalizes with Technicolor's aid the work of "Flight Surgeons," physicians who specialize in keeping aviators flying and averting mental and physical crackups. Made with the full cooperation of the United States Navy, it presents a spectacle of aviation far beyond that obtainable through private resources now or at any other time.

Items to be considered by exhibitors playing the film include:

Errol Flynn and Fred MacMurray co-star in the picture.

The supporting cast includes Ralph Bellamy, Robert Armstrong, Regis Toomey, Allen Jenkins, Craig Stevens, Herbert Anderson, Moroni Olsen, Louis Jean Heydt, Cliff Nazarro, and two women, Alexis Smith and Dennie Moore, both of whom are used only for comedy relief.

The story, dealing with the Navy Medical Corps assigned to the air arm of the fleet, includes highly technical displays and dissertations on the physical strain of flying, new techniques of sky fighting and lengthy scenes showing effects of high altitudes on aviators.

Featured as story points are the invention and development of an abdominal brace, used by flyers to prevent their "blacking out" after a power dive, and a pressure suit, similar to those deep sea divers wear, for use in the stratosphere.

Devoid entirely of romance, the picture, despite its topicalness, may not appeal to the distaff side.

The technical work, such as miniatures and color backgrounds, is not up to the usual Warner standards.

The action is not of the personal type with which the work of director Michael Curtiz is usually associated.

In addition, the picture is two hours, and 13 minutes long.

Flynn enacts the role of "Lee," a Medical Corps officer who transfers to the air arm in order to do research work on the sudden incapacitating effects of "pullout" strains, high altitudes and the like. His flight instructor "Blake" is antagonistic toward him because of a misunderstanding which follows the death of "Larson" his buddy, following a crash. The plot deals in detail with "Lee" winning over "Blake" and working with him and "Rogers" to invent the brace and the flying suit, and ends with posthumous honors for "Blake" who is killed while testing the suit.

Only slight comedy touches relieve the service nature of the narrative. Robert Lord was Hal B. Wallis' associate producer.

Target for Tonight

(Crown Film Unit—Associated British Film Distributors)

Documentary

Once again the enthusiastic and progressive young men of the Crown Film Unit have proven that factual treatment of the War can be not only exact and significant reportage, but entertainment in the one hundred per cent plus and some more category. This latest Ministry of Information production, telling the whole intimate absorbing story of Britain's Bomber Command, is probably the best piece of reporting the war has produced in any medium and because it is so complete, so enlightening, and so irresistibly dramatic, should sweep its way through the boxoffices of both Britain and the U. S.

Made by Harry Watt and cameraman Jonah Jones, who made "Britain Can Take It," it puts on to the screen the whole story of the Bomber Command, outlines the planning, the preparation, and the preliminaries to a raid over Germany, traces the raid itself, with all its cool deliberation and explosive drama, carries the pattern through to the limping return to its base of a damaged Wellington. It is authentic, on-the-spot stuff, in which there are no actors, save the men themselves. The camera and the mike go quietly into the records room where are the photograph maps made by British reconnaisance machines, records the design of a bombing raid, the instructions and the anticipations, steals out to the tarmac where the heavies are loaded and manned, flies through the moonlit clouds of evening to a German objective, where tracer bullets, flak and searchlights, weave a grim pattern of peril, reflects the casual, almost emotionless spirits of the crews, even in the gravest danger, recaptures the quiet tension at the base as "F for Freddie" limps blindly home to its station. . . . It is essentially an English creation, for its effects are those of understatement and simplicity rather than of over-emphasis.

As a factual record it is, of course, authentic, having been made with the collaboration of the Air Ministry, and by the efficient way with which it tears the veil from secret sections and machinery of the RAF, it reaches exceptional heights of interest as war reporting. In it, too, are humor and melodrama, excitement and suspense almost painful at times, and the humanity of the men themselves. There are varied accents in the film, and the exact Oxford English of the officer class may irritate American audiences but that is the way it is in the RAF, so it may be pardoned on grounds of accuracy.

The camerawork is excellent, whether in the station or above the clouds, and the film has been laid together with a skill which is so polished as to be unnoticeable.

Screened to a very representative press audience in London which included editors and gossip writers as well as the usual band of reviewers, the film obviously gripped, without a single dull patch and was accorded an ovation at the close probably warmer than that accorded any previous film of its kind.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Mystery Comedy

Producer Edmund Grainger and Director Lewis Seiler, whose estimable "International Squadron" is described in an adjacent review as the best of Warner Brothers' first three consent decree offerings, also made this one. But you would have to scan the list of credits to find that out, because this one proves, if anything, that drama is the field for the Messrs. Grainger and Seiler. This one is a comedy.

What this comedy, with a slight flavour of murder, is all about is disclosed in the synopsis on page 207 of your Product Digest. The manner of its disclosure on the screen is deficient in suspense, thrill, surprise and humour.

Wayne Morris, as the young man principally menaced by the mad killer, and Willie Best, as his colored valet, are handicapped by meagre material, and Alan Hale has a butler assignment requiring him only to bluster. The others walk through, stand about and utter dialogue which neither mystifies nor amuses.

Thumbs Up, Texas!

(March of Time)

Vol. 8, No. 1

This latest issue of March of Time turns its cameras Texasward and uncovers a vast store of interesting data and information. The camera depicts cattle ranches and farms, mountains, prairies and the prosperous Texas cities and their industrial and financial executives at work and play. Such personalities as Karl Hoblitzelle, head of the Interstate Theatre Circuit, and Amon Charels Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, are brought to the screen. Midway the film turns from the business activities of the state to the various Army and air force training camps and shows the individuals of the armed forces and their recreation in the various cities. Highlight of the film is the home-spun narration of Cal Tinney which has been inserted in the major portion of the film.—Running time, 18 minutes.

W6XAO

Digressing for the moment from the standard theme of this page, this is Don Lee Television Station W6XOA transmitting on a visual frequency of 51.25 megacycles and an aural frequency of 55.75 megacycles from the top of Mt. Hollywood, highest peak in the Hollywood range, four nights weekly, to receivers within a 100-mile radius.

That is Station W6XAO in the column to your right and its past is as intimately bound up with the Hollywood of the motion picture as its future may or may not turn out to be.

The pertinent history of Mt. Hollywood dates from long before that. It commences with the imaginings and venturings of Mack Sennett in those early years when everything he touched turned to money, including, after this protracted interval, Mt. Hollywood.

Television had not yet arrived to stimulate the comedy-producer's interest in matters apart from Keystone Kops and Bathing Girls.

Aviation had.

It was the Mack Sennett inspiration that life would be simpler for the highflyers if somebody were to put a landing field up high in the air there would it would serve most handily, so he bought Mt. Hollywood and levelled off the top of it to provide his friends and, possibly, customers with a convenient flat spot on which to set their planes down.

The project was expansive and expensive. There was no roadway up Mt. Hollywood, so he built one. There were no bulldozers nor mountain-climbing steam-shovels, so he hired the job done by manual labor. Flattening the top of the mountain was, in double sense a mountainous undertaking, but he undertook it. Then the planes got bigger, flights got longer, certain untoward incidents took place in Wall Street during 1929 and the Mt. Hollywood landing field became available real estate in a market with no more bottom than the mountain now had top.

Mt. Hollywood is 1,700 feet high. The tower shown in the photograph on your right is 300 feet high. You can estimate the size of the television building from the height of its tower. You can walk from studio to studio in it, receiving room to sending tower, and tire yourself thoroughly in a couple of hours without seeing all there is to see. But, first, you've got to get up there to do so.

Rounding the ultimate perilous curve and gliding out upon the flat and toward the station itself, you find your car nosed smack up against an iron rail protecting you from a Hollywood hazard you've been dodging ever since you arrived in town—for plump in the foreground of the scene is one of the most magnificent swimming pools in all Cinemaland, the inevitable touch. There's talk of commercially televising mermaids splashing in its waters—the Sennett theme again—with the brand name of a sponsoring cigarette embroidered on their bras or somewhere.

Commercial televising from Mt. Hollywood is scheduled to commence about October 1st.

Beyond the building shown in the picture stands the freshly completed housing of the Frequency Modulation transmitter K45LA which brought FM to the West.

W6XAO HIGHLIGHTING HOLLYWOOD HISTORY

Mack Sennett flattened a mountain top and Thomas S. Lee built upon it the first exclusively television station in the West, shown above, where mermaids in lesser garb than the Keystone King's famed beauties ever ventured to don will disport themselves in an all-Hollywood swimming pool for the benefit of television sponsors and the lookers-in.

Production Tie

Warner Brothers pulled up on even terms with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the production race, both studios having eight films in shooting stage at weekend.

Universal and Twentieth Century-Fox were paired in second position with a half-dozen pictures each in work.

'Movie Vacation' Drive Spreading

Some 80,000,000 persons, it was estimated this week, have been made aware of the "movie vacation" idea, first enunciated in a series of advertisements by the Philadelphia Bulletin, and since urged upon theatres and newspapers under the sponsorship of Columbia, to create good-will for the films as an institution.

More than 12,000 theatres, comprising important independent groups and circuits, have joined the drive, with special radio program, theatre program, trailer, window and car card announcements. Many of the country's best known and circulated newspapers have contributed their space to the Bulletin-originated advertisements which emphasize films as a "vacation" easily obtainable and inexpensive, and unrivalled by other entertainments.

60 Newspapers Cooperate

More than sixty newspapers, among them the New York Journal-American, the New York Post, Chicago Herald-American, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, St. Louis Star-Times, Buffalo Courier-Express, Rochester Democrat-Chronicle and Times-Union, Cincinnati Post, Toledo Blade, have contributed lavish newspaper space toward the campaign.

Among the other newspapers represented in the "Movie-Vacation" campaign are:

Tulsa, Okla. Daily World; Tulsa, Okla. Tribune; Emporia, Kans., Gazette; Bellaire, O., Leader; Charleston, S. C., News & Courier; Lynn, Mass., Telegram-News; Syracuse, N. Interstate Coordinates Publicity

Interstate Circuit has established a central publicity office to handle publicity for all Dallas theatres of the chains with Charles Meeker, former Melba and Tower manager, in charge. They have given up a former practice of each theatre manager handling his own ads and exploitation. Replacing Mr. Meeker as manager of the Tower and Melba is Forrest Thompson. Mr. Meeker has two assistants in his office, with Frank O. Starz still handling the publicity.

New Ohio Censor

Governor John H. Bricker, of Ohio, announced on Tuesday the appointment of Kenneth C. Ray, superintendent of the Zanesville schools, as State Director of Education, to succeed E. N. Dietrich, who held the post for four years. The State Director of Education, under the Ohio laws, becomes ex-officio head of the censor board.

Radio to Get Parts Priority

Priorities to assure a steady flow of maintenance of and repair parts to the broadcasting and radio communications industries will be provided as soon as the requirements of more pressing industries are cared for it was assured by the Office of Production Management in Washington, D. C.

Announcing that preference ratings were being extended to manufacturers in nine industry classifications, E. R. Stettinius, Jr., director of priorities, said that nine other groups, including broadcasting, would be included as soon as possible.

R. H. Gregory Retires From Western Electric

Richard H. Gregory, comptroller of the Western Electric Company for more than 30 years and a director of the company for more than 20, will retire August 31st after 43 years with the Bell System, it was announced following a meeting of the board of directors on Tuesday, August 12th. S. Wallace Murkland, assistant comptroller since 1927, was elected a director and will succeed Mr. Gregory as comptroller.

At the same meeting, Stanley Bracken, engineer of manufacture of the Western Electric Company and president of the Teletype Corporation, a subsidiary, was elected a director.

U. S. Companies Fail to Meet British Quota

American film distributors in Great Britain have failed to meet statutory requirements on features under the quota, by 7.2 per cent, the British Board of Trade disclosed, in London, this week. Figures apply to the quota year ended March 31st.

The registered quota footage was equivalent to 15.38 per cent. The statutory requirement is 22.50 per cent. The figures include multiple quota credits.

The registered footage of British films was 433,515 actual, 493,583 potential. Foreign footage total was 2,775,893.

Short subjects increased. They amounted to a 36.74 per cent actual. The statutory minimum is 17.50 per cent.

British short subjects totalled 224,728 feet; foreign, 387,005.

Palisades Theatre Leased

A 21-year lease for the Paramount Theatre in Palisades, N. J., has been consummated by Berk and Krumgold, of New York, with an aggregate rental of over $250,000. The theatre has been acquired by the Harold S. Eskin Amusement Enterprises of New York.

Runyon with RKO

Damon Runyon, newspaper columnist and short story writer, has been signed by RKO as a producer. He will report to the Hollywood studio late in September. Mr. Runyon's first assignment will be to bring to the screen one of his own recently completed unpublished stories.

Barham In New Job

Tracy Barham, former general manager of the Northio circuit, Ohio, this week was settled in his new post, general manager of the Intermountain Theatres circuit. Mr. Barham exchanged positions with Harry David.

Screen Hits on Summer Stages

Of the 70 perennial Broadway hit-plays being circuited in "strawhat" theatres this summer, 38 already have been produced and distributed by the Hollywood majors and 10 are now in production or scheduled for shooting on the West Coast.

Favorites this season with summer stock audiences who probably have seen screen versions of the original plays are: "The Philadelphia Story," "Our Town," "Idiot's Delight," "The Shining Hour," "Night Must Fall," "Private Lives," "Holiday," "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Pursuit of Happiness," "What a Life," "Romeo and Juliet," "No, No, Nanette," and "Charley's Aunt."

The 10 other "strawhat" box office draws scheduled or in production are: "The Man Who Came to Dinner," Warners; "Ladies in Retirement," Columbia; "Old Acquaintance," Warners; "George Washington Slept Here," Warners; "Skylark," Paramount; "And Now Goodbye," Columbia; "The Night of January 16th," Paramount; "Little Foxes," RKO; "Smilin' Through," Metro re-make, and "When Ladies Meet," Metro.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on August 2nd, page 46, reported that 125 summer stock companies operating in 20 states, featured 40 new plays and the 70 perennials, at the height of a season which probably will gross $1,500,000. The HERALD described the "strawhat" circuit as a "fertile field for developing new Hollywood story and talent material."

Stars Give for China Relief

Donating time, talent and money, Hollywood film stars have raised $21,319.10 toward the United China Relief campaign, it was reported last week by David O. Selznick, motion picture producer and chairman of the Hollywood Committee for the $5,000,000 drive. Mr. Selznick told James G. Blaine, national committee chairman, on a recent trip to New York, that the largest individual gift received in Hollywood to date was a $5,000 contribution from Cary Grant, which represented the actor's fee for appearing on a commercial broadcast last June 30th.

Mr. Selznick also reported that Ginger Rogers, Rosaline Russell, Loretta Young, John Garfield and Pat O'Brien notified him they were donating fees, ranging from $2,000 to $4,000 for radio appearances in the autumn, to United China Relief. The addition of these gifts will bring the total raised in Hollywood to $35,000, he said.

Russian Film Ban Appealed; "Seig" Approved

Films from the two totalitarian governments now tearing at each other, fared badly and well in two states, this week, New York, and Pennsylvania. In Albany, a New York Supreme Court Justice refused to rule that the German film, "Victory in the West" required a license for its showings in New York City. In Philadelphia, Artkino, distributor of the Russian "The Red Army" and "Soviet Frontiers on the Danube" appealed to a Court of Common Pleas against a ban by the Pennsylvania State Board of Motion Picture Censors as Mrs. Edna Carroll, chairman of that board, on Monday notified local exchanges no films might be shown even at trade or special previews, without the Pennsylvania Seal of Approval.

In the New York case, the finding that "Sieg Im Westen," a UFA release, requires no censors' license, is the culmination of a fight against the picture's New York City showings by the non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League, which contends the film is "propaganda," not newsreels, and that it incites disorder. The League will appeal the ruling.

Claims No Corruption

The Philadelphia appeals against the banning of the two Russian films were filed by Louis F. McCabe, attorney in that city, in Common Pleas Courts Numbers Three and Seven, for the respective pictures. The appeals offer the films for Court reviews and charge the censor board acted arbitrarily and without basis for the charge that the films would corrupt public morals. Mr. McCabe added the films merely showed life in the Soviet republics — "whose magnificent stand in the battle against the armies of Naziism, has called forth the praise of all, including the President of the United States." Mr. McCabe also charged the board was prejudiced against Russia—"a country with which the United States has friendly relations"; and he declared the censors' ban deprived the films' owner of property rights, and of free speech, and that because the films were "reportage," they did not come under censor jurisdiction.

The censor board had previously halted a private preview of the films, then banned them. Mrs. Carroll reminded exchanges any exhibition of a film constituted a public showing under the law which does not mention admissions.

In Albany, last week, the Board of Regents upheld the report of their reviewing sub-committee, in reversing censor Irwin Esmond's refusal to license the revised version of the "Sunset Murder Case," starring Sally Rand, "striptease" artiste. The film was originally called the "Sunset Strip Case," when distributed by Grand National in 1938. Although the dance scenes were deleted, advertising of the film at theatres brought complaints, and withdrawal of the film.

Meanwhile, Howard Hughes' "The Outlaw," was reported from the Coast ready for release in September, by Twentieth Century-Fox. A production code seal was reported given, after some months' delay, and subject to deletion of certain scenes.

Francis Joins Cue

Tom Francis, for the past eight years with Photoplay magazine, has joined the eastern advertising department of Cue.

Five Soviet Features Arrive in U. S.

Five new Soviet feature films and several short subjects and newsreels have arrived in this country from Russia, according to Artkino Pictures, Inc., American distributor of Soviet films.

The shipment includes: "A Day in the New World," a documentary cavalcade; "Valery Chkalov," a biography of the famous Soviet transpolar flier; "Yakov Sverdlov," the story of the first president of the Soviet Union and "My Love," an Ukranian love story. The American release of these films will follow "General Suvorov" and "Musical Story" which are now being readied for distribution.

ASCAP-Radio Contract Delayed

Motion picture companies and publicity heads who hoped for an immediate return to the air of the ASCAP music catalog, following agreement reached two weeks ago by the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers and the National Broadcasting Company, will be disappointed. During the week-end reports indicated that only 80 of the 243 stations affiliated with NBC have signified approval of the network's settlement with the Society and about one-third entirely rejected the agreement. Meanwhile, attorneys for both sides have been working on contract papers, ironing out last remaining legal tangles preparatory to the signing by ASCAP and NBC officials.

Before the contract is adopted, however, approximately 95 per cent of the NBC affiliates must approve terms. It would be untenable for NBC to expect some affiliates to reimburse the network for its payments on ASCAP music while other stations did not. There is no provision in the radio company's contract with affiliates, however, which would force any station to accept a majority vote on the ASCAP contract. NBC officials are hopeful that many of the stations not heard from up to mid-week, can be brought into line, but are doubtful as to procedure where the one-third "rejecters" are concerned.

ASCAP, meanwhile, filed an application in the New York Supreme Court on Monday, to eliminate Broadcast Music, Inc., as a party plaintiff in the recently filed test suit against the Society which the network music corporation entered in conjunnction with the Edward B. Marks Music Corporation. ASCAP claimed that BMI was not properly a part to the suit, which seeks a ruling from the court that a publishing house can retain copyrights to songs subsequent to withdrawal from ASCAP membership. The complaint contended that ASCAP lost rights to the Marks catalog when that publisher withdrew from the Society and joined BMI.

Norwalk Theatre Opens

The new 1,200-seat Norwalk theatre, just completed by Schines, at Norwalk, Ohio, opened Friday, August 15, with "Ringside Mazie" as the initial attraction. Policy is on a grind basis, with changes on Sundays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Prices are 28 and 39 cents, including tax, for matinee and night, with a 10-cent charge for children. William Selman is manager of the house, which was designed by and constructed under supervision of John Eberson, architect.

Korda Becomes Executive Head of United Artists

Alexander Korda, partner-producer in United Artists, this week took control of the company's administration following the collapse, last week, of negotiations by the company to obtain William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM, for the presidency, which has been vacant since the term of A. H. Giannini.

Maurice Silverstone, now a producer for the company, had been, until his resignation some months ago, the "chief of world-wide operations," and Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charges of sales, had been recently the acting chief.

The lodging of administrative control in the hands of Mr. Korda has placed it also in the distributing company's Coast offices. With Mr. Korda, the other two-partner-producers, Charles Chaplin, and Mary Pickford, both based in Hollywood, have been handling more of the company's affairs than they have in years, it was said.

New York observers cautioned this week that Mr. Korda's role might be temporary. The search for a United Artists president goes on, with other majors' executives reported approached. The approaches to Mr. Rodgers were stopped abruptly last week, after Nicholas Schenck, MGM president, refused to release his sales manager from a contract which has two more years to run, and was reported tendering a new contract, to run for ten years, and with terms as advantageous as those Mr. Rodgers could be expected to have at UA. Mr. Rodgers himself on Tuesday last, issued a disclaimer, noting his obligations to his employing company.

The entrance of David O. Selznick, producer, into United Artists as a producer partner was expected this week following the arrival in New York of Edward C. Raftery, UA attorney, who has been in Nashville at the Government's anti-trust suit against the Crescent circuit, a suit mentioning UA as defendant.

Final papers on the deal are ready; but further conferences between the principals and lawyers are necessary, it was said.

Barnett Succeeds Friedl

H. Barnett, who has been head of the Research Department of International Projector Corporation, has been appointed director of engineering succeeding George Friedl Jr. Mr. Friedl has been elected president of Bludworth Incorporated, a wholly owned subsidiary of International Projector Corporation. In addition to the time they have spent with the International Projector Corporation, Mr. Barnett and Mr. Friedl had long service with the Western Electric and Electrical Research Products Incorporated and wide experience in the design and manufacture of sound equipment and navigation equipment which the International Projector Corporation is now manufacturing.

McGrath Succeeds Axelrod

Tom McGrath has been named head of the contract department of the Chicago Warner exchange, succeeding Ray Axelrod who has been promoted to city booker.

GAS CURFEW STARTS BUT SUNDAY DRIVES KEEP ON

Weekend Grosses Not Affected by Ban on Sales After 7 P.M.; Oil Rationing Expected Soon

General surveys on business conditions as a result of the first week's gasoline curfew imposed by the Government in 17 eastern seaboard states, reveal that exhibitors, operators of hotels, restaurants, seashore pavilions and the tourist trade have not suffered any appreciable slump in receipts. Contrariwise, week-end attendance figures for beaches in the New York area principally Jones Beach, Coney Island and the Rockaways, indicated that whatever effect on gasoline consumption the present fuel conservation campaign might have, motorists did not give up their usual Sunday outings. Moreover, Atlantic City municipal officials reported that 550,000 visitors to the resort on Sunday, the largest crowd in ten years, created a parking problem which was proof enough that motorists were not kept from using their cars by threat of a gasoline shortage.

Retail sales of gasoline, however, between 7:00 P.M. and 7:00 A.M., resulted in a substantial decline of fuel business in the New York area for the week, with greater declines expected within the next few weeks, according to reports submitted by the Gas Station Council of Metropolitan New York, which claimed that the curfew cut gas sales from 10 to as much as 30 per cent.

Further Rationing Seen

Oil industry authorities surveying the supply situation on the eastern seaboard agree that rationing of gasoline will be necessary in some form if the Government intends to send more oil tankers to England, in addition to the 64 already transferred. The degree of rationing, however, will depend on the number of tankers left in service here. Thus far Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes, has not yet notified oil companies on the additional number of tankers the Government will requisition, therefore oil firms are unable to determine exactly what rationing will be needed.

Reports from New England on Monday, were that gas sales dropped sharply and traffic on main New England arteries decreased as Sunday drivers fell in line with the week-old campaign to conserve fuel. According to the New York Times, before the seven o'clock curfew, filling station attendants on the Newburyport, Worcester and Providence turnpikes and the main road to Cape Cod reported sales below a Sunday normal. But operators of drive-in theatres in the New England area reported that the closing down of gas stations for 12 hours daily did not have any noticeable effect on their business.

Drive-ins, generally believed to be the first to suffer from any gas rationing plan affecting the motoring picture-goer, found no drop beyond the seasonal and weather change slumps. James Guarino, operator of the Drive-In Theatres Corporation in Boston, said there had been a slight drop in receipts during the past week, but he was not inclined to attribute this to the gasoline situation. His company operates open air movies in Saugus, Shrewsbury and Weymouth, Mass. Business at the three theatres was normal, he said, and there was no evidence of any drop because of the gasoline surfew.

Max Finn of E. M. Loew's circuit, operating six drive-in theatres along the Atlantic seaboard, in Lynn and Milford, Mass., Providence, R. I., Baltimore, Md., Washington, D. C., and Miami, Fla., also reported no appreciable change in grosses for the first week of the conservation plan.

The New England states it is said, have more or less proven the ineffectiveness of the present curfew plan inasmuch as the gasoline consumption has not decreased as much as was expected. There have been rumors that as a result of the failure of the plan, a rationing system would be attempted whereby motorists would be limited to 15 gallons weekly. In commenting on this figure, the Wall Street Journal, on August 11th said "This would not be rationing. The average passenger automobile used 653 gallons of gasoline in 1940. Fifteen gallons a week would be 780 a year."

Meanwhile, summer theatres "up New England way," where approximately 85 per cent of the customers arrive via automobiles, were unaffected by the gas curfew of the first week. For the most part, it was reported that the "strawhats" in the New England area did a "very good" business, with no letdown in grosses.

BRYLAWSKI WARNS AGAINST TIME PLAN

National daylight saving time, bruited for several months as an answer to threatened power shortages, will cut theatre attendance 25 per cent, and break established habits of theatre-going, A. Julian Brylawski, vice-president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, told a House Interstate Commerce committee last week, in testimony for exhibition. Broadcasters also opposed the projected Congressional mandate to President Roosevelt, to declare daylight saving time nationally, or in areas necessary. However, officials of the Office of Production Management warned that daylight saving time might not be enough; that power itself might be reduced. Such measures obviously will affect theatre upright, marquee and lobby lighting; theatrical signs; and air conditioning.

Warner Defense Shorts Set for Public Schools

On request of educational authorities, Warners are making film booking arrangements that will virtually place the studio's two-reel national defense and historical shorts in the curriculum of the New York City public schools.

The shorts, including "Here Comes the Cavalry," "Wings of Steel," "The Bill of Rights," "Teddy the Rough Rider," etc., will be shown on specified days at selected theaters in the vicinity of the city's 900 schools with an attendance of 1,500,000.

Theatres Boost USO Campaign

More than 2,300 independent theatres enrolled for the United Service Organization Theatre Week, to start Labor Day, Joseph Bernhard of Warner Brothers, announced last week. Mr. Bernhard, who is chairman of the Motion Picture Theatres USO campaign, also announced that Martin D. Harris, owner of the State Thetre in Hartford, Conn., was the first independent exhibitor to pledge participation. New York and New Jersey circuits enrolled thus far include: Brandt, Century, Fabian, Island, Cocalis, Cinema, Rosenblatt-Welt, Newbury, Endicott, Rapf and Ruden, Trans-Lux, Harris, Consolidated, Stamatus, Leo Brecher, Rosen Bros., Harry K. Hecht, Charles Moses and Lane.

The Chicago amusement division of the USO, headed by Jack Kirsch, reported last week that it had exceeded its $10,000 quota for the drive, of which more than $2,500 was donated by Balaban and Katz and the company's employes.

Hollywood stars, led by Edward Arnold and Eddie Cantor in San Francisco last Saturday entertained more than 20,000 soldiers, sailors and marines who converged on the city from every camp, fort, base ship and naval station within a 200-mile radius, to attend opening of the first USO "hospitality house" in the Golden Gate city, at the Civic Center, which will function as a recreational center for service men. The center was built by the labor unions of San Francisco on land given by the city and funds donated by the public.

Among those who entertained during the three-hour show were: Linda Darnell, Ann Rutherford, Connie Boswell, Binnie Barnes, Alec Templeton, Virginia O'Brien, the Duncan Sisters, Tony and Sally deMarco, and Romo Vincent.

Van Schmus Host At USO Luncheon

Last Tuesday, W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Radio City Music Hall and exhibitor co-chairman of the New York City committee for the USO theatre drive, was host at a luncheon given for Joseph Bernhard, drive chairman, at Toots Shor's restaurant in New York. Plans for the theatre drive were outlined at the luncheon, at which many industry leaders were present.

More Price Cuts For Service Men

Exhibitors are continuing the general policy of slashing admission prices for service men, as news from a number of cities this week indicates.

Thirteen houses in the Miami area, operated by Paramount Enterprises, adopted a policy of admitting any service man in uniform to any performance for 20 cents. This policy covers houses in Miami Beach, Hialeah and other centers, in addition to Miami. These theatres also have converted their lobbies into receiving stations for aluminum and tinfoil.

In Cincinnati, the RKO Albee, Palace, Capitol, Grand and Lyric, and Keith's inaugurated 24- and 30-cent admission prices for men in service. Regular admissions are 33 and 40 cents, including tax.

Paul Klinger, manager of the Rialto Theatre in Lewistown, Pa., announced a reduction in admissions for men in uniform below the tax level. Admissions will be 15 cents at all times.

Thornton Sargent, Fox West Coast circuit district manager, this week was in Camp Roberts, San Luis Obispo, Cal., to aid in the production of a United Service Organization trailer, to be used in theatres to raise funds. James Stewart is the trailer's star.

Parleys Delay Mexican Strike

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

The Mexican film industry obtained a breathing spell from the threatened strike against the major American distributors, with postponement, until September 2nd, as a result of the good offices of Mayor Lic. Javier Rojo Gomez, of Mexico City. It seemed that the strike would be called for the date set August 13th, until the Mayor, one of the most progressive members of the new Federal Government, called conversations between the distributors and representatives of the National Cinematographic Workers Union.

Although the union had boasted there would be ample film resources from Latin America to keep 958 Mexican theatres going, exhibitors were worried.

Major American pictures are the bed rock of exhibition in this country. People only go to see independents when they are extraordinarily good.

The intervention of Mayor Rojo Gomez is seen substantiating reports the Federal Government is exerting pressure for a quick settlement, to encourage the Americans to continue in Mexico. It was reported that the Americans would retire rather than make further concessions.

Two U. S. Films Banned

The country is becoming more sensitive about pictures dealing with its history. The latest manifestation is prohibition of two American films, "Man of Conquest," and "The Oregon Trail." These are said to disparage Mexico. The censor department asked they be withdrawn as a gesture of good-will. Also prohibited was a short, "Spanish Information."

In the first four months of existence, the new censor department has reviewed 68 films. and allowed Mexican producers to export 167. Fees collected were $3,325.

Provincial authorities are cooperating by demanding of exhibitors a photostatic copy of the permit the department issues, before allowing a picture.

Mexican films have become popular in Paraguay. However, Mexican producers are disturbed by criticisms of their product in Argentine and Guatamalan newspapers.

A de luxe theatre, the Teatro Colonial, seating 3,000, has been opened in Puebla City, capital of Puebla state, by the Arellano Brothers who operate several other theatres in Puebla. Gen. Maximino Avila Camacho, former governor of Puebla and brother of the President, was among the large number of celebrities who attended the inauguaration.

Another "monster" subsequent run theatre, the Cine Ixtlacihuatla, which will accommodate 6,000, is under construction in Mexico City, with the inauguration expected for late next spring. This theatre is named for Mount Ixtlacihuatla (The Sleeping Woman), the volcano that is a feature of the local landscape.

RKO Signs Durant

Jack Durant, of the Michell and Durant comedy team, arrived in Hollywood August 7th, having been signed by RKO Radio to play a featured part in "Four Jacks and a Queen," which will be directed by Jack Hively. He appeared in the Broadway stage play "Pal Joey." In "Four Jacks and a Queen" he will be featured with Anne Shirley, June Havoc, Jack Briggs, Ray Bolger, Desi Arnaz and William Blees.

CBS Talent Unit Sale Approved

A special Columbia Broadcasting System stockholders' meeting on Monday, August 11th, approved the sale by the network of its interest in Columbia Concerts Corp., Columbia Artists, Inc., and Columbia Management of California, Inc. The sale required a two-thirds vote, but there was approval from more than 1,325,000 shares with only 1,144,-184 needed.

The sale of Columbia Concerts stock provides for a payment of $61,000 for the preferred, $31,000 payable on the date of execution of the contract and $30,000 on December 27th; and $150,000 for the common, payable in five installments of $20,000 each on May 15th of 1942 to 1946, inclusive, remaining $50,000 payable in installments equal to half the profits over $60,000 for the first two years and over $50,000 thereafter.

Albany Variety Club Discussed

Albany may have a new Variety club, if plans of the area's exchangemen and exhibitors mature. With Louis R. Golding, Fabian divisional head, and M. A. Silver, Warner circuit zone manager, and others attending, showmen met recently in that city to promote another club. The city's former Variety club expired several years ago. It had its own quarters, and did considerable charitable work and entertaining.

The Detroit Variety Club next Monday will have its "all-industry" outing, under the chairmanship of John R. MacPherson, manager of National Screen Service in that city, and with Ralph Stitt handling publicity.

The Oklahoma Tent 22 will hold a picnic and Turtle Derby August 25th, afternoon and evening, at the Belle Isle Park, Oklahoma City. General chairman is C. B. "Brownie" Akers, of the Griffith circuit. More than 200 registrants have been received for the derby. All film exchanges, theatre supply offices, and theatre circuit offices in the city will be closed August 25th, a Monday.

The Texas Variety Club, Dallas, will stage a "Labor Day Celebration" at Kidd Springs Park, that city. There will be many attractions, including a Second Annual Turtle Derby, the Gainsville Community Circus, a guest appearance of Senator "Happy" Chandler, of Kentucky, as speaker, 100 outdoor amusement devices, 25 acts, 10 name bands. The whole park will be utilized, for 75,000 persons are expected to attend.

The Variety Club of Southern California, Hollywood, Monday elected its first board of directors, and will name officers next week.

On the board are: Walter Wanger, producer; Duke Clark, Paramount branch manager; Charles P. Skouras, circuit chief; Guy Gunderson, UA; Jacob Y. Berman, exhibitor; Hal Hanson, exhibitor; Wayne Ball, Columbia manager; Harry Humber, Bank of America; Dr. A. H. Giannini, banker; Charles Buckley, Fox West Coast circuit; Robert Poole, executive secretary of the Pacific Coast Independent Theatre Owners.

The Memphis Tent will stage a rodeo at that city's fair grounds on Labor Day. Co-chairman of the arrangements committee are James Rogers, Columbia, Herbert Kohn, of the Malco circuit. Funds go to the Tent's Mothers Milk Bank Fund.

Rowen Succeeds Land

Sammy Rowen has replaced Robert Land in the publicity office of Warner Bros. theatres in Pittsburgh.

KAO Half Year Profit $213,440

Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corp. and subsidiaries estimate their net profit after all charges for the 26 weeks ended July 5th, 1941, at $213,440. For the corresponding period in 1940, a net profit of $427,062 was reported. Profit before provision for depreciation and income taxes was $635,402, compared with the profit similarly computed for the 1940 period, of $891,482. Depreciation was $327,047 and provision for income taxes were $94,915, based on a 30 per cent rate as compared with a 24 per cent rate for last year.

	26 Weeks ended July 5, 1941	26 Weeks ended June 29, 1940
Profit before provision for Depreciation and Income Taxes	$635,402.74	$891,482.36
Depreciation	327,047.59	343,784.71
	$308,355.15	$547,697.65
Provision for Income Taxes	94,915.00	120,635.00
Net Profit after all charges	$213,440.15	$427,062.65

No provision has been made for Federal excess profits tax.

CBS Gross $29,134,776

The semi-annual statement of the Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., and subsidiary companies, mailed last week to stockholders, showed that the gross income for the six months ended on June 28th amounted to $29,134,776 compared with $24,952,294 for the corresponding period last year. Profit before provision for Federal income and excess profits taxes was $4,471,550 against $4,794,655 of last year.

After deducting $2,053,463 provision for Federal income and excess profits taxes and supplemental provision for estimated additional Federal income and excess profits taxes, calculated under the Revenue Bill of 1941, the net profit for this year's period amounted to $2,418,087, equal to $1.41 a share on 1,716,277 shares of $2.50 par stock outstanding on June 28, or to be outstanding upon completion of exchange for the old $5 par value stock.

The net profit for the six months ended on June 29, 1940, after taxes totaling $1,299,936, amounted to $2,493,719, or $1.45 a share.

For the three months ended June 30th, 1941, the consolidated net earnings of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., and its subsidiaries, before deducting any provision for Federal taxes on income of such amount, are $269,392.50. After deducting estimated provision for normal Federal income taxes (it does not appear that the Corporation will be liable for excess profit taxes) of $64,654.20, the balance of net earnings equals $204,738.39, which is equivalent to 51c per share on the 400,000 shares of $2.00 preferred stock outstanding.

Astor Releases Six

Astor Pictures of New York, has announced release dates on six streamlined feature films within the next two months, as follows: "Cock Of the Air" with Chester Morris, Aug 1st; "Her Enlisted Man" (formerly "Red Salute") with Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Young, Aug. 20th; "Palooka" with Lupe Velez, Stuart Erwin and Jimmy Durante, Sept. 1st; "Tonight or Never" with Gloria Swanson, Melvyn Douglas, Boris Karloff and Allison Skipworth, Sept. 5th; "Let 'Em Have It" with Bruce Cabot, Virginia Bruce and Richard Arlen, Sept. 15th; and "I Cover the Waterfront" starring Claudette Colbert, Oct. 1st; All were formerly released by United Artists.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS FACE RISING COSTS, WAGE DEMANDS, NEW RAIDS

Employees Open Fight for War Bonus, with Operators Divided on Policy; Tax on Sunday Openings To Remain on Books

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

With the likelihood of the next few months, and few months after that, being infinitely more difficult than any before from a trading point of view, British exhibitors are faced with the uncomfortable prospect that they may also be the most expensive months on record.

The probability that the Luftwaffe may well date their most excessive raids for next Autumn and Winter, with a consequent dislocation of filmgoing, is vis a vis a certainty that the exhibitor, in the immediate future, will have to increase greatly the expenditure he chalks up against his accounts on the grounds of staff wages and expenses. A nationwide push in the direction of a national wage bonus is being staged by the employees union, and whatever be the action of independent exhibitor groups, the odds are that, speaking generally, the picture houses will have to toe the line.

A bonus of 17½ per cent above the prewar wage rates is a not unlikely outcome of current activities. Such a bonus has already been granted in some areas of Great Britain, but is to be canvassed and fought for nationally by the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employees, the theatre workers' union. A recent gesture by the Odeon circuit which has, without consultation with the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, granted such a bonus to the employees of its 200 odd cinemas has, so to speak, thrown the cat among the pigeons, exasperated the constitutionalists in the exhibitor association, and played into the hands of the employees' union.

Operating Costs Up

The increasing costs of operating picture houses and, in many areas the unfair and uneconomic burden of the tax on Sunday cinemas is not likely to make the situation of the exhibitor in blitzed Britain any easier. The recent emphatic and complete refusal of the London County Council to consider a cut in the Sunday charity tax, inasmuch as it is likely to be taken as a precedent by other districts, is as bad as a blow below the belt.

Apart from the exclusively economic aspect of the matter, a point of vital principle is involved in the campaigning pro and con (though not so much "con" as might have been expected) a national agreement between the CEA and NATKE on the bonus question. Wages, hours and working conditions generally have hitherto been treated as local matters, each CEA district making agreements, or as the case may be, refusing to make any agreements, with local NATKE branches. Though the principle will still apply to basic wages and hours, there is a strong likelihood that it will be supplanted in favor of a national agreement on the war bonus.

A motion in this regard has already been put forward and is to be considered at the August General Council of the CEA.

According to Tom O'Brien, High Priest and Officiating Major Domo of the NATKE, out of all Britain only some five territories have conceded wage bonuses to theatre workers, mostly in the Midlands and South Wales areas. To go on operating on these lines suggests O'Brien is cumbersome if not downright impracticable, and a national agreement is the only fair and practical solution.

May Arbitrate Wages

Waving the Big Stick of Constitutionalism, Mr. O'Brien has pointed out that if the motion picture industry does not toe the line then it may very well be compelled to, for there is already an Order in Council to the Statute Book, under which the industry may be compelled to go to arbitration. No other industry in wartime Britain says the NATKE Secretary, is paying so low a bonus as the motion picture industry.

It is true that these five areas have already granted bonuses to their theatre employees, for the most part around the figure of 12 per cent over the prewar wage. Others have paid lower bonuses, as low as five per cent in some instances. Certain "black" districts, among which are the blitzed Southampton and Portsmouth areas, have paid nothing at all.

As already indicated, the first monkey wrench was thrown into the CEA machinery by circuit chief Oscar Deutsch, who, having already granted two previous bonuses to his workers, last month, July, announced that he had decided on a 17½ per cent bonus for all his theatre employees. Mr. Deutsch, for reasons of his own, ignored the CEA constitution, omitted either to consult or even to advise the CEA until his magnanimous gesture had become a fait accompli, provoked all the critical thunder of the exhibitors' association for his action.

It is the CEA policy that members on such matters, even though they may not seek CEA approval, at least do their Association the justice of telling them beforehand. Mr. Deutsch's direct action provoked intense bitterness, brought the whole question before the Council, and resulted in the staging of the August discussion, and may well end in a national agreement to the benefit of the cinema employees, but to the discomfort of already heavily encumbered exhibitors.

Mr. Deutsch's defense is that he had to do it, because within his own circuit the transfer of employees from theatre to theatre, from bonus area to non-area, and vice versa, was resulting in confusion and argument, that something concrete and swift was needed to arrest the gradual exodus of employees to other well paid wartime industries, and that anyway the cost of living had already risen by 29 per cent (as opposed to the Deutsch bonus of 17½ per cent).

Despite the move in the direction of a national bonus, certain CEA areas remain individualist, and are still pressing for local agreements on the thesis that conditions vary from place to place. Mr. Deutsch will not be the only target for the August artillery:

On purely economic grounds this bonus proposal is meeting with a chilly reception from various exhibitor groups, who, while admitting the ethical argument protest that they are already suffering depleted incomes under abnormal and depressed conditions.

Sunday Taxes Remain

For years now London cinemas which have opened on a Sunday have been compelled to pass over 13.5 per cent of their takings to accredited as the price of their shame. They have found with the complete switchover in wartime habits, that Sunday has depreciated in commercial value, even though it may have increased its relative value in terms of the whole operating week. For many this amount has prevented a profit. Though it was expected that the Council would take cognizance of the general depression and the difficulties of operating in wartime, the request for a cut was refused point blank on the grounds that the exhibitor case was not proven.

Appeals for a suspension of decision until the Council has been enabled to hear the exhibitor case at greater length were refused. In the whole Chamber only one still small voice, that of Earl Manvers was moved to point out the illogical and unethical nature of the tax, to ask if it was right for cinemas to open, why tax them, and not tax other Sunday traders, to point out that though personnel and management were not being penalized, capital was.

Warner Brothers Buy Maxwell Stock without Getting Control

Ordinary stock of Associated British Pictures Corporation, totaling 2,000,000 shares, was purchased by Warner Brothers from Mrs. John Maxwell, widow of the one-time chairman of the corporation, it was reported from London early this week. It is unofficially estimated that the value of the contract, the signing of which has been announced, is $3,600,000.

Full freedom of action stays with the corporation and control still rests in British hands. During later stages of negotiations the parties were in consultation with the Treasury and the Board of Trade, both of whom, it is understood, had no objection to completion of the transaction, which involves a large contribution of dollar exchange.

John Maxwell, formerly a Glasgow solicitor, built up Associated British Pictures into one of Great Britain's more powerful film combines, controlling about 500 motion picture theatres. When he died last October he left holdings of 4,050,000 shares to his wife. He fought continually to keep the control of the corporation in British hands—an aim fully shared by Mrs. Maxwell.

RECORDS SET AT WARNER, MGM, RKO OPENINGS

"Sergeant York" Moves in New York, Opens in Washington; "Icecapades" Opening Held

After six weeks, during which more than 85,000 persons paid $100,000 to see it, Warner Brothers' "Sergeant York" moved on Monday from the Astor to the Hollywood Theatre, New York, accompanied by a parade, and other appurtenances of a world premiere, and for an indefinite run at a price scale of 75 cents for matinees, $1.10 for evenings. The picture—for which Warners will ask 50 per cent of net receipts, from exhibitors, according to policy enunciated two weeks ago by the company's general sales manager, Gradwell Sears—moved from the Astor to make room for MGM's "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," which opened Tuesday to reach grosses.

Other premieres this week were those of RKO's "Parachute Battalion," Thursday, at the Fox Theatre, Atlanta; Republic's "Icecapades," Friday, at the Gopher Theatre, Minneapolis; Warners' "Dive Bomber," Tuesday, at the State, Plaza, and Orpheum theatres, San Diego.

Meanwhile, United Artists' "Lady Hamilton," called "That Hamilton Woman" in its U. S. showings, opened at the Odeon Theatre, London, Monday, August 4th, with unusual Governmental attention; and Walt Disney's "Fantasia" was announced for indefinite run at New York's Broadway Theatre, from which it had been expected to depart, after ten months.

"Jekyll" Beats "Gone With the Wind"

In its second day "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" equalled attendance at the premiere. Holdouts started at 10 A. M. and lines three deep at the box office frequently extended along Broadway and around the corner to 45th Street. Attendance topped capacity at every performance with standing room in continuous use throughout both of the first days. Figures topped "Pygmalion," and "Goodbye Mr. Chips," previous continuous performance record holders at the Astor. Financially the picture topped returns from the first two days of "Gone With the Wind," holding a $175 first day margin over the GWTW record.

"Sergeant York" will be sold to exhibitors at 50 per cent of net receipts, Gradwell Sears, Warners' general sales manager, told the company's annual sales convention, Chicago, two weeks ago. A price scale of $1.10 evenings and 55 cents matinees will be enforced; men in the armed forces will be allowed to see the film for 55 cents at night, 40 cents at matinees; and the company will not allow "Sergeant York" on a program with another film. He also said the company would ask exhibitors to increase local advertising for the picture, the increased cost to be shared by both.

The film opened July 2nd in New York to extensive ballyhoo, and the attendance of the country's top political and military personalities. The same circumstances attended the opening at the Earle Theatre, Washington, two weeks ago, with Sergeant York himself received at the White House by a President who declared himself thrilled by the picture, although somewhat apprehensive over the amount of killing in it.

The picture also opened at Asbury Park's Mayfair Theatre—the upright of that house being replaced by an upright bearing the words, "Sergeant York"; and at the Warner Theatre, Atlantic City, with the attendance of Jesse Lasky, producer of the film, and to the accompaniment of a civic celebration.

The New York move from the Astor to Hollywood theatres featured a parade Monday up Broadway, the first automobile bearing Joan Leslie, feminine lead, surrounded by John Powers models arranged in a "V" (for "Victory") formation, and a guard of honor.

With the attendance of crack parachute troopers from the special parachute soldiers' detachment at Fort Benning, Georgia, RKO's new picture, "Parachute Battalion" opened Thursday evening at the Fox Theatre, Atlanta. Others of note were at the special premiere. Stars and company executives attended.

Many of the film's sequences were made at the Fort. The U. S. Army Air Corps cooperated in its production.

Republic's "Icecapades" opened at the Gopher Theatre, Minneapolis, Friday evening. Gene Autry, the film's star, was at the world premiere, as were executives of the company and other stars and officers from the studio. William Saal, Republic publicity man, was in charge of the arrangements.

Warners' "Dive Bomber" opened Tuesday evening, for the first time to the general public, at three San Diego theatres, the State, Plaza, and Orpheum. Headed by Errol Flynn and Fred MacMurray, a Hollywood delegation attended. Also at the premiere were the naval personnel of the Pacific Fleet base, the site of many of the picture's scenes.

United Artists' Alexander Korda release, "Lady Hamilton"—called "That Hamilton Woman" in U. S. showings—opened Monday evening, August 4th, at the Odeon Theatre, London, with special attention from the British Government, an attention manifested primarily in a review broadcast to the Empire by the British Broadcasting Corporation. The only other picture reviewed by the BBC was Charles Chaplin's "The Great Dictator," also a UA release. The BBC not only reviewed the film, it also broadcast the climactic speech Lord Nelson (Lawrence Olivier) delivers to the Admiralty in the film.

The picture also broke the house record during its first week at the Regent Theatre, Sydney, Australia, the company reported Monday, in New York.

HUNTER FILM COURSE DRAWS 112 STUDENTS

The course on motion pictures as one of the fine arts being conducted at the summer session of Hunter College in New York has registered twice as many students as last year—112 in all. Conducted by Mrs. Jeanette W. Emrich, member of the public service department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, the course is designed to develop a better understanding and appreciation of film technique and to provide a broad concept of the development of films. The students survey the early history of motion pictures as well as the present-day industry and study technical devices, research problems, story material, the art of directing, set and costume designing, sound, casting methods, the place of the western in film history, the documentary film, social and educational aspects of motion pictures and the operations and set-up of the motion picture industry and its production code.

"Fantasia" Continues

The New York run of Walt Disney's "Fantasia," now in its tenth month, will continue indefinitely at the Broadway theatre in that city, RKO, its distributor, announced last week, after previous reports the film would end its stay. Patronage is "extremely healthy" and has induced the continuance, the company said, adding, the tourist business had contributed to the situation. Thus far, 700,000 persons have seen the picture.

An average of 153 per cent of normal business has been done by MGM's "Whistling in the Dark," in its first four openings, in Richmond, Washington, Wilmington, and Providence, the company announced to the press this week.

"Life Begins for Andy Hardy," the MGM continuation of the Andy Hardy series, will have approximately 375 day and date openings throughout the country, within one week of its national release date, next Friday, the company announced in New York last week. The openings are the greatest number accorded a company film since its "Saratoga." The company plans to establish a national Andy Hardy Week, and is asking mayors of cities housing openings to inscribe proclamations to that effect.

RKO's "Tom, Dick and Harry" last week had scored 30 full-week holdovers and seven third-week holdovers. It was reported by the company the receipts had in many situations paralleled and exceeded those from "Kitty Foyle," Ginger Rogers' previous starring vehicle.

Warners' "Bad Men of Missouri" by this week had compiled a total of 32 holdovers in first run engagements. Latest were at Louisville, Seattle, and Cleveland.

Columbia's "Here Comes Mr. Jordan" began its second week at the Music Hall in New York on Thursday, August 14th.

Two Paramount Films

Paramount's "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" and "The Shepherd of the Hills" have been setting boxoffice records, the company reported in New York Monday. The first, in its first week at the Chicago Theatre, in the city of that name, was 30 per cent ahead of the receipts on "The Lady Eve," also a company picture.

The same picture, at the Michigan Theatre, Detroit, ran ahead of the mentioned comparative picture by 17 per cent in its first three days; ahead by 16 per cent at the Paramount, Los Angeles; by 15 per cent at the Newman Theatre, Kansas City, in its first five days; and in New Orleans and Springfield it was 10 per cent ahead of "The Lady Eve" business.

"Shepherd of the Hills" in its second, final week at the New York Paramount garnered $33,000.

Warners' British film "The Prime Minister" opened for the first time on this side, Tuesday evening, at the Capitol Theatre, Ottawa, Canada, to the accompaniment of a special short-wave greeting from Queen Elizabeth. Many Canadian notables were scheduled to be in the opening night audience, including Princess Alice, wife of the Earl of Athlone, Governor General of the Dominion; and Prime Minister MacKenzie King.

The film was made in England, at the Teddington studio of the company, near London, last winter. Stars are John Gielgud and Diana Wynyard.

Proceeds of the opening went to the Queen's Canadian Fund.

Publicists Guild Negotiations Start

First meeting of the Screen Publicists Guild and the representatives of the majors' New York home offices, over a closed shop contract, embodying raises in wages, classifications of workers, seniority provisions, and other factors—occurred Monday night, in that city.

Thus draws to a conclusion the Guild's 19-month fight for recognition as the bargaining agency for the advertising and publicity workers in the majors' publicity departments, and for a closed shop contract which would substantially increase the wages of those workers, assure them of permanency of position, and force the majors' personnel departments to hire only Guild members. The fight was marked by the victory of the Guild, last month, in a National Labor Relations Board bargaining agency election, 172 to 19.

Attacks Charged

Meanwhile, even as the Guild entered into negotiations Monday, with Governmental approval, it warned the majors against "an offensive against the Guild," charging that "an active Guild member has been fired at Warners" and that "at Loew Theatres, a 'reorganization' with obvious direction against the Guild" has been launched. The Guild remarked, in its organ, the SPG News:

"The members of the Screen Publicists Guild will know the meaning of this situation, and how to protect themselves, and their union."

The meeting with majors' representatives, Monday, over the contract was scheduled for continuance this week, and after, with many contract phases to be discussed. Guild demands were listed in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD of August 9th, page 36.

At the same time, in Hollywood, another union, the Screen Actors Guild, last week mailed ballots to members for voting on the 1941 Modification Agreement with the producers, approved by them and the Guild representatives, and expected to take effect next Saturday, upon ratification by members.

The new agreement is expected to give Guild members approximately $300,000 more per year in earnings. It introduces a new, basic wage of $10.50 for general extra work, replacing the wage of $8.25, and eliminating the $5.50 call except for atmosphere players in groups of 30 or more. In the words of the "Screen Actor," union magazine, the agreement also provides:

". . . important increases in earnings, and improvements in working conditions, for dancers, singers, ice skaters, swimmers, standins, freelance players, day players, and stunt men."

The minimum weekly salary for freelance players will be increased from $66 to $100 per week. Day players, converted to weekly, will receive $100. Stunt men will receive a minimum, weekly, of $200.

Projectionists Ask Increase

In Chicago, the projectionists' union last week asked a general 10 per cent wage increase and two weeks' vacation with pay, in new contracts to become effective August 31st. Peter Shayne, union president, told exhibitors the vacation demands were important. The union's representatives met this week with those from the Illinois Allied unit, the Balaban and Katz, Warners', and Schoenstadt circuits.

Named Monday to the Screen Writers Guild Board of Directors were Charles Brackett, Marc Connelly, and Mary McCall, Jr., replacing Ring Lardner, Jr., Donald Ogden Stewart, and Dore Schary. Wells Root, John McLain, and Stanley Rubin temporarily replace Sheridan Gibney, John Howard Lawson, and Lester Cole.

In Atlantic City, the meetings of the executive board of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees ended Friday August 8th, with no details disclosed. George E. Browne, president, attended.

The Ohio unit of the Alliance last week, in Youngstown, reelected Robert Mills, of Springfield, secretary. The organization went on record for state jurisdiction over coin-operated picture machines. It also reelected to the executive board, Robert Greer, Herbert Shell, Glen Horton, Albert Miller, H. H. Hofferbert, John Shuff; and also elected William Hartman.

Acquire Shubert Theatre

The Sam S. Shubert theatre in New Haven, one of Connecticut's few stage houses, has been taken over by Yorkhaven Enterprise, Inc., a new corporation headed by Morris A. Nunes in New Haven. The theatre has been operated by Select Theatrical Corporation for the 26 years since it was built, with E. D. Eldridge as manager.

Helen Gwenn Joins Warners

Helen Gwenn, publicity writer, has been added to the staff of Mort Blumenstock, in charge of advertising and publicity for Warner Brothers, in the east.. She will handle magazine exploitation under Mitchell Rawson, eastern publicity manager.

Renoir Assigned "Swamp Water"

Jean Renoir's first American film assignment will be "Swamp Water," the Vereen Bell novel, it has been announced by Twentieth Century-Fox, which has the French director under contract. Production is expected to start within one month.

Nine Companies Incorporated

Nine motion picture businesses have been incorporated in recent days according to Michael F. Walsh, Secretary of State. They are:

PRC Film Exchanges, Inc., 200 shares, by Cecil Bernert, Irving B-J Levine, filing attorney, and Estelle Kaufman, New York.

Sepal Amusement, Inc., 100 shares, by A. N. Abrams, I. Eleff and Irene Dunne, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York, Nordlinger, Riegelman and Cooper, same address, filing.

A COLUMBIA SHORT-SUBJECT PRESENTATION

JUDGE SPEEDS TRIAL OF MINNESOTA TEST ACTION

Decision Due by Next Month in Fight by Distributors to Maintain Decree Selling

Whether exhibitors of Minnesota will be able to buy product from the majors in the consent decree, in the blocks-of-five method of selling prescribed by that decree, will be determined by the beginning of next month, according to Judge Hugo O. Hanft, of Ramsey County District Court, St. Paul, in which the five decree-bound majors and United Artists two weeks ago brought their suit to test the legality of the state's anti-decree law, and to obtain a temporary injunction restraining its application.

Judge Hanft indicated Friday, August 8th, that he would decide on the appeal for an injunction, within three weeks. On that day, too, he asked the six plaintiffs to submit briefs — after hearing David Shearer, their Minneapolis attorney, assert he sought the restraining order to permit the majors to sell their new season product, beginning September 1st.

Mr. Shearer added a permanent injunction and a ruling that the state law is unconstitutional would be demanded in the court's October term.

Blocks of Five Barred

The Minnesota law, supported by Northwest Allied, bars the selling of film in blocks of five, by compelling majors to offer their entire season's product, for sale. It allows a 20 per cent cancellation privilege.

United Artists joined the suit by the five decree-bound majors because the law would prevent it from following its usual practice of selling pictures individually.

The suit by the majors had come after weeks of delay, during which their attorneys in New York discussed language of the complaint, procedure to be followed, and whether to introduce the suit in a state or Federal court. The state court was decided upon, because it was felt Federal court calendars were too crowded.

Their opposition to the law was presaged from the first, even while Northwest Allied was proposing it merely in its own council chambers. The majors at the time pointed out they were bound by Federal law to observe the decree uniformly.

Northwest Allied, after pushing the state law through, called upon members to support, and state officials to enforce, it.

Charging the consent decree had boosted film rentals so that "it will be seemingly impossible for independent exhibitors to operate under such terms without irreparable loss," Northwest Allied last week asked the Department of Justice—enforcer of the decree—to "reconsider and rectify this situation."

Selling of new season product by the five decree majors and United Artists has been, meanwhile, held in abeyance, even as some exhibitors spoke openly of a product shortage, and even as Northwest thereupon rallied its membership through meetings and visitations of its officers upon individual exhibitors. It was declared recently by the unit that it had complete exhibitor support.

At the hearing of plaintiffs' arguments in the Ramsey County Court, James F. Lynch, County attorney, asserted the state law is constitutional. He was supported in court by Clarence O. Holten, Northwest Allied attorney; Senator A. O. Sletvold, sponsor of the law in the state Senate; and Earl J. Neumeier, a state Senator, and an exhibitor in Stillwater, that state.

The briefs ordered Friday, August 8th will probably be submitted before the week's end, it was predicted Monday. Additional briefs will be filed by Mr. Lynch, by the state Attorney General's office, and by Edward J. Goff, attorney of Hennepin County, in which is Minneapolis, chief exchange center of Minnesota.

The hearing Friday was marked by unusual procedure: Mr. Holten was allowed discourse on the issues for two hours. Northwest Allied, whom he reprcsents, is not directly a party to the case. Ordinarily, it would have had to file an intervenor suit to obtain hearing. However, Senator Neumeier's request that Mr. Holten be given the floor, was granted.

Mr. Shearer, and Joseph Finley, St. Paul attorney, also retained by the plaintiff majors, argued Friday, August 8th, that the state could not regulate majors' contracts, because they are in interstate commerce. Mr. Shearer also noted the majors could obtain no relief from the New York court in which the decree was entered, until the Minnesota law was finally tested for constitutionality. He said the majors are, in the present status, unable to sell any pictures in Minnesota.

Relief Compulsory

Mr. Holten replied that according to the decree, the New York court must grant relief where a state intervenes. He pointed to the recent United States Supreme Court decision on ASCAP, and state laws, in which it was held that a consent decree has no bearing on the power of the state to enact legislation covering the same subject. He also argued that the majors are, in effect, economic units with powers of "life or death" over independent exhibitors; that, therefore, they were subject to state restriction.

Another argument by the Northwest Allied attorney was that, in order to qualify for a temporary injunction, the plaintiffs must have suffered irreparable injury, and must prove that injury. He asserted plaintiffs' business was not shown to be damaged, and he pointed out that plaintiffs' arguments dealt with special deals, spot bookings, split deals; that they had not shown, by one dollar, how these affected their business.

Paramount, he charged, has 58 theatres in Minnesota. They are the best. Paramount, according to the decree, may sell as it wants to these houses, Mr. Holten pointed out, and then said that to compel independent theatre owners to buy in blocks of five, while allowing a major to sell en masse to its theatre circuit affiliate, was inequitable.

"Divorcement" Again?

The Neely theatre "divorcement" bill again bobbed into Washington mention last week, when Senator Kilgore, chairman of the subcommittee handling the bill, disclosed he had conferred twice with Thurman W. Arnold, head of the Department of Justice's anti-trust division, responsible for the decree, and its enforcement—a decree which did not provide for such "divorcement." The Senator said he requested a meeting between Mr. Arnold and the subcommittee, at which it will be decided whether further hearings will be held, or whether the sub-committee should proceed on evidence already obtained.

National Decency Legion Classifies 13 Pictures

Of the 13 motion pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week six were considered unobjectionable for general patronage, six unobjectionable for adult patronage and one was found to be objectionable in part. The films and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage; "Mob Town," "Six-Gun Gold," "Three Sons O' Guns," "Thunder Over the Prairie," "Wanderers of the West" and "Whistling in the Dark." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults; "Citadel of Crime," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "Hold Back the Dawn," "Murder by Invitation," "New York Town" and "Wild Geese Calling." Class B, Objectionable in Part; "Kisses for Breakfast."

Molliver Exchange To Open

David Molliver, Philadelphia exhibitor, will open an independent film exchange in that city shortly, having closed a deal with Mohawk Pictures in New York to handle the old Grand National line in this territory. In addition to operating the Regis and Viola theatres, Mr. Molliver heads his own premium house handling linens and cosmetics, and operates the Zingo Sales Corp., handling a movie game.

Exhibitors Take Trade Practice Actions to Court

Two disputes involving trade practices between distributor and the exhibitor were brought to court this week for settlement. One involved Abe Stone, operator of the Eagle Theatre in Albany, N. Y., who brought an injunction action into special session of the State supreme court to compel Vitagraph Pictures, Inc., to cease delivering films first run to the new Warner Circuit neighborhood house, the Delaware Theatre, which opened in Albany on July 15th. The other action, heard in the U. S. District Court in Philadelphia, involved dismissal of application by Harry Waxmann, Atlantic City exhibitor, for an injunction to restrain Columbia Pictures from delivering films to the New Embassy Theatre in the resort city.

A similar judgment, sought against Twentieth Century-Fox, was brought by Mr. Stone and settled out of court when defendants signed a stipulation not to supply the Delaware Theatre in Albany in advance on the balance of this season's product on contract with the Eagle. Appearing for Mr. Stone before Justice Harry Schirick in Albany was Leonard Rosenthal, fellow-member of the New York State Unit of Allied temporary committee.

Claim Contract Breach

Mr. Rosenthal claimed Vitagraph had breached its contract with Mr. Stone for a block of 40 pictures by giving the Delaware priority. The situation prior to opening of the Delaware was that Warner's Albany and the Colonial, a Jules Bernstein house, were day and date seven days ahead of the Eagle. According to Mr. Rosenthal, the Warner Circuit has made the Albany a subsequent run.

Mr. Sam Aronowitz, attorney appearing for Vitagraph, said the Delaware was not an intervening run under the contract and further said the contract did not preclude any new theatre being set ahead of the Eagle.

Justice Schirick, in reserving decision, gave both sides a week to submit briefs on the case. According to Mr. Stone, all other companies with the exception of Vitagraph have agreed not to supply pictures to the Delaware before the Eagle gets them.

In Philadelphia, Judge Guy K. Baird of the U. S. District Court, dismissed application made by Harry Waxmann to restrain Columbia from delivering pictures to the New Embassy. The Atlantic City exhibitor had sought to restrain defendants Columbia, Warner Bros. Circuit and Weland Theatre Company from playing films prior to showing in the Waxmann houses.

The Columbia contract with the Hollywood and Astor theatres provided for runs 14 and seven days after first-run on Atlantic Avenue, but it did not specify the name of the first-run theatre, although Waxmann's Colonial was customarily the first-run. Mr. Waxmann's attorney claimed that a contract clause provided protection for the Colonial over the New Embassy, which opened on June 7th.

Judge Baird ruled, however, that Mr. Waxmann is entitled to an injunction restraining Columbia from selling such pictures to the New Embassy which have had a first run at any other house. The decision, in effect, prevents Columbia pictures from playing a second or continued run prior to the Waxmann houses.

Columbia was represented by Morris Wexler, attorney of Philadelphia, and Irving Moross of its home office legal staff.

Connecticut M.P.T.O. Golf Plans Completed

The sixth annual film golf tournament, sponsored by the Connecticut MPTO on August 19th, at the Race Brook Country Club in Orange, Conn., according to an announcement, is ready. Herman M. Levy has reported over 100 prizes in line for golfers and non-golfers and a day of sociability, sport and entertainment for the 150 or more who are expected to attend.

The day will begin with qualifying rounds of golf, followed by luncheon at the club house, an 18-hole tournament, dinner, entertainment and the award of prizes. George H. Wilkinson, Jr., is treasurer and Harry F. Shaw, master of ceremonies.

"Fantasia" Roadshows Set in Australia

Walt Disney's "Fantasia," distributed by RKO Radio, was to begin two Australian roadshow engagements on Friday, August 15th, at the Embassy Theatre, Sydney, and at the Savoy Theatre, Melbourne. They are being preceded by publicity campaigns worked out under the direction of Ralph Doyle, RKO Radio's managing director for Australasia.

News Theatre Opened

Following the success of the Telenews Theater in San Francisco, another unit of the coast-to-coast chain has been opened in Oakland, across the bay, under direction of Ellis W. Levy, coast manager of the organization. The new house seats 800, will have identical policy with the 'Frisco house, including making of its own local newsreels.

Bank Will Pay Japanese Credit

According to Al Daff, Universal manager in Japan, who returned to the company home office early this week, American distributors will be paid their Japanese credits by the Yokohama Specie Bank in San Francisco, when the payments come due from September through December.

Mr. Daff, who investigated the status of the payments in the light of the "freezing" orders recently issued by the Governments of both the United States and Japan, reported that the $840,000 earmarked for the eight major American distributors by Japan as their credit for films licensed for admission to Japan during the three years ending next month, was on hand at the bank and would be paid on maturity. Payments are scheduled to be made in four equal amounts during September, October, November and December.

The Universal official was enroute to the United States before the "freezing" orders were issued and so had little definite information on the effects of the orders on the industry's future business in Japan. He is optimistic, however, about the ability of companies to continue in business there. Mr.

Columbia

ADAM HAD FOUR SONS: Ingrid Bergman, Warner Baxter, Susan Hayward—Good feature. Played double with Tim Holt western. Business satisfactory. Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. General patronage.

ADAM HAD FOUR SONS: Ingrid Bergman, Warner Baxter, Susan Hayward—Played this in the new Centre Theatre, Chatham, to only mediocre business. It was a very fine production, but too much heat.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BLONDIE GOES LATIN: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms, "Daisy"—A dandy bank night picture and liked by all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LONE WOLF KEEPS A DATE: Warren William, Frances Robinson—Enjoyed by everybody. Did nice week-end business on a double bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

PENNY SERENADE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—Good picture. Better than average draw.—Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. General patronage.

First National

OUT OF THE FOG: Ida Lupino, Thomas Mitchell, John Garfield—Fair picture and fair business. I liked it but the customers didn't seem to care for it. Running time, 86 minutes. Played July 27-28.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SHINING VICTORY: Geraldine Fitzgerald, James Stephenson, Donald Crisp—Fair picture and fair business. Pleased the women. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 22.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STRAWBERRY BLONDE, THE: James Cagney, Olivia de Havilland, Rita Hayworth—An excellent picture that pleased all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WAGONS ROLL AT NIGHT, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Sylvia Sidney, Eddie Albert, Joan Leslie—A very good picture that pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BILLY THE KID: Robert Taylor, Brian Donlevy, Ian Hunter—Excellent colored western. Did business and pleased. Natural for small towns.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LOVE CRAZY: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Slapstickish humor had them laughing quite continuously during this one's entire length. It surely is a good blues chaser so advertise it as such. All ages can laugh at this one. Fairly good box-office, but not what it should have been. Running time, 96 minutes. Played July 25-26.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

PEOPLE VS. DR. KILDARE, THE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day—Played this with "The Road to Zanzibar" with surprisingly poor attendance. I thought this the best of the series and so did my audience but that does not seem to agree with the other comments in this column. You'll have to make up your own mind (as usual). Running time, 77 minutes. Played July 18-19.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

WOMAN'S FACE, A: Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas, Conrad Veidt—A very good show. Everyone's acting was good. Joan Crawford and Conrad Veidt were excellent. Played for fair crowds both nights.—Carl Presley, New Madison Theatre, Huntsville, Ark. General patronage.

ZIEGFELD GIRL, THE: James Stewart, Judy Garland, Hedy Lamarr, Lana Turner—Good feature. A little too long. Business O. K.—Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. General patronage.

Paramount

LIFE WITH HENRY: Jackie Cooper, Leila Ernst, Eddie Bracken, Hedda Hopper—Aldrich Family series. Be sure and feature "Aldrich Family" on all advertising and you can't miss with this one.—Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. General patronage.

ROAD TO ZANZIBAR, THE: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—Poor business when played with "The People Vs. Dr. Kildare." Most of the comments claimed that the co-feature was better. Personally, I thought this one was quite funny, but I can't find anyone except my wife who will agree with me. (That last statement is unusual in its own right). Running time, 90 minutes. Played July 18-19.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

ROAD TO ZANZIBAR, THE: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—Awful heat held up business. Everybody liked it who came. Bob Hope steals the show.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Republic

TRAIL BLAZERS, THE: Robert Livingston, Bob Steele, Rufe Davis—Better than average western. We had good crowds both nights. Running time, 58 minutes. Played August 1-2.—Carl Presley, New Madison Theatre, Huntsville, Ark. General patronage.

TRAIL BLAZERS, THE: Three Mesquiteers—Did nice business with "Lone Wolf Keeps a Date" on week-end. Seemed to satisfy.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BINGING UP BABY (RE-ISSUE): Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant—It did business, whatever opinions were.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

LET'S MAKE MUSIC: Bob Crosby, Jean Rogers—Played this with "Topper Returns" to very fine box-office. The audience seemed to think this was a pleasant little picture that moved along smoothly with nice music. After all, that's all that it was intended for, so why kick? Probably all the drawing power was on the other half of the bill. Running time, 84 minutes. Played August 1-2.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

WILDCAT BUS: Fay Wray, Charles Lang—Nice action programer that did not do the business it should have, on account of the heat.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

GREAT AMERICAN BROADCAST, THE: Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, John Payne, Cesar Romero—Good entertaining picture that failed to draw Sunday-Monday.—Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. General patronage.

MAN HUNT: Walter Pidgeon, Joan Bennett—Very good picture but business only fair, probably due to the nickel novel title. Running time, 105 minutes. Played August 3-4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MOON OVER MIAMI: Don Ameche, Betty Grable, Robert Cummings, Charlotte Greenwood—Good picture and good business. Color is very good. Running time, 92 minutes. Played July 23-24.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Thetare, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SUBMARINE PATROL (RE-ISSUE): Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, George Bancroft—Did surprisingly good business on this reissue. Running time, 95 minutes.—Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. General patronage.

THAT NIGHT IN RIO: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Carmen Miranda—Excellent color, clever plot, lots of good music and torrid Carmen Miranda seemed to be enjoyable to my bunch. Business was not bad for summer. If I can pay for the film, that's all I ask right now. Running time, 90 minutes. Played July 8-9.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

United Artists

CHEERS FOR MISS BISHOP: Martha Scott, William Gargan—This is just right for a small college town. They raved about it here and business was really quite good. It is similar to "Goodbye Mr. Chips," but the teacher is of the opposite sex. Be sure to spread the word to teachers of all kinds. They are sure to enjoy it. It is quite a serious film, but very well done, especially the aging make-up of many of the players. Running time, 95 minutes. Played July 29-30.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

GREAT DICTATOR, THE: Charles Chaplin, Paulette Goddard, Jack Oakie—Opinion divided. Most patrons liked first half. Business good.—Elstun Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio. General patronage.

POT O' GOLD: James Stewart, Paulette Goddard—Nice little musical comedy that should please those that will come. Had a hard job getting anyone to come in. Maybe Pot Of Platinum would have held more attraction to them. Running time, 86 minutes. Played July 11-12.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

SOUTH OF PAGO PAGO: Victor McLaglen, Jon Hall, Frances Farmer, Olympe Bradna—Just another picture.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

THAT UNCERTAIN FEELING: Merle Oberon, Melvyn Douglas—For adult audiences, this is one of the funniest films we have had this year. It was a pleasure to hear them laugh and drink in their praise as they went out. Some of you have not liked this one, but word-of-mouth helped a lot on the second day in this town. I did plenty of chuckling myself at each performance. Running time, 84 minutes. Played July 22-23.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

TOPPER RETURNS: Joan Blondell, Roland Young, Carole Landis, "Rochester"—Played this with "Let's Make Music" to one of the largest returns of the summer. Was I startled? "Rochester" practically steals the show in this wacky, fast-moving comedy. All comments were very good. The trick photography amazes many, too. I think this is the best of the "Toppers." Running time, 89 minutes. Played August 1-2.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Universal

MEET THE CHUMP: Hugh Herbert, Jeanne Kelly—The "Yoo-hoo" boy about "yoo-hooed" the people out of our theatre. Why do we buy such product?—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SAN FRANCISCO DOCKS: Burgess Meredith, Irene Hervey—Just a program picture. No draw. Nothing.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WHERE DID YOU GET THAT GIRL?: Helen Parrish, Eddie Quillan, Leon Errol—Very crudely made and belongs on low end of double feature or in 10c houses.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, Claude Rains—Still a good picture,

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—which I brought back for Friday-Saturday. Has plenty action in color in the California gold fields. Running time, 90 minutes. Played July 25-26.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

GREAT LIE, THE: Bette Davis, George Brent, Mary Astor—Excellently done drama that really brought out a goodly proportion of the few people in town. Mary Astor almost steals the show. Played July15-16.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

GREAT LIE, THE: Bette Davis, George Brent, Mary Astor—A real good show. The best picture Bette's made since "Dark Victory." Played July 30-31.—Carl Presley, New Madison Theatre, Huntsville, Ark. General patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR BABY: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Ronald Reagan, May Robson—Not much business, but those that came enjoyed a very good comedy that is fast-moving and has exceptionally clever dialogue. They'll like it if you can get them in. Running time, 101 minutes. Played August 5-6.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

UNDERGROUND: Jeffrey Lynn, Philip Dorn, Kaaren Verne—Good picture and good business. Running time, 95 minutes. Played July 29.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

ABROAD AT HOME: New York Parade—Very interesting for people that know New York City. It shows foreign-looking spots in the city and lets you guess where they were taken. My crowd, mostly from Long Island, enjoyed this greatly. For people who do not know New York, there would be nothing to it. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

DIVING THRILLS: World of Sports—Plenty of thrills and comedy in this reel of slow motion. Many commented on this short in very flattering terms. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

I'LL NEVER HEIL AGAIN: 3 Stooges—The Three Stooges have made their second satire on the Nazis. It is very clever and far better than usual. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. N. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

SO YOU WON'T SQUAWK?: Buster Keaton—Typical Buster Keaton comedy with hanging out of windows, the chase, and messes; but they enjoyed it OK. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CUBAN RHYTHM: Pete Smith Specialties—A dancing lesson; interesting. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DANCE OF THE WEED: Technicolor Cartoons—This seemed almost like a piece of "Fantasia." The adults liked it but the children did not appreciate it. Very good coloring and cartooning. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

LITTLE MOLE, THE: Technicolor Cartoons—This is the first poor cartoon on this year's Metro program.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

OUT OF DARKNESS: Passing Parade—Very good Passing Parade showing how the undercover Belgian newspaper was published during the World War and how it has now reappeared. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

ROOKIE BEAR: Technicolor Cartoons—This is a good color cartoon depicting the cartoon bear in the draft. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

YOSEMITE THE MAGNIFICENT: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—When a good many in the audience stay to see a scenic a second time, it must be good. Confidentially, it is good. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

YOU CAN'T FOOL A CAMERA: Special—This is a dandy free reel that entertains while it plugs MGM pictures to come. No one will criticize you for playing it. It is really good. Running time, 11 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Paramount

DIPSY GYPSY: Madcap Models—These animated models are certainly well done and this is the best of the bunch. They really went to a lot of trouble on this one. Watch for the last half of it; it is both beautiful and amazing. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

POP AND MOM IN WILD OYSTERS: Animated Antics—Something new in cartoons. Very funny.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

EARLY TO BED: Walt Disney Cartoons—Donald Duck tries to go to bed and has plenty of trouble with the alarm clock and a folding cot. The crowd roared. It is one of Disney's best. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 9: Men of the F.B.I.—1941—A little different from the general run, this one about the F.B.I. has a story to part of it. It turns out to be very good. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 10: Crisis in the Atlantic—The Atlantic Crisis emphasized in this one is good but a little out of date nowadays. At least, that is what some of the comments were. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 11: China Fights Back—Well done as usual, this shows the work in China to keep its defense going and how they need materials from America to gradually gain the offensive. We had some people come to see this particular short because they have come from China only recently. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ARCTIC SPRINGTIME: Father Hubbard Alaskan Adventures—It is rather refreshing to see heavily-clad Eskimos in the hot weather we have been having. Good enough scenic. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

BRINGING HOME THE BACON: Terrytoons—Average black and white cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

EMPIRE IN EXILE: The World Today—Just a filler. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TWELVE O'CLOCK AND ALL AIN'T WELL: Terrytoons—A real good black and white cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WHAT HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Terrytoons—Not a bad color cartoon; some parts very good. That is unusual for this series. Running time, 7 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Vitaphone

FIGHTING 69TH ½, THE: Merrie Melodies—Very good. Vitaphone is our best for swell cartoons. Running time, 7 minutes.—Carl Presley, New Madison Theatre, Huntsville, Ark. General patronage.

HECKLING HARE, THE: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Good color cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

IT HAPPENS ON ROLLERS: The Sports Parade—Good one reeler in color, dealing with roller skaters. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MEET JOHN DOUGHBOY: Looney Tunes Cartoons—Good black and white cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PORKY'S ANT: Looney Tunes Cartoons—Good black and white cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

PORKY'S ANT: Looney Tunes Cartoons—Average black and white cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PORKY'S PREVIEW: Looney Tunes—Porky draws his own cartoons. Novel and brought laughs.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WACKY WORM, THE: Merrie Melodies—Good color cartoon. Running time, 7 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

OBITUARIES

Harry Karasik, Loew District Head, Dies

Funeral services were held Monday at the Park West Funeral Chapel, New York, for Harry F. Karasik, 53, Loew's East Bronx district manager, who died Saturday, August 9th, of a heart ailment after a long illness. Burial was at Mount Carmel Cemetery. He is survived by his widow and two daughters.

Mr. Karasik came to this country from Russia and became associated with David Picker. After the World War he returned to Russia to serve on the Joint Distribution Committee. He joined Loew's in 1920, when the Picker theatres were taken over by the Loew organization, becoming district manager for the company in 1933.

Herman Wahn

Herman Wahn, 69, former manager of the State Theatre, Trenton, N. J., and widely known in theatrical circles, died August 5th, at his home in Trenton, N. J., after an illness of a few days due to a heart ailment. He came to Trenton, N. J., in 1909 to open the old State Theatre for Milton Hirschfield, remaining as its manager until 1928. Later, he became connected with the Lincoln theatre and the Stacy Amusement Co., both in Trenton. He re-opened the State theatre in October, 1933, resigning the following February and retiring from the industry at that time.

J. J. Parker

J. J. Parker, 65, for many years connected with the field of exhibition died Sunday, August 10th, of a heart attack at Seaside, Ore. In the theatre business in Portland, Ore., for the past 25 years, he operated the Broadway theatre and the United Artists in Portland, and houses in Pendleton and Astoria, Ore.

Cordelia Howard MacDonald, Original "Little Eva", Dies

Mrs. Cordelia Howard MacDonald, who played the role of "Little Eva" in the first performance of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" 88 years ago, died at her home in Belmont, Mass., Sunday, August 10th. She was 94 years old.

Following her success in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which toured the United States and Great Britain, she portrayed other juvenile roles until her retirement from the theatrical profession at the age of twelve. At 20 she was married and led a quiet home life until her death.

John H. Snyder

John H. Snyder, 70, for many years in the motion picture business in eastern Pennsylvania, died August 5th, at his home in the motion picture business in Eastern Pennsylcania, died August 5th, at his home in Muhlenberg Township, Pa., after an illness of several months. At one time he was a partner of George Bennethum in the Bennethum & Snyder chain of theatres; director of the Cambridge Amusement Co., Reading, Pa., and secretary-treasurer of the Pottstown Theatre Co., Pottstown, Pa.

Bert Kenny

Bert Kenny, 57, manager of Loew's Burnside theatre, Bronx, N. Y., died Tuesday, August 13th, at his residence in Englewood, N. J., after suffering an internal hemorrhage. Mr. Kenny was one of Loew's oldest employees in years of service. He was first employed by Nicholas and Joseph Schenck at Palisades Amusement Park in New Jersey, and later managed Loew's Herald Square, Orpheum, Broadway, Harlem Opera House, West End and others.

Clarence E. Smith

Clarence E. Smith, 70, president of Midland Theatres in Newark, Ohio, died at his home in Marietta, Ohio, Wednesday, August 6th.

IN COURTS

Government Rests Judge Davis Trial

The Government completed its case on Monday, August 11th, against former U. S. Circuit Judge J. Warren Davis and Morgan S. Kaufman, former William Fox attorney, and the defense is expected to rest its case in the U. S. District Court in Philadelphia on Friday, August 15th. If a procedure agreed upon after court adjourned last Friday, August 8th, is followed, it is probable that the case will go to the jury late Friday.

Judge Davis and Mr. Kaufman are on trial for a second time, charged with criminal conspiracy to obstruct justice and to defraud the U. S. Government. The charges are being heard by Federal District Judge Hugh D. McLellan and a jury of nine men and three women. William Fox, one-time the multi-millionaire motion picture producer and now bankrupt, was named as a co-conspirator with them, but pleaded guilty and has testified to the alleged conspiracy for the Government.

Tuesday, Judge Davis took the witness stand in his own defense to deny that he had borrowed $27,500 from William Fox. Under nearly four hours of direct examination, Judge Davis met every Government point with a categorical denial. "Not a dishonest dollar has ever entered my possession."

On resting his case Monday, Walter H. Gahagan, Jr., special assistant to the U. S. Attorney General, consumed slightly more than twice the time required by the Government to present its case at the first trial, May 19th to 29th. That trial ended in a jury disagreement.

William A. Gray, counsel for Judge Davis, said last Friday that the defense would require only three days, an opinion concurred in by Abraham Salsburg and James F. Gallagher, counsel for Mr. Kaufman.

On Thursday, August 7th, William E. Brown, Jr., who was attorney for the trusee in the bankruptcy litigation, testified that the creditors of the former film producer were discriminated against by Judge Davis and the Third Federal Circuit Court of Appeals.

On the other hand, Mr. Brown testified, motions and other matters presented by counsel for Mr. Fox were given preferred treatment by the Appellate Court, allegedly under the domination of Judge Davis.

Mr. Brown also gave testimony indicating that Judge Joseph Buffington, now retired, but then an associate of Judge Davis on the Appellate Court, not only did not write the opinions in the Fox case, but was unfamiliar with the content of them. Judge Buffington had admitted that because of physical infirmities he adopted opinions written by Judge Davis on his own.

A. F. Brentlinger

Albert F. Brentlinger, 74, retired exhibitor and distributor, died in Indianapolis Thursday, August 7th. He had operated a string of houses in Indiana during the World War and had been an exhibitor in Terre Haute, Clinton, Evansville, Richmond and Kokomo. His last connection before retirement was with First National in Indianapolis.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

An Open Letter to the Schine Brothers

DEAR MYER AND LOUIS:

Your 1941-1942 managers' convention is over. But the warmth of it remains. In the years of this observer's attendance at your circuit gatherings, we have witnessed no more sustained enthusiasm. That will be soundly seconded by the theatremen on hand. They certainly enjoyed every minute of it.

The reasons are not hard to find. One may point to your emphasis on planning of every detail to put the conventioneers completely at ease, your elaborate provisions for comfort and entertainment, your plans for the future to encourage greater effort in the field. Little appeared to be left undone. And this was indicated in your closing of the Hippodrome to the public so that your theatremen might hold their business sessions at the theatre in air-conditioned and relaxing surroundings.

Your especially produced sound film was another masterstroke. The film made it possible for Governor Herbert Lehman to welcome the conventioneers. It also allowed distributor and production heads to speak to the boys from their desks in New York and Hollywood, to dwell upon the coming product, to point up the new attractions with shots incorporated in the convention short taken from pictures ready for release and in production.

Your boys appreciated this graphic evidence of advance information. You and your executive forces who worked so hard to put over this unique promotion are to be congratulated. We look to see similar presentations made up for other circuit conventions. It is a real boxoffice idea for producer as well as theatreman.

In totalling the high morale of your organization, due credit is also to be given the new profit-sharing and bonus plan announced at the convention. We understand that the managers, in addition to salaries, are to share in grosses over and above a mutually-agreed upon quota. This, of course, is only good business, as you recognize.

The profit-sharing plan will stimulate the effort of every manager who calls himself "showman." It should provide an "unlimited ceiling" for the earning-horsepower of fast-flying theatremen. Your inauguration of this important procedure must lead other circuits to follow, for more potent manpower medicine has yet to be compounded.

In all, you proved the definite dollars-and-cents value of the managers' annual convention. The fine spirit engendered by your open-handed hospitality, by your "you tell us" attitude before the theatremen, sends the Schiners back to their posts, refreshed, invigorated, renewed, as it does this convention-hardened veteran, who gratefully and publicly sets down his thanks.

THE moanings of theatremen working on small advertising budgets seem less poignant when one considers such campaigns as reported by George Irwin and told about in this issue. The Grand Forks manager plugged "Nice Girl" with an auto race promotion at the fair grounds that involved bannered racing car, newspaper publicity, program mention, street parade, radio broadcast and frequent announcements at the races over the P. A. system.

"All of this was obtained by paying a small portion—five dollars—of our driver's entry fee," Irwin writes.

PREVIEWED before a Westchester County audience last week, M-G-M's "Whistling in the Dark" presents a pattern for liver-shaking belly laughs. The pattern is fashioned, and expertly, around the genial insanities of "Red" Skelton, a comedy name now to conjure with by showmen shrewd enough to recognize his box-office possibilities. The Skelton performance literally rocked the house.

THIS pharmacy cowhand is pleased to announce his election to the "National Association of Drugstore Cowboys", as noted in the card of life membership issued by Lou Costello, president, and Bud Abbott, secretary. The club slogan, curiously enough, is "Ride 'Em Cowboy".

Since motor vehicles are prohibited in Bombay, above illustration shows how Carlos Moore, United Artists Manager there rigged up his street ballyhoo ahead of "Thief of Bagdad" at the New Empire Theatre. Water oxen pulled truck manned by native in atmospheric costume.

Mounting a 24-sheet on lobby floor, Julius Lamm at the Warner Uptown, in Cleveland for "Night in Lisbon" built an air raid shelter and surrounded it with sand bags. On top of the shelter were red illuminated lanterns. Machine gun and other war paraphernalia were strategically spotted.

Effective coming attraction frame below was constructed by Allan Easson at the FP Oakwood Theatre, in Toronto. Cards measuring 11 by 14 slip in from the back and are interchangeable.

Astrologist lobby display was planted by Sid Kleper of Loew's Poli, in Springfield, Mass., ahead of "Stars Look Down." Centerpiece consisted of glass bowl filled with water. Pasted on bottom were preview comments of local dignitaries applicaed on a clinch still. Indirect lighting illuminated the globe.

Created by Robert Busch for date on "Penny Serenade" at the Warner Jeffery, in Chicago, was effective lobby display which featured large disc resembling phonograph record which was kept revolving by means of concealed motor. Center disc with heads of Geant and Dunne was weighted so that it remained upright at all times. Stills on the record were mounted on cardboard and hung on record so that they remained upright while the record revolved. Speed of motor was slow enough to enable patrons to look at the stills as they moved around.

As part of Stan Benford's goodwill stunt ahead of "Pot o' Gold" at the Colonial, in Philadelphia, patrons were invited to pitch pennies for guest tickets. Money collected was turned over to well-known boys' club for vacations for youngsters, which brought excellent newspaper breaks.

Double-barreled display by Ted Emerson for "Shepherd of the Hills" at the Tri States Omaha, in Omaha, did an effective job of selling the atmosphere of the picture and the cool comfort of the theatre. Display, a replica of the Ozark mountain country, complete with lakes, water falls and boulders was built by the staff. Street ballyhoo was also atmospheric with members of the personnel in Ozark costume and barefooted, the latter adding the punch of the idea.

Based on the theme of the story, Eddie Dunn's lobby exploitation for "Man Hunt" at the Paramount, in Des Moines, invited patrons to try their gun skill with a weapon similar to the one described in the picture. Photo of Hitler was set up in the background and guest tickets were awarded to those displaying the most expert marksmanship.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

This cartoon from the brush of Cy Condon, Hunter Theatre, Elko, Nevada.

Week's Program Sold With Patriotic Background

Bearing the patriotic title of "The Great American Way Week," a program of three features shown in one week at the Tri-States Le Claire, in Moline, Ill., was sold accordingly by Francis Gillon, the theme publicized two weeks ahead and stressed in all the advertising. Pictures were "I Wanted Wings," "Reaching for the Sun" and 'In the Navy," the three tied together in display and trailer copy, the latter stressing such lines as "100 per cent American Entertainment." "Come down and learn the American way to laughs, thrills and romance."

To point up the date on "Love Crazy," Gillon sold the show as "Laff Week" entertainment, the "laff" angle stressed three weeks ahead. All ushers wore imprinted badges and a lobby display was set up utilizing a trick mirror for comedy. Spotted around the mezzanine and lobby were other gags such as scissors and strings of paper dolls, stuffed squirrels, piles of children's blocks, baskets of nuts, each of the items placarded with copy explaining what they were, to tie in with the "crazy" slant of the picture.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Bair's Novel "Navy" Ad

Taking one of the two-column mats from "In the Navy," E. E. Bair at the Valentine, in Defiance, Ohio, made up an unusual advertisement for the date by adding a column of space of the same depth, which he devoted largely to personal copy of his reactions to the show. Headed "Facts About the Feature," Bair stressed the high entertainment value and found this especially effective, since he was playing the picture ahead of "Buck Privates."

Irwin Ties Race Driver To "Nice Girl" Campaign

Popular series of automobile races at the local fair grounds which attracted an audience of thousands was seized upon by Manager George D. Irwin for "Nice Girl" at the Paramount, in Grand Forks, N. D. In sponsoring one of the drivers for the featured event a "Tin Lizzy Race" was held wherein the 32 entrants circled the tracks some 200 times. Irwin's car carried a well secured two-sided theatre sign, flashed before the crowds with each lap of the race. In addition, the Minnesota Amusement-man had the car parked in front of the theatre the evening before for extra attention.

The Paramount was also included in all newspaper publicity, listed in the race program, a bannered car additionally was featured in a street parade to advertise the races, previous to which the tiein was plugged over the radio and during the races over the p.a. system at the track.

Irwin reports the comprehensive campaign came to a cost of five dollars, which paid for a portion of the driver's entry fee. Results made the stunt one of the best used by him in some time with boxoffice figures responding accordingly.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Leach's "Pot o' Gold" Giveaway

Through tieup effected with local market, Walter Leach at the State, in Chester, Pa., held a "Pot o' Gold" giveaway, whereby store's customers dropped their phone numbers into a box. Numbers were drawn and called on Saturday, customers answering receiving free merchandise by calling at the store. Theatre received plug on banner at market calling attention to the contest.

Theatremen Stage 4-Couple Wedding

The stage wedding with which theatremen usually content themselves by the employment of a single couple now finds elaboration in the four-couple ceremony staged simultaneously at the R&B Sheepshead Theatre, in Brooklyn. Sponsored under the personal supervision of Edward Rugoff and Herman Becker, details of the comprehensive campaign were carried out by four of the circuit's managers working on the unusual promotion five weeks ahead.

The actual presentation covered a four-day period, the quadruple wedding held on the stage of the Sheepshead Theatre; here Manager George Deber had Municipal Court Judge Jacob Strahl join the couples in an impressive civil ceremony. On the three succeeding nights, religious ceremonies for the individual couples were held at the Oceana, Tuxedo and Surf Theatres under direct guidance of Al Green, Paul Binstock and Charlie Rich, all serving on the arrangements committee chairmaned by Green, district supervisor.

Campaign Started Five Weeks Ahead

The plan was inaugurated five weeks ahead through trailers, first week asking for couples, following week announcing names of couples selected, next trailer gave dates of the respective weddings and last was taken up with advance ticket sale copy. In addition, heralds were broadcast throughout neighborhoods, programs plugged the event, 60 by 80's in lobbies were featured and local dailies came through with stories. In connection with the advance ticket sale, a contest was held among theatre staffs with prizes given to ushers selling most tickets.

The prospective brides and grooms were attracted by a number of expensive gifts such as honeymoon trips for each at leading camps, five hundred dollar certificates as down payment on a Trump Home, radio, bridal costumes, beauty salon treatments, wedding bands, one hundred dollars in cash from theatre management, photos of bridal party, transportation and last, but far from least, wedding supper for entire party at McGinnis'.

Newspaper coverage was generous, neighborhood papers coming through with art and stories as did the New York City dailies.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Roving Photographer Used By Garver for "Cavalcade"

Ross Garver of the Orpheum Theatre, in Terre Haute, Ind., tied in with local camera store for a candid camera contest as the highlight of his "Jungle Cavalcade" date. Cards were distributed on downtown streets by roving cameraman who took candid shots of pedestrians, tiein copy on card offered a complimentary photo and pair of seats to those whose pictures had been snapped and were on display in cooperating camera store windows. Merchant also gave full window to display of Frank Buck stills, books and appropriate tiein cards week ahead. Other windows included display of guns, desert water bags, hunting equipment, etc.

Build Red Skelton As Comedy 'Name'

Wideawake to the star possibilities of MGM's Red Skelton, theatremen are wisely stressing this new comedy name to feature hard-hitting campaigns on "Whistling in the Dark." Currently representative is the promotion engineered by Jack Lykes for the date at Loew's Valentine, in Toledo, the Round Tabler spotlighting Skelton with well-earned coverage in various directions.

Lykes employed radio well in advance, hooking Station WTOL to star spot announcements week ahead and during run. WSPD also plugged the comic during the theatre's regular Hollywood program. Added lobby plugs were had with A-board signs in advance and out front during the run. Copy was headed "Hail, a new star," the poster carrying stills of Skelton and action scenes from the picture. Outside attentions were arranged for with hundreds of combination window and tack cards placed in prominent stores and snipped to telegraph poles. The manager also obtained cooperation of Postal Telegraph by means of miniature telegrams carrying star copy. These were distributed by Postal in all outgoing deliveries and the same was coupled to the mailing list of the Edison Company. Bumper strips on delivery trucks, imprinted napkins in popular restaurants and two-inch gummed circles plugging Skelton were used on menus.

Lykes gave street ballyhoo adequate attention in the employment of an attractive girl dressed in red, white and blue shorts riding a Hollywood Ingo-bike, to rear wheel of which was attached signs reading: "Mr. Ickes says Save on Gas. This is one way to be patriotic, ride a bike to see" etc., etc. Another street stunt that also attracted was a young man dressed in kingly robes explained by back-banner reading: "See the new king of comedy, Red Skelton."

Terrell "Adopts" Skelton

"Red" Skelton, star of the film, was "adopted" by Washington, D. C., as part of Dan Terrell's campaign for the "Whistling in the Dark" premiere at the Capitol. A large book was placed in the lobby for signatures of patrons requesting the "adoption." In addition, a contest was set with all playgrounds and a local radio station to find the city's best boy or girl whistler. Formation by a downtown store of a Redhead League with Skelton as honorary president was another feature of the campaign.

Murphy Stresses Novelty Ideas

For the date at Loew's State, in Syracuse, Frank Murphy stressed a number of novelty tieins such as his hotel tiein on "Do not disturb" cards, rest of copy reading "I am resting up to laugh at Red Skelton in' etc., etc. Another novelty what Murphy termed a "husband's permit," this was a small card widely distributed copy reading: "This is your permit to stay out tonight, providing you go to Loew's to see Helter Skelter Red Skelton and 1,000 laughs in" etc. signed, "The Wife."

Murphy switched the imprinting idea to paper towels, the hookup on this one being "This will dry your tears from laughing at Red Skelton in" etc. Among the merchant tieins made by the Loewman conspicuous was an insert in bread loaves,

THE FOURTH FORTNIGHT

With the results posted below, the Third Quarter of the 1941 Quigley Awards passes the halfway mark as 58 entrants take down 57 "Fortnighters" voted in the two-week preliminary period. In number, the total keeps within reaching distance of the year's Fortnight highs, with the added distinction of names new to the Awards and increasing number of Canadian theatremen listed. Now three Fortnight Periods remain to the ending of the Third Quarter. In all, a matter of six weeks for those wishing to fatten up their Awards scores for Quarter-Master consideration. The year's honors are still wide open and what entrants contribute from now on will have much to do with their consideration in the final judging. To be kept in mind, with everything equal, theatremen who score oftenest in the Fortnight Periods will be given greater consideration in the judging.

CHICAGO-WISCONSIN WARNERMEN KEEP EXPLOITATION BALL ROLLING

Week-to-Week Campaigns Reported in James E. Coston Division Disclose Extensive Promotions on Program Changes

THE fast exploitation pace maintained by the Warnermen in the James E. Coston, Wisconsin and Chicago zone is emphasized emphatically and especially through pages of "The Manager," division house organ published weekly and edited by Charles H. Ryan, district supervisor. Reported regularly are highlights of campaigns put on by the theatremen all over the area representative instances of which are here set down.

For "In the Navy" at the Capitol, in Chicago, R. Barry worked an intriguing stunt wherein a display was arranged so that cutout characters in the picture stood out separately. Patrons were given sailor hats and guest tickets awarded to those who could ring the cutout heads with the hats. For street use, two of the personnel, one short and fat, and the other tall and skinny, worked the streets in sailor suits with tiein copy. The idea was "hoked" up by purposely misfitting the uniforms. In the lobby a barefooted boy dressed in sailor suit with pants legs rolled up was given bucket of water and mop, poster copy alongside reading "I am busy mopping up in preparation for the big crowds," etc., etc.

Features Teaser Lobby

On "Nurse's Secret" at the Grove, in Chicago, J. Maloney had one of the lockers moved up from the ushers' room and placed in the lobby with a large chain wrapped around it. Copy on poster alongside read: "The Nurse's Secret. Never before exposed. The lowdown on the most amazing and fascinating experience of a nurse. Be sure to see," etc. On a small table in the lobby was placed rack containing hospital chart, face of which was lettered with thrill copy in keeping with the action of the story.

Erickson's Atmospheric Lobby

For "Penny Serenade" at the Rhodes, in Chicago, E. Erickson reports a novel suggestion from one of his ushers in connection with the lobby plaques and star stills. Flasher button was attached to bulbs in back of the photo of Irene Dunne with card below reading "Irene Dunne and Cary Grant together again in," etc. Baby angle was hooked to mailing list of diaper service with four-page heralds on the picture, front page taken up with cut of stork carrying baby and copy.

Circus atmosphere was utilized by Erickson for "Sunny" with his lobby featuring a striped tent with one ring in it and a small cutout figure of Anna Neagle riding a miniature horse. Background of display consisted of two window cards selling Mardi Gras sequences in the picture.

The famed Burlington, Wisconsin, Liars Club was made a part of his campaign on "The Great Lie" by R. Kennedy of the Symphony, in Chicago, the theatreman obtaining from the Club a photo of the champion liar for the year and description of his entry. These were mounted on a 40 by 60 with copy: "Even the greatest liar of 1940 as proclaimed by the Burlington, Wisconsin Liars Club cannot compare to 'The Great Lie' which Bette Davis told. See, etc., etc.

Using an aviation mutuscope in the lobby on "I Wanted Wings" at the Parthenon, in Hammond, Ind., Al Blasko invited patrons to try their skill by imagining they were in an actual plane. Picture copy was placed around screen on which hits were recorded.

Ahead of "Blood and Sand," Blasko dressed a lad as matador and sent him out to cover downtown streets, with back banner carrying theatre copy. For his newspaper contest, planted on want ad page of local daily were five different scenes from as many different pictures in which Tyrone Power had appeared. Guest tickets were offered to those who could name the female stars in the scenes shown.

Bride and Groom Street Bally

Ladies' overnight bag and lace slip were borrowed by Marlowe Conner on "The Bride Came C.O.D." in Sheboygan, Wis., bag placed in lobby with a portion of the lace slip showing outside the bag. Alongside was a cactus plant with copy "Stay away from the cactus plants. Lest you get them in your pants. Cagney and Bette both agree. In the 'Bride Came C.O.D.'" Conner found the folks paying attention to a bride-and-groom stunt, wherein couple in car festooned in typical wedding style rode about town.

For the personal on Paul Whiteman and band, Marlowe made tiein with music and radio store for audition contest for boys and girls over the age of 16. Contestants were invited to make a gratis recording at the store for an entire week, at the end of which one boy and one girl were chosen to sing on the supper show with Whiteman and band. Store took three-column ad and devoted window to display. For lobby, Conner planted a six-foot compo key, copy alongside inviting folks to autograph the "key of welcome."

To celebrate his first anniversary at the Shore, in Chicago, Irving Lipnick promoted cake from baker which was displayed in lobby with one lighted candle. Heralds were distributed with copy "I'm celebrating and I've plenty of reason for it. It's one year now since I first assumed the managerial duties and to make it a week of real celebration, the Shore is to present two of the finest pictures of the year during my anniversary week." Herald was signed by Lipnick.

Through cooperation of department store head, Harry Mintz at the Paramount, in Hammond, Ind., featured "A Woman's Face" window display consisting of eight stills from previous Joan Crawford pictures. Guest tickets were awarded to those correctly identifying the photos. Featured in lobby of the theatre was an oil painting of Crawford done by well-known local artist, this good for newspaper breaks.

Roving Photographer Snaps 'Em

Street stunt arranged by Manager Robert Busch at the Jeffery, in Chicago, ahead of "A Woman's Face" featured a roving photographer who snapped passersby. Lad distributed tiein cards reading: "Your face is your fortune. Win a pass to see 'A Woman's Face.' Find your photo in the lobby of the Jeffery Theatre." To his special mailing list, Busch addressed postcards which quoted reviews from leading columnists.

Gag bally ahead of "Love Crazy" was used by Eli Arkin at the Avalon, Chicago, who had lad with butterfly net cover downtown area. Back banner read: "Is he Love Crazy? You'll howl at," etc., etc. During rush hours, boy sat in lobby ostensibly fishing in a mop bucket with a broom handle. Trick copy was planted alongside.

Postcards headed "Yes, I cried too," were mailed by G. Arnstein of the Garfield, in Milwaukee, to local beauty parlors and women's clubs ahead of his date on "Penny Serenade." Small envelopes containing five pennies were distributed as part of the patron's change at boxoffice with tiein copy imprinted and through personal contact, the main local adoption agency was contacted, social worker's attention being called to the picture's opening and its theme.

Lie Detector Utilized

Al Meskis, at the National, in Milwaukee, for "The Great Lie" planted a lie detector in his lobby consisting of cabinet, buzzer, red light and handles. Buzzer volume was controlled by the doorman, copy overall reading: "The Great Lie Detector. A loud buzz indicates a great liar."

Ushers dressed in clown costumes paraded around parks during soft ball games as part of His Advance Teaser on "Wagons Roll at Night." Ushers were also on duty in same outfits in theatre. Field further promoted circus wagon for display on sidewalk, while for lobby, large wagon wheel was placed in center of outer lobby covered with red, white and blue rolls of crepe paper with stills on same.

TIES GAS CURFEW TO THEATRE COPY

Gas stations complying with the Federal ruling on seven o'clock closings were assisted in publicizing the notice by Francis Faille at the Paramount, North Adams, Mass., who made up small cards to be distributed at the stations. Copy was to the effect that station was cooperating in the gas saving drive and also suggested that drivers save on fuel by attending the theatre.

Value of the stunt was that it allowed theatre advertising in spots previously refusing to cooperate.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Having met Dorothy Lamour in Miami, J. H. Luter at the Grand in Fitzgerald, Ga., ahead of "Moon Over Miami" wrote to the star in Hollywood, which bought a letter expressing the hope that folks would enjoy the picture. In addition Miss Lamour sent along an autographed photo of herself which was good for newspaper story and lobby display with copy: "Dorothy Lamour personally hopes you enjoy," etc. For "Lady Eve" large cardboard apples were planted with the heading "Eve sure knew her apples," beneath each was a still from the picture with gag copy.

Through tieup with local market which distributes heralds weekly on their specials, Bert Leighton at the Grand, in Lancaster, Pa., secures theatre ad and plug for ticket giveaway to the lucky persons whose names are listed each week. Customers are invited to leave their names and addresses at the store and from these the winners are chosen.

Cooperating with the local branch of the Junior Aeronautics Club, in connection with "Flight Command," John Wolfberg at Schine's Strand, in Lexington, Ky., sponsored a model airplane contest open to all youngsters in the city and surrounding area. To make the event sufficiently newsworthy, John invited the Dean of the University of Kentucky to make the awards. For lobby display, theatreman hung from the ceiling of his lobby all entries and grouped the three prize winners about a giant board of "Flight Command."

For his campaign on "Lady Eve" at the Schine Dixie, in Picayune, Miss., Bart Dortch promoted apples from local grocer for giveaway to customers in advance, attached to each was tiein card with institutional copy regarding "Forbidden Fruit." In addition for gag, Bart secured a rubber snake and planted it in display of apples for realism.

To give his opening of "Convoy" at the Van Der Vaart Theatre, in Sheboygan, Wis., a good start, Lester Kolste promoted local merchant for luggage which was given to first man to enlist in the air corps from theatre lobby. A five foot parachute made from heavy wire and muslin holding life size dummy was hung from marquee appropriately bannered and an anti-aircraft gun made from cardboard and painted black was also conspicuously spotted with usher in military uniform on duty.

Three ushers, dressed as the Marx Brothers and carrying trays loaded with department store articles, raced up and down the aisles at Loew's Colonial, Reading, Pa., just before the "Big Store" trailer went on as part of George Peters' campaign for the film. He also stencilled street arrows with copy reading: "This Way to the Big Store." Peanut vendors at the local ball park were dressed to resemble the Marxes, and announcements informed fans that certain peanut bags, which were imprinted, contained guest tickets.

PAT TIES "UNDERGROUND" TO HOURLY NEWSCASTS

After the hourly newscasts on Station WPIC, in Sharon, Pa., last week, the following announcement was made:

"This is a free and uncensored broadcast. People in Europe are dying in the fight for freedom of speech. For the entire thrilling story, see 'Underground' at Warner's Columbia."

The hookup was made by Manager Pat Nataro who reports the flash as one of the most forceful exploitations for the date.

Three men dressed as the Marx Bros. handed out theatre time schedules for "The Big Store" as part of J. Keefe's campaign for the film's showing at the Cambria, Johntown, Pa.

"What do you seek most in 'A Woman's Face'?" was the subject of a "Woman's Face" contest used by E. Gray Huffman, Clifton, Huntingdon, Pa.

Colorful relics of the early West provided a fine "Billy the Kid" display in E. R. Hardwick's campaign for the film at the State, Clovis, New Mexico. Outstanding entries won cash and guest ticket awards. Hardwick also found a local resident who was a personal friend of Billy the Kid and obtained good story on art breaks on him.

Newspaper photographer snapped folks on the streets of Crawfordsville, Ind., as part of Guy D. Hammitt's advance for "A Woman's Face." Each day photos were run in cooperating daily with certain faces ringed, to those identifying themselves at the boxoffice guest tickets were awarded.

Teaser tinted cards were distributed ahead of "That Uncertain Feeling" by Sid Scott at the Capitol, in Sudbury, Ontario. Gag lines from the picture such as "It comes and it goes, That Uncertain Feeling," "Lady, have you got That Uncertain Feeling," were featured on one side of the cards, reverse carried theatre name.

Reported by Stan Andrews at the Capitol, in Guelph, Ontario, was stunt arranged for "Pot o' Gold" by head usher J. Armstrong, who promoted empty store window for display. In addition to scene stills, a jar of coins was planted and guest tickets awarded to those coming closest to guessing actual number of coins.

Two campaigns of an institutional nature were arranged by Roy Robbins, manager of Warners' Karlton Theatre, Philadelphia. He arranged with all the merchants in his immediate vicinity to use his theatre as a location mark in all their radio advertising, direct mail and newspaper advertising, to state that their own place of business is "next door" or "near" the theatre. Robbins also made an extensive and exclusive tie-up with all the USO booths throughout the central city section. Spotting announcements of programs at the booths, in return, Robbins has given complimentary theatre passes to the girls attending the booths for distribution to the largest contributors during the day.

Irv Coopersmith, manager of Warners' Lindley Theatre, Philadelphia, had his cashiers distribute teaser envelopes on "The Baker's Wife," the cashiers advising the patrons to save their change in the envelope to see the picture. For "Buck Privates," he conceived a post-card size teaser, using a photo of the comic pair, and asking readers: "Have You Seen This Pair?"

Lucky number tinted cards to which promoted apples were attached were recently distributed by Carroll Hannah, ahead of "Lady Eve" at the Indiana, in Bedford, Ind., those presenting them at the boxoffice and finding corresponding numbers listed were admitted as guests. On "Penny Serenade," Carroll distributed crying towels in downtown restaurants, drug store fountains, etc., carrying a special personal guarantee.

Double truck co-op page was landed by Joe Scanlan, Jr., for "Ziegfeld Girl" at the Hippodrome, in Marietta, Ohio, which featured a coloring contest. Each merchant's ad carried cut of one of the showgirls with guest tickets going to winners. Banner line across truck read: "If the Ziegfeld Girl lived in Marietta, she would shop at these stores for beauty and values."

Street stunt for "Buck Privates" at Smalley's, in Dolgeville, N. Y., as put over by Bill Johnson, consisted of attractive girls distributing tinted cards attached to which were rubber bands. Copy read: "Snap out of your gloom, see Abbott and Costello in," etc.

UNCOVERED COVENANT

ASSUREDLY with considerable documentation, there has this week been plaint from the press of the printed word and the newsreels about the treatment of American media at the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting at sea.

The fact seems clear that on this inevitably fateful and historic occasion no American newspaper, no American newsreel was represented.

Britain's reporters and Britain's cameramen, who were present, are working in a nation at war under a war censorship. What they pictured, what they heard is under a final and absolute control, from now until they write their memoirs—sometime. American reporters, American photographers would have been, if permitted, working for a free press.

It would appear that it was no mishap which arranged that photographic coverage should be by persons under discipline and control of the naval establishment. There was, one would assuredly assume, no intent that it should be inadequate. But it was, very.

This becomes the harder to understand when one considers the rather considerable awareness in official quarters of matters of both press and cinema.

It is to be remembered that the White House has enjoyed the confidence and counsel of at least four persons intimately and extraordinarily familiar, between them, with every aspect of the motion picture, consisting of one Ambassador to the Court of St. James', one cabinet officer and two secretaries who were previously newsreel contact men assigned to the national capital for a long period.

None of those gentlemen would have advised a procedure overlooking, forgetting, either the American newspaper or the American newsreel.

The principle of a free press in the American sense means not only freedom to publish but also free access to the affairs that concern the people of a democracy.

J. STUART BLACKTON

LAST week in the haste of press night we recorded the passing of Mr. James Stuart Blackton. Most of what should be said of that gallant gentleman remains to be said yet.

"Commodore" Blackton was of the first flight of the founders of our industry of the motion picture, and considerably a contributor to the development of the art. Let us set down at once that he was a showman of the first order.

The career of Mr. Blackton was marked by ups and downs of intense dramatic contrast. He demonstrated, before and after, that he could take it. He was a minor space writer and artist for the New York World, who by whim of fortune got into the motion picture in the dawn years, and first survived, then prospered, with the Vitagraph Company which he, along with Mr. Albert E. Smith, prestidigitator, and Mr. William T. Rock, a scrivener from London, founded. The wheel of destiny brought to their project the legitimization of the Patents Company, and fortune. Jimmy Blackton was so dubious about it that at times he called at the cashier's office every night, six days a week, and drew a thousand in cash, just to be sure.

EMERALDS were the Blackton passion, and he had them—cuff links, studs, watch fob, ring and scarf pin. He got his title of "Commodore" by reason of taking a life membership in a certain Brooklyn yacht club, price $1,000. Mr. William Randolph Hearst also became such a member but did not adopt the title.

The Commodore's emeralds, along with the diamonds displayed by "Pop" Rock, Mr. Sigmund Lubin, et al., caused the late Frank Dyer, Edison confidant and counsel, president of the General Film Company, marketing arm of the Patents Company, to produce a pair of smoked glasses when he presided at board meetings.

The Commodore was no amateur at publicity either. He knew, and demonstrated, variously from motion picture conventions to the steps of the White House, that a tall person with a black and white striped scarf placed in the optical center of a group would be observable in the resultant pictorial product, including newspaper halftones. When interviewed he made the right remarks, with a nonchalant acumen.

It was Mr. Blackton who decided the motion picture needed a friendly fan press and got the Patents Company group into a movement to underwrite the first fan magazine. It was he who urged the organization of the first motion picture trade association. He expected the motion picture to go somewhere and he tried mightily to help.

KODAK PARK

"THE Industry" is probably the biggest and best cliche of the commercial institution of the motion picture and its literature. This autumn of this 1941 is the fiftieth anniversary of the first real manifestations of organized industry pertaining to the motion picture—the founding of Kodak Park in Rochester, when Mr. George Eastman decided that the making of film would require much beyond the facilities of a little downtown plant.

The Eastman photographic business was already eleven years old then, and Eastman film, the first in the world, despite all claims and judgments, had been made for two years when Kodak Park was founded.

It is to be recorded now, as probably it has never been before in this field, that it was George Eastman who was first among America's technological industrialists who engaged in research of the order known today, when he set Henry M. Reichenbach, chemist, to work on the job of following up the Eastman experiments addressed at a flexible base for photographic emulsions. Kodak Park was founded on a number of solid facts, among them the fact that then and for many years

Blocks-of-Five Issue

A CHECK Wednesday of Minneapolis exchanges of the five consent decree signatories brought neither claims nor denials that any of them had closed product deals for 1941-42. Their branch managers refused to say until what date they would postpone selling.

The general idea seems to be that they will wait until Judge Hugo O. Hanft rules in Ramsey County District Court on the majors' petition for a temporary injunction halting enforcement of the Minnesota law, which compels the offering for sale of an entire season's product en bloc with a 20 per cent cancellation privilege, as against consent decree requirements for sale in blocks of five.

Meanwhile, the briefs ordered from the majors, after last week's hearing, were given to County Attorneys James F. Lynch, of Ramsey County, and Ed. J. Goff, of Hennepin County, defendants for the state in the majors' suit, for signatures Thursday and were to be filed that day, one day ahead of the date on which they were ordered by Judge Hanft.

The court ordered that distributor plaintiffs, whose complaints constituted their briefs, should then have a week in which to reply. It appeared, therefore, that the jurist would not get to consideration of the case until August 29th.

Censorship Scare

CENSORSHIP loomed broadly, and suddenly, Monday, when Hearst's International News Service headlines shouted from Washington that President Roosevelt that day had approved a drastic clamp on press, radio, and films.

William K. Hutchinson, INS Washington correspondent, wired INS newspapers that the censorship was recommended, for immediate enactment, by the high commands of the U. S. Army and Navy; that merely initial steps would be prohibition of disclosures of military secrets, backed by "stiff jail and fine penalties."

"The program contemplates establishment of an independent Federal censorship agency, to be headed by a director to be paid $12,000 a year. . . . Army and Navy leaders would prefer that Colonel William J. (Wild Bill) Donovan, Federal Coordinator of Information, get the post, to combine censorship with his present duties."

From the White House came blanket denials, from Stephen Early, presidential secretary. According to Mr. Early, the President intimated the report's source was "some one who thinks more of Germany than he does the United States."

thereafter, Eastman was the only maker of film, the material which empowered the Edison invention of the Motion Picture.

It is coincidental that this week the distinguished Dr. C. E. Kenneth Mees, research director for Kodak, has announced to a photographers' convention, with wide lay press acclaim, that a process has been evolved which permits the direct enlargement of Kodachrome color stills. Dr. Mees, you'll be remembering, brought panchromatic photography over from London, in the Wratten & Wainwright plate. The technical considerations are many and complex. The over-all result, regardless of details, is of large significance to all advertisers.

In this field of the motion picture it is of special importance that now adequate color stills may be had on productions in Technicolor. Most—but not all—alleged stills from Technicolor pictures have been hand-colored and synthetic. Motion Picture Herald's pictorial section has presented a number made by intricate and authentic color processes.

Incidentally, no one has ever set down the story of that year, way back in the beginning, when George Eastman junked a year's output because a batch of gelatine had betrayed him into something less than the perfection that he sought. He was building a career and an industry on something beyond the terms of a contract. He waited a year and made good with George Eastman—one man he could trust.

Kodak Park, fifty years a-growing, opens a new vista which includes the rainbow.

SOME weeks ago the Herald presented a graph which tended to show that the much discussed "box office slump" was not supported by the dollar facts as a cross-section of the nation's theatres, fairly and representatively chosen. It seemed reasonable at that time to assume that the real box office figures of more than a thousand theatres would represent something about the United States. They did. Certain persons with more ink than facts, more spleen than judgment, and with some private purposes of their own, threw bricks at the editor and this paper. Maybe they thought they would get some publicity, with the Herald circulation, out of it. They did not. Meanwhile, there come financial statements about the earnings of a number of concerns directly dependent on theatre profits. They seem to have done rather well in the period under consideration. Meanwhile, no slump charts, documented, have appeared.

Fidler Tuning Up

RADIO chatterbox James Fidler, once a "Must Listen" on Hollywood's schedule and whose return to the airlines six weeks ago after a protracted silence disrupted nobody's routine, made a bid for attention this week by issuing to a portion of the resident press a statement of his intention to switch from CBS to MBS at this point in the career of his cosmetic contract, and forthwith.

Reasons published locally, as given by Mr. Fidler, centered about a contention that the broadcasting company had not seen fit to let him criticize motion pictures with the abandon which had characterized his style in the past.

Queried as to whether this might be in fact the case, CBS officials uttered a reply considered by Mr. Fidler's fellow townsmen as a topper among toppers. The circuit statement read "Columbia has often differed with Mr. Fidler as to what is legitimate motion picture criticism. If he has found a network which will wholly accept his views on this subject we are pleased."

The Fidler broadcasts had aired through six Columbia stations. They will air through eight Mutual-Don Lee stations under the new arrangement.

Says Hedda

BECAUSE Hollywood now limits previews to the trade press and excludes regular newspaper correspondents and columnists, films are due for a far less favorable break from the general press, Hedda Hopper said in an interview in Seattle, en route to Canadian playgrounds.

Miss Hopper said that she bleeds for the exhibitors who must show much of the film product. "Well-made pictures still sell," she said, "but the public is learning to stay away from the stinkers, and nothing that Hollywood can do will make the public go to the stinkers."

She found four principal sources of apathy: propaganda films, remakes of outmoded successes, old stars, now mostly over 35 years, and the boys' being in the army while their girls sit home.

Cases 102 & 103

INDEPENDENT exhibitors, late Wednesday, filed their 102nd and 103rd arbitration cases under the consent decree. Victor Theien, operating the Palm theatre, a St. Louis neighborhood house, filed a clearance complaint against Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox and Fanchon & Marco, operating the Aubert and Union, two opposition houses. Victor Theien claimed that the clearance given the Fanchon & Marco houses by Paramount and Fox was unreasonable.

A demand for clearance was filed Wednesday in Chicago by the 32 West Randolph Street Corporation, operating the Oriental, a 3,200-seat Loop house, against the 'Big Five' and naming all "A" theatres in the city. The complaint alleges that eight weeks' clearance is unreasonable with respect to its Oriental theatre's location, capacity and potential gross. It was the first Loop clearance case filed.

Details of other arbitration cases are on page 24, and on page 25 a summary of all arbitration cases pending begins.

Goldwyn Hits Serials

DESPITE the accepted custom of exploiting certain types of film stories by planting fiction versions with newspapers and setting condensed radio dramatizations, Samuel Goldwyn is the first producer on record to ban such serializations. Mr. Goldwyn's "The Little Foxes" and "Life of Lou Gehrig" do not come under the ban because deals had been made for serialization prior to Mr. Goldwyn's change of mind. "Ball of Fire", now in production, however, is the first Goldwyn picture which definitely will not be committed to newspaper, magazine or radio fictionalization.

Some exhibitors have decried the practice, long in use, as detrimental to box office receipts.

Friendly Rivalry

PARTNER and associate in a myriad enterprises, and principal in the Balaban and Katz circuit of the mid West and Chicago, Paramount is going to build a theatre in the business section of Maywood, West Side suburb of that city. The significance of the move is that the parent Paramount will be in opposition to Balaban and Katz, which it controls. Paramount as such operates very few houses. This one would be the first in knowledge to be conducted by the company in the B. & K. stronghold.

STARTING next week the Product Digest Section of MOTION PICTURE HERALD will be published weekly and will incorporate Showmen's Reviews and The Release Chart. The Product Digest also, as at present, will include advance synopses of features and shorts, service data—Legion of Decency Ratings, Audience Classifications, Round Table Exploitation references — together with the short subjects release chart and the feature chart. This enlarged service will make the Product Digest the complete living catalogue of the industry, furnishing exhibitors with necessary information about all product, conveniently arranged.

In this issue (see page 81) the Product Digest completes its synopses of 1940-41 feature product and includes a master index of all 1940-41 features. Preserve this copy for your future use.

"So Sorry" . . . . .

THE strings of the Axis powers were pulled even tighter around Hollywood's foreign business this week, when the Japanese Government announced that, after September 1st, it would not allow American films which portray "wasteful extravagances", sensual love, or "gangsterism".

Reports from Tokyo also indicated that Government would henceforth allow the majors to import only five films monthly. Accuracy of this was scouted in New York offices of the majors Tuesday, foreign sales executives noting the total amount then would be an increase over the mere 40 films per year now being imported.

Whatever Japan does, will be picayune in effect, the Americans indicated, because shipments of film are irregular, exchange men operate hesitantly because of shifting Government policy, and because the American companies still have not been able to get their approximately $700,000 in frozen credits from Japanese banks.

Paramount's home office said flatly, Tuesday, that shipments to Japan are halted until the company can obtain some money from that country.

P.S.: Last week, but quietly, Japan banned all British and American films from Korea, effective September 1st.

McCarthy Stays

CHARLES E. McCARTHY, who resigned, two weeks ago as director of advertising and publicity of Twentieth Century-Fox, following a difference of opinion, will remain with the company in the same capacity.

Meanwhile, Hal Horne has taken quarters in the General Motors Building, near New York's Columbus Circle, from where he will handle special exploitation of certain Fox productions.

119 FEATURES ALREADY 'IN THE CAN' FOR '41-42

PRODUCTION in Hollywood and distribution headquarters in New York arrive on this eve of the 'New Order' of consent decree selling, starting in a week, with a stock of new product supply of unprecedented numbers.

119 productions are ready and "in the can" from all companies.

84 release dates have been set.

38 of 72 finished features of the "Big 5" companies have been trade shown or dated, as required by the decree's advance screening provisions.

68 additional features are in various shooting stages, a large number of them nearing completion.

During a wave of unprecedented summer activity, in which records for the number of features in work were made, the studios of Hollywood engaged in a 'big push' to put an early finish to their 1940-41 commitments and to build up a big back-log of product to be ready for the changes in selling that are expected to have a far-reaching effect on the entire industry through the new form of operations to which the 'Big 5' are bound under the United States Government's consent decree.

The five decree signatory companies—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warner Brothers—have fully 60 per cent of the product finished, with their 72 of the total 119, and are pushing along to completion another 29.

The five decree signers now come forward with tangible results of the realization of months ago that the block-of-five and advance screening provisions of the decree 'law' would make it necessary to have an abundant supply on hand on September 1st when the trade practice and selling stipulations of the decree became effective.

And, some of the non-decree signers, expecting a brand new advantage for approaching exhibitors without any of the decree restrictions, likewise set out far ahead to have plenty of material available for new season's buyers.

The non-decree signers approach the new product year with all of the usual preseason sales-driving, to dispose of bulk, and quickly. Columbia has 17 features pegged for release dates; Monogram has 10; United Artists, seven, and Universal, 23, a record, running clear through December.

When the week rolls around to the September 1st beginning of the 'new order,' at least another 20 features will have left the production line.

But, although they all have plenty of material on hand, some of the five decree signers are moving more cautiously in establishing dates for general release. Paramount, as of mid-week, hadn't a single 1941-42 release date. MGM had but one picture dated, Warners, four, and RKO, six. Twentieth Century-Fox was 'way out ahead, with 10 realeases dated.

Majors Selling New Films; MGM, 20th-Fox Close B.&K. Contracts

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer this week sold its first three new pictures to the Balaban & Katz circuit, and was negotiating with the Great States circuit. The Balaban & Katz deal was the first important one in that territory for pictures under the decree.

In the same city Twentieth Century-Fox sold the company's first block of five to the same circuit.

From Canada the news is the Famous Players Canadian Corporation will take Warners' complete program, for 170 theatres. The deal was closed by J. J. Fitzgibbons, president, and Ben Geldsaler, film buyer, of FPC, and Carl Leserman, Roy Haines and Wolfe Cohen for Warners.

Meanwhile, in St. Louis Paramount's exchange has signed 54 contracts allocating the company's first block of five pictures in the new program. Among the customers are the I. W. Rodgers circuit in southern Illinois and southeast Missouri, the Frisina circuit in Illinois, the Hall, Varsity and Missouri theatres in Columbia, Mo.; Labor Temple, Staunton, Ill.; Vita, Warrenton, Mo.; Vista, Centralia, Mo.; American and Uptown, Mt. Carmel, Ill.; Uptown and Strand, Fairfield, Ill.; Miller, Festus, Mo.; Marvel, Carlinville, Ill.; Times and Mattoon, Mattoon, Ill.; Will Rogers and Lincoln, Charleston, Ill.; Ritz, Arcola, Ill., and Oakland in Oakland, Ill.

Exhibitor product buyers can now get some answers to questions of timing between the 'Big 5's' trade showings and release availability, from the dstributors' first 38 advance screenings.

At MGM, timing on the first three screened ran six weeks between screening time and release date.

Paramount, with no release dates pegged, is already running four weeks beyond its first screening dates of July 28-31.

RKO's timing between trade showings and release dates is running from 7 to 12 weeks, based on the first showings of mid-July and the first releases, starting September 5 and running through to October 17.

Twentieth Century-Fox's trade show is running closer to release. Release of the first batch, trade shown July 23rd, is from one to five weeks, and on the second group screened, on August 21st, from two to three weeks following the compulsory advance trade showings.

At Warners, the timing now is generally three to four weeks between trade shows and release.

Blocks of from two to four are growing into the average block-size for unit showings.

The trend, too, is to accommodate the large numbers of exhibitors who have asked for double, even triple-bill screenings in a single day, thus relieving the owners from making daily trips to see single pictures of a block spread over several days.

In observing 'Big 5' procedure to date, it was noticed, also, that some companies are building up a backlog of pictures trade shown without pegging release. MGM, for one, has seven on the trade showing ledger, but has only one release dated. Paramount has 10 to its trade screening credit, with no release dates. RKO is running near even, with eight trade showings and six release dates, likewise Warners, with six showing and four release-dated. Twentieth Century-Fox, on the other hand, is working in reverse, counting 10 release dates pegged and only seven trade showings.

The story of "Where They Stand on 1941-42 Product Finished, Release Dated & Trade Shown," is told in an accompanying box. Following is a catalogue for exhibitors of titles and all star and player credits for the 119 features finished and "in the can" for the beginning of the 1941-42 season, and of the 68 features in work, together with data on all available release datings and trade showings:

NEWSREELS GET HANDOUTS OF THAT BRITISH SCOOP OF MEETING AT SEA

All But 150 Feet of Footage Taken by U. S. Navy Is Useless; Complete British Film Record Shown in London

U. S. newsreels, at mid-week, were still waiting for over-due long footage handouts from England's Ministry of Information in London, to show to the American public motion pictures of the historic meeting at sea of President Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Churchill, ten days ago. The British public saw the pictures last Sunday, as taken aboard the U.S.S. Augusta and the H.M.S. Prince of Wales, "somewhere in the Atlantic."

The American newsreels had no cameramen aboard the American battleship, the American press had no reporters to record the event, this on the strict orders of the President. The British had both reporters and professional newsreel photographers with their party, accredited to the British Ministry of Information. The U. S. Navy took some 35 mm footage, and Captain Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, "who happened to drop in," made 16 mm Kodachrome pictures with his own amateur camera. The Navy pictures proved photographically worthless to the newreels; Captain Roosevelt's were unusable because 16 mm color film just doesn't blow up to 35 mm.

Less Than 150 Feet

Executives of the five American newsreel companies this week were expressively annoyed, after culling less than 150 feet of almost usable film from the approximately 2,000 feet exposed by the American Navy cameramen.

Eight hundred feet of the efforts of the Navy cameramen were blank. Newsreel chieftains insisted this occured because either: the Navy cameramen had hands in front of their lenses, or kept the lens caps on while shooting.

Four hundred feet were taken at abnormal speed. Another 400 were taken with a half-mask, rendering them useless. Other footage displayed use of a faulty finder, and abnormal "panning," so as to make the spectator dizzy.

One newsreel official declared: "There is not a free-lance cameraman in America, who could shoot as badly."

At mid-week, all newsreel companies awaited, eagerly, an estimated 2,000 feet of film exposed by British professional newsreel cameramen. These were expected in Montreal Monday. They did not arrive; then were expected Tuesday. They did not arrive that day; and on Wednesday, newsreel officials were still waiting, some of them, meanwhile, asserting if the films were further delayed, they might not be used, because the story had receded so rapidly in the whirl of events.

While there was resentment in New York newsreel home offices over the barring of American cameramen, there was also fear, at least in one office, that the incident had been over-discussed, in view of an alleged irritation in President Roosevelt's staff, over the attitude of the newsreel companies.

Said one executive: "The story is dead, as a news story. I don't know if we even will use the British stuff. I wish the papers would forget it. All they do is antagonize the Administration. They are sore enough at us now."

This attitude was answered at other offices by the remarks, illustrative:

"We got a kicking around. Why should we care whether the Administration is sore?

"If they'd taken along one good cameraman, they could have had a swell story. They muffed the greatest story of the year."

The British footage was to be processed here by Paramount, which, in turn, was to distribute copies to all of the newsreels, under agreement with the British Ministry of Information.

Universal processed the footage from the American Navy cameramen; footage, which, incidentally, was sent to Washington, with the blank scenes, masking, and other faults, for the eyes of Secretary Steve Early.

Elliott Roosevelt, Captain in the Navy, and President's son, a witness of the parleys, is understood to have made seven reels on 16 mm Kodachrome, which the Navy offered the newsreels, gratis.

16 mm. Not Usable

At mid-week, it was understood no newsreel would use this footage. Some said it was "amateurish". Others said it duplicated the "good" footage finally used by all. A few newsreel officials had seen it. All pointed to the poor results attendant upon enlarging 16 mm Kodachrome to 35 mm.

The newsreels covered the historic event with "specials", which, obviously, from the foregoing, were made up largely of background material.

The British newsreels, shown in London Sunday, August 17th, were explicit and lengthy, according to news reports from that city. The films show Mr. Churchill leaving the Prince of Wales, boarding the Augusta; Mr. Churchill handing a letter from King George to Mr. Roosevelt; the two men retiring into a cabin; church service and luncheon aboard the Prince of Wales; inspection of that ship by Mr. Roosevelt; departures and arrivals from both ships of various staff officers; the two men on deck, chatting; the bad weather; the rocky coast of the land near which they anchored; the departure, finally, of Mr. Roosevelt, from the Prince of Wales.

The British newsreels are with sound.

Both in the above newsreels, and in still photographs published in American and British newspapers, appear the President's two sons, Captain Elliott, and Ensign Franklin D., Jr.

War-time Themes At This Week's Field 'Premieres'

The international situation and related subjects dominated this week's special showmanship promotions in the field, led by the first public exhibition on this side of the British-made, Warner-released, "The Prime Minister," in Ottawa, a militaristically arranged promotion of RKO's "Parachute Battalion," in Atlanta and special attention to Warners' first Louisville presentation of "Sergeant York."

Warner Premiere in Ottawa

The world premiere of Warner Brothers' "The Prime Minister" in Ottawa, Canada, on August 13th, marked the official opening of the Canadian motion picture season for 1941-42. The film, made at the Warner Teddington, England, studios opened at the Capitol Theatre before a distinguished audience headed by Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada and Princess Alice, wife of the Earl of Athlone, Canadian Governor General. The picture is the story of England's great statesman, Benjamin Disraeli, and stars John Gielgud and Diana Wynyard.

See Showmen's Review section for review of "The Prime Minister."

Ray Tubman, manager of the Capitol, presented Mayor Stanley Lewis of Ottawa, with a check for $1,400 from the proceeds of the premiere as a donation from Famous Players Canadian Corporation to the Queen's Canadian Fund for British War Victims.

"The Prime Minister" played simultaneously on the opening night at the Uptown Theatre, Toronto and Loew's Theatre, Montreal.

"Parachute Battalion" Opens

RKO Radio's "Parachute Battalion" got off to a "military" premiere at the Fox Theatre in Atlanta last week, when 500 men and officers of the 501st Parachute Battalion, from Fort Benning, Ga., marched in a special parade down Atlanta's main stem, in honor of the film which depicts its activities in behalf of the U. S. fighting forces. It was the battalion's first mass appearance off the reservation since its formation. Following the parade, the full battalion joined with Atlanta belles and city officials in viewing the picture.

On hand from Hollywood for the premiere were Edmond O'Brien, co-starred in the film with Robert Preston, Nancy Kelly, Harry Carey and Dorothy Comingore, the latter signed to a long-term RKO contract following her film debut in Orson Welles' "Citizen Kane."

Other gala events coincident with the opening were the navy planes from Camp Gorden which flew overhead during the battalion's parade to the Shrine Mosque, where the parachutists were entertained at a dinner, and a Parachute Battalion Ball in Atlanta's municipal auditorium which followed the premiere. Proceeds for the latter were donated to the local USO.

"York" Week in Kentucky

B. & K. Reduce Admissions At Three Chicago Theatres

Balaban & Katz have adjusted admission prices at three of their loop houses, the Roosevelt, United Artists and Apollo theaters, in line with those charged at their ace house, the Chicago Theater.

Old prices at the three theaters were 35c, 50c and 68c plux tax. New prices are 30c, 40c and 59c plus tax. Heretofore the same prices were charged for a picture program only as those at the Chicago with a first run film and a stage show. Balaban & Katz recently raised their admissions at the State-Lake Theater, directly across the street from the Chicago Theater.

Gable and Davis Win Circuit Poll

Clark Gable and Bette Davis took first place in a 4-unit circuit poll for the ten top actors and ten actresses. The contest was held in four theatres in Sharon, Pa., a town of 112,000 population which is observing its centennial anniversary.

Pat Notaro, manager of the Columbia, a Warner theatre, reported last week that 76,000 votes were cast for the ten men and women players, with the following results:

Actors		Actresses
Clark Gable	10,171	Bette Davis	8,834
Mickey Rooney	4,612	Judy Garland	4,612
Bob Hope	2,414	Alice Faye	2,873
Spencer Tracy	2,315	Hedy Lamarr	1,773
Tyrone Power	2,123	Betty Grable	1,527
Gene Autry	1,695	Linda Darnell	1,375
Errol Flynn	1,677	Dorothy Lamour	1,266
Cary Grant	1,509	Madeleine Caroll	1,158
James Cagney	1,426	Ann Sheridan	1,131
Robert Sterling	1,409	Lana Turner	909

Robert Sterling is a local boy.

Mr. Notaro reported that the contest "helped to keep the public movie conscious in spite of the other events connected with the centennial." Invitations were sent to the two winners to appear at Sharon's Centennial Ball.

In the 1941 FAME poll of the ten leading players for 1940 as designated by America's showmen, Clark Gable was third and Miss Davis, ninth. The combined independent and circuit votes in the FAME poll were as follows:

Mickey Rooney	4,380	James Cagney	1,239
Spencer Tracy	3,688	Bing Crosby	1,164
Clark Gable	3,117	Wallace Beery	964
Gene Autry	1,408	Bette Davis	926
Tyrone Power	1,315	Judy Garland	908

All of the FAME winners except Bing Crosby were named in the Sharon poll.

Blatt Opens Office

Blatt Bros. Circuit, operator of 22 theatres throughout Western Pennsylvania, has opened offices in Pittsburgh, Pa. William Blatt will be in charge of all business details and will do the buying for the entire circuit, assisted by his sister, Miss Peggy Blatt. J. A. Blatt, who has been ill for some time, has left on a three-months health trip.

Di Pesa with Kurtzman

Joseph Di Pesa, publicity director for Loew's State and Orpheum theatres in Boston, has been promoted to assistant to Charles Kurtzmen, Northeastern district manager. He is succeeded by Joseph Longo, publicity director for RKO theatres in Cleveland.

Courts Uphold FCC Rights in Press Air Probe

The Federal Communications Commission won the first round in the battle over the constitutionality of its investigation of newspaper ownership of broadcasting stations when Justice James W. Morris, of the District of Columbia Federal Court, last Friday ordered James G. Stahlman, publisher of the Nashville (Tenn.) Banner, to obey a Commision subpoena to testify.

Mr. Stahlman was one of two men subpoenaed by the commission who failed to appear when called, Elisha Hanson, counsel for the American Newspaper Publishers Association, explaining that their absence was on his advice that the inquiry was unconstitutional and the subpoenaes invalid.

The Commission's legal division made the Stahlman case a test, and asked the District Court for an order of enforcement of the summons, which was granted by Justice Morris August 15th.

Information Necessary

The court decision held that the Communications Act gives the Commission the power to make recommendations for proposed legislation and pointed out that such recommendations "should not be made without diligently undertaking to secure relevant data and the informed thought of those likely to be affected."

In this instance, Justice Morris said, the FCC is acting within its authority in giving consideration to the "advantageous" situation which one applicant may have over others as a result of "his ability to more easily and accurately gather news and broadcast the same by reason of association with the news-gathering agencies of the press."

Under such circumstances the Commission can inform itself of the advantages and disadvantages of such joint association and thus "more intelligently" determine the question of public interest and convenience.

"The surest safeguard against uninformed and arbitrary action is to be found in securing information from those best qualified to know the results of any governmental action," the decision commented. "Certainly, until such action, if any, be taken, its constitutionality cannot be weighed and determined by a court and, indeed, no presumption is to be indulged in that any action will be taken that is unconstitutional; nor is it to be presumed that the respondent will be required to give testimony of an irrelevant or privileged nature. The inquiry should be conducted fairly and reasonably and it must be presumed that it will be."

New Managers in Mexico

Oscar J. Brooks has been appointed general manager in Mexico, succeeding J. G. Muhlen, resigned. Mr. Brooks until recently has been sales manager in Mexico City. A branch office has been opened by the company in Monterey, Mexico, under the managership of Airy Lima.

New Sacramento Theatre

Blumenfeld Theatres Circuit is planning a new first-run in Sacramento, Calif., across the street from the Esquire Theatre. To be manager of both houses is George Ingham. The theatre's erection will give the circuit two first-run and three second, in that area, competing against the Fox West Coast circuit theatres.

1,000,000 WORDS OF WHO'S WHO ABOUT 11,000 IN NEW ALMANAC

All About Latin America, the "Hitler Circuit", Radio, "FM" and Television Set Forth

The 13th edition of the INTERNATIONAL MOTION PICTURE ALMANAC published this week turned special attention to the "new order" of consent decree operations by adding a section devoted to documents and other data needed for reference on the subject. Special prominence was also given to one of the principal foreign markets still open to the American film by inaugurating a Latin-American section which has an introduction by John Hay Whitney, chairman of the Motion Picture Section of the Office of the Co-ordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations between the American Republics.

The 1941-42 ALMANAC is edited by Terry Ramsaye, and Martin Quigley, Jr., associate editor, and the editorial staffs of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, Motion Picture Daily and Better Theatres contributed to its production.

Another new feature in the 1941-42 ALMANAC, enhancing its value, was the inclusion of tabloid histories of the major motion picture companies printed under the company heading in the master list for ready reference.

Hitler Circuit Shown

Maps reproduced in the new ALMANAC include that of the "Hitler Circuit," showing the territory and theatres which are now under Nazi domination and from which American films are excluded; sectional arbitration-exchange maps depicting how the country was divided up for operations under the consent decree and a map of Latin America, with the chief motion picture key exchange cities indicated.

This year, as every year, the ALMANAC includes the only "Who's Who in the Motion Picture Industry" department published. This year over 11,000 revised biographies are printed in the 675-page section. Biographies of individuals recently promoted to positions of importance in all branches of the business and those performers achieving screen credit for the first time have been added.

After the biography section the largest department in the new ALMANAC is a master listing of Motion Picture Corporations, with names, addresses, officers and executive personnel. The tabloid histories of the chief companies are printed, in the proper position, in this section.

General Industrial Data—Industry Statistics, Stock and Bond Prices, Censorship in the United States, Chronology of the Motion Picture, Exchanges and Bookers and Contract Players—have been grouped under the one main section for convenience of the readers. The financial material has been completely revised for this edition and is the most complete ever published in the ALMANAC. Consolidated Income and Balance Sheets of the principal companies for the past two years are printed, as well as comparative stock charts covering five years.

Facts and figures from the 1941-42 International Motion Picture Almanac include the following:

¶ Over 1,000 lawyers, educators and business men have been selected to act as arbitrators in cases brought by exhibitors under the consent decree. Names, addresses, and professions are listed in the arbitration section, which also includes complete texts of the Rules of Arbitration and the Consent Decree, as well as information about the American Arbitration Association which is in charge of the system.

¶ 15,115 theatres are operating in the United States and they grossed $673,045,000 in 1939, according to the U. S. Department of Commerce.

¶ 372 theatres were constructed in the United States from June, 1940, to June, 1941, at a cost of $27,800,000. An estimated $50,000,000 is spent yearly for theatre equipment and supplies.

¶ Film rentals totaled $243,482,000 in 1939, according to the Department of Commerce.

¶ Value of stock of 11 motion picture companies decreased $44,871,875 in the first four months of 1941 and on May 1, 1941, the total value of the stock issues was $511,610,625.

¶ 26 program television stations were authorized by May 1, 1941; 25 facsimile stations were operating this summer, and 44 FM (frequency modulation) stations had received their licenses.

¶ Over 55 documentary films were produced in the United States during the past 12 months.

¶ The Hitler Circuit totaled 11,160 theatres in 14 nations as of June 1, 1941. 153,300,000 persons reside in western European countries from which American films have been barred by the Nazis.

¶ 169 press representatives have been assigned to cover Hollywood for American newspapers and magazines.

¶ More than $200,000,000 was spent last year on the production of motion pictures in the United States.

¶ 523 features, of which 479 were domestic and 44 foreign made, were approved during 1940 by the Production Code Administration.

¶ Eight states and 85 cities have some kind of a board or committee authorized to censor motion pictures.

¶ United States Government amusement ticket taxes increased more than 10 per cent during the fiscal year ended June 30 over the preceding period.

The Exhibitors Organizations department of the 1941-42 ALMANAC has been rearranged to include a designation of the affiliation, if any, of each of the state and regional organizations.

In the Latin American section the address and manager for each of the offices of the American companies in Latin American are given, along with data about independent and local operators.

Pictures of years 1937 to 1941 are listed with producer-distributor, stars, running time, release date, date reviewed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD. Titles of all sound pictures before 1937 are also listed. Story purchases by the major companies during 1940-41 are enumerated in detail.

Labor Organizations in the new ALMANAC have been completely rearranged and expanded. National labor groups are divided into those which are members of the Studio Labor Basic Agreement and those which are not. Hollywood, New York and other locals are subdivided in a similar way.

Representative coverage is given to the growing art of television. The television section includes a review of the past year, a seven-year chronology of television progress, a list of companies and their officers, active in the industry and lists of stations.

The Radio Section has been improved to include a review of the year and lists of all network stations, FM (frequency modulation), stations and facsimile experimental stations.

Documentary films of the year are tabulated and companies in the sponsored film market are listed with an outline of activities.

The system of giving sub-references and cross-references in the Index of Editorial Contents, inaugurated last year, was considerably expanded so that a glance at the master index will show the page on which any desired information is printed. The index from "Academy of M.P. Arts and Sciences" to Ziehm, Arthur, Inc., includes over 1,600 items.

The biography section with over a 1,000,000 words on more than 11,000 individuals has the answers to the questions which arise daily: "Who is he? What is his position? What has he done?"

INDEPENDENTS FILE THEIR 103rd CASE UNDER ARBITRATION

Some Run Complaint Entered Against 'Big 5' and Skouras; Washington Case Appealed

To mid-week, 103 exhibitor disputes had been referred to the arbitration system of the Federal consent decree; an arbitration system which began under the aegis of the American Arbitration Association February 1st, and which preceded the decree's selling system, effective September 1st.

The 101st case—the 18th before the New York arbitration board—was filed Tuesday against the five decree-bound majors, and the Skouras' circuit, by the Cedar Operating Company, operators of the Strand, Astoria, Long Island, New York City, and it asks "some run."

The 102nd and 103rd cases were filed late Wednesday by exhibitors in St. Louis and Chicago. (See page 9.)

The 100th case was filed last week at Kansas City by the Dickinson Theatre, Mission, Kansas, asking maximum clearance of 14 days after Kansas City first runs, and naming Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, Warners, and RKO. Previously, three cases had been brought, to the San Francisco, Buffalo, and Dallas boards.

Meanwhile, in Pittsburgh, arbitrator Horace Baker on Monday dismissed the complaint of the Biordi brothers, operators of the Majestic, Ellwood City, against Vitagraph, Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO, Warner Brothers, Monessen Amusement Company, and Indiana County Theatres, Inc.

Discrimination Not Proved

Of Vitagraph and the two independent theatre operating companies, Mr. Baker ruled the evidence did not show they had used buying power unfairly. Of Fox and RKO, Mr. Baker remarked the evidence did not show they discriminated against the Majestic in giving runs. Of Warner Brothers and the RKO Corp., Mr. Baker said they were producers, not distributors; hence, they could not be defendants.

The Biordis had charged discrimination by the distributors in favor of their competition.

The Detroit board Monday received its first case in six months, the complaint by the Drayton Theatre, Drayton Plains, against the five companies, for alleged unreasonable clearance. It was stated the theatre must follow one week after Pontiac, in which second runs play 60 days after first. It asks clearance be reduced from 67 to seven days. The Drayton is five miles from Pontiac.

In Chicago, the clearance case of the G.C.S. circuit, operator of the Portage Theatre there, against the five consenting companies, and naming some interested Balaban and Katz theatres, was to have next hearing September 3rd, before arbitrator Thomas C. McConnell. Postponement was granted because John Balaban was not able to be in the city on the date of the originally scheduled hearing August 25th, next Thursday.

BEST SELLERS AND RENTERS

Eric Knight's latest novel, "This Above All", led the best renters list, according to nationwide reports during the month of July, and was in second position on the best sellers list, according to the August issue of The Retail Bookseller, house organ of the Baker & Taylor Company, New York.

8. H. M. Pulham, Esquire, by J. P. Marquand.
9. What Makes Sammy Run? by Budd Schulberg.
10. No One Now Will Know, by E. M. Delafield.

In the clearance complaint of Steve Bennis, Lincoln, before the same board, the Chicago law firm of Spitz and Adcock has intervened in behalf of the Great States' Circuit, some of whose theatres are named.

In San Francisco, Al Karski, operator of the Laurel Theatre, Oakland, withdrew his case Monday, thus making the second case before that board go the way of the first. There is still a case pending filed last week by the Harvey Amusement Company, operator of the Westwood, Westwood, asking day and date availability with the Sierra, in nearby Susanville.

The St. Louis board next Tuesday will hear the some run complaint of the Sosna Theatre, Mexico, Missouri, naming the Frisina circuit, operator of competitive theatres in that town, as an interested party. Arbitrator is Fred Armstrong.

In Washington, D. C., Warners appealed the case of the K. and B. Amusement Company, Apex Theatre, that city. Lewis M. Denit, arbitrator, in his award, reduced the clearance of Warners' Theatre over the plaintiff. Warners' Calvert, Avalon and Uptown theatres were named in the original complaint.

Four "Oscar" Winners In "The Little Foxes"

The awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences each year for the past six years have included honors to someone engaged in making "The Little Foxes," Sam Goldwyn's screen adaptation of the Lillian Hellman stage production which is being released by RKO.

Bette Davis, star of "The Little Foxes," has earned the Academy award for "best actress" twice.

One of the films which won Bette Davis an Oscar was "Jezebel," in which she was directed by William Wyler, who directed "The Little Foxes." The art director is Stephen Goosson, who won an Acadamey award in his field for "The Lost Horizon" settings.

Gregg Toland, who won the Academy's top distinction for cinematography on the Samuel Goldwyn production of "Wuthering Heights," photographed "The Little Foxes."

95 Per Cent for Defense

All but five per cent of the 794 exhibitors in the Philadelphia territory have been enrolled by the Motion Picture Associates in the theatres' division of the Committee for National Defense, it was reported last week. Defense pledges were signed by 645 exhibitors in the area. Only 33 in Philadelphia and 116 outside the city limits remain unsigned to date.

Warner Theatre Promotions

Barney Fellman, Warner theatres in Philadelphia, in becoming head of the out-of-town booking department to replace Ted Minsky, who joined the armed forces, finds his assistant, Maxie Bronow, moving up in the vacated post with Jimmy McWhinney coming in as assistant. Ed Hinckey, chief booker and buyer for the zone, moved up Stanley Arnold as assistant to Mr. Fellman.

Gibbons Joins Law Firm

Thomas Gibbons, formerly with the law firm of James W. Gerard and later with Dwight, Harris, Koegel & Caskey on that firm's defense of its client, Twentieth Century-Fox, in the Government's equity action involving the major film companies, has joined the law firm of Phillips, Nizer, Benjamin and Krim.

Smith Joins Music Group

Fred Smith, one of the early directors of radio station WLW and subsequently originator of the "March of Time" radio programs, has been named managing director of the College of Music, in Cincinnati. He succeeds J. Herman Thurman, resigned.

SUMMARY OF ARBITRATION DOCKET

The following is a tabulation of all arbitration cases still pending before local tribunals or the Appeals Board. Cases completed during the first half year of arbitration will be found on the chart published in Motion Picture Herald on July 19th, pages 49 to 55. Listed below are only those cases still pending, or settled subsequent to the July 19th tabulation of all complaints and awards.

Of the 101 cases on the docket of the AAA as of August 19th, 29 were settled or withdrawn, 18 were dismissed, exhibitors won their complaints in whole or in part in 18 cases, and 36 are still pending. Of these, nine are before the Appeals Board.

SENATOR CLARK 'INVITES' 15 LEADERS TO ANSWER WHEELER, NYE CHARGES

Letters Reported Sent to Hays and Producers Asking Them to Appear at Committee Hearings Starting Sept. 8th

The motion picture industry will have an opportunity to answer charges of Senators Wheeler and Nye that it is "fostering war propaganda in America," Senator Worth D. Clark, of Idaho, intimated last Monady, in making public a list of 15 film executives to whom he is supposed to have sent letters of "invitation" for appearance at hearings of the Senate Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, slated for September 8th. Senator Clark is chairman of the committee, two members of which, Senators Burton K. Wheeler, Montana, and Bennett Clark, Missouri, originally introduced the charges via resolution on August 1st.

Those invited to appear before the committee are: Will H. Hays, president, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; Murray Silverstone, United Artists; Samuel Goldwyn, Goldwyn, Inc.; Walter Wanger, Walter Wanger Productions; Adolph Zukor, director, Paramount Pictures; Harry Cohn, president, Columbia Pictures; Nicholas M. Schenck, president, Loew's, Inc.; Barney Balaban, president, Paramount Pictures; George J. Schaefer, president, RKO Radio Pictures; Sidney R. Kent, president, Twentieth Century-Fox; Arthur W. Kelley, general manager, United Artists; Nate J. Blumberg, president, Universal Pictures; Harry M. Warner, president, Warner Brothers, and Darryl F. Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Fox.

Reports from Hollywood last Tuesday indicated that the executives mentioned had not yet received official invitations from Senator Clark, who also intimated that the 15 film leaders constituted only a "preliminary and fragmentary" list of those who would be called for questioning. The hearings are scheduled for September 3rd, but it is expected that Senators Wheeler and Bennet Clark will offer initial testimony to be followed later by representatives of the motion picture industry.

From official quarters it was learned Wednesday that the industry in this case "is really going out to make an issue" of the sporadic political and propaganda charges by Congressmen against the screen in this country.

Hollywood Answers

Meanwhile, in Hollywood, criticism of the industry brought an answering volley this week from Claude Binyon, Paramount scenarist, who declared, "The same accusation could be made of magazines, of newspapers, of any agency which in some degree reflects the changing world around us. The Senators might as well charge that newspaper headlines foster a warlike spirit inasmuch as they serve to warn our people of the need of a great national defense system.

"Does Senator Wheeler want to eliminate the newsreels?" he queried. "Because the dictators are mass-murderers does he want the picture industry to ignore the fact that there is a war in Europe? I suggest that if we eliminate anything from the screen, we cut out newsreel shots of the Senator making speeches. That might help some," he said.

On Monday, an unsigned advertisement appeared in Hollywood publications which representatives of the producers' association said was not instituted by their group, and it could not be learned whether an individual or an organization authorized its publication. The ad read as follows: "The motion picture industry is being threatened and intimidated by organized minority groups composed of fanatical isolationists and others who attack us because we have occasionally dared to produce a film which tells the truth about Nazi Germany. These 'sincere Americans' seek to embarrass our industry by a Senatorial investigation hoping thereby to discredit Hollywood in the eyes of theatregoers throughout the nation. No motion pictures have been produced that are complimentary to the Nazi philosophy of aggression. Therefore by demanding that we make no more 'war pictures' they are in fact demanding that we make no more films that are unfavorable to the Nazi cause."

Radio Invitation Undisclosed

As the MOTION PICTURE HERALD editorialized in its August 16th issue, "The customers of the motion picture are not looking for instruction from either Washington or Hollywood. They can do with some information, preferably consisting of facts, and they would like very much to have from both Washington and Hollywood what each has been engaged to do."

Thus far, the committee has not made public a list of radio executives to whom invitations similar to those directed to film leaders would be forwarded. The committee has the power to subpoena witnesses in the event that voluntary appearance fails. Moreover, it also is empowered to "sit and act" during the life of the present Congress and longer, if necessary.

Film circles in New York intimated early this week that if and when Hollywood's industry chiefs accept the Senate committee's invitation to appear in Washington, Senators Wheeler and Bennett Clark may find their accusations a boomerang.

A defense of the film industry is expected in an address to be delivered by Darryl F. Zanuck to the national convention of the American Legion, at Milwaukee, mid-September. Mr. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production for Twentieth Century-Fox, is also a Lieutenant Colonel in the U. S. Army, and has been active in film industry cooperation with the Government's defense program. The title of his address will be "The Motion Picture and Its Contribution to American Defense."

Senator Clark of Idaho, on Tuesday in Washington, said a letter by Senator Nye to the 15 persons mentioned, was the "invitation." If they do not respond, they will be subpoenaed, he intimated.

He refused to forecast developments at the inquiry beyond saying the film industry people would probably not be called until one week after the start of the investigation, inasmuch as its opening stages would be filled with charges against the industry.

He also indicated the committee would hear persons not connected with the industry, but whose opinions would be germane.

In Baltimore, the Fellowship of Reconciliation has been distributing leaflets at entrances to downtown theatres with the general heading: "Did the movie you have just seen tell the whole story?" The leaflets also ask the question of movie patrons:

"Did this movie assume that resorting to force is now required to preserve the institutions we hold dear in America?"

From Minneapolis it was reported independent exhibitors were considering cooperation with producers, to make trailers setting forth the film industry's defense against criticism by isolationists.

Pro-Nazi Films Hit

Meanwhile, in New York, the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League, through its chairman, Professor Sheldon, "demands" that if Senator Wheeler and the Senate Committee proceed with this investigation, "the sincerity of which is not acknowledged, their first step should be an investigation of Nazi and Fascist propaganda films imported into this country and shown with impunity in some communities, sometimes privately, in an attempt to avoid local police regulation."

The League "is seriously considering making its own appearance at the hearings, because it believes that the whole purpose of the investigation may be to cloak an attempt by Wheeler to muzzle the film industry and compel it to become an avenue of propaganda of his own choosing." In other words, the League says it believes that "propaganda is defined by Mr. Wheeler to mean simply ideas that he himself does not like, particularly as Mr. Wheeler, in all his reams of speeches to date, has not said a word about propaganda films of Nazi origin now shown in this country."

BUILDING WAR ENDS IN PHILADELPHIA

In contrast to former years when theatre building wars were being waged in Philadelphia, the report of the city building engineers shows but one theatre construction permit among the 7,000 issued during the first seven months of the current year.

Brunet, Cook Named RCA Vice-Presidents

Meade Brunet and Jay D. Cook have been elected vice-presidents of the RCA Manufacturing Company by the Board of Directors, it has been announced by George K. Throckmorton, president.

Mr. Brunet, whose services with RCA and predecessor companies dates from 1919, will continue his present duties as manager of the Engineering Products Division, including United States Government business. Mr. Cook, whose 14 years with RCA and a predecessor company in the accounting department on the coast, will continue in charge of the International Division, which handles the company's export business and directs the activities of its foreign subsidiary companies.

"Squadron," Single Selling

Warner Brothers announced from Hollywood last Tuesday that "International Squadron," formerly titled "Flight Patrol," will be sold singly as a percentage feature. The picture originally was announced for trade showing under "Flight Patrol" title.

FILMS, RADIO PROTEST TO SENATE ON INEQUALITIES OF NEW TAX BILL

Kuykendall Adds Protest to That Filed by Myers; Asks Tax Only on "Price Sold"; Radio Fights New Levy

Motion pictures and radio this week went before Congressional committees to protest what their spokesmen declared to be certain inequalities of the proposed raising of existing taxes and the levying of new ones, in the pending bill to raise revenues for war-and-defense.

Declaring that the admission tax provisions of the revenue law as now written in the pending tax bill would do a serious injustice to exhibitors, Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, asked the Senate Finance Committee Monday to incorporate in the measure a stipulation that tickets sold at reduced prices shall be taxed on the price for which sold instead of the "established" price.

Mr. Kuykendall told the committee that to require the payment of tax at the regular rate would be a burden on children and high school students for whom special rates are provided.

Cites Junior Admissions

Business has been bad and exhibitors have been seeking ways and means of increasing attendance, he told the committee.

"Theatres everywhere, both large and small, are starting a so-called Junior Admission Price schedule, a reduction of the top admission price," he explained. "Wherever this has been tried it has brought about a wholesome increase in attendance. The theatres are badly in need of this increase and it would naturally increase admission tax revenue.

"We are not trying to evade any tax whatsoever," he asserted, "but merely trying to distribute it properly in such a way that the revenue which you gentlemen are charged with the responsibility of raising will not be adversely affected, but in our sincere and honest opinion will be increased, and at the same time the theatres will materially benefit."

Mr. Kuykendall also urged that the tax exemption be entirely eliminated rather than reduced to nine cents, declaring that such action would increase revenues and eliminate confusion among exhibitors.

Mr. Kuykendall said the "tax should apply down to the last penny" and proposed that the tax bill be written in language "similar to the following":

"That there should be a tax of one per cent on each ten cents or fraction thereof, eliminating entirely in this way the nine-cent exemption, which will reprive you of revenue and cause considerable competitive confusion."

A previous attestor to the film industry's stand on taxes was Abram F. Myers, general counsel of the National Allied States Association, who appeared before the Senate committee Wednesday, August 13th.

Mr. Myers asked elimination of exemptions, and taxation of coin-operated music and picture devices, and of so-called "free-shows," operated for merchants by itinerant exhibitors.

Of the coin machines, he remarked: "They not only compete with theatres, but compete unfairly, since the legitimate motion picture industry, through the Production Code Administration in Hollywood, reviews its own pictures, and observes standards of decency."

John Golden, legitimate theatre producer, and co-chairman of the Amusement Division of the Defense Recreation Committee, last week, in New York, urged defeat of the tax revenue bill before the Senate Finance Committee, because it would make persons in the armed services pay a ten per cent amusement tax. Said Mr. Golden:

"Any one with the welfare of the boys in uniform at heart, should write their Senators to vote against this measure."

Radio Hits New Taxes As "Discriminatory"

House proposals for taxes of five to fifteen per cent on the net advertising revenues of broadcasting stations were vigorously attacked by representatives of the industry Monday before the Senate Finance Committee.

Headed by James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, the industry presented a showing that most of the stations could not support the tax on top of all other levies and in the face of expected declines in advertising revenues, and charged that it was discriminatory for failure to tax competing advertising media and also contended that the stations already contribute to the nation through public service.

Denominating the proposal as "dubious," Mr. Fly told the committee that although the Treasury estimated a revenue of $12,000,000 from the tax, the net return to the Government probably would be between $4,500,000 and $5,000,000.

"That sum placed on the broadcasting industry is substantial, because despite its prominence and significance the industry is not a big industry in a money sense," he said.

At present the industry is devoting much time to public service—debates on current issues, news, etc.—and the demand is becoming greater, he told the committee.

"There is also the probability that additional burdens may be placed on the industry in terms of additional equipment to insure continuous operation in the event of an emergency," he explained.

Fly took the position that the restrictions on consumer goods imposed by the defense program may seriously curtail advertising, but that the expenses or service of the stations cannot be curtailed.

He pointed out that there was no proposal to tax competitive advertising media; that newspapers get a heavy subsidy from the Government, in second-class mail privileges.

The chains will be most heavily hit by the tax, he said. The ones most affected would, on the basis of 1940 figures, be required to pay over $7,815,000, while 224 stations would be taxed $4,824,000. On the other hand, a large number of stations would not be affected unless the networks passed the tax on to them. NBC and Columbia, he said, each would have paid about $2,000,000 on their 1940 business.

Former Radio Commissioner Harold A. Lafount, president of National Independent Broadcasters, Inc., attacked the proposal on similar grounds, declaring that as written the levy would be on losses in the case of the nearly 300 broadcasters who are not making a profit. Heavily hit, he said, would be stations with incomes in excess of $100,000 but with little or no profit.

Mr. Lafount contended stations were "quasi public utilities," required to render a great deal of public service, and with stations unable to bear the burden the tax could well result in lessened service.

Minnesota's Blocks-of-5 Bill Only One of 245 to Become Law This Year

The motion picture industry was practically unhampered by adverse legislation during the past legislative year—245 bills introduced directly affected the film industry, some 1,098 others had an indirect effect.

Legislation dealing with film censorship failed to pass in any state, and there was no increase in sales or admission taxes, although several bills were introduced. Bills attempting to regulate the length of performances, aimed at double and triple features, failed to become laws. In Illinois there was a strong organized movement against that type of film show.

The only interfering legislation was passed in Minnesota which prohibited that portion of the consent decree concerning film sales in blocks of five, and in Missouri where third and fourth class rural theatres were affected when an old statute was repealed which had exempted such houses from taxation. The Minnesota anti-blocks-of-five law was not made effective, pending a test now under way.

The number of bills still pending in seven states are: California, 36; Illinois, 2; Minnesota, 16; Pennsylvania, 8; South Carolina, 1; Massachusetts, still in session, 28, and New Jersey, recessed, 1.

Following are the states and the number of bills—which would have directly or indirectly affected the industry—introduced in each:

Arizona, 18; Arkansas, 30; California, 295; Colorado, 22; Connecticut, 113; Delaware, 17; Florida, 21; Georgia, 12; Idaho, 8; Illinois, 30; Indiana, 21; Iowa, 20; Kansas, 8; Maine, 49; Maryland, 34; Massachusetts, 75; Michigan, 41; Minnesota, 20; Missouri, 16; Montana, 22; Nebraska, 12; Nevada, 2; New Hampshire, 17; New Jersey, 7; New Mexico, 18; New York, 109; North Carolina, 10; North Dakota, 15; Ohio, 17; Oklahoma, 30; Oregon, 8; Pennsylvania, 36; Rhode Island, 23; South Carolina, 17; South Dakota, 13; Tennessee, 11; Texas, 19; Utah, 21; Vermont, 8; Washington, 21; West Virginia, 26; Wisconsin, 23, and Wyoming, 8.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Peggy Moran, Universal's cute little star, on a vacation in the east, visited the United States Treasury, at Washington, the other day, where Treasury Officer A. W. Hall let the little miss play with 43 million dollars in cold cash.

In these days of multi-multi-billion dollar currency printing, a mere 43 millions tossed into the lap of a chick little gal from Hollywood as a plaything means little. But when we read Universal's press statement that the dough was in 43 single million-dollar bills, well, that was another matter, for, wasn't it generally known that the highest piece of currency for public circulation was a ten thousand-dollar bill? True, the Treasury once printed $50,000 and even $100,000 bills, but that was many years ago, and they were used only between banks.

Universal's advisors on Treasury money matters gave them a bum steer. There are no $1,000,000 currency notes; $10,000 bills still are tops. Wonder what they look like?

The Roxy Theatre, in New York, has housed some strange customers. Tops to date is the fellow who, a stranger to his victim, ran up to Laverne Mayer, pretty miss, in the theatre lobby, planted a big kiss on her forehead, and, before a crowd of patrons, knelt to ask for the fair lady's hand in marriage. Ushers and police escorted the fellow, gently, but firmly, to the nearest hoosegow.

Louis deWohl, Hungarian nobleman and astro-philosopher, will appear in Pathe News this week with the first of what many, including his press agent, hopes will be the first of a series of predictions on current events, marking a departure of the newsreel from a record of present happenings to a prognosticator of the future.

Mr. deWohl stakes his bet on the accuracy of the prediction set for this week (he couldn't predict in advance what it would concern) on past performances. Arriving here from England a month ago, he told a ship news reporter that a collaborator of Hitler's would go insane in the Carribean sea within four days. He had the longitude, too, but not the latitude. Five days later Admiral Robert, French naval commander in Martinique, was put in a strait jacket.

He says Hitler will die within a year, too—he hopes.

Justice of the Peace Jack Ziesler announces that he will reopen the Grand Theatre, in St. Louis, Friday evening, with a brand new burlesque show.

OUR SUMMER HOLIDAY prevented us from attending the series of "unique emotional tests" which Dr. William Moulton (lie-detector inventor) Marston conducted the other day at Broadway's Astor Theatre, for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Loew's, Inc., and Leo the Lion.

They say that the MGM press agents had quite a time of it, coming out with the conclusion that, "blondes are most submissive to male aggressiveness, and redheads least so." We should have been there. Our vote might have changed the entire situation.

Instead of the 'lie-detector,' Dr. Marston used the 'Hyde detector.'

MGM says it all had something to do with its new picture, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

Involved in the proceedings were such precision gadgets as 'variographs,' 'blood-pressure cuffs' and 'pneumographs.' Involved also were several hundred young women between ages 16 to 25. Involved also, was a new piece of apparatus ecalled the "Emotional Response Machine" (hereinafter referred to as the "Hyde-detector"); of the lie-detector, Dr. William Moulton Marston, and 20 minutes of selected scenes from "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

The "Hyde-detector," Dr. Marston explained, is based on some of the principles of the lie-detector. The newcomer is said to measure reaction to emotional stimulus, in this case the highly emotional scenes from the film, and determine feminine resistance to aggressive males (or the Hyde in men).

At the Astor Theatre laboratory, Mr. Marston and his associate, James Edmund Boyack, corralled blondes, brunettes and redheads, two at a time, strapped the aforementioned 'cuffs' and 'pneumographs' to their ankles and chests, respectively, and let female emotions take their course as Dr. Jekyll and his fiancee and Mr. Hyde and his girl friend took over the screen. All this while, another little trick called a 'stylus' was supplying a trail of red ink on a long stretch of graph paper emanating from the "Hyde-detector."

Dr. Marston translated the twists and turns recorded on the graphs. He found that blondes have least resistance and brunettes most resistance; redheads show a counter-attack, married women show less resistance and more fear to male aggressiveness than do single women; occupation and environment make no difference in reactions; however, girls who are athletically inclined blunt their sensitivity—not that they are less attractive themselves, but become less attractive to men. Brunettes, apparently are strictly middle-of-the-roaders.

Dr. Marston, via MGM, lists a couple of rules for the weaker sex. One says that "if a man gets out of control, laugh at him. Tell him it bores you, leaves you cold—that he's making a fool of himself."

Another: "Never let youself be caught in an unprotected situation with a man you know to be strongly attracted to you."

"The experiment," says Metro, "was a grand success. Science was promoted and so was 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.'"

Robert (Bob) Walker, of the Nusho Theatre, at Broken Arrow in Oklahoma, minds not a bit the traveling to far-away distributors' consent decree advance trade showings of motion pictures. He flies his own plane to Oklahoma City's 'film row.'

Nick Paikos, manager of the Diana Theatre, in Tipton, Ind., mailed a cashier's check to his sister in Greece last November 25th.

The other day the envelope containing the check came back, faded and illegible. It had been opened December 3rd by British censors at Gibraltar and resealed. Shortly threafter, the ship carrying it was torpedoed. The British sent divers down to recover the mail, but the salt water had caused the address on the envelope to vanish.

The check, marked in India ink, remained legible and was returned to Paikos. Stamped on the recovered letter were the words:

"Saved from the Sea."

Of interest to the motion picture business, especially to Hollywood which up to World War II occupied a large portion of the screens of Europe, is "Point Two" of the Fight for Freedom's reported "peace terms": "The Nazis will allow the conquered countries some measure of cultural autonomy. . . ." Hollywood, it will be remembered, was dislodged from Europe by the Nazis for "cultural" reasons.

The union withdrew the pickets, finally when Max Nathanson, the owner, sold the house.

Fantastic is the story being circulated by Fight for Freedom, Inc., from New York headquarters, in the same Rockefeller Center office building in which this page is written,—the story that Fight for Freedom, has "confidential information," received from "underground sources in Germany," alluding to the "retirement" or "resignation" of Adolph Hitler, "in a sensational, but fake peace move." Hitler, they say, would feign illness and the need of a long rest, dropping temporarily into the background, to allow the "peace-loving" German Army to negotiate peace.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT FREE SHOWS GIVEN FOR AUDIENCE OF MILLIONS

Mobile Units, Supplied from Central Library, Exhibited War Propaganda Pictures to 3,250,000 in Eight Months

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

With the motion picture industry potentially bludgeoned by the new Minister of Information, Mr. Brendan Bracken, with the threat of compulsion on the showing of Ministry of Information films, some critical limelight has recently focused on the Ministry's own machinery of cinema propaganda. A statistical and critical survey has led students of the situation to the conclusion that, whatever its opinion of the industry, the Ministry has no cause to be dissatisfied with its own activities in the motion picture field.

The production activities of the Ministry have recently been surveyed in these columns. A study of the whole Ministry organization, of distribution and exhibition of films exclusively non-commercial, and in the main Government propaganda films, reveals that in the past eight months October-May, alone, with the aid of its Mobile Units and its Central Film Library, some 3,250,000 people sat down to see, gratutitously, Government propaganda pictures, outside those shown in the ordinary motion picture theatres of the country.

Concern All War Phases

The shows in the main have been organized through the Films Division, with the aid of the Ministry's regional officers, and on any or all of its 70 mobile 16 mm units. They have been given in church halls, miners' halls, factories, stores, libraries, Y.M.C.A.'s, etc. They have covered the general subject of war propaganda, or have specifically dealt with such selective matters as National Savings, the food question, War Weapons Week, fire fighting, anti-gas measures, etc.

On an average at least ten shows are given weekly by each of the Ministry's 13 regions, although sometimes, in the Winter months, this has risen to a grand total of between 600 and 700 shows weekly. Conversely in the Summer months, as at present, the figure dwindles to smaller proportions.

The operations of the Ministry's local film machinery are mustered under two separate headings: that of the Mobile Film Units and that of the Central Film Library; although the activities of each are distinct the two are, naturally, closely linked.

The whole joint machinery is enwrapped with the regional machinery of the M.O.I. which departmentally covers the following areas: Northern (Newcastle); North Eastern (Leeds); North Midland (Nottingham); Eastern (Cambridge); London (London); Southern (Reading); South Western (Bristol); Wales (Cardiff); Midland (Birmingham); North Western (Manchester); Scotland (Edinburg); South Eastern (Tonbridge Wells); North Ireland (Belfast).

In each of these regions officials, assisted by voluntary staffs, guard the destinies of M.O.I. activities and propaganda. A film officer, with assistants both paid and voluntary, is responsible for local propaganda by means of the motion picture.

Shows in the various areas are arranged on a programme basis to cover all interests and (or) particular or special subjects or ideas. Supplementary shows are given on the request of factories, stores, welfare societies, educational authorities, and almost any public spirited or public body which requests them for general reasons or to tieup with particular campaigns. All are given on 16 mm apparatus. The aid of the Films Division is sometimes canvassed, always voluntarily offered, in arranging programmes. Shows last 80 minutes on an average. No entertainment pictures—neither Mickey Mouse, nor dramas, nor anything encroaching on the preserves of the trade—are included.

Although the general objective is that of assisting the war effort, the provision of these shows is elastic. In special areas special subjects are dealt with. Heavily blitzed areas may possibly be given pictures dealing with after-raid welfare. Towns which are being subjected to incendiary attacks might find programmes concentrating upon fire fighting and fire protection. Areas which are organizing National Savings Weeks, or collections on behalf of the War Weapon campaign, are provided with special films dealing with those particular subjects. Though emergency programmes are provided on short notice the Films Division have bookings as far as six or seven months ahead, cannot always in fact cope with demand.

Outpost Showings

It is a literal fact that the MOI mobile units have penetrated the northernmost outposts of the Hebrides and have given shows to the Islanders of the Scillies, most southwesterly point of British.

Supplementing the activities of the mobile units and providing the wherewithal to make that section's activities possible is the Central Film Library, an M.O.I. department which has in its vaults not only copies of all the films made and sponsored by the Ministry of Information since the outbreak of hostilities, but the whole of the heritage of the G.P.O. Film Unit and the Empire Film Library, both of which previously operated on their own, loaning motion pictures to societies and bodies, similar to those now supplied by the Ministry.

Headings under which the Central Film Library's pictures are grouped include, for instance, "The Fighting Forces," "Civil Defense," "The British Empire," "Labour and Armaments," "Food Front," "Health and Education," "Salvage, Savings and Thrift." Characteristic titles extracted from these groups include: "Fighter Pilot," "Men of the Lightship," "Britain Can Take It," "Canteen On Wheels," "Atlantic Patrol," "Gold Coast," "Yesterday's Over Your Shoulder," "Convoy," "Casserole Cooking," "Village School," "The Londoners," "Feed The Forces," "We've Got to Get Rid of the Rats."

The immense and insistent drain upon the resources of the Central Film Library is evidenced in the 2,000 copies which are printed each month and sent out for showing on the mobile unuits or in libraries, etc. The figure covers only M.O.I. films. Including G.P.O. films and those from the Empire Film Library, the total is 6,000 per month.

Films from the Central Film Library are supplied on demand, in the main to institutions, bodies and organizations which already possess their own projectors, supplement in fact the more deliberate activities of the mobile units. There is hardly a limit to the range or extent of this field, for it not only expands but changes week by week. Once again, as with the mobile units, the films sent out cover general propaganda, or, as the case may demand, specific subjects and particular campaigns.

Forty projectors have been supplied by the Ministry to public libraries throughout Great Britain where regular non-theatrical shows of Ministry films, supplied by the Central Film Library, are given from time to time.

Free Admission

Over and above these two enterprises films are supplied by the Library which not only includes 16 mm but 35 mm subjects, to local authorities, M.O.I. regions, etc. to be shown in commercial picture houses in the mornings or during hours of normal closure. The hire of the theatres is paid for in the usual way and at the usual rates. No fee is charged for the films sent out by the Library and no admission is charged by the mobile film units.

So far the machinery has operated admirably and with few, if any hitches. It is operated at base—the Ministry of Information Headquarters, Senate House, Malet Street, London—by a staff which in the main graduated not within the motion picture industry but on the broader field of non-commercial and documentary enterprise, who are, state their critics, unfortunate in not having been industry men but who, it is admitted, are fortunate in not being civil servants.

FEAR USHERETTES TO BE CALLED IN BRITAIN

Reports in London indicate the likelihood that the Ministry of Labor will call up women ushers at theatres for national war work, despite the understanding that none would be called pending a decision on the industry's manpower problem.

It is also possible that second projectionists will be taken off the reserve lists, which actions would cripple theatre operations, exhibitors contend. Representatives of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association were to meet with Ministry of Labor officials this week and it is believed the Government will inform the trade of its intention at that time.

Neagle and Wilcox Clipper to England

Before leaving New York, Tuesday, via Atlantic Clipper for England, Herbert Wilcox, producer, signed a new three-year contract with RKO to produce seven pictures starring Anna Neagle during the next three years. The star and producer have the privilege of making one outside production.

Miss Neagle accompanied Mr. Wilcox on the flight to England. The English actress, who has starred in four Hollywood films during the past two years, will go directly to the Denham studios, near London, where she will begin work on a picture based on the career of Amy Mollison, British aviatrix.

"49th Parallel" Ready

Now completing at Denham, and being made ready for trade show, is Ortus Films' first opus "49th Parallel," a picture made with the collaboration of the Ministry of Information, and being the story of six Nazi U-boat men whose craft is blown up in the Hudson Straits, and who shoot and plunder their way through Canada in an attempt to reach the United States.

Michael Powell directed the film, which is from an original story by Emeric Pressburger, and among the stars playing in it are Leslie Howard, Laurance Olivier, Raymond Massey and Anton Wallbrook.

Playing her first grown-up role, that of a German refugee in a Hutterite settlement, is seventeen year old Glynis Johns. The character was originally intended for Elizabeth Bergner.

The picture has been conceived on a wide canvas. Powell's unit travelled 52,000 miles, to remote corners of the Dominion, to obtain material. Aspects of life depicted include that in an Eskimo village, The Hutterite Settlement in the Canadian wheat-fields, the "Mounties," railroads and airline networks of the Dominion.

G. F. D. will trade show the picture in the near future.

To be completed at Denham is "Hard Steel," previously titled "Steel Saraband." It went before the camera the first week in July. Meanwhile Claude Friese-Greene is in Sheffield taking exteriors. Norman Walker will direct, and Jimmy Sloan is in charge of production.

British producers face serious curtailment which may cripple production schedules as the Minister of Labor has peremptorily demanded 100 technicians from the studios register with the British forces.

The demand is understood to be the reason for the emergency meetings called by British and American production representatives who met August 12th, and were to meet again on Wednesday, to prepare definite production schedules and outline personal needs. Especially hard hit under the new Ministry demand would be the production of American quota films. It is believed that the British Government is determined that the technicians register for service despite the pleas of producers. Shorts and newsreel production is not expected to be affected.

At Teddington Warner Brothers' "So This Was Paris" with John Harlow directing Griffiths Jones, Robert Morley and Ann Dvorak, has completed its shooting stages, last sequence to go into the developing machines representing in Paris' famed Gare du Nord, and the phantasmagoria of a fairground rebuilt in a meadow close to the studios.

BEN LYON, BEBE DANIELS, VIC OLIVER, three Americans who made and played Britain's most popular wartime radio programme, "Hi Gang." They are working at Gainsborough studios in Islington on a film version of the show. With them in the picture are Graham Moffatt Gainsborough's Fat Boy, and Moore Marriott, locally known as the Artful Ancient, both of whom play in the film with Ben, Bebe and Vic.

With the Warner film out of the way, the Teddington lot has been taken over by British National, under whose aegis Leslie Hiscott is directing "The Seventh Survivor." Working with Hiscott is Michael Barringer, who, with him, wrote many of the stories and scripts for his earlier films at Twickenham, Beaconsfield and elsewhere. Producing is the director's wife Elizabeth Hiscott, and the camera crew is composed of Basil Emmott and Laurie Freeman.

The cast is a capable one by British standards, and includes Austin Trevor, Ronnie Shiner, Wally Patch, John Stuart, Frank Pettingell, June Carr, Linden Travers, Henry Oscar, Martita Hunt, and Felix Aylmer. Distribution will be by Anglo American.

Two at Denham

Denham is one studio which, despite having been damaged by enemy action, can boast two films on the floor, both of them sponsored by American producer-distributors. One is RKO Radio's "Meet the Tiger," and the other Paramount's "Hatter's Castle."

The RKO Radio subject is yet another "Saint" adventure—the seventh in line. William Sistrom has unbounded faith in the popular appeal of Leslie Charteris' stories. "Saint" again is Hugh Sinclair, rated by the discerning as in the very front rank of British screen actors. Jean Gillie is in the feminine lead. Paul Stein directs.

Elsewhere in the studios producer I. A. Goldsmith is at work on his version of Cronin's "Hatter's Castle" with Lance Comfort, who recently made "Penn of Pennsylvania," in charge of direction. The film is a period piece, with side whiskers, musical boxes and a drab Victorian mansion characteristic features. To the lighting and photographing of such as these, cameraman Mutz Greenbaum has devoted himself assiduously, and unusually good results are said to have been obtained.

The cast includes Robert Newton, Emlyn Williams, and Deborah Kerr.

"The Big Blockade," now in production, will introduce a new fiction-documentary technique.

Among the real-life roles re-enacted by public figures for the documentary sequences will be the Minister of Economic Warfare, played by Dr. Hugh Dalton, Mr. Ronald Cross as the Minister of Shipping, and Mr. David Bowes-Lyon as the head of the N. E. W. Press Division.

For the fictional reconstruction sequences many stars and featured players have already signed contracts. Among those are Will Hay (in a straight character part as the skipper of a trawler), John Stuart, Bernard Miles, Frank Cellier, Morland Graham, Elliot Mason (as a female railway porter at Hamm Station) and Ronald Shiner. Negotiations are in progress with John Clements, Michael Redgrave, John Mills, Alfred Drayton, Ernest Thesiger, Michael Rennie and Basil Sydney.

Belle Starr

(20th Century-Fox, 1941-42)

Reconstruction Drama

There are good, solid entertainment values in this story of a young woman who carries on for the Confederate cause in Missouri following the official conclusion of the Civil War, only to be killed, just after she learns that many of those fighting with her are not soldiers, but bandits, and while she was attempting to put an end to the strife for the good of the country.

Gene Tierney, playing the heroine, gives a performance that should do much towards raising her up among the most popular stars. Randolph Scott, as Captain Sam Starr, the leader of the guerilla band, is convincing. The supporting roles are also very well played. Louise Beavers, as Manny Lou, reminds one of the performance of a somewhat similar part played by Hattie McDaniel in "Gone With the Wind." Dana Andrews, as the Yankee major; Sheppard Strudwick, the brother; Chill Wills, a guerilla scout, and Elizabeth Patterson, all deserve mention for good work.

The color in "Belle Starr" ranks with the best produced thus far. Many scenes have great naturalness and beauty. At no time was the color allowed to detract from the characters and the story, but rather helped to create the desired effects.

The story, while conventional in some parts, has enough original twists to be entirely adequate. In point of time the story begins at about the period "Gone With the Wind" ended. Belle Shirley, left alone save for Manny Lou, after her father was murdered by renegades, dressed as Northern soldiers, meets her brother, a Confederate officer, who has news that the war is over. But Belle wants to continue to work for the cause. After their home is burned and brother arrested by his former classmate, a major, because she sheltered Captain Starr, Belle joins the band, arranges the escape of Starr from prison and marries him. But when her brother is murdered by one of the band, she realizes that many are not fighting for the Confederacy. She leaves her husband to go to give herself up, but she learns that an ambush has been prepared for him. As she rides to save her husband she is killed by a poor white. Captain Starr realizes that his wife was right—the war is over—and surrenders.

Suspense and actions of the characters are relied on more than the shooting type of action to hold the audience's attention. There is but little comic relief.

Kenneth Macgowan, associate producer, now on Government duty, has delivered a very well made picture in every respect and the direction of Irving Cummings is of highest quality.

Previewed at a New York projection room before an audience composed chiefly of clubwomen reviewers, who seemed to be impressed with the film and the performance of Gene Tierney. There were indications that some women in a more typical audience would shed a few tears at some of the scenes.—MARTIN QUIGLEY, JR.

Lydia

(United Artists, 1941-42)

Drama

There's no other word for it. "Lydia" is terrific! Between them, Alexander Korda, producer, and Julien Duvivier, director, have taken the script which Ben Hecht and Sam Hoffenstein provided and turned out a romance-drama of taste, charm and pathos. Not since "Wuthering Heights" has Merle Oberon, as the title character, given so vital and enchanting a performance. Her "Lydia" leaves the shadows of the screen and brings all the verisimilitude of a woman's love story with forceful impact to the audience.

The plot of "Lydia," closely allied to "Un Carnet de Bal" which Mr. Duvivier wrote and directed in France three years ago and which was released here as "Dance of Life," traces the tale over a 40-year period, of a young girl born into a Boston Back Bay family of wealth and position who, during her lifetime, is beloved of four men only one of whom is fortunate enough to have known her love.

At the beginning of the film aging Lydia Macmillan is surrounded by three of her enamoured friends, Michael, physician and son of the Macmillan butler; Bob, a former football hero of the late '90s, and Frank, a gifted, blind pianist and composer. To answer their query as to why she never married and to explain the Lydia to them which they never knew, she tells the story of her real love, Richard. The camera then turns back to the golden, lush era at the turn of the century with Lydia as a young girl, spirited, enchanting and willfully romantic.

At the outbreak of the Spanish American War she decides that her frivolous life as a Boston belle is not enough, and she opens a home for blind children. Her work later proves a substitute for her unfulfilled love for Richard, the romantic lover who sails away and leaves her a lifetime of memories. At the end of the film Richard enters the scene, invited to the tea-party reunion engineered by the kindly understanding Michael. The tragedy of Lydia's love which has been constant throughout forty years, is that Richard doesn't remember her. As her lusty, worldly and strong-minded grandmother predicted, Lydia finally pays for her "sin."

The story, which under less skillful hands would have developed into a tawdry, tearful sop, is executed expertly through the direction of Mr. Duvivier and the superb acting of Miss Oberon. John Cotten, remembered for his excellent role as Jedediah Leland in "Citizen Kane," gives a creditable account of himself as Michael in this, his second screen role. Alan Marshal is admirable as the fare-thee-well lover; Hans Yaray as the blind musician, Frank, avoids with great restraint a part which could easily bring out the ham in an actor; John Halliday as James, father of Michael and butler of Lydia's family, gives his accustomed polished performance. Edna May Oliver, as Lydia's grandmother, is very much at home in the part.

This is not a film for the children. Tell your patrons to leave them home, but to bring everybody else in the family, including Aunt Jennie, because "Lydia" provides 103 minutes of fine entertainment. It's romance at its best.

This Woman is Mine

(Universal, 1940-41)

Maritime Melodrama

Frank Lloyd, producer director, continues here the sequence of sea pictures which includes "Mutiny on the Bounty" as its flagship and "Rulers of the Sea" as something less. On the evidence of preview response, "This Woman Is Mine" rates somewhere in between. When Mr. Lloyd is operating on the large scale, with white sails flashing against a limitless sea, or with scores of men in violent combat on the deck of a four-master photographed in a long shot from aloft, he supplies in this film the variety and kind of thrill at which he is most adept.

When Mr. Lloyd moves his camera in and throws his characters into the telling of their personal story his results command less interest.

The story, from the novel, "I, James Lewis," and synopsized on page 171 of your Product Digest, pertains to a fur-trading expedition from New York to Oregon financed by John Jacob Astor. The situation around which the action centers is that of a lone girl placed aboard ship among men destined to be two years away from other white companionship. This accounts for some shipboard complications of the sort the situation might suggest, but these are not gone into deeply enough to generate drama commensurate with setting or footage. Trouble with hostile Indians in Oregon leads to the blowing up of the ship in the finale.

Walter Brennan as a sea captain faithful to discipline furnishes the outstanding character at start of the film, but the story robs his por-

Criminals Within

(Producers Releasing Corp., 1940-1941)

Spy Murder-Mystery

This is a tale of espionage intrigue played against the background of a U. S. Army camp. Since the selective service act went into effect, this is probably one of the first films which uses an army camp as locale for foreign spy activities. George R. Batcheller was in charge of production.

The story centers around a vital explosive formula discovered by U. S. Army chemists and scientists which foreign agents try to get out of the country. Eric Linden, playing the lead, tracks down the spies after becoming implicated in a double murder. He exposes the cooperative under-hand work of one of the camp's officers. Ann Doran, in the part of a young newspaper reporter, helps Linden solve the mystery meanwhile developing a heart throb for the brave serviceman who risks all to bring the traitors to justice. Sam Dillingham and Bernie Pilot, Negro actor and actress, take every advantage of their comedy scenes. Ben Alexander handles the part of the villainous army officer and Constance Worth plays a rather lukewarm Mata Hari.

Lagging direction in a few scenes hindered development of dramatic effect and suspense but on the whole the film is entertaining.

Ice-Capades

(Republic, 1940-41)

Comedy and Spectacle

Spectacle and light, frothy comedy are combined in Republic's "Ice-Capades" to form a pleasantly entertaining picture of wide interest. Using the entire "Ice-Capades" troupe, which has been touring the country with notable success, Producer Robert North and director Joseph Santley took a fairly substantial story, studded it with humorous situations and interspersed the ice skating numbers in an entirely believable fashion.

Romantic leads are Dorothy Lewis, also a skater, and James Ellison, with Jerry Colonna, Barbara Jo Allen (Vera Vague), Alan Mowbray, Phil Silvers carrying the brunt of the comedy.

The story has a newsreel photographer getting into difficulties with his employer because he photographs a skater and passes her off as a European star. A producer signs the European, sight unseen, to star in an ice extravaganza and sues the newsreel firm for a million dollars when the star is found unsuitable. To offset the suit, the cameraman has to find the unknown girl, and complications develop when she refuses to star in the show.

The skating stars featured are Belita, Lois Dworshak, Megan Taylor, Vera Hruba, Red McCarthy, Phil Taylor, Jackson and Lynam, the Benoits and Dench and Stewart. Their work and that of Miss Lewis is comparable to any that has been screened.

Some of the Colonna-Allen repartee is of an adult nature. One instance is that in which "Miss Vague" complains about the Army conscripting available boy friends and Colonna asks why she doesn't take some of the Army rejectees. "Not for me," she replies. "When the Army says a man is physically disabled, I'll take their word for it."

Dr. Kildare's Wedding Day

(MGM, 1940-41)

Miss Day Dies for Her Future

As if to free her of series commitments so that she may enter at once upon the stellar future predicted for her by showmen who elected her Number One Star of Tomorrow in MOTION PICTURE HERALD's poll, Miss Laraine Day's employers have killed her out of the Dr. Kildare series by walking her into the path of a truck on the eve of her marriage to the young medico who's been so long on the point of making her Mrs. Kildare.

This courageous solution of a talent problem by Miss Day's employers, which removes not only the heroine but also the romantic interest from the Kildare series, gives showmen a tragedy to sell to the steady customers of the series instead of the usual comedy-drama. It gives the picture plenty of impact, naturally, but mayhap at a price, because the story goes on from the point of death to suggest that the young doctor is going to devote his interest hereafter exclusively to the practice of his profession, and it is not in the record books that this type of devotion, noble as it may be, sells as many tickets as the boy-to-girl variety.

Be all that as it may, there's a new exploitation angle for showmen to use in behalf of the film by concentrating upon Miss Day as the Number One Star of Tomorrow.

Apart from the death of the heroine, this number in the series has to do with the curing of a deafness about to ruin the career of a symphony orchestra conductor (a plot line making occasion for performing a lot of symphonic music) and with some examination of the young doctor's sponsor under suspicion of cancer, evidently without determining him to be afflicted. The death, however, overshadows all the other incidents and subplots.

Harold S. Bucquet directed the picture, giving considerable footage to comedy sequences featuring Red Skelton, in the columns just now as an oncoming star in the field of comedy.

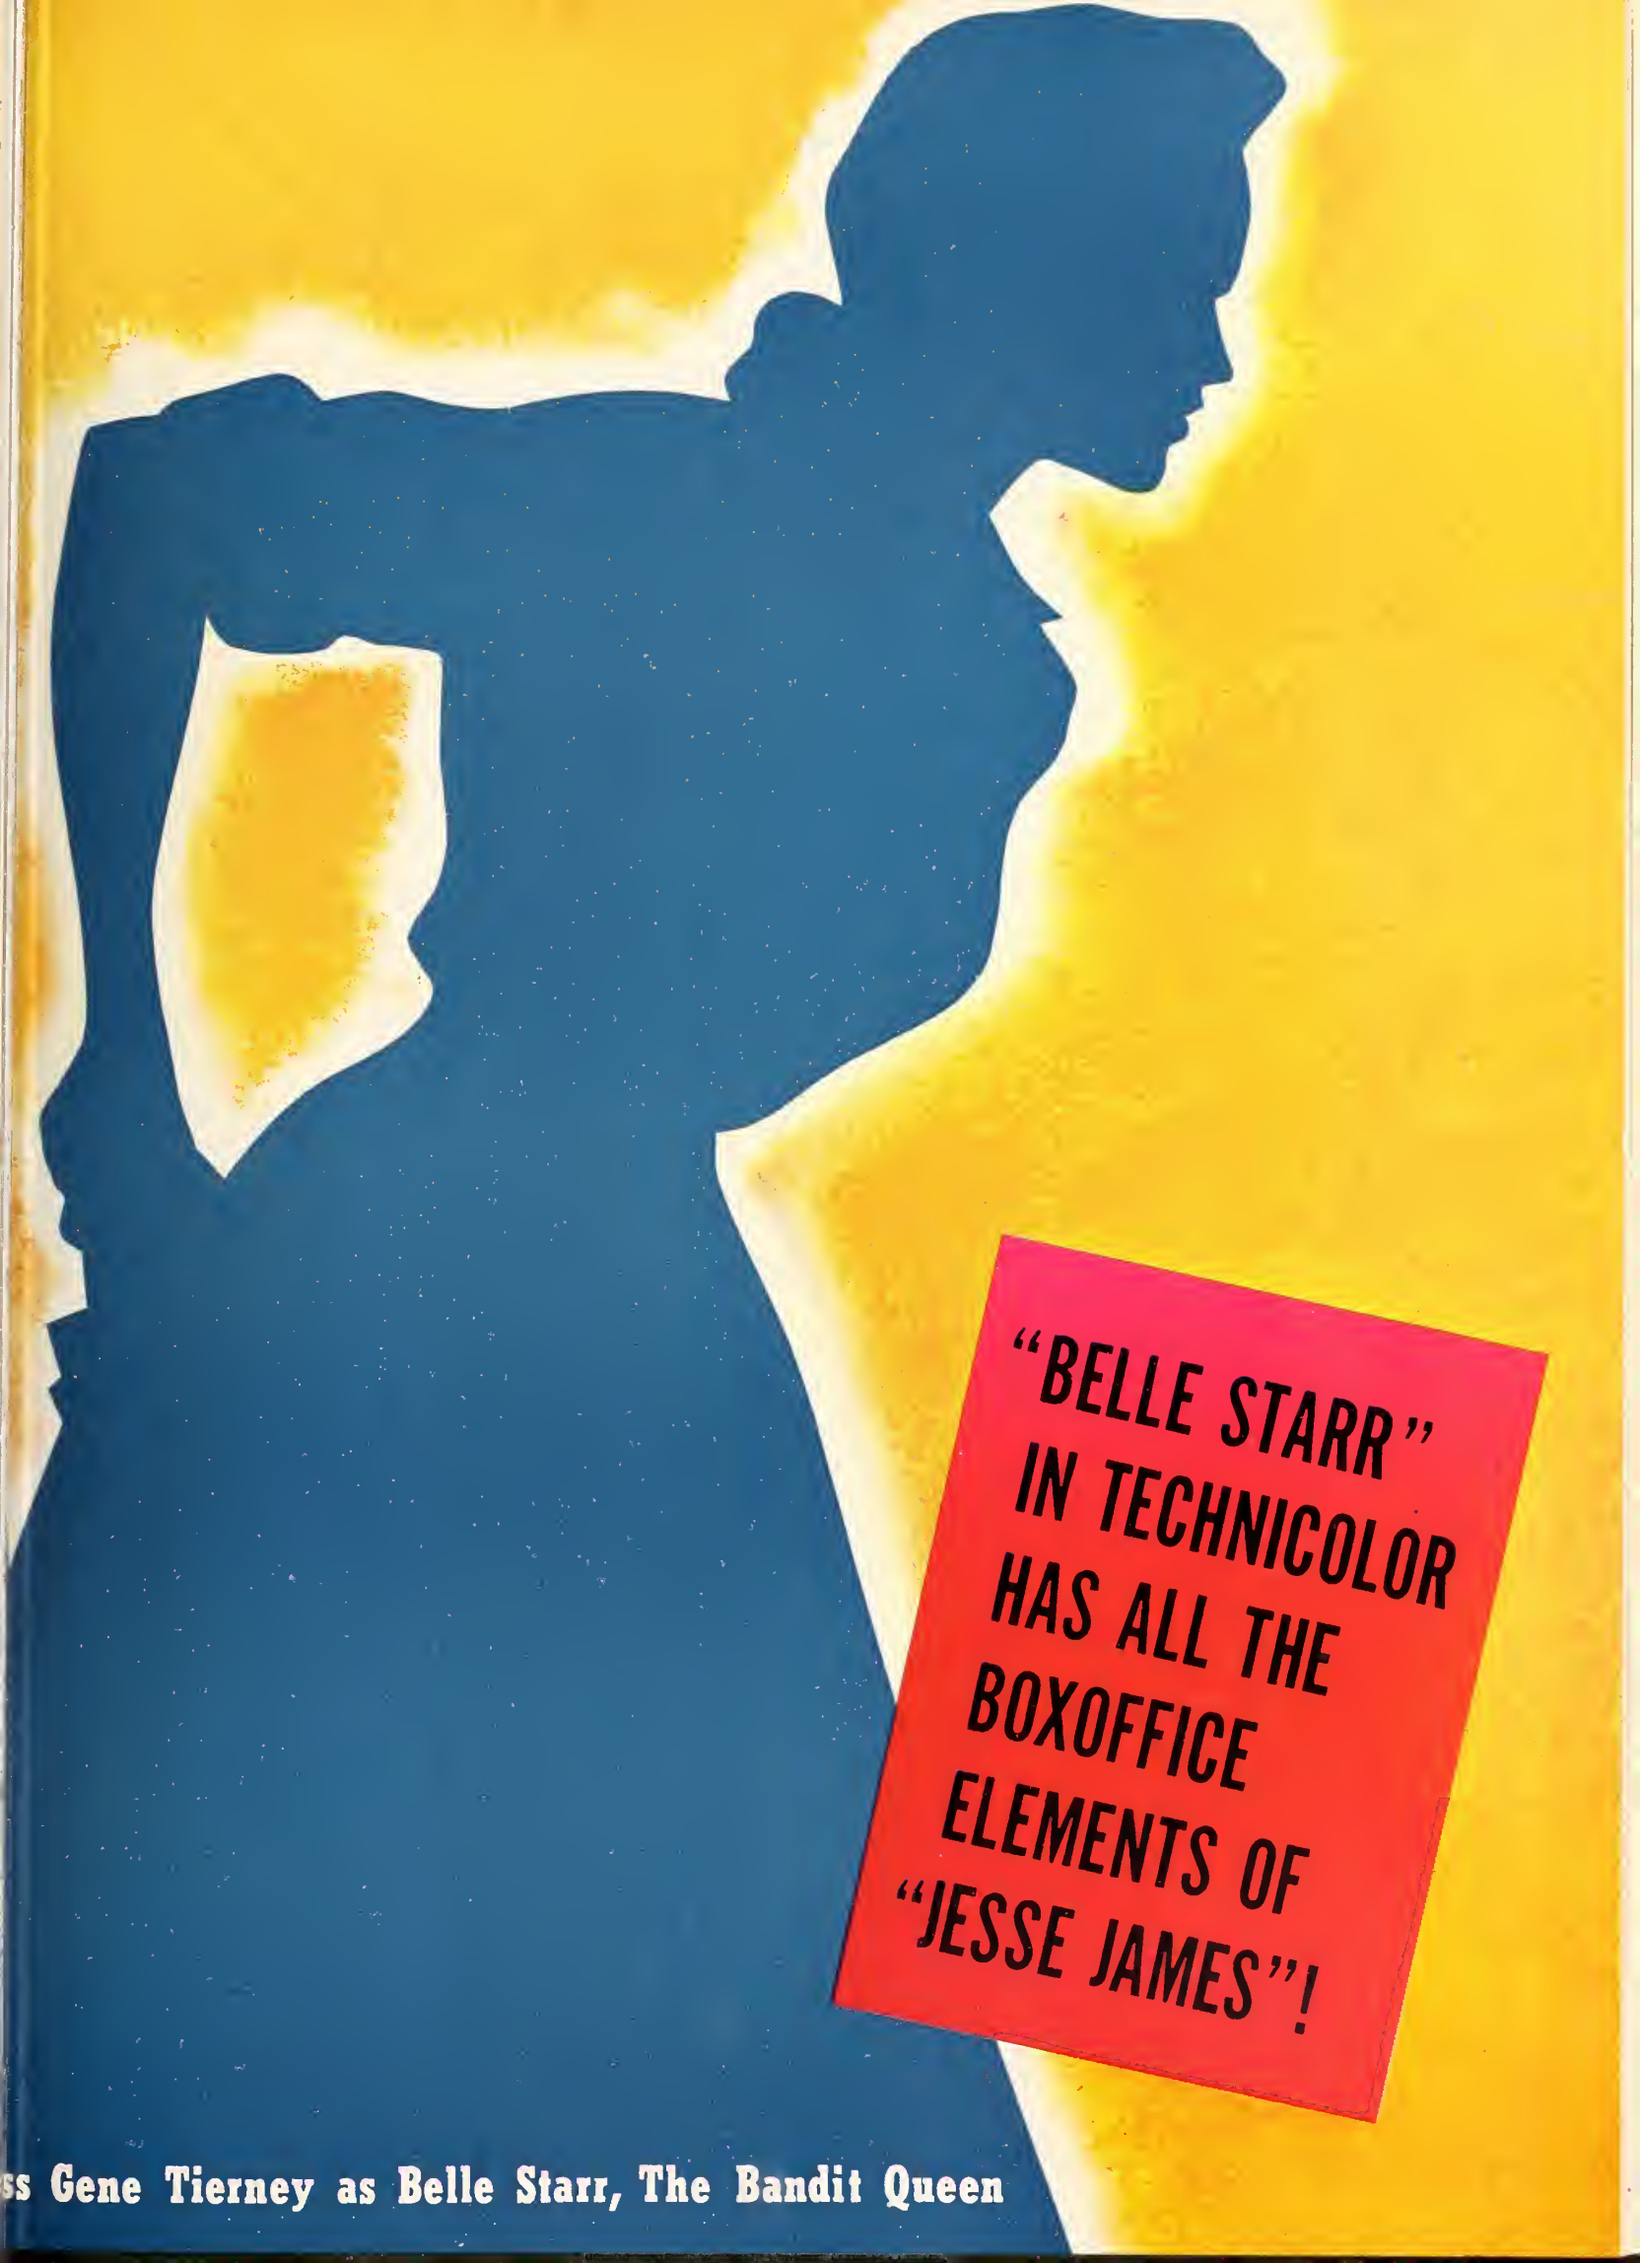
The Prime Minister

(Warner Brothers, 1941-1942)



Story of Disraeli

Warners, for a second time has explored and dramatized the rise of Benjamin Disraeli to power and fame in Victorian England. The first one, starring George Arliss and released in 1930 was made in Hollywood, this one was produced and edited at Teddington, England, during the height of the Nazi aerial bombardment on nearby London in 1940. The picture had its initial premiere in Ottawa, Canada, on Wednesday, August 13th, before an appreciative audience including some of the province's most distinguished officials and prominent citizens. At the finish of the film the audience rose to cheer in expression of its enthusiasm.

Painted on a broad canvas, the plot deals with Disraeli's attempts to lead the British nation through the turbulent stage of world-moving events which led up to the Berlin Conference in 1878. The whole panaroma of the ambitions, intrigues, jealousies, hatreds and prejudices of individuals and nations behind the scenes of European history of the '70's, is brought into realistic focus, sharply reminiscent of the treachery and double-dealing of our own times.

Disraeli, depicting him as a critic and novelist, before his meeting with Mrs. Wyndham Lewis inspires him to enter the political arena in the service of Queen Victoria. The picture then traces Disraeli's marriage to Mrs. Lewis, his struggle for power and recognition in the British House of Commons against the plots of his political opponents, and his part in waging England's battle as a world power. These scenes, transformed to the screen with stirring appeal, are based on historical facts, lead to the end of the film which shows Disraeli the aging, honored man of his hour, crowned Lord Beaconsfield by his Queen and beloved of the Empire for the "peace with honor" which he brought to England.

John Gielgud, English stage actor, gives a sterling performance in the role of Disraeli, equal in studied perfection and polish to that of George Arliss who played the part in the earlier Warner Brothers' production some ten years ago. Diana Wynyard, English actress remembered especially by American audiences in "Cavalcade" and more recently for her performances in Metro's "Rasputin" and "Reunion in Vienna", lends an appealing charm and grace to the character of young Mrs. Disraeli and gives an amazingly creditable portrayal of the aging wife of the Prime Minister. Frederick Leister does a fine job with the role of Lord Melbourne, Disraeli's political opponent.

Excellent taste in sets and costumes marks the production which was directed by Thorold Dickinson, and a superb supporting cast, featuring Fay Compton as Queen Victoria, Will Fyffe, Owen Nares, Irene Browne and Pamela Standish, adds much to the sum total of a fine film.

The Ottawa Citizen, reviewing the picture and reporting on the preview, said it was one of the "most important London-made productions to reach the screen in recent years, with everything that loyal Britishers could want in a cinema." The production, the review continued, is "something to be appreciated by cinemagoers who understand and value the fine things."

Flying Blind

(Paramount, 1940-41)

Melodrama Aloft and Aground

The aviation melodrama series produced by William H. Pine and William C. Thomas—off to a flying start with "Power Dive" and all but grounded with "Forced Landing"—rises herewith to a level of sustained suspense and melodramatic thrill achieved by no other film of equivalent budget in today's market.

At bottom a comedy concerning the operation of a plane service for Los Angeles couples bound for Las Vegas and matrimony, the production builds up a backlog of laughs against which is set flaming abruptly a battle in the air and on land between foreign agents, covetous of a National Defense device, and some Americans who, after plenty of fighting and a forest fire, outwit them the hard way. It's timely material and it carries conviction.

Direction is by Frank McDonald and a fast pace is maintained without sacrifice of coherence or plausibility.

Charlie Chan in Rio

(20th Century-Fox, 1941-42)

Charlie Chan Mystery

For entertainment and commercial purposes this latest episode in the career of Charlie Chan offers several combinations that should excite the interest of patrons and exhibitors who have found the series entertaining and profitable. First is the story, in which are combined melodrama, mystery, comedy and a thin but definite trace of romance, suspense and action.

And of second importance is the cast with Sidney Toler and Sen Yung as the father and son detectives, Mary Beth Hughes, Cobina Wright, Jr., Ted North, Victor Jory and Kay Linaker as the suspects in the double murder case, and Harold Huber as the Brazilian police chief.

This episode is done in the best tradition of the Sol. M. Wurtzel style, with a maximum entertainment value and a minimum of extraneous matter. "Charlie Chan in Rio" presents the famed character and his son in another case of tracking down a murderess in Rio and eventually exposing and bringing to justice her murderer. Of course, this picture like its predecessors follows the standard formula which has been used so successfully before. The comedy is handled by Sen Yung as the blundering and over-zealous son of the famous detective whose puppy romance at the end of the picture is disturbed by his call to duty under the Selective Service act.

Reviewed at the Twentieth Century-Fox projection room in New York.—George Spires.

John M. Stahl Entertains

John M. Stahl produces few pictures, takes his time about it, and you might get a clue to how he manages this happy state of affairs if you try to think back to a bad one. It'll take quite a stretch of thinking and maybe you'll find out he never made any of that kind.

In this venture producer-director Stahl turns his attention to sophisticated comedy and demonstrates that a success can be achieved in this field without resort to dirty dialogue, risque situations and Continental connotations. Hollywood has needed that demonstration for a long, long time.

Melvyn Douglas, identified with many a sophisticated comedy you wouldn't ask your maiden Aunt Minnie to endorse, has in this a role much like he's been playing of late years, but clean, and he gets as much or more out of it.

Opposite Mr. Douglas and competing for his affection are Ruth Hussey, Number Three personality in Motion Picture Herald's exhibitor poll designating the Stars of Tomorrow, and Ellen Drew.

Charles Coburn, in a less prominent casting, but given the best laugh lines in the script, contributes much to the merriment of the onlookers.

The story, detailed on page 157 of your Product Digest, concerns a husband in process of divorcement whose wife, for financial considerations, feigns partial paralysis as a means of gaining time and proximity in which to prevent the divorce from becoming final and the man from going on to marry a girl he's met and fallen in love with meanwhile. The situations are handled for humor and a lot of amusement results.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, to a mixed audience which responded with laughter in volume and consistency which left no room for doubt that a good time had been had by all.—W. R. W.

Produced and directed by John M. Stahl. Distributed by Columbia. Associate producer, Irving Starr. Photographed by Franz P. Planer. Edited by Gene Havlick. P.C.A. certificate No. 7410. Release date, August 28, 1941. Running time, when seen in Glendale, 95 minutes. General Audience classification.

40,000 Horsemen

(S. S. Krellberg, 1940-41)

Anzacs In Action

With the war in Egypt, Africa and Near East sharing newspaper headlines with the current conflict in Europe, and with the feats of the Australian-New Zealand Army Corps still fresh in the public's mind as a result of recent heroic campaigns, this Australian-made picture imported for exhibition into the United States by S. S. Krellberg acquires timely interest. It concerns the same Anzac army, but of another generation, and their offensive campaign in the Holy Land during the last World War. With this theme, an abundance of action, novelty and story, fascination of strange locale, romantic adventure, comedy, spectacle, heroism and sacrifice the picture lends itself admirably to exploitation possibilities for the showman who decides to promote these elements.

Spiced throughout with the earthy language of the professional soldier, including an occasional "hell" and a "damn" which American audiences seldom hear from the motion picture screen, the dialogue is as swift paced as the action.

Climaxed with thousands of Anzac cavalrymen galloping across the desert to capture their objective—a scene comparable to the memorable charge in "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" of 1935 vintage—the production can easily carry an indorsement assuring patrons of its entertainment value although slightly below Hollywood standards technically.

Reviewed on opening day at the Globe theatre on Broadway, New York, where an afternoon audience comprised for the most part of men, laughed loudly at the slangy dialogue but remained silent and attentive at the more serious parts of the film.—GEORGE SPIRES.

Produced in Australia and distributed in the United States by S. S. Krellberg. Produced and directed by Charles Chauvel. Running time, 87 minutes. Release date, August 14, 1941. Adult audience classification.

Cottage to Let

(Gainsborough - General Film Distributors)

Spy Drama

Two factors lift this spy melodrama out of the already crowded rut. It is based on a play which has already beaten the Blitz by scoring a West End hit; and it is up to date stuff, with Spitfire pilots, bomb sights, Fifth Columnists and evacuees playing their part. Anthony Asquith's direction will be for the discerning a draw, though on this occasion it manifests competence rather than genius. The cast is an all British one with no particular stellar value to focus fan attention.

The cottage in question does not play overmuch part in the drama, save that it is thither a pilot in RAF uniform is taken for hospital care, when he bales out. The pilot turns out to be a Nazi agent, and around his subtle and adventurous bid to solve the mysteries of a secret bomb sight, being perfected in the village, the melodrama is woven. There are spies and rival spies and their work provides a pretty counterpoint of mystery and attempted murder, kidnapings and would be escapes. A village garden party offers an amusing canvas against which to set much of the more grisly episodes, all of which come to a climax in the killing of three Nazis and the saving of the secret.

Leslie Banks as the absent minded inventor, Alistair Sim as the British agent, John Mills as a tough and cleverly disguised Nazi, Jeanne de Casalis as a species of ultra English screwball, all help the yarn by clever personal performances.

Technically the film is polished and competent.

Screened to a press audience in London the film was received without any acidulous comment but, for that matter, without any obvious excitement either.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Cinderella Comedy-Romance

New faces are not disdained by British audiences, even in times of stress and tribulation, and the new face introduced here, that of Barbara Mullen, daughter of Aran, who made a brief appearance in Flaherty's film, and who has earned some local fame on the London stage, will be doubly welcome. Miss Mullen is a "natural," utterly unspoiled, ingenuous and charming, a ready made star at a time when stars, ready made, tailored or otherwise, are needed. The film, first of a new company, Tansa Films, is made with polish and sensibility, and withal that it is a modernized Cinderella fairy tale, has the sparkle of Bourgogne Mousseux—and the kick.

The Cinderella role fits Miss Mullen's unornamented personality perfectly, and the glamor of pre-war Vienna adds romance to the setting. It is thither she, a Scot peasant's daughter, goes on a spendthrift excursion when her father dies and leaves her £297 [$1,485]. There she meets her fairy prince, a penurious gigolo Count. On him and his password to the cabarets and hotel lounges of the city, she spends it all, to find out when it is gone that he was just a gigolo.

There is an English inventor, disguised as Michael Redgrave, who keeps an eye on all this adventure and mishap, and who ferrets her out when she goes back to Scotland and drudgery and rescues her for romance.

It is all deliciously done, with no small credit due to director Harold French for the way he has handled Miss Mullen, in trouble with the Douane, lost in the hotel lounges, metamorphosed for a spell into a social butterfly, ever conscious of her father's moral homilies. That there is a constant ripple of laughter does not mean that there is not always sympathy for the Cinderella—Barbara sees to that. Michael Redgrave is a casual and stolid foil as the very English inventor, but he is dimmed rather beside a charmingly sly portrayal by Albert Lieven as the sort of Count for whom women cannot help falling. Kay Hammond, too, as a designingly sinuous gold-digging blonde—she "came to Vienna as a child dancer, but mother married a station master"—is grand fun too.

Marcel Hellman can be proud of this first Tansa production in which the writing of Anatole de Grunwald and the camerawork of Bernie Knowles add the Hollywood touch.

Slipped into a paying London audience for the benefit of the press, the film registered ripples of delight throughout and was given a climactic ovation by both sections.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Rawhide Rangers

(Universal Pictures, 1940-41)

Western

Ride 'em cowboy! Here is another western, action, romance film. The Texas Rangers are on the trail again of dangerous outlaws whose ring-leader inevitably turns out to be No. 1 leading citizen of the town. The plot is shopworn, but associate producer Will Cowan and director Ray Taylor managed to whip up the proper ingredients that make for a western chef d'oeuvre—traditional "chase" scenes through the desert and brush, and plenty of rootin', tootin' and shootin'.

Johnny Mack Brown plays the lead, that of Brand Calhoun, a Ranger who resigns his job, becomes an outlaw, joins the gang of desperados who are mulcting near-by ranchers and discovers the real gang chief. All of which activity earns him the hand of the heroine, played by Kathryn Adams, and a promotion to rank of Ranger Captain.

Chief responsibility for comedy relief falls on the capable shoulders of Fuzzy Knight.

"Rawhide Rangers" is the kind of western that the kids go for. It also should appeal to the millions of fans who follow the trail of the Johnny Mack Browns, Gene Autrys and other Devil's Gulch heroes.

Viewed at the New York Theatre where a large afternoon audience, predominantly male, enjoyed the picture very much.—J. E. SAMUELSON.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Sneak Leaks

Delegates to the Twentieth Century-Fox annual sales convention in Los Angeles five or six weeks back were shown substantial portions of the then unfinished production of "A Yank in the R.A.F." and filled the convention chamber with declarations in praise of the subject both as entertainment and as merchandise to sell their customers.

Came end of shooting, came editing, and then came the "sneak-preview" period of pruning, trimming and revising, that phase in the fashioning of a film during which it is shown to the audiences in attendance upon other pictures current at theatres in such adjacent towns as Pasadena, Huntington Park, Pomona, sometimes Santa Barbara, San Bernardino, places near and far in all directions, being returned to the cutting room after each "sneak" and clipped or augmented in accordance with the registered reaction of the theatregoers thus exposed without notice, therefore without prejudice, to the product.

Sneak-preview audiences convinced the studio that they liked "A Yank in the R.A.F." right down to the ground, except for one detail. They did not like to see the hero, Tyrone Power, killed off at the finish. So the studio called the star back from the East, where he'd gone to get in a spot of stage acting, and last week they finished shooting a new ending in which he does not die. There is plenty of evidence to indicate that this change will make the nation's audiences and, inferentially, the nation's exhibitors who sell it to them, happier. That adds up as gain in entertainment satisfaction and commercial revenue.

This "Yank in the R.A.F." incident is typical and illustrates the usefulness of the sneak-preview to the art-industry.

Under a system of cooperation subscribed to by all because of the manifest mutuality of the interests concerned, both trade and lay press reporters refrain from attending sneak-previews. By way of implementing this cooperation, most studios make it a practice to notify the press of the date and place of sneak-previews so that privacy of the audience-test may be assured and reporters may be spared the chore of checking daily on some 50 theatres in surrounding towns to find out whether any of them may have a preview scheduled.

But there are some leaks in the system. In her August 18th column, published locally in the Los Angeles Times, actress-columnist Hedda Hopper, servicing the Register and Tribune Syndicate, greets her readers in those cities which are her outlets with:

"Here's a nice hatful of sneak previews from Bob Carl of Pasadena . . ." going on to report Mr. Carl's opinion of "Unfinished Business," Universal, "Lydia," Korda, "Before the Fact," RKO-Radio, and "Aloma of the South Seas," Paramount.

Reader-critic Carl's advices to Miss Hopper's readers are, in part, that "Unfinished business" is not as good as "Penny Sereneda," that "Lydia" drew applause but probably will have its ending changed "because Merle (Oberon) plays a bad woman who goes unpunished"; that "Before the Fact" also has an ending "rather confusing and probably due for a change" and "Aloma of the South Seas" is "usual fare but Technicolor too obvious."

Miss Hopper does not personally violate the unwritten but generally respected and indirectly enforceable law against attending and reporting on sneak-previews.

Miss Hopper does not personally don disguise and invade the local tradeshowings, from which lay press representatives are barred under Consent Decree procedure, in violation of directly enforceable order.

Two of the four pictures reported upon to Miss Hopper by Reader Carl and thus by Miss Hopper to her readership are productions in process of technological preparation for marketing under Consent Decree provisions.

The difference between Miss Hopper's personally acquired and written observations with respect to the product and Reader Carl's might or might not be considerable.

The difference between Reader Carl's violation of the rules and Miss Hopper's escapes the eye.

LARAINE DAY ON HER WAY

Laraine Day, voted Number One Star of Tomorrow in all three divisions of MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S poll of exhibitors, is on her way to the top if the clearing of obstacles from her path and the establishment of audience-acceptance means anything.

Newspapers across the country were headlining the story of her election before the edition of the HERALD proclaiming the news had reached its ultimate subscriber.

By weekend, Hollywood correspondents who had witnessed the preview of "Dr. Kildare's Wedding Day" were notifying theatregoers of the nation that her contract-holders were freeing her from minor commitments by killing her in this film, hence out of the series.

This week Monday Miss Day reported for work in "Kathleen," the MGM production in which she will share top billing with Shirley Temple and Herbert Marshall.

Millions for Blocks

Pouring more and more millions of dollars into the making of blocks-of-five, companies signatory to the Consent Decree had the Hollywood production level back up to 53 again at weekend following a slight breather taken the week previously when the index dropped to 47, itself a precedential peak for any summer prior to this one.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Paramount were again tied in lead position with eight pictures shooting on each lot.

YOU CAN THROW THEM..OR BUILD WITH THEM!

Are you using your bricks to build your industry?

Are you, as an exhibitor, helping to strengthen motion pictures as the world's front-line entertainment medium?

Are you protecting the interests that are not only your own — but belong to all who have made motion pictures great?

Or are you jeopardizing the future of your industry and the future of all who are in it, for immediate advantages to yourself — for the kind of profits that in the long run will prove temporary for you and ruinous to the rest of the business?

Are you letting good pictures earn what they deserve?

If you are, then you are building your industry — building today for today and tomorrow.

To let good pictures earn what they deserve, the first step is your willingness to buy them at a fair price. Good merchandise cheaply bought is expensively paid for when your market, denied adequate return, becomes strangled for the capital needed to give your theatre strong box-office attractions next month as well as today.

You aren't in this industry for fun — and neither is the producer. Dollars — your dollars in equitable proportion to his — serve you both best.

Aggressive selling and merchandising of pictures to the movie-going public, prompt cooperation on the part of everyone to work toward a complete play-off of all pictures in all situations, are constructive stones in the edifice of a strong motion picture industry that will pay maximum dividends to all.

Let's get together. Let's all stop throwing bricks and then nobody will have to duck.

Let's use our bricks to build!

Variety Charter Given New Tent In Los Angeles

Philanthropic work in Los Angeles will receive fresh impetus, particularly in activities concerning underprivileged children, with the news that the city is to have its own Variety Club tent. John H. Harris, national Chief Barker of the Variety Clubs of America, announced last week that a charter had been granted by national officers for a new tent, the Variety Club of Southern California, with headquarters in Los Angeles. In mid-September the charter presentation will take place at an inaugural banquet at the Ambassador Hotel, at which the charter members, newly elected officers and prominent film industry leaders will be present.

Named to the first board of directors, or "crew" of the new tent were: Walter Wanger; Duke Clark, Paramount branch manager; Charles P. Skouras; Guy Gunderson, of U.A.; Jack Y. Berman, exhibitor; Hal Hanson, exhibitor; Wayne Ball, Columbia manager; Harry Humber, Bank of America; Dr. A. H. Giannini; Charles Buckley, Fox West Coast, and Robert Poole, PCCITO executive secretary. Officers are expected to be named within the next ten days.

Variety national officers who will attend the charter presentation dinner are: John H. Harris, Chief Barker; R. J. O'Donnell, of Dallas, Assistant Chief Barker; James Balmer, national Dough Guy; and "Chick" Lewis, national publicity director. In addition, visiting Barkers from other tents around the country whose business takes them to Los Angeles will be present.

Other Variety Activities

In Dallas, Chief Barker Paul Short called a "get-together" report meeting last week to determine how plans are progressing for the Mammoth Fun Festival and Carnival to be held by the Variety Club of Texas at Kidd Springs in Dallas on Labor Day. About 75,000 people are expected to jam the grounds to participate in the 101 events planned for the day.

Chief among the attractions will be the Gainesville Community Circus and the National Turtle Derby. Other "fun" events are 25 "free" acts, including ten nationally known name bands, fireworks, and the appearance of Senator "Happy" Chandler of Kentucky. Picnicking will be the order of the day with swimming, dancing and other divertisements provided for the crowd.

At the "report" luncheon held by Chief Barker Short, the following attended:

M. O. Rike, Interstate, and Francis Barr, Interstate Publicity Department; Walter Henshall, Chairman of Free Acts and Interstate manager; Al Wolf, Supplyman and Chairman Historical Committee. Arthur Moehr, Club Secretary-Manager; Harvey Hill, Representative I.A.T.S.E.; Dick Stout, Interstate Attorney and Chairman, Turtle Derby; Paul Short, Chief Barker; R. J. "Bob" O'Donnell, National Assistant Chief Barker; Tom Connors, Division Manager MGM; Leroy Bickel, Branch Manager, MGM; Charlie Kesnick, District Manager, MGM; Elmer Zrenner, Interstate Sound and Projection Technician, Chairman Lighting Committee; Charles Meeker, Interstate City Publicity Director and Chairman, Games and Concessions Committee; Ted DeBoer, Interstate Comptroller and Chairman of the Finance Committee, and Joe Estes, National Screen Service, Chairman of the Advertising and Publicity Committee.

On Cecil B. DeMille's 60th Birthday

Claudette Colbert is kissing, Ray Milland congratulating Cecil B. DeMille at a birthday celebration in the Paramount studio commissary. That's Mrs. DeMille at left. The producer was 60 August 12th.

Last Sunday, the Washington Variety Club presented an entire dental clinic to the Columbia Hospital in that city. Rudolph Berger, welfare chairman for the tent, announced the completion of the clinic last week. The tent also will present a modern dental chair to the Freedman's Hospital for Negroes in Washington.

Baltimore's Variety Club is preparing to move into new quarters atop the Stanley theatre building during the last week in August. Former clubrooms in the Belvedere Hotel will be discontinued. The new locale formerly was The Penthouse, an exclusive night club, and prior to that was known as Sherry's, while it was operated by Edwin Sherwood, now district manager for ASCAP. The club is completely renovating the quarters with new decorations, remodeling and an elaborate bar.

Approximately 500 exhibitors, distributors, affiliates and friends attended the second annual picnic of the Variety Club of Kansas City last week, at the Swope Park Golf Course. Ray Spour, of Exhibitors Film Delivery, won a radio given by Fox Midwest for his low of 74, with Wes Dunlap of Metro, runner-up, receiving a radio given by H. J. Griffith Theatres, Inc.

Pittsburgh's Variety Club held its annual charity picnic this Thursday at the West View Park. Entertainment included barker Brian McDonald heading a cast of winners on the Wilkens radio amateur hour and performers from local night clubs, in addition to the park's regular talent. Camp O'Connell, a tent project for underprivileged boys, will be chief beneficiary of the event. Proceeds from tickets sold at $3.00 per ticket will go to the camp.

Negro Film Acquired

Archie Mayers, general manager of World Pictures Corporation, has acquired the national distribution rights to "Mystery in Swing" for white houses. The picture embraces an all-negro cast starring Ceepee Johnson's orchestra, currently featured in RKO's Tom, Dick and Harry.

Sports Television Goes to Adam Hat

Adam Hat Stores, Inc., signed a contract last Tuesday with the National Broadcasting Company for exclusive television rights in connection with fights and other sports events. Terms of the contract were not disclosed but it is reported that the hat company will pay on the same basis it now pays for the regular broadcasting of fights over the network.

NBC also announced this week that televising of the first fights from Ebbets Field on July 22nd, under Adams' sponsorship, over WNBT, NBC's television transmitter, "produced the highest audience rating for a one hour show in the history of television." The bout was between Red Burman and Melio Bettina. Each week the broadcasting company sends out a return post-paid card to individual television set owners asking them to rate all programs from their viewpoint. The returns on the Burman-Bettina bout showed that the number of television sets turned on were among the highest yet recorded.

Tri-States Acquires Two

O. A. Johnson, owner of the Rivoli and Oil City theatres at Falls City, Neb., has sold both houses to Tri-States Theatres of Des Moines. Edward Forester will be manager. The two houses will be in Joseph Kinsky's Tri-State district.

Charlotte News Film

The Reelife Motion Picture Company (Indiana) color film about life in Charlotte, North Carolina, has been shown in that city's Imperial Theatre.

The Prime Minister took along his currently favorite movie which he already had seen four times, about Lord Nelson, Lady Hamilton and the battle of Trafalgar. (This probably is "That Hamilton Woman," currently popular American cinema.)

After seeing "That Hamilton Woman" again aboard the ship, Mr. Churchill explained to the men who saw it that he thought it would be of interest to them who had been under enemy fire so recently. (The Prince of Wales took part in the fight with the German battleship Bismarck.) The circumstances of the recent naval battle were just as historic as those of Trafalgar, he assured the men.

FOX NETS $861,278 IN 26 WEEKS, $485,605 RKO NET IN SAME PERIOD

20th-Fox Profit Excludes Heavy Write-off of $1,500,000 for Reserve for Foreign Assets; Eastman Nets $10,460,425

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, last Friday, reported a consolidated net profit, after Federal income tax, of $861,278 for the 26 weeks ended June 28, 1941, after providing a reserve for foreign assets of $1,500,000. This compares with a profit of $117,213 for the first 26 weeks of 1940, after a comparable reserve of $800,000.

For the second quarter ended June 28, 1941, the consolidated net profit, after all charges, including provision of $1,150,000 of reserve for foreign assets, was $457,189, compared with the first quarter profit of $404,089, after a reserve of $350,000, and a loss of $236,163 for the second quarter of 1940, also after providing a reserve of $700,000.

The Fox corporation is not liable for excess profits tax on the earnings for this period. Corporation's consolidated profit and loss statement for the 26 weeks ended June 28, 1941, including all wholly-owned subsidiaries (except Roxy Theatre, Inc.) follows:

Income:

RKO'S Net of $485,605 Up More Than 100%

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation and subsidiaries' report for 26 weeks ended July 5, 1941, subject to annual audit and year-end adjustments, shows net profit of $485,605 after depreciation, provision for federal income taxes at 30% rate, and subsidiary preferred dividend requirements, etc. Company has no liability for federal excess profits tax for the above period, according to the report.

The above net profit is equal after allowing for six months' dividend requirements on six per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock, on which there is an accumulation of unpaid dividends, to 4 cents a share on 2,753,053 shares of common stock.

In 26 weeks ended June 29, 1940, net profit was $220,819, equal to $1.72 a share on 128,170 shares of six per cent preferred stock.

For the 53 weeks ended July 5, 1941, company reports consolidated net loss of $723,405.

Income account for 26 weeks ended July 5, 1941, compares as follows:

	26 wks. end. July 5, '41	26 wks. end. June 29, '40
Profit	$1,419,315	$1,425,592
Depreciation	667,753	726,646

Subsidiaries pfd. divs.	52,500	146,387
Net profit	$485,605	$220,819

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, as of Saturday, August 15, extended until the close of business on September 15, 1941, its offer to purchase the outstanding minority interest in the common stock of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation at $5.00 per share. The offer was made during the early part of July and, as previously extended, expired at the close of business August 15. Some years ago the holders of the minority interest in the common stock of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation were entitled to exchange their stock, share for share, for the common capital stocks of the predecessor of the present RKO company, but such exchange is no longer available.

Eastman Six-Month Profit Is $10,460,425

Eastman Kodak Company this week reported net profit for the six months ended last June 14 of $10,460,425, after provision for taxes, which compares with net profit of $9,179,170 for the six months ended June 14, 1940.

Net income before provision for income taxes for the 1941 period was $20,252,899, compared with net before taxes of $12,092,274 for the same period in 1940.

The profit per share of common stock for the six months of this year is $4.15, compared with $3.63 per share in the six months of last year.

Net sales in the 1941 period were $73,525,058, and $57,015,524 in the 1940 six months, an increase of 29 per cent. Income from operations this year was $19,989,337, compared with $12,238,175 last year. Sales in the United States were $63,728,339, an increase of 33 per cent over the period last year.

Contracts for military equipment totaling approximately $44,000,000, have been given the company the earnings statement indicated. The operations of subsidiaries in the British Isles, Continental Europe, Africa and Asia are not reflected in the report. In general, these companies continue to operate on a satisfactory basis, it was said.

With earnings for the third quarter of its current fiscal year estimated in Wall St. circles to be in the neighborhood of $1,200,000, Universal appears to be headed for earnings in excess of $3,000,000 for the 39 weeks ended last July 27, it was estimated this week.

The estimated third quarter earnings exceed by more than $100,000 the earnings for the second quarter, which was described by the company as its best result for a single quarter in the past 10 years or more.

Universal reported earnings of $780,802 for the third quarter of 1940, and earnings of $2,161,804 for the first 39 weeks last year. All results are before provision for Federal taxes and special amortization reserve. The 39 weeks net last year after provision for those charges was $1,771,804.

Time, Inc., Profit Is $2,194,027

Time, Inc., this week reported net profit of $2,194,027 for the first six months of 1941, after estimated taxes. The result compares with net profit of $1,848,279 for the corresponding period last year.

Time, Inc., is the parent company for The March of Time and Fortune, Life and Time magazines.

ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT RECEIVES $25,486

Elliott Roosevelt, Captain in the American Navy, was the recent recipient of $25,486, his share of $63,715 distributed as a settlement to Class A stockholders of the Transcontinental Broadcasting System in Texas. This was disclosed in a report by the System's receivers, this week, to the Wilmington, Delaware, Court of Chancery.

National Decency Legion Classifies Eight Pictures

Of the eight motion pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week three were found unobjectionable for general patronage and five were approved for adults. The pictures and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Dive Bomber," "Rags to Riches" and "Tillie the Toiler." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "All That Money Can Buy," "Father Takes a Wife," "Lady Scarface," "Life Begins for Andy Hardy" and "Nothing But the Truth."

Scully Campaign Winners

Winners in Universal's Scully Anniversary Campaign are the offices under district manager Jules Lapidus, under Dave Miller, and, third, under H. D. Graham. New Orleans was the highest eastern office; Detroit, the highest western; St. John, the leading Canadian city. The drive began December 8th, ended May 10th.

HUNGARY ONLY 'INDEPENDENT' STILL COMPETING WITH HITLER CIRCUIT

American Films Second Only to Domestic Production; 80 U. S. Features Imported to May, '41; Currency Restrictions Liberal

by ENDRE HEVESI

in Budapest

The past year has been, generally speaking, a prosperous one for the motion picture trade. On the whole, distributors and theatres have been doing good business, distinctly better than in the previous year. Hungary is not at war; she is suffering less from wartime restrictions and privations than most other countries on the continent. Partial restitution of territories lost to her after the first World War has brought in increase in the number of theatres and theatregoers.

During the season, the most important place was held by locally-made productions, but next to them American pictures had the lead. They have maintained, perhaps even improved, their position in the favour of the public. So far, American product has been imported freely, subject only to certain currency restrictions. These restrictions, however, were liberally handled by the authorities who gave import permits and unfroze currency for the importation of 80 American features in the course of the past year. Of these, 54 were released during the ten months between August 1, 1940, to the end of May, 1941. Twenty-six American feature pictures are still held for release in the coming year.

"Rebecca" Best Import

Topping the list of American hits was "Rebecca," which achieved a 250,000 pengö ($50,000) turnover, a figure that has not been reached by any imported picture since "Snow White." To appreciate this, one should remember that the distributor's average turnover for an American picture in Hungary is usually about one-fifth of this amount, 50,000 pengös ($10,000), and that the biggest distributors' takings for any locally-made picture did not exceed 300,000 pengös.

Next to "Rebecca," "The Rains Came," "All This and Heaven Too," "Notre Dame," "Blue Bird," "You Can't Take It With You," "Babes in Arms," "Gulliver," "Real Glory," "Balalaika," were foremost among American successes.

Features imported from other countries lagged far behind the American contingent. The number of German imports was 32, lower than in any previous season in recent years. Outstanding German success was "Jud Suess," though not a big money-maker, since it was distributed at specially low prices.

French pictures, very popular with the audiences of de luxe theatres in Budapest, but of secondary importance in the provinces, dropped to 14. Of 6 imported Italian features, only "Alcazar," Spanish civil war picture, achieved any noteworthy success.

Increased Local Production

Hungarian production is increasingly prepared to replace imports. Local product has improved in quality. More money is now being spent on productions, warranted by increased number of theatres and better export prospects.

LONDON HOUSES HIT REFUSAL TO CUT TAX

Local exhibitors have protested sharply against the decision of the London County Council to make no concession on the Sunday opening tax on theatres. It was expected the exhibitor plea would result in a reduction of the 12½ per cent charity levy.

A committee of the council recommended that the request for reduction be denied. Exhibitors will meet within the next few days and may study the possibility of bringing a test case in court. Although this is a local matter, it is considered to have great importance, since community authorities throughout the country generally take London decisions as a precedent in such matters.

Thirty-seven locally produced features were released during the ten months of the August-to-May season. Among them, "Steve Dankó," romantic life story of a famous gypsy musician, was the biggest success and was exported to several countries. "Dankó" made 30,000 pengös, top figure for a Hungarian-speaking picture. However, several others of the season's releases, including "Yes or No," "Closed Trial," "The Ghost Walks," "Vision at the Lakeside" —all of them based on original Hungarian scripts—reached the 250,000 pengö mark. Average takings for the distributors of a locally-made Magyar picture now amount to 170,000 to 180,000 pengös ($34,000 to $36,000).

With return of lost territories to Hungary the number of cinemas, only 480 two years, will be somewhere between 600 and 700 next Fall. The majority are small-town cinemas playing only two nights a week. Added to their demand is the fast-developing export market.

50 Features Scheduled

With the outlook thus improved, local production is on the upgrade. Instead of the past average production figure of 35 to 40 features annually, 50 are scheduled for shooting in the coming year. Production costs have risen accordingly: they now average 140,000 pengös ($28,000) per feature, but some cost as much as 180,000 pengös. Total cost of 38 features produced in Hungary during the past year was something over four and a half million pengös. Of the amount, 1,091,000 pengös were spent on raw materials and laboratory expenses, and 972,000 on actors salaries. Studio expenses amounted to 720,000, directors' and producing staff's salaries to 260,000, authors' rights to 245,000, musical rights, bands, etc., cost 93,000 pengös. (The exchange is five pengös to the dollar). Hungarian production enjoys government support and facilities in the way of credit, etc., although practically no actual cash subsidy.

Principal difficulty that Hungarian film production has to cope with is scarcity of stars of the first magnitude. The same performers appear again and again in almost every feature, and since nearly all of them are also constantly seen on the stage, the public would welcome a change. Star salaries weigh heavily on the production budget. In many cases a single star's salary amounts to eight per cent of the total production costs.

Local film production also has outgrown available studio space. Enlarged premises of Hunnia Company, now including three studios, and of Filmiroda, with one studio, hardly suffice for shooting the 50 Hungarian features planned for the coming year. In addition, German producers have contracted for studio space and laboratory work in Hungary. Germans now propose to produce a number of pictures abroad, where production costs are lower, financing is made favourable by liquidation of frozen assets, labour conditions more propitious than in Germany, and technical personnel more easily available. Six or seven, perhaps more, important German feature pictures are to be shot in Hungary during the coming year.

For the past two and a half years, anti-Jewish legislation has endeavoured to exclude Jews from the motion picture business both at the producing and the distributing end. It was only by means of a recently-issued Government order, however, that Jewish influence has been totally wiped out. Under the present legislation, Jews cannot own or lease theatres, either openly or as disguised partners, nor exercise any influence on distributing companies, nor be producers, directors, production managers or be employed in any leading or responsible capacity whatsoever in motion picture production. These measures have now been carried through almost completely.

Optimistic Over Future

Exhibitors hope they will be permitted to raise admission prices shortly, in accordance with a rise in the general cost of living. They also expect that recently introduced restrictions of the purchase of certain foodstuffs, textiles, shoes, soap, fuel, etc., will leave the public with more money to spend at the box office. Experience shows that in all countries where such necessities are rationed, people are glad to spend their cash on such pleasures as are still available. Picturegoing is in the first place. In Hungary, where there are no blackouts and curfew is late, this should apply to an even greater extent than in countries actually at war.

Whether any further import permits for American pictures will be granted in the future, and whether there will be any practical possibility of importing them, depends, of course, on the development of the political, economical and transport situation. The only restriction placed on imports so far is the recently-declared ban on British pictures, following the breaking-off of diplomatic relations between Great Britain and this country.

Distributors and exhibitors have provided for at least the first half of the coming season's program by holding over 26 American features from the contingent granted for the current year. They have the assurance of the authorities that nothing will impede the presentation of these pictures which have already been passed by the censors. Should further import of American pictures become impossible it will be a blow chiefly to audiences in fifty or sixty de luxe, first-run and second-run theatres in Budapest and a few big cities. The public of neighbourhood and provincial theatres, not understanding English, prefers the Hungarian-speaking local product.

Never has it been more difficult to prognosticate the trend of conditions, but taking all in all, the view taken by the motion picture trade in Hungary is distinctly optimistic, at least as far as the first half of the coming season is concerned.

Selznick's UA Talks Continue

David O. Selznick's entrance into United Artists as a partner-producer, this week was still delayed by continuing conferences between principals and lawyers. Meanwhile, the deal whereby Frank Capra was also to become a UA partner-producer, appears to be cold, the independent picture maker remarking last week in Hollywood that he couldn't "afford to deal forever."

Mr. Capra added he ended his talks with UA because stockholders of that company delayed considering the deal and that he had withdrawn his participation in the Selznick deal, asking the latter not to include him in further talks.

Mr. Capra said he had bought "at considerable expense," three stories which were to be his three first pictures for UA.

"Arsenic and Old Lace" will be Mr. Capra's next picture—for Warners.

N. L. Nathanson, of Canada, was again mentioned along Broadway, this week as considering participating in United Artists.

In Hollywood, Monday, J. J. Milstein, resigned as Eastern representative for Edward Small Productions, and was succeeded by L. Jack Schlaifer, former vice-president in charge of Western sales, for United Artists. Mr. Milstein, in New York, is still Eastern representative for David Loew and Albert Lewin, producers.

Personnel Shifted In Rockefeller Unit

Nelson A. Rockefeller, Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, announced last Saturday in New York the following staff changes in the Press Section of the Coordinator's Office:

Francis A. Jamieson, formerly with the Associated Press, was named chairman of the Press Section which is concerned with news work in the other American Republics. Mr. Jamieson also will continue in the post of Director of the Division of Information.

Harry W. Frantz, on leave of absence from the United Press, was named director of the Press Section. Mr. Frantz, Washington Foreign editor for the UP, has had 21 years' experience in the foreign news field. For the past 19 years he specialized in coverage, writing and editing news dealing with Latin America.

Duncan Aikman, on leave of absence from the newspaper PM, was named special adviser in the Press Section. Mr. Aikman served as South American correspondent for the New York Post and PM, and is the author of "The All-American Front," one of his most recent books.

Karl Bickel, former president of the United Press, resigned as chairman of the Press Section but will remain as special adviser to the Coordinator. Nelson Poynter, editor and part owner of the St. Petersburg, Florida, Times, associated with Mr. Bickel in the Press Section, also resigned. It has been rumored that Mr. Poynter will take over top post in the press section of Col. William Donovan's recently organized military intelligence division in Washington.

Cincinnati Deal Cancelled

Although Howard Hummell, salesman for Midwest Theatre Supply Co., Cincinnati, announced that he had taken over the 1,200-seat Strand, in downtown Cincinnati, now in receivership, for remodeling and reopening, it has subsequently developed that he will not acquire the house.

Postpone Browne-Bioff Trial to September 2nd

The trial of William Bioff and George H. Browne, officials of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, has been postponed by Judge Francis G. Caffey of the New York Federal Court until September 2nd. The postponement was necessitated due to the elusiveness of Nick Circella, alias Nick Dean, who is wanted as a government witness.

The two defendants, free on bonds of $50,000 each, face charges of extorting $550,000 from major motion picture companies, many of whose employes are members of the American Federation of Labor affiliate of which Browne is president and Bioff is West Coast representative.

Circella is a resident of Chicago. He is said to have an interest in a night club there and to have been on Browne's payroll between 1935 and last year. Browne, at the annual convention of the union in Louisville, Ky., last year, defended the employment of both Bioff and Circella, although both had police records, on the ground that they were "good union men."

New Jersey Allied Outing Planned

The Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey on Thursday, August 21st, was to hold its annual outing at the Monmouth Golf and Country Club in Eatontown, N. J. Golf, swimming and other activities were on the program, with a special business meeting scheduled to start at 2 P. M.

MPTO Day Successful

About 150 film men and their friends from New York, Boston and all points of Connecticut joined for the sixth annual golf tournament sponsored in New Haven, Conn., by the Connecticut Motion Picture Theatre Owners on Tuesday, August 19th at the Race Brook Country Club. Over 75 prizes were awarded to golfers and non-golfers, including silver, golf clothing and accessories, leather goods and glassware. A full day of activities closed with a dinner at the clubhouse, entertainment and the award of prizes. Herman M. Levy, executive secretary of the organization, was in charge of the affair, assisted by a committee of exchange and theatre men.

Second Goldwyn Set

Samuel Goldwyn's second production for release through RKO Radio Pictures this season will be "Ball of Fire" starring Gary Cooper and Barbara Stanwyck under the direction of Howard Hawks. Mr. Goldwyn's initial RKO Radio release is Bette Davis in "The Little Foxes," scheduled for September showings.

Republic Serial Booked

Republic's 15-chapter serial, "Jungle Girl," has been booked into the entire Loew's metropolitan circuit in New York City. The serial stars Frances Gifford, the first female "cliff-hanger" lead since the days of Pearl White and Helen Holmes.

Rogers an Independent

Charles R. Rogers, producer who recently severed his contract with Columbia Pictures, went over to the RKO Pathe studio in Culver City last week where he will continue his plans as an independent producer.

Polio Epidemic Hits Pa. Houses

Exhibitors in eastern Pennsylvania are concerned over the spread of an infantile paralysis epidemic. In York, a strict quarantine was ordered last week, barring all persons under 21 from public places and conveyances. The order is effective until September 15th and at the rate in which new cases is rising, authorities say the quarantine will undoubtedly be extended. The quarantine specifically bars persons under 21 from motion picture houses.

Similar restrictions were ordered at the same time in Red Lion, the ban to expire on September 1st, unless extended. And there is a strong likelihood, in view of the number of cases reported, that a quarantine will be ordered this week in Lancaster.

A check by the State department of health showed that cases have been reported in 21 of Pennsylvania's 67 counties, practically all in eastern Pennsylvania.

Dr. J. Moore Campbell, director of the State health conservation bureau, added that the outbreak would probably start to decline late in October and possibly disappear by January.

In Philadelphia, five new cases were reported last week. Last week, York had 50 cases reported and the death toll had reached four.

Abrams Appointed Receiver

Common Pleas Judge Joseph H. Woeste, in Cincinnati, has appointed Harry A. Abrams receiver for the Delta Realty Company, owners of the Strand Theatre Building, which includes the Strand theatre in addition to offices. Dissolution of the company is sought in a suit filed by Leonora Hart, 233 Broadway, New York, owner of 500 shares of common stock of the company, of which she is vice-president and treasurer.

Electric Rates Cut

Cincinnati exhibitors envision sizable savings in their utility bills through a 15 per cent reduction in the city electric light rate, effective as of September 1st, under an ordinance just passed by the city council, which applies to small shopkeepers, educational and charitable institutions, large industrial plants and "business houses." Although not mentioned by name, theatres are presumed to be included in the last mentioned classifications.

Newington Theatre To Open

The 700-seat Newington theatre in Newington, Conn., was opened for business Saturday, August 16th. Operators are Robert Schwartz of Thomaston and William Sirica of Waterbury. Modern Theatre Equipment installed seats, carpets, projection and sound equipment. National Theatre Supply did the wall decoration and hung hand-painted fluorescent murals.

Harman Feature Planned

Hugh Harman has left Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer where he produced cartoon subjects with Rudolph Ising and has formed a new company, Harman Productions, Inc. A feature length cartoon in color is being prepared and Mr. Harman is reported to be negotiating with two companies for distribution.

DISNEY LABOR TROUBLE LEADS TO A SHUTDOWN

Cartoonists' Guild Protests Plan to Reduce Personnel; Actors Approve Modification Plans

On Monday, the Walt Disney Studio in Hollywood closed "for two weeks" because of more labor trouble.

The closing temporarily ended the "active stage" of the dispute between the studio and the Screen Cartoonists Guild, members of which had returned to work several weeks ago after a strike of almost two months.

What the Guild can do now was this week a matter of keen speculation.

What the studio will do was also speculated, inasmuch as Gunther Lessing, its vice-president and general counsel, said the company had lost much revenue from lessened foreign markets, that the production personnel would have to be reduced, and that no new productions would be undertaken without new financing.

Mr. Disney, meanwhile, is in South America, with a special staff, considering the practicability of making short subjects with Latin-American themes and locales.

Reduction Protested

The renewed dispute which closed the Disney studio Monday was over reduction of personnel, which the company declared necessary and asserted the union recognized as necessary; and which the union protested because of the ratio of strikers to non-strikers.

The company, in a statement Friday, August 15th, pointed out that the strike settlement left layoffs of workers to be arbitrated by the United States Conciliation Board; that the employees were chosen for layoffs on bases of seniority and merit; that the union committee refused to approve the list; that the company thereupon requested John R. Steelman, Conciliation Board head, to submit the matter to Federal arbitration.

On Wednesday, August 14th, the union wired Mr. Steelman, complaining against the reduction of Disney workers. Mr. Steelman thereupon asked consent of both the company and the union to an immediate layoff, with the provision the union might object to layoffs, in any individual cases, to James F. Dewey, suggested arbitrator.

In the Steelman proposal, if Mr. Dewey supported the union's objection, a laid-off employee would be reinstated, with full pay from the date of discharge.

The company accepted. The union refused, with the warning "necessary steps will be taken to protect" its interests.

Mr. Lessing asserted, Friday, August 15th: "In view of this situation, we have no other alternative than to close our plant until such time as the Federal Arbitrator passes upon the personnel to be laid off, pursuant to the (strike) award."

The Disney shutdown deprived about 1,000 of work. The personnel reduction would have eliminated 266 employees.

Actors Guild Approves Pact

Ninety-three per cent of the membership of the Screen Actors Guild last week, in Hollywood, ratified the 1941 Modification Agreement, providing increases of pay, mostly to extras, of $300,000 per year. The $8.25 basic daily wage to extras is increased to $10.50. The $5.50 call is virtually eliminated.

Negotiating with producers, without aid from international officers of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, the Hollywood Laboratory Technicians Local 683 this week won a new contract, to be signed shortly.

The contract provides a wage boost of approximately 12 per cent, and a work week of from 36 to 40 hours, in various classifications.

The negotiations were notable for absence of an IATSE officer. It is the first time an IATSE union has negotiated an agreement without help from the parent union.

Meanwhile, the business agents of the other nine IATSE Hollywood unions met there Tuesday to discuss pushing negotiations on wage scales and working conditions.

Organize Small Stations

The annual convention of the American Federation of Radio Artists having occurred, and concluded, in Detroit last week, New York observers foresaw this week, a drive to unionize small radio stations, as a concomitant of thorough unionization of radio performers.

It was noted that radio workers in about 40 cities have requested charters, which had not been issued up to now because of the lack of field workers. The union decided, at the convention, to send a field representative shortly to organize the groups asking charters.

Reelected at the convention last week were Lawrence Tibbett, president; Mrs. Emily Holt, national executive secretary. Other officers named were Virginia Payne, first vice-president; William Adams, Jean Hersholt, Ken Carpenter, and Ben Grauer, vice-presidents; Alex McKee, recording secretary; and George Heller, treasurer.

The union will hold its 1942 convention in Hollywood.

The strike of drivers and mechanics of the Exhibitors Service Company, deliverers of film to theatres, was ended by granting of pay increases of five cents per hour, and of a week's vacation with pay, George Callahan, president of the company, disclosed last week at Pittsburgh.

The strike had stopped, for more than a week, deliveries of film to more than 350 theatres.

New Scranton Officers

The projectionists' Local, 329, of Scranton, has elected the following officers: Percy Carr, president; William Wolft, vice-president; Vincent Brozill, secretary; Joseph Namitha, financial secretary; Clayton Leas, treasurer; Sam Kessler, business representative; Chris Armstrong, Glenn Ornstein and Edward Miles, trustees; Angelo Greco, Ralph Longs, William Warner, Vincent Constanzi and Joseph Dubish, executive board members.

SPG Contract Talks

In New York, the Screen Publicists Guild, victor in a National Labor Relations Board election to determine the bargaining agency for advertising and publicity workers in the majors' New York home office, on Thursday was to meet again with representatives of those majors, on a closed shop contract, which is embodying demands long sought by the union, including sharp and automatic pay boosts. On Wednesday, Warner counsel said they would not meet with the union, on an "all-majors'" basis. Guild officials understood Werners desired separate negotiations.

Harry Tozier Retires

Harry H. Tozier, assistant general manager of Canadian Kodak, Co., Ltd., has retired after 41 years with Eastman.

Equity Enters Television Tilt

"In any television performance in which an Equity member appears, all members of the company must be members of Equity in good standing. Only the council can give permission to waive this requirement." With this order to members by Actors Equity on the eve of a discussion of television jurisdiction at the American Federation of Radio Artists annual convention in Detroit, the contest for jurisdiction took a new turn.

The convention, which adjourned last week-end, received Equity's television jurisdictional move incredulously and with hostility. Consensus of convention opinion was that the Screen Actors Guild has more favorable opportunity for jurisdiction inasmuch as the latter controls synchronized films, while AFRA's jurisdiction over the non-synchronized field gives it an opening as well. Allen Reed, of New York, was appointed chairman of a special AFRA committee to study the television situation.

Meanwhile, there is no early agreement anticipated between the American Federation of Musicians and television stations unless on a temporary basis. AFM officials are wary of any permanent contract with the television interests until the medium is further developed. The reason is the experience of 15 years ago when the advent of talking pictures is said to have taken the jobs of 15,000 pit musicians. Union leaders are approaching discussions with television operators with one principal idea—that of increasing employment of musicians.

Army Shows First Of Hollywood's Training Films

The press preview of the first of the United States Army's training films made in Hollywood by its Signal Corps and the industry's Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, was held Thursday evening, in the auditorium of the Archives Building, Washington, under the sponsorship of the Bureau of Public Relations of the War Department.

Invitations sent the press this week by Brigadier General A. D. Surles, of the Bureau, say some parts of the films must be regarded "off the record."

One hundred reels have been made during the past year by the Signal Corps and The Council, with the help of the studios. The films shown were representative. Although many are in use, in army centers, none had been exhibited, up to Thursday's exhibition, for public comment.

Producers Attend

The films were made under the supervision of Major General J. O. Mauborgne, chief Signal Officer; Lieutenant Colonel H. T. Perrin, of the General Staff; and Lieutenant Colonel Richard Schlossberg, head of the Signal Corps photographic division.

Scheduled to be present at the preview, among others, was Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production at Twentieth Century Fox, and head of the film industry's participation in the training film program, as chairman of the Research Council, who was to be called for active duty, by the War Department, for conferences to follow the showing.

He was accompanied to Washington by Major John Aalberg, and Captain Gordon Mitchell, both of the Signal Corps Reserve.

Academy Making Hygiene Film

Under the category of defense films, a film on sex hygiene will be made by the Research Council of the Academy for the U. S. Public Health Service. It is to be shown to defense workers.

"Know for Sure" is the title of the film, to be made at the Twentieth Century-Fox studio, from a script by John Sutherland, with direction by Lewis Milestone.

Three one-reel national defense motion pictures, "Bombers for Victory," "Women in Defense" and "Homes for Defense," are being completed for theatrical release by the Office of Emergency Management, Division of Information. Photography for "Bombers for Victory" has been completed and Carl Sandburg, American poet and Pulitzer prize-winner has written the commentary for this subject.

This film will pictorialize the mission and making of a leading American bomber which is being used by the Army Air Corps. Mr. Sandburg has been consulting with both national defense officials and staff officers of the Army for background material for the narration.

Photography on "Women In Defense" and "Homes for Defense" will be completed within three weeks. Both subjects are being made in answer to increased demands for pictorial material on women's activities and on the progress of defense housing efforts. The film on women's activities will include work of women in the defense industries, activities in voluntary services, Red Cross, and scenes of women scientists.

"Homes for Defense" will indicate the wide frontal attack on the problem of shelter for defense workers and enlisted personnel.

After these films have made their commercial run they will be made available for distribution to 16mm. outlets.

Two films were being scored this week, in New York, by the United States Marine Corps Photographic Section, which is normally based at Quantico, Virginia. The films are: "From Ships of the Air," and "Candidates' Class." The first is about parachuting, in the corps; the latter is about enlistment of young college graduates, by the corps, for studying in preparation for reserve officers' commissions.

The Quantico staff is reported writing scripts on seven trailers, and a new two-reel subject, all for publicity and recruiting.

The first army training film to be made at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, base of the Signal Corps, by selectees, has been completed. It was made in that area, and is titled, "Point Control of Traffic, and Duties of a Military Policeman."

Shows for Army

"Let's Go, Hollywood," group of studio professionals banded to send troupes to army camps, was reported this week ready to function. Phillip Sudano is manager of production, and other participants are Jack Houston, Jimmie Muellett.

The American Red Cross has bought 35 sound film projection units for 65 theatres in the group's buildings in 63 army centers in the United States, one in Alaska, another in Puerto Rico.

The Radio Corporation of America will supply the equipment.

The theatres will seat 145 to 500. Attendance limited to convalescent soldiers, will be free.

In Hollywood, the plans of Gene Towne, whereby he would produce radio network shows for men in army camps, with talent donated by the studios, are still being discussed, both by studios and radio officials, and by officials of the Government, to whom it was submitted.

362 New Theatre Projects in '41

According to Dodge Reports a total of 362 theatre buildings and major remodeling projects with a permit valuation of $11,162,000 was underway in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains in the first six months of 1941.

Although the number of projects reported is less than the first half of 1940, more money is being spent by comparison this year, the service announced.

During the first six months of last year 412 projects of new and remodeled theatres were reported at a cost of $11,071,000. This included 1,364,000 square feet of floor space, as compared with 1,594,000 square feet of floor space involved in the 362 projects up to July 1st, this year.

In June, theatre building projects were authorized for a total expenditure of $1,966,000. In the same month last year the authorized projects were valued at $1,535,000.

In the first six months of 1939, a total of 502 projects, at a cost of $11,638,000 was reported.

Defense industries and selective service contributed a good deal to this year's theatre building and renovating developments according to the report. In addition to a number of theatres going up in towns near Army camps, increased payrolls at plants handling defense work warranted alterations at theatres nearby, it was said.

MAJORS NO LONGER JUST 'ANGELS IN THE WINGS' FOR BROADWAY PLAYS

Film Companies Backing Stage Productions Participate in All Casting, Advertising, Other Plans; 14 Purchased in '40-'41

The lush era when motion picture companies were merely "angels" for Broadway producers is over, according to Sidney Phillips, one of MGM's play scouts, who said: "There is only one way for a film company to book a play and that is to have a definite say in selection of script, casting, booking of theatre and other production plans. The days when a film firm was a 'backstage' investor are over." Mr. Phillips cited Metro's experience as a backer last year of the hit show, "Mr. and Mrs. North," as a distinct departure from the "angel" method which characterized its financing of the Sam Harris-Max Gordon productions of "Jubilee," "Pride and Prejudice," "Ethan Frome," "First Lady" and others.

"Motion picture companies like Metro," he said, "have their own units for buying paper, printing, equipment and therefore can control production waste for which the theatre is notorious. They have their own exploitation and advertising departments which are far superior to those of the average Broadway producer."

"Moreover," Mr. Phillips declared, "there are enough men in motion pictures today, men like John Byram, Bertram Block and Jake Wilk, who know valid theatre qualities and who can contribute a great deal to the production of a play. The average Broadway manager can't begin to compare in knowledge and taste with these men."

Three Companies Spent $1,873,000

Metro, Paramount and Warner Brothers were the three Hollywood film firms which backed major Broadway productions last season and are planning to finance plays for the 1941-42 season. In addition, all three companies spent considerable sums in purchasing screen rights of hit shows of last year, with Warners' leading with $536,000; Paramount, $473,000; Columbia, $324,000; Twentieth Century-Fox, $280,000, and Metro, $260,000. (See listing.)

Mr. Phillips reported that following Metro's backing of "Mr. and Mrs. North" last season, in which MGM plunged $20,000 as the sole backer and for which it paid $30,000 for screen rights, the company will finance production of "The Wookey," by Frederick Hazlett Brennan, for early autumn opening. The play, in its fourth week of rehearsal, is a story of London during the bombing-blitzkreig days, and will be produced by Edgar Selwyn for Metro. Edmund Gwenn, stage and screen actor, will play the lead. Metro guaranteed $30,000 against royalties to the author, probably the first time such a deal has ever been made.

Last year Paramount had a third interest in "Lady in the Dark," which it subsequently purchased for $285,000 for screening. John Byram, Paramount's play scout, reported that the Gertrude Lawrence show is scheduled for a return engagement in September, which probably will be followed by an extensive road tour. Paramount also had a fourth interest in "The Night Before Christmas," which ran for three weeks and was purchased by Warner Brothers for $30,000. Mr. Byram said Paramount had no plans thus far to finance a Broadway production for the 1941-42 season, but if a good script comes along it will definitely be considered for backing.

Warners, however, plan to bring Eddie Cantor back to Broadway in "Banjo Eyes," a musical version of the George Abbott hit, "Three Men on a Horse," which the company purchased and screened a few years ago. This will mark Mr. Cantor's first appearance in a stage play since 1928, when he starred in "Whoopee." Al Lewis will be co-producer with Mr. Cantor for Warners. The play is scheduled for a November opening at Warners' Hollywood Theatre. Last year, the company invested in "My Fair Ladies," which ran for a brief time on Broadway.

RKO hasn't financed a play for "many years," according to Leda Bauer, play scout. "The company would be very glad to back a play if the right script came along," Miss Bauer said, "but our feeling is a little different from that of other companies. We would only finance a play if it fitted the needs of our stars. If we couldn't cast it later for Ginger Rogers, Cary Grant or some other star, we wouldn't back it." RKO hasn't purchased screen rights of a stage play since 1939, when it bought "Too Many Girls" and "Two on An Island."

Columbia and Twentieth Century-Fox have made no announcements of financing plays for the autumn season.

Purchase of screen rights for all plays, except those which do not run on Broadway for three weeks or unproduced scripts, is controlled by the Motion Picture Negotiator, provided in the minimum basic agreement between the Dramatists' Guild and the Theatre Producing Managers. The Negotiator is Sidney R. Fleisher, attorney, who succeeded the late Joseph P. Bickerton, the first arbiter appointed 16 years ago by the Guild and theatrical managers. The Fleisher office reported that more film firms were buying screen rights on a percentage of gross receipts or percentage of profits than ever before, with this tendency to increase the coming season. The reason is that Hollywood companies do not have to pay out a lump sum of considerable amount all at one time, but can stretch payments to the playwright over a long period of time.

An amendment to the 1941 minimum Guild agreement provides that a motion picture company can buy rights in advance of stage production upon backing of a play and paying for screen rights on a sliding scale, depending on the length of the day's run. Thus far, however, the Fleisher office reported that no company has taken advantage of this plan, which is known as the Wharton-Wilk plan, because it is a revision and combination of suggestions submitted to the Guild by Jake Wilk, head of Warners' play department, and John Wharton, Jock Whitney's attorney.

Under the present basic agreement 40 per cent of the proceeds of screen sales goes to the manager. Before 1936, producers were a party in the motion picture contract and had a 50-50 say with the playwright on sale price and release dates. Now, however, the playwright has the sole right to negotiate for motion picture sales through the Fleisher office, which gets bids from the film firms, tries to raise the bids, checks contracts and arranges for term payments.

Playwright Protected

Some contracts for purchase of plays were arranged in the spring, the Negotiator office reported, but have not been signed because of various difficulties which arose relating to sequel rights, release dates, credit clauses, terms of payments and other major contract points. The Guild agreement, moreover, guarantees the playwright radio and telcvision rights which motion picture companies must bid for on separate contract basis. Limited radio rights are provided for in the Guild agreement, however, to enable a motion picture company to advertise the picture; 15 or 20 minute programs are permitted, but a complete radio dramatization is prohibited.

Fourteen plays were purchased during the 1940-41 season, with sums totaling $1,217,000 for screen rights of plays, not including possible royalties which may be earned for film grosses over stipulated figures which were provided in some of the contracts. The Fleisher office said that the best year for film purchases was 1936-37, when 17 plays brought $1,750,000. During 1938-39, $760,000 was paid for 14 plays and in 1937-38 $700,000 was paid for 12 plays.

List of plays sold to motion picture companies follows:

COLUMBIA PICTURES: "My Sister Eileen," $225,000; "Pal Joey," $75,000; "Ladies in Retirement," $20,000; "Every Man for Himself," $4,000.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER: "Panama Hattie," $135,000; "DuBarry Was a Lady," $80,000; "Mr. and Mrs. North," $30,000; "Red, Hot and Blue," $15,000.

PARAMOUNT PICTURES: "Lady in the Dark," $283,000; "Louisiana Purchase," $150,000; "Out of the Frying Pan," $40,000.

REPUBLIC PICTURES: "Yokel Boy," $10,000.

SELZNICK PRODUCTIONS: "Claudia," $137,500.

TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX: "Tobacco Road," $150,000; "Charley's Aunt," $110,000; "Margin for Error," $20,000.

WARNER BROTHERS: "Arsenic and Old Lace," $175,000; "The Corn Is Green," $135,000; "George Washington Slept Here," $83,000; "Old Acquaintance," $75,000; "Gentle People," $38,000; "The Night Before Christmas," $30,000.

CANADIANS ENDING BORDER BILLING

The two-way advertising for Canadian border theatres, which prevailed for many years, is about out, and will continue so until the current border restrictions have been removed.

For years, exhibitors located on the U. S. and Canada sides of the dividing line had advertised on the other side regularly. Using newspapers, billboards, windows of stores, direct mail, peddled circulars, one-sheet dodgers and mobile stands with and without sound.

The ban on Canadians spending for pleasure in the U. S., coupled with the passport requisite of the U. S., have about wrecked Canadian patronage at U. S. border theatres. On the other hand, with no barrier to U. S. residents crossing the boundary, Canadian border exhibitors, have been continuing to spend on the U. S. side in advertising. A setback to them is the 20 per cent dominion war tax. But half of this is nullified by the ten per cent premium on U. S. currency in Canada, as pegged by the Dominion.

Crescent Defense Opens Case with Tony Sudekum

Defense against the Government's anti-trust suit was started last Monday in Nashville Federal district court by the Crescent Amusement Company and affiliates, with Universal Pictures and United Artists as defendants. Tony Sudekum, Crescent president, took the stand as the first witness. Defense attorneys estimated that all testimoney should be in by next Monday, which would bring conclusion of the trial at an earlier date than was reported last week. Federal Judge Elmer D. Davies may be expected to hand down a decision promptly following completion of the defendants' case.

Mr. Sudekum testified that Crescent built fine theatres in numerous towns in Tennessee, Kentucky and Alabama "to see that the public has conveniences," and he specifically denied Government charges of violations of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. George H. Armistead, Jr., of the Crescent counsel, questioned the company president, and drew testimony from the witness that he has been operating in the theatre field since 1907, when he invested $700 in a Nashville partnership. Mr. Armistead introduced photographs of Crescent and competing theatres in several towns and Mr. Sudekum testified that single theatre investments in his companies ranged from $35,000 to more than $100,000.

Objection Overruled

Robert L. Wright, special assistant to the Attorney General and head of the motion picture anti-trust division of the Department of Justice, who is the Government's counsel, objected that such testimony had nothing to do with the issues of the case. But Judge Davies commented, "I may decide that it does have nothing to do with the case," and overruled the objection.

On cross-examination, Mr. Sudekum admitted that Crescent had opened "second shows" in converted store buildings in Lebanon and Murfreesboro, Tenn., to cater to the farm trade, and that he was "ashamed" of the rest rooms in that Lebanon theatre.

Prior to calling the first defense witness, Judge Davies denied dismissal motions of all defendants except Columbia Pictures and two Crescent affiliates. Columbia was not represented by counsel when the trial resumed last Monday. Some of the consenting companies, however, had attorneys in court.

In denying Universal's dismissal motion, Judge Davies stated that "the court thinks that contract should be explained," and added that 'up until about 30 minutes ago I was of the opinion that I would grant Universal's motion for dismissal." He refered to the explanation by Universal of its failure to sell a Union City, Tenn., situation in 1939.

Other witnesses called in the first day's defense trial were: R. E. Baulch, Crescent secretary-treasurer; Fritz Thomas, Huntsville, Ala., and L. W. Bevel, Harriman, Tenn., Crescent managers, and Joseph W. Holman, Nashville architect who designed many Crescent theatres. Mr. Holman also is a director and stockholder.

On Tuesday, 15 witnesses testified for Crescent about the quality of its theatres. Nine of them, from Kentucky and Tennessee, said the theatres were "excellent" and regarded as credits to their respective communities.

Among the witnesses were six sound service inspectors from Altec Service Corporation who were also cross examined. They said they had been instructed by their district managers to testify for Crescent.

C. H. Miller with O.E.M.

Charles Herbert Miller, for the past four years assignment and contact man for Pathe News in Washington, D. C., has been appointed assistant to Robert Collyer, head of the Office of Emergency Management Information Division's Newsreel Unit. Mr. Miller's Government job will be much the same as his former work except that he will now be watching defense news for all five newsreel companies.

Foreign Versions of "Vatican"

Spanish, French and Portuguese versions of "The Story of the Vatican" are being made by March of Time for distribution by RKO in Latin America and Europe. The film is the first full-length motion picture ever photographed entirely within the precincts of the Holy City. Monsignor Fulton J. Sheen narrated and Richard de Rochemont produced the American version.

McConville-Carretta Wedding

Joseph E. McConville, foreign representative of Columbia Pictures, was married Thursday, August 14th, to Eleanor Carretta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph A. Carretta, at the Church of St. Ursula, Mount Vernon, N. Y. The bridegroom is the son of Joseph A. McConville, foreign manager of Columbia Pictures.

Robert Riskin to England

Robert Riskin, who was in New York last week, is reported to have left for Canada from where he is scheduled to fly to London in an RAF bomber. The purpose of the flight has not been disclosed.

Three at Fort Riley, Another Building

Fort Riley, Kansas has three movie theatres operating, Lt.-Colonel Donald L. Wood advises from that post, in extending the report on Army theatres published August 9th in Motion Picture Herald.

The original report listed one theatre, with 756 seats, but two additional houses have been added and all three are now running continuously, according to Colonel Wood, who is assistant theatre officer at Fort Riley, under Colonel C. J. Wilder, chief theatre and morale officer.

The original house at the post, he advises, has been designated as Theatre No. 1. Theatre No. 2 is located at the Cavalry Replacement Training Center, and No. 3 is at Camp Funston. Each of the new houses seats 1,038. All three are operated from Fort Riley.

Colonel Wood explains further that attendance runs as high as 4,000 each on Saturdays and Sundays. A fourth house is under construction with an indicated capacity of about 700.

Rivoli Opens September 1st

Universal's "Unfinished Business" will open at the Rivoli theatre on Broadway, New York, September 1st instead of August 28th as reported previously. The theatre has been closed all Summer.

"Father" on Tour

The touring company of "Life With Father" has been booked to play at the RKO Temple Theatre, Rochester, October 27th and 28th.

RIVALRY BETWEEN F-P CANADIAN AND ODEON FLARES IN OPEN COURT FIGHT

Writ Filed by Famous Players Circuit to Block Transfer of Hanson Houses to Odeon; Loew Operations Surveyed

The first open hostilities in the newly developed rivalry between the long established Famous Players Canadian Corporation circuit of some 300 houses, now headed by J. J. Fitzgibbons, and N. L. Nathanson's rapidly expanding and comparatively new Odeon circuit, of a reported 100 theatres, occurred Monday in Toronto with filing of a writ of legal action by FPC against O. R. Hanson and the Hanson Theatres Corporation.

The writ was filed because of the reported transfer, by Mr. Hanson, of the Broadway Theatre, Timmins, Ontario, to Odeon or subsidiaries. The title of the property is in dispute between FPC and Hanson.

FPC had recently acquired three neighborhood theatres in Northeastern Ontario. They had hitherto been with Mr. Hanson's Associated Theatres, Ltd. The theatres and their operators are the Oxford, Bert Wainwright; the Granada, John Boyd; the Bayview, Bayview Theatres, Ltd. The Bayview had been operated as a unit of the Hanson Theatres Corporation.

Also named defendants were Empire Universal Films, Ltd., Associated Theatre, Ltd., Broadway Theatres, Ltd.

The suit seeks a declaration that all issued shares of the Broadway are held in trust for FPC, subject to advance payments by the defendants. It also seeks an accounting of payments for the construction and equipment of the theatre, and an order vesting all outstanding shares in FPC.

Odeon, meanwhile, has taken over the Adelphi, Toronto, from Adam Baillie. It has appointed as manager W. A. Sault, formerly a branch manager of Empire-Universal Films, Ltd. Odeon also has acquired the Capitol, Niagara Falls, Ontario, for reopening next Friday under managership of W. C. Tyers, and the Casino, Halifax, Nova Scotia, for reopening next Saturday, under Thomas Courtney.

Eight Toronto theatres recently joined Mr. Hanson's Associated Theatres, Ltd. They are the Fox, Metro, Paradise, Paramount, Bluebell, Kinsgway, Bloordale, and Colony, all of which had been with the Consolidated Theatres' buying, booking pool.

In the race for more theatres Odeon two weeks ago acquired the Alexander, in Rouyn, Northern Quebec; the Alexander, Wallaceburg, Ontario; the Grant, Kings Playhouse, Esquire, Mayfair, Aster, in Toronto.

Loew Canadian Operations Come Under New Scrutiny

by W. M. Gladish

in Toronto

The operation of Loew's Theatres in Eastern Canada has been attracting attention since the announcement that Marcus Loew's Theatres Limited would resume operation of the Uptown.

There are four Loew houses in three cities of Ontario and Quebec; and two of them have been under the operating direction of the head-office of Loew's in New York City, these being Loew's Yonge Street Theatre, Toronto, and Loew's Theatre, London, Ont. These, and the Uptown Theatre, are owned by Canadian companies in which Canadian investors have a large proportion of shares. Loew's Theatre, Montreal, is licensed under the name of Mansfield Theatres Limited and is under lease to Famous Players Canadian Corp.

Operation and bookings of Loew's Theatre, Toronto, and Loew's at London are incorporated in agreements by the respective companies with Loew's in New York City, with film rentals being determined by the home office. Each has a resident manager and both are regularly inspected by the district manager out of the home office. Jules Bernstein has been in charge at Toronto since the theatre was built more than a quarter of a century ago while Fred Jackson has long been the manager at London.

Loew's operated the Uptown, when it opened in 1921. After a short period, however, the Uptown was leased to Vaughan Glaser for dramatic stock and it had this policy until Sept. 1, 1926 when it was taken over by Famous Players, for a screen policy plus atmospheric stage presentations of high order produced by Jack Arthur. The stage shows were maintained until long after the advent of sound.

Details Divulged

Details have now been divulged which indicate that, although the Uptown will be operated by Loew's in conjunction with the local company, Marcus Loew's Theatres Limited, there is a tie-up between Loew interests and N. L. Nathanson who is now responsible for Odeon Theatres of Canada, Empire-Universal-Films Limited, Esquire Films Limited, which specializes in British film, Associates Theatres Limited, Sovereign Film Distributors Limited, Sterling Films Limited and other companies in which he has a silent, yet effective, interest. It has been said in Toronto that the Nathanson organization will book the pictures into the Uptown, commencing Sept. 1 with the British feature, "Come On, George," starring George Formby. At first glance, this may seem strange but the fact remains that the Uptown has become a George Formby house since the outbreak of war two years ago. Formby's name on the canopy means a crowd. Formby at some other theatres, even in Toronto, represents a question mark. The same situation applies in other locations across the Dominion, Formby fans being in profusion in such places as Winnipeg and Vancouver.

There has also been a statement that there will be no change in policy at Loew's in downtown Toronto, either in operating or in program fare. This suggests that MGM and United Artists will continue to have the majority of local first runs there. It does not suggest that N. L. Nathanson is not interested in the Loew house on lower Yonge Street because it is a permanent supposition that he has a heavy financial interest in the Canadian MGM company, Regal Films (1941) Limited, which lost no time after Nathanson's resignation last May to effect a reorganization with Nathanson present which resulted in Paramount stepping out of the Regal picture. The Regal meeting was held quietly on the same day as the postponed annual meeting of Famous Players' Canadian Corp., when N. L. Nathanson told Barney Balaban that he was resigning the presidency, effective June 1 on the termination of Nathanson's contract with FPC. It has also been strongly rumored that Nathanson has effected a financial entry into United Artists of more or less recent date. Therefore, it looks as if the tie-up consists of Nathanson booking programs into Loew's Uptown and having a financial interest, direct and indirect, in the pictures which play Loew's in downtown Toronto, while the Loew organization operates both theatres.

First-run theatres in the ace class appear to be divided in Toronto as follows: The Imperial and Shea's will be part of the Famous Players' chain, with the Tivoli being good for first and second runs, and, on the other hand, Loew's and the Uptown operated by Loew's on business terms with Nathanson. Incidentally, there is an intimation that Shea's will re-open after overhauling under the management of Fred Trebilcock, now retiring at the Uptown, with a trail-blazer in "Citizen Kane," which comes from RKO.

BLACKOUTS PLANNED FOR ONTARIO

According to preliminary announcement by the Air Raid Precautions authorities, blackouts in Ontario will resume in September. The theatre owners, however, are not enthused about the prospects of new test blackouts, because of their experience in the first tests last June when the "outdoor shows" proved disastrous to the box-office in the evening. Attorney-General Gordon Conant says that the rehearsals next month will take in whole sections.

FPC's Tax Survey To Be Shown Authorities

Famous Players Canadian Corp. has decided to show the Dominion Government that the collection of a steep amusement tax on moving picture entertainment is a short-sighted policy. And the big chain will undoubtedly have the exact figures to show the government heads that such is the case because private statistics for more than one-quarter of all the theatres in Canada, having in excess of one-third of the aggregate seating capacity, are to be produced. One thing is already obvious—the theatre business has shrunk by a substantial degree since last May and it was in that month that the new Federal amusement tax of 20 per cent. became effective. Last year was a war year for Canada, wages had not risen to present levels and there was not the employment that is now in evidence, yet the film houses are not doing what they registered during corresponding months of 1940. That, in a few words, is the physical comparison.

A comparison that will undoubtedly hit the government officials in the proper place will be brought out eventually, following a statistical survey by Famous Players and affiliated companies. This is expected to show that the Government is actually losing money by an excessive amusement tax through a big drop in the corporation profits taxation while the theatres themselves have been harmed by the impost on boxoffice receipts. The heavy Federal amusement tax is doing double harm, in fact, and two wrongs never did make a right.

Not only did the Dominion Government impose a 20 per cent. tax on admission grosses but, simultaneously upped the tax on company profits to a total of 40 per cent. of operating excess at the end of a fiscal year. This comes in the form of two taxes, one of 22 per cent. under the Excess Profits Tax Act and the other of 18 per cent. as the corporation income tax.

IN COURTS

Loew's Is Enjoined On Curtain Device

Judge Robert Nevin in the Federal court in New York on Thursday, August 14th, awarded Francis E. Weidhass, inventor of a contour stage curtain, a permanent injunction restraining Loew's, Inc., and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corp. from infringing his patent, and ordered an accounting of profits.

Mr. Weidhass had brought suit claiming that the defendants had used curtains in Loew's theatres infringing upon his patent device, which could be easily draped so as to simulate various objects.

Judge Nevin in overruling a contention of the defendants that the patent did not represent a new or novel device, pointed out that the curtain is now in use at the Radio City Music Hall.

Mae Murray Wins Point

Attorneys for Mae Murray, former motion picture actress, and Billy Rose, theatrical producer, reached an agreement Friday, August 15th, that advertising indicating that Miss Murray is appearing at Mr. Rose's Diamond Horseshoe in New York, will be discontinued. Miss Murray had filed suit asking $150,000 damages contending the advertising was an invasion of privacy. Mr. Rose maintained that she violated her contract by leaving the show in July.

Approves Reorganization

Judge John H. Druffel of the United States district court in Cincinnati, has entered an order approving reorganization plan for consideration of stockholders under which the city would take over the 3,500-seat Music Hall, debtor in bankruptcy proceedings. The auditorium is used for exhibitions and entertainments of various types, including motion pictures which are shown on occasion.

OBITUARIES

John Marcus Black, Film Exhibitor, Dies

Charles Haussman, who formerly owned the Hippodrome theatre in Pottsville, Pa., before selling to the Comerford Circuit in 1931, died at his home in that city Monday, August 11th, after a long illness. For the past nine years he was manager of the Schuylkill Fair.

David Light

David Light, publisher of 'This Week in Pittsburgh and Musical Forecast magazines, died in Pittsburgh's Montefiore Hospital, Monday, August 11th. He was manager of the Amusement Publisher Co., vice-president of the Musicians Club of Pittsburgh, and a director of the Pittsburgh Playhouse and Opera Society.

4 Distributors Meet Again on Product, Policy

Four distributing companies held further meetings this week on new product and new policy. United Artists wound up a "picture selling" conference in New York; MGM held the first of a series of meetings in Chicago with company field exploitation staff; regional sessions were held by Producers Releasing Corporation in Dallas, and Republic Pictures concluded its Eastern and mid-West-Southern regional quarterly sales meetings in New York and Chicago.

United Artists completed its two-day "picture selling" conference in New York which was called by Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president of the company, with Harry L. Gold, vice-president and Eastern general sales manager, and Haskell M. Masters, Western general sales manager, officiating. Purpose of the meeting, which was attended by district managers, was to explore selling conditions for the coming season under the consent decree as it affects sale of films released by UA.

Three Pictures Shown

Three newly completed productions were shown at the meetings: Alexander Korda's "Lydia," starring Merle Oberon; Edward Small's "International Lady," with George Brent, Ilona Massey and Basil Rathbone, and "Tanks a Million," the first of the Hal Roach streamlined features. Special campaigns on each of these three company releases were mapped out by the sales and advertising and publicity departments.

District managers who attended included:

Jack Goldhar from the Detroit territory; Charles Stern from Chicago; Bert Stearn, Cleveland; John J. Dervin, New England; Arthur Silverstone, New York territory; C. E. Peppiatt, Southern territory, and Clarence Eiseman, New York Exchange manager.

MGM Field Staff Meets

The first of a series of meetings with Metro's field exploitation staff was held this week in Chicago with William R. Ferguson, MGM exploitation director in charge. Plans for new season product were discussed and details outlined for a forthcoming national contest. Preparations for a large scale institutional venture also were discussed at the meeting.

Exploitation representatives working under the supervision of J. E. Flynn, district manager, were present, including: W. L. Bishop and Gene Rich, Chicago; Louis Orlove, Milwaukee, and Norman Pyle, Minneapolis.

PRC Meets, Reports

Eight production units are now lined up under Producers Releasing Corporation's banner according to a statement made this week by Arthur Greenblatt, general sales manager, who will preside at the company's next regional sales meeting this Sunday and Monday, August 23-24th, at the President Hotel, Kansas City.

Producers contributing to the 1941-42 PRC program are: John T. Coyle, B. B. Ray, T. H. Richmond, Merrick-Alexander, Dreifuss-Eudemiller, Martin Mooney-William Beaudine, Kozinsky Bros. and Sigmund Neufeld.

Franchise holders and salesmen who will attend the Kansas City meeting are: R. H. Patt, Wm. Lee Norris, John Muchmore, L. O. Ringler and J. Reynolds of Kansas City; Bernie Newman, J. H. Ashby of Denver; Don Tibbs, Salt Lake City; Noah Bloomer, John Walsh and Jack Braft of St. Louis; Meyer Stern, Sam Stern and Joe Foley of Omaha; Charles Weiner of Minneapolis.

Next PRC regional will be held in Los Angeles on August 30-31.

Republic Chicago Meeting

Following the wind-up of Republic Pictures' Eastern regional sales meeting last week at the New York Athletic Club, H. J. Yates and J. R. Grainger flew to Chicago to attend the Mid-West-Southern meeting which was held at the Drake Hotel last Thursday and Friday. Production plans for the company's second quarter were discussed. At the end of the meeting, Mr. Yates and Mr. Grainger returned to New York.

The following branch managers were present at the Chicago regional: William Baker, Chicago; Jack Frackman, Milwaukee; L. W. Marriott, Indianapolis; Gilbert Nathanson, Minneapolis; Nat Steinberg, St. Louis; Lloyd Rust, Dallas; Merritt Davis, Atlanta; Harold Laird, Tampa; J. H. Dillon, Charlotte; L. V. Seicshnaydre, New Orleans; Winfied M. Snelson, Memphis. Also, Sol Davis, Oklahoma City franchise holder, and Arthur Bromberg, Southeastern franchise holder.

LETTERS FROM READERS

NINE HUNDRED YEARS AWAY

To the Editor of the Herald:

In the Motion Picture Herald of August 2, on page 44, I find the following:

"Current copies of each of Quigley Publications' periodicals were sealed in a time-capsule buried for 1,000 years at Cucamonga, California, Tuesday night.

"Should the person who unearths the treasure on July 28th, 2041 . . . etc.

"His reactions to these findings will be reported in the August 2nd, 2041, edition . . . etc."

Mrs. Romay's arithmetic is apparently correct, as verified by our comptometer. This also for the attention of sundry copy-readers and proofreaders. A pox upon them.—T. R.

Welles' New Air Series

Orson Welles, who has just announced a program of three Mercury Productions for RKO, launches a new series of variety-drama programs over the Columbia Broadcasting System on Monday, September 15th. They will emanate from Hollywood, the first one starting just as Mr. Welles begins production on Booth Tarkington's "The Magnificent Ambersons."

Autry Signs with Rodeo

Gene Autry, Republic's singing cowboy star, has been signed by Col. John Reed Kilpatrick, president of Madison Square Garden Corp., to appear again with the "World's Championship Rodeo," to be held in the Garden in New York, October 8-26.

Raines to Produce

Halsey Raines, publicity writer at MGM's New York home office, will shortly produce a stage comedy-drama, "Cap and Gown," in association with Harry Blaney and Robert Marko.

Minister Sees New Film Cycle

A new cycle in motion pictures, using the lives of great men in church history for film themes, was forecast by Rev. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, pastor of Baptist Temple, Philadelphia, upon his return August 18th from Hollywood. There, with representatives of five other Protestant churches, he was in an advisory capacity at the Warner studios during the final screening of "One Foot in Heaven."

The film, to be released November 1, was based on last Winter's best-selling biography of the same name, the life-story of Rev. William Spence, Methodist minister from the Middle West. The book was written by the clergyman's son, Hartzell Spence.

Soon after publication of the book, Dr. Poling had suggested in a review in the "Christian Herald," which he edits, that the book should be made into a movie. Dr. Poling said that if "One Foot in Heaven" was a box-office success, other studios might be expected to look to church history for film themes. Several studios, he said, already had somewhat similar themes in mind.

"This picture has been handled reverently, but with humor as well as dignity," said Dr. Poling. "The screen is about to give its public a Protestant clergyman character worthy of the name."

Rt. Rev. James Freeman, Bishop of the Washington, D. C. Episcopal Diocese, headed the committee of six which helped keep the depiction of the minister's career authentic and natural in the film. In addition to Dr. Poling, the other members of the commitee included Methodist Bishop Charles Wesley Flint, of Syracuse, N. Y.; Dr. Edgar DeWitt Jones, of Detroit, Church of Christ; Dr. Charles E. Kerr, Tulsa, Okla., former Presbyterian moderator; and Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, Marble Collegiate Dutch Reformed Church, New York. Dr. Peale was a technical advisor from the start of the screening, having spent eight weeks in Hollywood, and, according to Dr. Poling, "has done a magnificent job." The other members of the committee spent 10 days in Hollywood.

Will Appeal on Nazi Film License Decision

Richard R. Rollins, head of the investigation department of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League, announced that he would file an appeal from the decision of Supreme Court Justice Bergen in New York which held that the German film, "Victory in the West," did not require a license before exhibition. Mr. Rollins brought suit after the motion picture division of the New York State Department of Education ruled that no license was required.

Cinema Lodge Banquet Set

The Second Annual Banquet of the Cinema Lodge of B'nai B'rith, will be held on Saturday, October 18th at the Hotel Astor in New York, Arthur Israel, Jr., president of the lodge, announced following an executive meeting. Various committees are now being appointed and stars of stage, screen and radio are being enlisted.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

ADVENTURE IN WASHINGTON: Herbert Marshall, Virginia Bruce—Another picture I should not have played. Lost money on this three day run. Town full of people this Saturday, but could not get them in. I am glad they didn't come in. No wonder people sit in their cars and poke fun at the bum pictures.—Sam Brooks, Liberty Theatre, Hailey, Idaho. General patronage.

MILITARY ACADEMY: Tommy Kelly, Bobby Jordan, David Holt—Good little picture that held its own on cash nite. Average business. Running time, 65 minutes. Played August 1-2.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

First National

HIGH SIERRA: Humphrey Bogart, Ida Lupino—Raoul Walsh, that good doctor for the tired-sick box-office, has done it again. Not quite as big as "Dark Command" (Rep.) but did almost equal business. Everyone pleased. Played May 15-16.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR BABY: Jeffrey Lynn, Priscilla Lane, Ronald Reagan—We had an all out campaign at the Center, Chatham, with most gratifying results. A real good; picture.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SEA WOLF: Edward G. Robinson, John Garfield, Ida Lupino—Very poor Jack London story. Ran this picture three days and was lucky to break even. We have had a lot of bum pictures from most all companies of late but this is about the worst one we have played considering the price we paid for this.—Sam Brooks, Liberty Theatre, Hailey, Idaho. General patronage.

SINGAPORE WOMAN: Brenda Marshall, David Bruce—Well received, with "Wide Open Town" (Par.). —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

STRANGE ALIBI: Arthur Kennedy, Joan Perry—Here is a grand little program picture that should do an average business. If your customers crave action. Biz for me excellent on "Bargain Day." Played May 19.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BIG STORE, THE: Groucho Marx, Chico Marx, Harpo Marx—These boys drew about as well for me as any of Metro's big stars and the last two pictures have clicked. The two musical numbers, on the piano and harp, are worth the admission price then the slapstick chase that puts the finish on any good comedy is plenty good and you will enjoy hearing your patrons laugh. Book it, you can't go far wrong. It's okay.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

BILLY THE KID: Robert Taylor, Brian Donlevy, Mary Howard—This pictre has some of the best outdoor technicolor photography that we have seen and the picture has plenty of action. We didn't do the business we expected after quite a little buildup but that's no fault of the picture. We might have done better with a week end date, but are not sorry we played it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

Monogram

PRIDE OF THE BOWERY: Leo Gorcey, Bobby Jordan—Where East Side Kids are a favorite, this should do a fair biz. It brings out the 3 C's Camp. Fair picture that did average Wednesday business with "Arizona Gang Busters", (P.R.C.). Played May 14.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ARISE, MY LOVE: Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland, Walter Abel—We were late in setting this feature, but went back to pick it up for our bargain night and it proved a business getter. It was the best mid-week we had for quite some time. The picture might not be a top allocation, but is worth running, even at this late date.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

CHRISTMAS IN JULY: Dick Powell, Ellen Drew, Raymond Walburn—If the Preston Sturges hits pay dirt for you, this one surely will. A great little comedy-drama that failed to draw for me. Dick Powell all washed up for me. Played May 13.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

MOON OVER BURMA: Dorothy Lamour, Robert Preston, Preston Foster—A very good picture and that snake scene steals it. Will make the patrons sit out on the edge of their seats. A very good cast and the action is fast, making the picture move right along. Worth a date on midweek or week end. Too old for Sunday, now.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

SECOND CHORUS: Fred Astaire, Paulette Goddard, Charles Butterworth—A good musical and this Astaire boy can still step but that stuff seems to be all out now. A few years ago every kid was trying to learn to tap, but now the trend seems to run to comedy. Worth a date on bargain night or as second feature, if you can buy it right.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

SECOND CHORUS: Fred Astaire, Paulette Goddard—Business poor, picture poor. Nothing to it. Have enjoyed Paramount's "Headliners" more so than "Second Chorus." Played May 22-23.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS: John Wayne, Betty Field, Harry Carey—What a flop after the first night. I never heard a good word for this picture. It will draw the first night but will be a big disappointment to people who have read the book. Played July 27-29.—Sam Brooks, Liberty Theatre, Hailey, Idaho. General patronage. .

THREE MEN FROM TEXAS: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Andy Clyde—This is the best "Cassidy" western we have played this year. Did above average William Boyd business. Played May 17.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

THREE MEN FROM TEXAS: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Andy Clyde—We have been late in running these this year but age don't hurt a western because the costumes are always the same and the action is usually plenty fast. We ran this with "A Night at Earl Carroll's" (Par.) and the combination pleased our chewers and spitters who frequent the place on Friday and Saturday.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

WIDE OPEN TOWN: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—Hopalong Cassidy helps on a dual-bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Republic

BACK IN THE SADDLE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Lee—A very good western with music. Gene was never a big bet here but we do average or better with most of his pictures. With the regular cast they draw okay but our worst flop was when they left Smiley out and put in Jimmy Durante. If you haven't played it, get a date. I know the patrons will like the picture.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD

CAROLINA MOON: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Not one of Autry's best by any means but they turned out for it anyway. Running time, 62 minutes. Played July 30.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

SINGING HILLS, THE: Gene Autry, Mary Lee, Smiley Burnette—Hot as it was, Autry brings them in. Don't need air-conditioning for Autry.—Harland Rankin, Palza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RKO Radio

CONVOY: Clive Brook, John Clements, Edward Chapman—Played on bargain night to satisfactory B. O., but an exhibitor is a sap to play these British pictures unless he knows definitely they won't come back at him for free-show distribution. "The Lady Vanishes," 20th-Fox (GB) is one, which recently cut into our receipts—shown free in a government labor camp. Played July 30.—Lawrence E. Spraker, Star Theatre, Stayton, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

TOO MANY GIRLS: Desi Arnaz, Lucille Ball, Richard Carlson—This was a good enough show but too much of the Conga; all dance sequences were about the same. Desi Arnaz did a good job, as well as rest of cast. Why don't they take Hal LeRoy in more pictures, and Ann Miller, too—I think they are tops in taps and could be built up like others were. Did poor business on this one. Running time, 85 minutes. Played July 23.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BLOOD AND SAND: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Rita Hayworth—First I want to say that this is a good picture but lacks that necessary something to draw the paying customers up to the box-office. The color is beautiful, the action moves right along, and the bullfight is realistic enough; that part they will let you see. It may not be a big profitable engagement but is worth your best time.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

United Artists

GREAT DICTATOR, THE: Charles Chaplin, Jack Oakie, Paulette Goddard—Played two weeks with good business. This was enjoyed by most patrons and received laughs all the way through. Jack Oakie does a swell job as Napaloni. Charlie Chaplin shows in this that he is a great producer, director, writer and actor. Running time, 125 minutes. Played July 24-Aug. 6.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THIEF OF BAGDAD, THE: Sabu, Conrad Veidt, June Duprez—Thought I would pull 'em in on this one, but no. Did do just about average business but show was O.K. for those who can make believe it all happened. Running time, 104 minutes. Played July 25-26.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

HONEYMOON FOR THREE: George Brent, Ann Sheridan, Jane Wyman—Nice little comedy, that didn't do what I expected, but seemed to please those who came. A little disappointing. Played May 20.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

MEET JOHN DOE: Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck, Edward Arnold—Good entertainment, but barely made guarantee. However, Capra seemingly is developing a penchant for cracking unwisely at Government processes and representatives. Played July 20-22.—Lawrence E. Spraker, Star Theatre, Stayton, Ore. Small town rural patronage.

Miscellaneous

KEEP YOUR SEATS, PLEASE: George Formby—They really bought them out for this one. Only trouble we didn't have enough seats.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

A MATTER OF CONTROL

The taking-on by the manager of extra-curricular activities outside the theatre has long been endorsed here as a decided means of increasing theatre stature in the community. It is apparent that the theatreman who takes a proper part in lunch and civic club projects is also in a better position to expand his usefulness on behalf of his own operation.

It is a knowledge already shared by Round Tablers, as noted in the frequent notices to this department from members whose services are highly prized by local organizations. Late reports tell us, for instance, that Harold C. Lee has been re-elected to the presidency of the Bath (New York) Chamber of Commerce; that W. Clyde Smith is serving effectively as publicity committee chairman of the Hot Springs DeSoto quarto-centennial celebration. It seems that these cooperations are not confined to theatremen. Warner publicists in the field are spreading their endeavors to include industry public relations work. And M-G-M exploiteers are advised to align themselves more closely with community-conscious organizations.

With such important cooperations as guidance, it is evident that more managers hitherto apart from these extra-curricular duties are being encouraged by their bosses to join up and take a-hold. That would be smart procedure—but smart only to the point where the theatreman's enthusiasm for service does not interfere with the conduct of his job. The promotionally-trained, quick-thinking showman obviously is recognized as an invaluable asset in the furtherance of community progress. Unless controlled, that asset can be dissipated to the disadvantage of the box office.

"MOUNTAIN TO MOLEHILL"

On the treatment of outside contacts profitable to the theatre, one may advisedly deliberate upon the thought emphasized by "Skip" Weshner before the recent Schine convention in Gloversville. The United Artists exploitation director pointed out the dangers of weakening valuable contacts through what he termed "nickel-and-dime" ideas.

For the most part, the functioning theatreman is to be credited with savvy sufficient to couple the Big Idea with the Big Tiein. The lad too eager to show his stuff, too quick to use his feet rather than his head, too often reduces his "promotional-mountain" to an "exploitation-molehill".

It's been a good summer, and what all of us here mean by a "good summer" is counted in the increasing number of Round Tablers who pleasingly punctuate their vacations with visits to these headquarters. Old friendships are thus renewed and strengthened are contacts stemming from Club correspondence.

Thrice-welcome are the folks from the field. Nothing makes for a more enjoyable interruption in putting out the weekly pages. Come one, come all, sez we. Let us serve your needs. Ye latchstring is always out.

THE FINISH TO A START

When a campaign on any of their pictures is set down in these pages, Paramount producers, Bill Pine and Bill Thomas, make it a point to drop a personal note to the Round Tabler, thanking him for his cooperation. "In the first place, we sincerely appreciate these endeavors; secondly, we feel it is good business—time and effort well spent," they explain.

If that fabulously wide gap between Hollywood and exhibition is narrowing, the momentum of it is somewhat to be credited to theatre-experienced producers aware of the strength of such bridges between studio and the firing line. Pine and Thomas have served long enough in the field to realize how important the manager becomes in finishing his part of the job they start in production.

Fat with showmanship-meat is this observer's opinion of Columbia's "Here Comes Mr. Jordan". Viewed at the Music Hall, the well-told and unusual story was greeted with applause—a bit of a tip-off for theatremen set to play the date.

Round Table In Pictures

Even the lowly coal chute was utilized by Pat Notaro at Warners' Columbia, in Sharon, Pa., to exploit "Underground". Folks on peering into chute were greeted with six-sheet display of underground radio station.

USO Auxiliary headquarters with attractive girls in attendance were set up in the lobby of Schine's Paramount, in Syracuse, by Dick Feldman for "Caught in the Draft". Request for books and magazines brought great response which rated front page breaks in local dailies.

Eye-arresting lobby display was arranged for "In the Navy" at Warners' Frolic, Chicago, by Manager Ben Cohn in promoting a 6-foot model battleship with all the necessary equipment, accompanied by two smaller cruiser models. Cutouts of Lou Costello and Bud Abbott in naval uniforms were planted alongside with cast names.

Theatremen Stress "Victory" Symbol

Much continues to be made of the "V, for Victory" symbol-and-slogan by Round Tablers exploitation-wise to its possibilities. In Canada, Jack Nelson tying this startling promotion to merchants for co-op page on "Woman's Face" at the Capitol, in North Bay. Topped by a banner head of the symbol-and-slogan plus picture copy, the rest of the page carried individual merchants' ads throughout which were liberally sprinkled the letter "V" in various type faces and sizes. Contest slant attached by Nelson was an offer of cash and guest tickets for those turning in the exact number. In addition, the layouts incorporated the picture title in the ad copy.

Campaigns tying the symbol-and-slogan to dates on "Underground" are also represented, among those reported being Burgess Waltmon's drive for the date at the Princess, in Columbus, Miss. Waltmon started by planting a number of teaser one-column "V's" on different pages of his newspaper and followed this by promoting an editorial on the significance of the letter, the plug included generous theatre credits. As a follow-up Burgess stencilled the three dots and dash on pavements, sides of buildings and other spots throughout the city. The telegraphic signal was also used over the radio following spot announcements which read: "See the terrific V Campaign now operating against Hitler in Warners' latest hit," etc.

Shaffer Cracks Newspapers

For his engagement at the Warner Dixie, in Staunton, Va., Frank Shaffer was able to plant in his evening paper the pressbook feature article entitled "Underground—Europe's secret battleground." The editor considered the feature timely enough to be utilized in the news columns and, since the plant ran nearly a full page, contributed much to the success of the engagement. The "V" campaign was also used by Frank to supplement his other endeavors, the effect being heightened by the national publicity given the slogan currently with the Staunton date.

In Chathan, Ontario, Harland Rankin is utilizing the symbol and slogan in various ways, most prominently with a giant "V for Victory" marquee cutout placed on a base carrying three dots and dash. In addition, the house staff is wearing small "V" cutouts on uniform coats.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Rosenthal Ties Novel To "Stars Look Down"

Book readers were especially aimed at by Morris Rosenthal in his campaign on "Stars Look Down" at Loew's Majestic, in Bridgeport, the theatreman hooking the date to local popularity of the "Book of the Month Club." Rosey planted stories in the dailies to the effect that club members who brought with them a copy of the A. J. Cronin book would be his guests at the theatre. The slant was further sold by personal letters from the Loew man to the club members, and the membership of local literary societies. Feature story and photo on the author was also planted and street exploitation included giant walking book in the downtown area.

M-G-M "Hyde-Detector" Tests Emotion Reaction to "Jeykll"

Blondes are more submissive to male aggressiveness than brunettes; redheads show greater counterattack or fear-resisting qualities; married women have less resistance to the male with "Hyde-ish" tendencies than single girls. Every man is a potential "Hyde", the average being 34 per cent, based on a lowest estimate of 15 per cent and a high of 95 per cent.

The authorities for these "scientific" findings are "Professors" Art Schmidt and Ray Bell of Howard Dietz's M-G-M publicity forces, the results coming about through a series of emotional studies conducted via the Marston "lie-detector" apparatus at the New York Astor theatre, where over 100 women were tested while viewing "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde", in advance of the picture's opening. The tests, under the supervision of Dr. Marston, sought to prove how women reacted to love scenes on the screen, to prove whether every man was a potential Hyde.

Volunteers were had through ads in the personal columns of various New York papers which stated that scenes from the picture would be used in the course of the emotional searches. Drama page stories helped to build interest. Each of the women was given a questionnaire which asked whether she reacted most to the normal love scenes between Spencer Tracy and Lana Turner or to the more rugged love scenes between Tracy and Ingrid Bergman. The blanks also asked the participants to set down what percentage of Hyde they felt was contained in every man. Attached to the testees, the detector machine recorded on separate graphs the emotions aroused by the various scenes from the picture, the graphs indicating what scenes most affected the various types of women tested.

M-G-M has incorporated the details in the "Jekyll and Hyde" press book.

Top newspaper contest was built around face photos of nine of the characters in the picture, over each cut a space was provided in which readers were invited to write one-word descriptions of the dramatic expressions shown in the face cuts.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Brightest Youngster Search Held by Meyer on "Dragon"

Vic Meyer of the Orpheum, in New Orleans, centered his campaign on "The Reluctant Dragon" around Baby Weems, with the highlight a Weems contest in which a search was made for the brightest local youngster. A baby defense bond was awarded to winner, who was host to some 500 orphans at a matinee party.

Also arranged by Meyer was a coloring contest with passes going to the kids who did the best coloring of a daffy dragon. Copies of a Baby Weems puzzle were distributed and a milk and ice cream tieup netted throwaways with copy featuring sayings by Baby Weems. Another phase of the campaign was a hookup with five and dime, whereby music wrappers with copy playing up the hit tunes were distributed.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Laby's "Kid" Contest

Teaser newspaper contest planted by George Laby at the Victory, in Holyoke, Mass., ahead of "Billy the Kid" consisted of outline of head and chest of Robert Taylor as he appears in the picture. Guest tickets were offered to the first 10 people correctly guessing number of times the word "wanted" was written on the face.

French & Morton Unlimber Big Guns

With the seasonal reopening of the RKO Albee, in Providence, the George French-Bill Morton combine seized upon the inaugural date on "Hold That Ghost" for an "all-out" campaign to sell the theatre after the Summer losing.

Finding that Lou Costello's mother-in-law lived only a short distance from the theatre, the theatremen tied up Station WPRO for a lobby interview with the ladies on the home life of the star, during which the picture was frequently mentioned. Another radio star aid was had in the dramatization of the picture put on by Abbott & Costello a week previous on the Louella Parsons CBS Show, the Round Tablers tying in on this coast-to-coast broadcast at the finish for a picture plug. For added excitement purposes, a lobby record ballyhoo was utilized, the record giving off screams, howls and loud laughter tying in with announcements of the date.

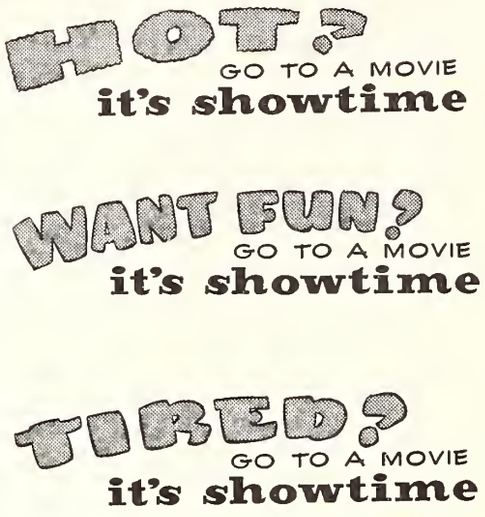
"Sportscope" Booked

Added publicity was had with the booking of the RKO-Pathe "Craig Wood" Sportscope, in which the champ is accompanied around the course by Jean Bauer, state woman golf champ and a local girl. Miss Bauer was obtained for a lobby broadcast on the picture which brought crowds to the theatre. Sports editors in the local and suburban papers used story material and scene shots on the short, which added to the campaign on the feature brought in a gratifying gross for the opening week.

INTERSTATE THEATREMEN CELEBRATE HOBLITZELLE ANNIVERSARY MONTH

Thirty-fifth Year of Operation by Circuit Heads Is Marked by August Campaigns; Managers Devise Strong Exploitations

IN keeping with the importance of the thirty-fifth anniversary of Karl Hoblitzelle as head of Interstate Theatres, the month of August, set aside to celebrate the occasion, was marked by a series of continued endeavors by the circuit managers, stimulated by the assistance of Frank Starz, circuit ad head and his forces. Numerous advertising, publicity and exploitation aids for the purpose were made available to the managers and from among the various manuals sent over the circuit and utilized by the men, campaign highlights used and in work are here detailed.



Institutional emphasis was laid upon the Anniversary Month through special posters and ads, all stressing the slogan "It's Show Time." These are represented by the ad clubs reproduced on this page, which copy was also incorporated in the posters. Three color herald emphasizing the "Show Time" theme and counter-herald standee for distribution in the various cities were also available.

In addition to the publicity stories from Starz's department, local angles were stressed in Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio and Houston, where the circuit has been operating as Interstate from the beginning. Many leads were found on which to hang good newspaper copy of unusual interest. Among these were comments from patrons who were weekly attendants at Interstate houses during the early days. Others were called upon to recall outstanding news events in which the theatres were concerned. Displays included valuable old Interstate program collections and photographs of the first Interstate theatres.

Co-op Pages Highly Regarded

Sports page editors also cooperated and especially on the anniversary programs including sports shorts. Women's pages were utilized for style and fashion comment and art. In some situations current fashions and those in vogue 35 years ago were planted for layouts. Other publicity stunts found worthy had to do with localized stories on theatre personnel, photos of the present staff together with shots of other personnel which had served the theatres in the earlier days. On this angle, it was suggested that former theatre employees now holding down important positions in other lines of endeavor be interviewed on how their theatre training fitted them for their current jobs.

Anniversary advertising that proved effective stressed co-op pages, wherein merchants and other businessmen who had been in business for 35 years participated, their copy including congratulatory comments on the circuit anniversary. For this purpose, Starz made up small slugs "Go to a movie today." "Congratulations to Interstate Theatres." "Relax in a movie," which managers were successful in having merchants insert in their advertising during the month. Institutional advertising along the lines of the recent nationally circulated "Movie Vacation" copy was also made up and planted, an example of which is reproduced on a following ad layout page.

Interstate Anniversary "Showtime" Slugs

Transportation Companies Aid

Street car companies were called upon for cooperation, in Dallas, for instance, three-color cards and posters being planted in cars and busses, copy reading: "Have You Seen a Movie Lately? Ride street cars and coaches to your favorite theatre." In Fort Worth, Charlie Carden promoted the transportation company for display advertising. In Houston, taxi cabs carried anniversary bumper strips. Lobby and front displays were colorful in all situations and in Dallas at the Capitol, Louie Charninsky brought the anniversary to the attention of his public with a comprehensive front as reproduced in the picture section of this issue.

Kiddie Shows Are Featured

The kiddie show, highly regarded as a box-office stimulator by the Interstaters, was also made much of and the following are reported as representative of how the theatremen went about it. In Houston, Weldon Parsons arranged with a dry-cleaning company to accept old coat-hangers as admissions fee, the laundry paying the theatre a nickel for every 10 hangers. Twenty hangers were required for one admission and thousands were reported to have been turned in.

In Tyler, A. D. Deason dug up old rubber for local tire dealers by renting the theatre for a Saturday morning kid show to the tiremen, an old tire being the price of admission. Leading potato chip company in Dallas was tied in to Charlie Meeker's Melba Theatre-WRR Kiddie Club by offering weekly prizes for contestants in the stage events and other gifts as attendance prizes. Company advertised the hookup extensively in the newspapers, over radio and with delivery truck banners.

In keeping with Mr. Hoblitzelle's interest in the promotion of defense stamps, the Houston men have tied in with the Pepsi-cola Company, with the sponsor donating hundreds of dollars in stamps and baby bonds to be distributed at the kid club showings during August. At the first Saturday show, children were given defense stamp booklets in which were scattered 10-cent defense stamps, also given away in the following Saturday sessions during the month. On the last Saturday in August, each of the 11 participating Interstate theatres will award a 25-dollar baby bond to the boy or girl who has saved the most Pepsicola bottle tops during the month. All costs are undertaken by the drink company.

"Jamboree" Heads Midnight Shows

The Interstaters are also going to town with a "Back to School Jamboree" found highly effective in the past and set for many situations currently. Last year, the "Jamboree" in Houston was presented in a midnight Saturday show before the opening of school on Monday. Local talent that was either professional or could be presented as such was rounded up, great care being given to the selection of each act so as not to confuse the entertainment with the usual dancing school type of amateur show. School authorities were contacted for girl drill squads to march down the aisles in the grand finale for localized touch and to afford the students an opportunity to cheer their own school squads. Music was furnished by local orchestra popular among the students.

Daily publicity was planted ahead, the weekend ads elaborated to bring attention to the "Jamboree." Spot announcements in Friday and Saturday news broadcasts were also secured. Collegiate type heralds were distributed at nearby college campus during registration, places in cars in downtown parking lots, etc. Bulletins were planted in high schools, fraternity and sorority houses of the college buildings.

"Upside-Down" Auction Pulls

Makeup of the stage show featured popular master of ceremonies on one of the radio stations, orchestra and glee club opening the program with the selection "School Days." After a number of other musical and dancing acts, an "upside-down auction" was presented, the master of ceremonies offering to buy objects of clothing from the audience, all purchases to be removed on the stage. Community singing was next and then followed by a swing session by the orchestra. For the finale a medley of the Southwestern Conference school songs was played, ending with local college anthem, the glee club singing as the girl squads marched down the aisles to the stage.

Some Interstate Circuit "Institutionals"

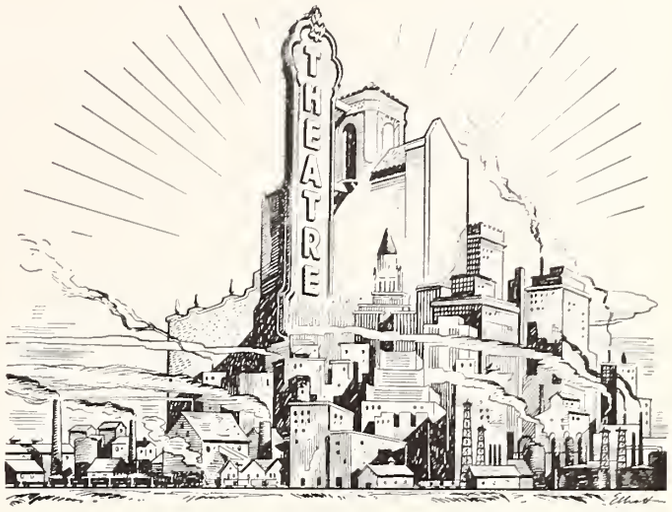
Come As You Are!

Bring the Entire Family!

You don't have to "dress up" and "put on airs" in order to go to the movies, especially during these torrid summer nights when it's too hot to stay at home.

The same suggestion applies to the children in their sun suits and shorts. Bring 'em as they are! It's so hot and too much trouble to do otherwise.

The modern movie theatre is a Cool, Convenient Oasis where you can find happy Relief. You go there to Relax, forget the heat and be Entertained in Comfort—and not to be on "dress parade."



Therefore, don't erase the Delightful and Refreshing experience you'll have in the Cool interior of your favorite Theatre by wearing hot, sticky clothes en route to and from it.

Tonight after you've had dinner, help the missus stack the dishes—round up the kids and give yourselves a hot weather treat by seeing a good Movie in an Air Conditioned Theatre.

Try it at least once a week and see how much better it makes the entire family feel. You'll be surprised to find out how quickly it makes the summer pass by. Incidentally, never before have there been so many Motion Pictures which are Entertaining, Instructive and Timely.

Interstate Theatres are Healthfully Air-Conditioned and they do not have any "high falutin'" rules about what a patron should wear. So, when you Go to the Movies, join the parade of Happy, Cool and Comfortable People in slacks, shorts or "what have you!"

INTERSTATE THEATRES it's showtime

Serving the Community

In 1906 the Interstate Theatres were founded.

It was a creed that every Interstate Theatre should be a Safe, Clean, Attractive and Healthful Place of Amusement in which to present the best Entertainment available. In addition, it was insisted that it provide a proper and wholesome environment for Children.

And equally important, it was demanded that all Employees be Good Citizens, sharing in the Civic and Moral responsibilities of the Community. These motives were essential to the design for happiness for both the Community and Interstate personnel.

For 35 years this has been the policy which has guided Interstate Theatres—truly the Amusement Pioneers of the Southwest—in the successful operation of wholesome places of amusement.

So diligently have they lived and practiced these ideals that the citizens of Texas and New Mexico have naturally come to have a feeling of Respect, Warmth and Friendship for these fine theatres.

Interstate Employees, numbering more than 2,000, are proud of their organization and the role they are playing in making you Happy and of being a part of the Communities in which they live.

INTERSTATE THEATRES it's showtime

Above are reproduced two of a series of eight newspaper institutional displays now running in every daily on the circuit as part of the Interstate Hoblitzelle 35th Anniversary, currently celebrated, and reported by Frank Starz, ad head. Each of the ads occupies about 125 lines on three columns.

"Serving the Community" was the only ad that pointed directly to the Anniversary, the other seven carrying different appeals to stimulate theatregoing in general. Advertising continuity was had, with the identifying Interstate insignia at the bottom of each display and the accompanying "It's Showtime" slug.

"Flying Cadet Week" Arranged By Kaufman

Arranged by Les Kaufman, Fanchon and Marco ad head, was a "Flying Cadet Week" with Mayor William Dee Becker co-operating on the picture's opening at the Fox Theatre. Also tied in on the week were a total of 33 cities and towns in Greater St Louis. Highlight was "air raids" with some 40 planes engaged in manoeuvers, held at noon and over downtown districts and at night at Scott Field.

Mobile recruiting unit was stationed in parkway opposite theatre and special recruiting book in lobby week ahead. "Keep 'em Flying" windshield stickers were used profusely, numerous merchant windows were secured and postoffice trucks and stations cooperated through use of one sheets with appropriate credits.

Hamilton Promotes Coca-Cola Color Show

Through deal effected with the local Coco-Cola people, John Hamilton at the Brandon, in Brandon, Vt., ran their 20-minute technicolor short called "Refreshment Through the Years," in place of his regular shorts. Cola company gave out tickets to their customers which were honored at the boxoffice, Hamilton later collecting for these admissions. In addition, during the run a cola machine was set up in lobby.

For "I Wanted Wings," John secured cooperation of the local Recruiting Service for Flying Cadets who provided the theatreman with a number of colorful one-sheets and banners for lobby display. Also set up in lobby was booth to recruit cadets and captain sent out letters to men urging that they see the film.

Hannah Ties Local Boy To "I Wanted Wings"

Contacting local boy home on furlough, who had worked with the Army Public Relations branch in photographing activities at Kelly Field during filming of "I Wanted Wings," Carroll Hannah at the Indiana, in Bedford, Ind., secured candid shots taken on the scene during shooting of the picture and planted them in papers. In addition, interviews were arranged with the local daily editors, which brought front page breaks. Photos were displayed in theatre lobby ahead and during run with copy stressing the "local boy" angle.

In addition, recruiting unit from Indianapolis was on duty in lobby and mobile unit was parked in front of theatre. Contacting Mayor brought proclamation on Cadets Day with attendant newspaper stories and art.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

For opening of "The Ziegfeld Girl" at the Stanley, in Chester, Pa., Joe Bergin secured cooperation of Mayor Peoples, who personally welcomed the visiting "Ziegfeld" girls, this good for stories and art in papers. One of the girls spoke at the local Lions Club luncheon, also good for breaks. Leading department store held a fashion show with two of the "Z" girls serving as models and showing dresses used in the picture. Store came through with large ad in papers.

Arranged by James Pisapia at the Hobart, in Woodside, L. I., was a five-week kiddie show with cooperating merchants coming through with gifts for kids. For lobby, Jim featured large closet in which all promoted gifts were displayed with appropriate tiein copy.

An old jalopy appropriately bannered was used for street bally by Vern Hudson for his date on "The Great Dictator" at the Royal Theatre in Guelph, Ontario. Circularizing his mailing list, the Round Tabler sent out government postcards carrying cut of Chaplin in his dual roles, together with picture copy and playdates.

To usher in his "Riders of Death Valley" at the LeClair, in Moline, Ill., Francis Gillon distributed cardboard guns, to playgrounds, etc., 100 of which carried free invitations to attend the opening chapter. In addition, Francis promoted ice cream merchant for printing and distribution of heralds plugging the show.

Lucky number admission tickets on "Dr. Kildare" were distributed by Jim McDonough at the Grand, in Galt, Ontario. Copy across top read: "Admission ticket to the Supreme Court of Entertainment in the case of The People vs. Dr. Kildare." Bring this ticket to the lobby of this theatre; if the number hereon corresponds to one posted there you will be admitted free."

Old western relic lobby was arranged by Richard Barry for his date on "Santa Fe Trail" at the Capitol, in Chicago, paraphernalia having been loaned to the theatreman as a result of ad planted in local paper. Such items as old ox yoke, spinning wheel, guns, petrified wood, etc., were promoted, each of which was appropriately labeled.

Bowl filled with new pennies was placed in window of local bank as part of S. Fitzgerald's "Penny Serenade" engagement at the Stratford Theatre, in Chicago. Card alongside offered guest tickets to those correctly guessing number of coins in bowl. Government postcards were mailed with copy: "I am a penny postcard and I've come a long way to tell you about," etc.

Promoting four model planes from local merchant, Don Doberer at the Granada, in Dunnville, Ontario, for "Flight Command" distributed lucky number cards with each child admission, with drawings for the planes held on stage. Numerous window displays were promoted and large cutout plane was hung in lobby with title on wings and fuselage.

TIES MOVIE VACATION TO MAILING PIECE

Four-page cardboard mailing piece folder gotten out by Bolivar Hyde to plug summer dates at the Florida, in St. Petersburg, tied into the movie vacation idea with a front cover illustrated with sketches and headed "In August, Vacation with the Stars." Following was theatre copy and face cuts of leading stars.

Inside spread was given over to a listing of the August attractions headed "Florida Theatre Cool Palace of Enchantment! Presents your August Movie Vacations." Each of the pictures was boxed and labeled "Vacation A," "Vacation B," etc. Back cover provided space for names and addresses of mailing list with further star cuts and was pointed up with the line "Let's Make it a Movie Vacation—More Fun for Less Money."

Large lobby display made entirely of units from the "Pot 'o Gold" 24-sheet was used ahead of that date by Roy Hill at the Fox Electric, in Springfield, Mo. A 30-minute transcription of the entire "Pot 'o Gold" program was used as background and atmosphere for the setpiece. Lucky wheel was also featured with chips furnished to patrons, if wheel stopped on lucky numbers, guest tickets were awarded.

Bert Ruder at Schine's State, in Fostoria, Ohio, sold a swell co-op newspaper ad to a coal dealer on "Caught in the Draft." Same idea was used for a co-op herald, with copy reading: "Don't be Caught in the Draft this fall. Order your coal supply now."

W. B. "YORK" PRESSBOOK GIVES FULL COVERAGE

Highlighted by detailed exploitation accounts of the picture's opening campaigns in New York, Washington and Atlantic City, the 38-page pressbook issued by Warner Bros. on "Sargeant York" is featured by 24 pages of tested exploitation suggestions for duplication or adaptation in other situations. The special advertising section includes selected ads from the New York world premiere campaign and the publicity is built around a series of full-page feature stories, photo layouts, fashion art and beauty mats.

The entire campaign coverage is well aimed to back up engagements in situations of all sizes.

Paul Harvey, manager of Warners' Strand, York, Pa., flooded the city with penny postcards signed "P. P." to plug "Penny Serenade." For "The Great Lie," he made a tie-up with a department store. Persons weighing themselves on a penny machine received pictures of movie stars from the machine, and if Bette Davis turned up, they were given a free pass to the theatre. A sound-truck parked in front of a park housing a rodeo to ballyhoo "Billy the Kid."

What he chose to call a "fisherman's rule" was distributed by Bob Berezin of the Elgin Theatre, in Ottawa, Canada, ahead of "She Knew All the Answers." Made of cardboard, the rule which actually was but 12 inches, was divided into smaller than true inches so that it was marked to measure 24. Tiein copy on rule read: "Here is the answer to your fishing stories and your answer for good entertainment is to see." etc. This followed by gag copy such as "This ruler makes fish stories come true, makes bigger fish, increases the catch."

To attract his kid patronage, Monty Salmon of the Beacon Theatre, New York City, staged a special kid matinee comprised of well-rounded shorts. In addition to a Gang Comedy, a Pop Eye and several Disneys, Salmon distributed promoted ice cream to all with additional promoted prizes given in connection with a lucky number gag.

Ahead of "Ziegfeld Girl" at the Malco Ritz, in Russellville, Ark., Hiram Meeks dressed his entire staff with gold cardboard hats and plumes, picture title imprinted thereon. In addition, usher with sandwich sign carrying scene stills covered main thoroughfares heralding the picture's opening.

Planting contest in local neighborhood weekly newspaper, Jack Cotter at the Colonial Theatre, In Erie, Pa., scatters names and addresses of five telephone subscribers taken at random from city directory and offers guest tickets to those properly identifying themselves at the boxoffice. Front page space is given to the contest with entire back page devoted to current theatre attraction.

Lobby display for "Marx Bros. Go West," arranged by E. R. Erickson at the Rhodes, in Chicago consisted of scene still of the madcaps with animation supplied by cage with dice swinging back and forth in front of display. Copy overall read: "A winner every time," etc. On "Philadelphia Story" the theatreman arranged signs in his lobby with copy as: "Wanna hear a funny story?" "Wanna see a peach of a picture?" etc., etc., last sign reading: "Well, if Burma Shave can do it, so can we."

"Apple Blossom" perfume was used in the fan intakes of the Loew's, Norfolk, cooling plants for the first two days of the "Blossoms in the Dust" engagement there as a feature of the campaign for the film put over by Joe Margolis.

REPRESENTATIVE NEWSPAPER ADS

(Above) In the face of a miss-out of ad mats on "Shepherd of the Hills" for the date at the New Lamax, Wilmington, Ohio, Manager C. A. Skelly, to beat the deadline, laid out this 135 lines on 3 col. in "about two minutes," he reports.

(Below) One of the Warner series in New York to expedite the "Sergeant York" move-over from the two-a-day Astor to the regular run at the Hollywood. Size: 75 lines on 2 col.

(Right) The only extra advertising for "Mr. Jordan" at the New York Music Hall, this unusual 180 lines on 3 col., endorsement in the New York dailies, was observed by one-third the city's population, according to figures submitted by Dave Lipton, Columbia advertising manager. This came about through a Ross-Federal cross-section survey indicating that over one million newspaper-buyers had read all of the ad, with almost that many more reading some part of it.

She made Texans cheer when she proved: "There are no illegitimate babies, only illegitimate parents!"

The ANNIVERSARY of a Memorable Event

A year ago, we presented a picture which received instantaneous and unanimous acclaim from critics and public alike. It was "Pride and Prejudice". Its leading player was lovely Greer Garson. It was produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

On Wednesday we will celebrate the anniversary of "Pride and Prejudice" by a most unusual event, the Hollywood Premiere Performance at Regular Prices of an equally outstanding motion picture.

Fittingly the film chosen to signalize this occasion is M-G-M's magnificent Technicolor production "BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST" Miss Garson again heads a cast of distinguished players, which also includes Walter Pidgeon and such favorites as Felix Bressart, remembered for his part in "Ninotchka", Marsha Hunt, Fay Holden and others of equally high caliber.

But beyond the excellence of its cast, BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST rises to rare heights of screen entertainment by virtue of its deeply moving and inspiring story that has in it the simple, human truthfulness of which great drama is made.

We are indeed happy that we have been able to prevail upon Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to permit us to play BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST at this time, many weeks before its general release date.

I HEARD IT FROM MAX CORKLE

It was a fascinating story, so fascinating when it was told to me that I doubted my own ears - the story about this fellow named JOE and MR. JORDAN and MESSENGER 7D 2 and two blondes . . . one good . . one bad, to say nothing of MAX CORKLE himself.

We finally put it all together and there it was, a complete story, a story off the beaten track, a story that had never been told before. True it presented a great problem in casting. We were eager for performances which would present the most natural flow imaginable of the actors' individual talents, and now that it is all over and HERE COMES MR. JORDAN has been produced, we feel that we have succeeded.

Just a few years ago I was asked by my associates to endorse a great motion picture produced by our Studio. I refused because of a self-imposed rule I had observed in twenty-five years of motion picture production, during which time I had never openly communicated with the public regarding the merits of our own pictures.

Because of the extraordinary impression made upon me by HERE COMES MR. JORDAN, I am breaking my rule and giving public expression to my belief that we have made an impressive motion picture . . a gay, funny, happy picture . . a comedy which you will love.

I hope the public will forgive this venture into print; it may never happen again.

AVERAGE U. S. FAMILY SPENDS HALF OF AMUSEMENT BUDGET ON FILMS

New Government Statistics on Spending in 32 Cities Show Increase in All Income Brackets Since 1936 Survey

Statistical evidence of the motion picture's number one position in the amusement budget of Mr. Average American and his family is contained in a study of family expenditures in 32 selected cities by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the U. S. Department of Labor. It indicates that in typical cities, ranging from the metropoli of New York and Chicago, through large, and middle-sized cities to towns of between 10,000 and 20,000 population the average wage earner spends better than half his recreation budget at the motion picture boxoffice.

The study was compiled with the cooperation of the Works Progress Administration from questionnaires obtained from about 625,000 sample families, white and negro, in 32 representative urban centers. It covers 16 income brackets ranging from $250 a year to $10,000 or more a year. The study is considered to be one of the most complete analyses of American spending habits ever attempted.

"Necessities" and "Luxuries"

The introduction of the report notes that previous distinctions between expenses, dividing all outlays into "necessities" and "luxuries," have become vague, and in some instances meaningless.

"To many American families a radio set, the current movie, a package of cigarettes, some play equipment, and the daily newspaper seem as much a family need as food to eat, clothing to wear, or rooms to live in," according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. "Improvement in the techniques of production and reduction of the working day and working week have multiplied the chances for leisure-time consumption."

Expenditures for admissions, almost exclusively to motion pictures, take the largest single segment of a recreation budget that covers outlay for radios, reading, sports, club dues, musical instruments and miscellaneous means and equipment for leisure time diversion. The proportion of admissions decreases from a high of almost 90 per cent in the lowest income classes to less than half in groups above $7,500 a year. The latter it is noted, are able to engage in extensive club life, sports and similar activities while spending actually as much or more for admissions as do lower-income groups.

Motion pictures take the lion's share of admissions money in almost every income class up to $5,000 and in some cities above that figure. However, the report observes, expenditure for film entertainment in proportion to income shows a curved rather than straight line. A saturation point appears in the levelling off of expenditures in income groups above $3,000 a year. Roughly this limit to movie-buying appears to fall between an average expenditure of $35 to $45 a year. This would seem to place average movie-buying at approximately one show a week for the family.

New York City according to the report is the best motion picture market in the country. Both in the total dollar volume of boxoffice income, and the proportion of motion picture admissions to the recreation budget it is far ahead of all other cities. At the $1,250 to $1,499 income bracket, for example, New Yorkers spent 64 per cent of their recreation budget on admissions, or $21.30. For Chicago, Atlanta, Providence and Portland, Ore., the ratio was 50, 44, 44, and 36 per cent of the totals.

While the lines of increase in expenditures for movies, games, sports and other recreation items follow parallel curves in all other cities of the country they show a sharp divergence in income brackets above $3,000 in New York. While film admissions drop, other admissions, sports, etc., increase sharply. This may be attributed to the metropolis' unique position in offering so many divergent opportunities for recreation. For the average city the motion picture theatre remains the center of amusement at all income brackets.

Portland, Ore., Lowest

Lowest proportionate expenditure for motion pictures was reported from Portland, Ore. The report attributed the average of 36 per cent of the total there to exceptionally widespread memberships in clubs and organizations and to prevalence of outdoor sports activity. At the $1,500 to $2,000 level Portland families spent 27 per cent of their recreation budget for movies against 54 per cent for New York.

Among the middle-sized cities there is slight divergence between the expenditure lines for motion picture admissions, indicating a similar pattern of expense for motion pictures, relative to income class. The small cities, east and west, are relatively alike in respect to motion picture expenses. Both run definitely high when compared with the middle-sized cities.

"A plausible explanation of the relatively high movie expense in small towns is that movies are the sole type of low-price admissions readily accessible and open daily," the report observes.

The percentage of recreation expense paid to competitive theatre amusements, circuses, concerts and lectures increases as income increases, while the percentage paid for pictures decreases. The total film expenditure remains highest at all times, however, with the exception of New York city where it is exceeded above $7,500.

"While the curves for movies behave like a 'necessity' item, such as food, those for plays, concerts and lectures behave like a 'luxury' item. The former appears to be a poor man's recreation, the latter a diversion of the well-to-do" the report observes.

The decrease in percentages for motion pictures as income increases is evident among all cities but most strikingly in New York. There families with incomes between $500 and $750 a year spent $16 for recreation, 78 per cent of which went to motion pictures. Those with incomes between $1,500 and $2,000 spent about $44 on recreation with more than half (54 per cent) going to movies. Those with incomes between $4,000 and $5,000 spent $180 on recreation, 23 per cent of which went to movies. The comparative Portland figures were: $500-750 class, $22 for recreation, 23 per cent to movies; $1,500-2,000 class, $50 for recreation, 27 per cent for movies; $4,000-5,000 class, $173 to recreation, only 12 per cent to movies.

Negro Expenditures Less

Negro expenditures for motion pictures, in a special analysis in New York, Columbus, O., Atlanta, Columbia, S. C., and Mobile are reported to be less than for white families in all except four of 44 income brackets. In terms of percentages of income the white families are also higher. However, the report notes, that while in the four cities white families spend more per family than do Negro families at comparable income classes, the proportion of all recreation expense going to movies is similar in the two groups.

While not classed in the same recreational division as motion pictures, sports, and other admission-charging amusements, expenditures for tobacco and newspapers are listed by the report as a major outlet for American recreational money. In 83 per cent of the income groups in 16 typical cities tobacco expenditures exceeded motion pictures and newspapers combined. In all income levels above $1,250 the motion picture outlay topped family purchases of newspapers and other reading matter. Below that level the two- or three-cent paper, on a yearly average, attracted slightly more of the recreation dollar than did the box-office. In Chicago, Omaha and the Small New England cities movies did not exceed newspapers until income reached $1,750 a year.

With exception of the two metropolises, New York and Chicago the report also notes that contributions to churches exceed motion picture expenditures in almost all income brackets except the lowest two or three (that is up to $1,250 per year).

Specific items of expenditures, on a national average, and giving a general idea of their relative importance in the family budget is noted by the report as follows: 1) tobacco, 2) church, 3) motion pictures, 4) newspapers, 5) games and sports, 6) community chest and welfare contributions, 7) magazines, 8) club dues, 9) books. Expenditure items in a "necessity" class are not included.

AMUSEMENT BUDGETS SHOW INCREASE

Recreation expenditures of the average American wage earner's family have increased steadily since 1934-36 when the Bureau of Labor Statistics in cooperation with the Works Progress Administration surveyed urban family expenses as part of a study of consumer purchases. According to the July issue of the Bureau's monthly Labor Review recreation outlays during 1940 for a typical group of wage earners were approximately 23.1 per cent above the 1934-36 figures.

The Review estimates that five and a half million city families representing the typical American class of urban wage earners and clerical workers sampled in the 1935 cross-section spent $557,100,000 for entertainment during 1940 compared with $452,500,000 reported in 1935. The money was spent for films, reading matter, tobacco, sports, games equipment and hobbies. Total expenditures for the group rose to approximately $9,735,900,000 in 1940 from $8,339,400,000 in 1934-36. Figures for the group of wage earners and clerical workers are estimated as representing approximately one seventh of the national total.

ALOMA OF THE SOUTH SEAS
(Paramount)

Drama (Technicolor)
Produced by B. G. DeSylva. Directed by Alfred Santell. From the play by LeRoy Clemens and John B. Hymer.

SYNOPSIS

On a Tahitian-type island in the South Seas a group of ten-year-old native girls are dancing for the chief and high priest. From the group he will select a girl who will be betrothed to his ten-year-old son. At the moment the son, Tanoa (Scotty Beckett) and his cousin, Revo (Billy Boy) are on a ledge, above the village, watching the ceremony. The chief picks Aloma (Norma Jean Nelson). At the ceremony she administers a beating to Tanoa. Then Corky (Lynne Overman), the white man on the island, takes Tanoa to the United States to be educated.

Fifteen years later, Tanoa (now played by Jon Hall) and Corky return. Aloma (Dorothy Lamour) isn't happy about it because she thinks she's in love with Revo (Philip Reed). Revo, although in love with Aloma, is secretly seeing a Eurasian girl named Kari (Katherine DeMille). Aloma and Tanoa meet by accident and recognize each other only after an argument. The old chief dies and Tanoa becomes head of the tribe.

Kari discovers Tanoa and Aloma together at the Sacred Pool, which is forbidden as they are not married. Kari accordingly sees a chance to get Revo to give up Aloma. When Revo hears Kari's story, he dashes to the Sacred Pool and tells Alona that he's still in love with her. Aloma tells Revo that she is in love with Tanoa. When Revo threatens revenge, Aloma tries to get Tanoa to return to the States.

Revo and Tanoa fight, and then Revo and his henchmen and Kari leave the island. Suddenly, Kari finds that, in the night, Revo has turned around. They're going back. When she protests, Revo tosses her to the sharks and death.

Back at the island, all is in readiness for the wedding of Aloma and Tanoa. A native dashes up to tell the high priest that Revo is back and that he is carrying a sub-machine gun belonging to Corky. Corky goes after Revo, but Revo, on a hill, shoots at Tanoa. Tanoa and Aloma, however, are kneeling and the bullet hits the high priest.

The Sacred Mountain promptly becomes volcanic in retribution. The great explosion of Krakatoa takes place, with earthquakes, rumblings and fire. Revo dies in a stream of lava. Aloma and Tanoa are left to complete their wedding and rule the island.

THE LITTLE FOXES
(RKO Radio)

Drama

A Samuel Goldwyn Production. Directed by William Wyler. From the stage play by Lillian Hellman.

SYNOPSIS

In a small southern town in the early 1900's, Regina Giddens (Bette Davis), a beautiful but avaricious woman, dreams of becoming rich and moving to Chicago with her daughter, Alexandra (Teresa Wright). When Regina hears from her ruthless brothers, Ben (Charles Dingle) and Oscar Hubbard (Carl Benton Reid), of a scheme by which she can make a fortune by investing $75,000 in a new cotton-mill, she sends Alexandra to Baltimore for Horace (Herbert Marshall), her invalid husband.

Horace arrives and Regina tries to persuade him to let her have the necessary capital, but he, realizing that to do so would but indulge his wife's insane ambition, refuses.

The Hubbard brothers become impatient at the delay. Oscar's son, Leo (Dan Duryea), steals $75,000 in bonds that Horace keeps in his safety deposit box in the bank. When he discovers the theft, Horace tells Regina that he is not going to expose her brothers, as she urges him to do, but as a punishment for her greed is going to pretend that he lent them the bonds, to be repaid to Regina, without interest, after his death.

Thwarted even in her revenge, Regina savagely denounces her husband and torments him until he has a heart attack that brings about his death. She is now able to blackmail her brothers into giving her an even larger share of the new property than Horace's money would buy.

But her victory is also a defeat. Alexandra, beginning to understand her mother's selfishness and wickedness, leaves her alone in the empty house and goes off to find happiness with David Hewitt (Richard Carlson), the man she loves.

THE GAY FALCON (RKO Radio)

Melodrama, Romance

Produced by Howard Benedict. Directed by Irving Reis.

SYNOPSIS

Gay Laurence (George Sanders), widely known as the Falcon because of his exploits in crime detection, lolls indolently in what he calls his brokerage office together with his stooge associate, Goldie Locke (Allen Jenkins). This office has been established because Gay's fiancee, Elinor Benford (Anne Hunter), has insisted he give up detective work.

The calm is broken by the entrance of Helen Reed (Wendy Barrie), who is secretary to Maxine Wood (Gladys Cooper), famous New York party-giver. Miss Wood is anxious to have Gay at her party in honor of Mrs. Gardiner (Lucille Gleason), wealthy society woman. At the last few parties Miss Wood has given there has been a jewel robbery.

Gay escorts Elinor. While he is dancing with Helen, Mrs. Gardiner surreptitiously slips her famous diamond into Gay's pocket. A few minutes later Mrs. Gardiner is found dead with no one but Goldie near her. Michael Waldeck (Arthur Shields), the detective chief, accompanied by two of his men, Bates and Grimes (Edward S. Brophy and Eddie Dunn), strongly suspect Goldie and Gay are mixed up in the murder.

Weber (Damian O'Flynn), one of the male guests at the party, kidnaps Goldie. Weber is shot and again Goldie is found by Waldeck with a body. In the meantime, Gay begins to suspect Manuel Retana (Turhan Bey), a smooth foreigner. When Retana is also found dead, Gay proves that Miss Wood is the murderer and also the "brains" of an outfit that gave parties for impecunious society people who permitted their jewels to be stolen so they could collect the insurance.

SCATTERGOOD MEETS BROADWAY (RKO Radio)

Comedy-Drama

Produced by Jerrold T. Brandt. Directed by Christy Cabanne. From the stories by Clarence Budington Kelland.

SYNOPSIS

Scattergood Baines (Guy Kibbee), storekeeper, sage and Good Samaritan of Coldriver, follows Dave Drew (William Henry) to New York to keep an eye on him. Dave plans to sell a play he has written. In New York, Dave meets Peggy (Mildred Coles), a frustrated actress doing secretarial work. She promises to help him sell his play by submitting it to her employers, J. J. Bent and H. C. Bard, B&B Theatrical Enterprises.

Bent and Bard (Frank Jenks and Bradley Page) are a couple of shoestring producers. They leap at the opportunity to produce Dave's play, since it offers Diana (Joyce Compton) a chance for a good part, and because there is a prospect of an "angel" to back it. Dave inadvertently lets the information drop that Scattergood is a very wealthy man. Diana tries to compromise Scattergood when her pleadings fail but Scattergood brings forth his wife, Mirandy (Emma Dunn) from his bedroom. Diana faints.

Bent and Bard with Diana, abscond with $15,000 obtained from Peggy's sweetheart, Quentin Van Deusen (Chester Clute). When Quentin holds Dave responsible, Scattergood puts up the money for the play and assigns Peggy the leading role. The play is a success and Bent, Bard and Diana return for their cut. Scattergood cleverly arranges for their arrest.

SIX-GUN GOLD (RKO Radio)

Western

Produced by Bert Gilroy. Directed by David Howard.

SYNOPSIS

Don Cardigan (Tim Holt), on his way to visit his brother Brad (Lane Chandler), U. S. Marshal at Placer City, and two pals, Smokey (Ray Whitley) and Whopper (Lee "Lasses" White) stage a race with a drunken stage driver to rescue Jenny Blanchard (Fern Emmett), a fussy spinster. She invites them to visit her and her brother, Ben (Eddie Waller), and his daughter, Penny (Jan Clayton).

In Placer City, Don is stunned to find a stranger (Leroy Mason) posing as his brother. When Don, without revealing his identity, makes some pointed inquiries, the pseudo marshal and his cronies run Don and his friends out of town on a trumped-up horse-stealing charge. They head for Blanchards.

From Blanchard, Don learns that the fake marshal is not giving sufficient protection to various gold shipments. Don then reveals his identity and tells Blanchard that the marshal is a phoney. They decide to reroute a large gold shipment as the first order of business. A spy for the bogus marshal learns of the change of plans and tips off the marshal. The spy, Vander (Harry Harvey), meanwhile fills the bags with sand and attempts to double-cross the gang and make off with the gold. Don and his men overtake Vander and recover the gold. They also force him to reveal where Brad, the real marshal, is hidden.

In a gun fight at the hideout cabin, the miners, led by Don, rescue Brad and wipe out the fake marshal and his gang.

UNEXPECTED UNCLE (RKO Radio)

Comedy, Romance

Produced by Tay Garnett. Directed by Peter Godfrey.

SYNOPSIS

Kathleen Brown (Anne Shirley) loses her job in a swanky Palm Beach shop as a result of the unwanted attentions of wealthy young Johnny Kerrigan (James Craig). Thanks to the kindly interest of passerby Seton Mansley (Charles Coburn), Kathleen gets her job back. Soon Johnny returns to make a handsome apology. Kathleen takes the advice of Seton, and accompanies Johnny to lunch.

Johnny, assuming Seton is Kathleen's uncle, also asks him to lunch and takes the pair of them to the exclusive Colony Club, where they meet a trio of socialites, Carol West (Renee Haal), Sara Cochran (Astrid Allwyn) and polo-player Tommy Turner (Russell Gleason). Later, Johnny invites Kathleen to his apartment for supper, but she refuses. Resentfully, Johnny wrecks his car and Kathleen takes him to her room near by to bandage his wrist. The landlady indignantly orders Kathleen to leave.

Kathleen goes to the trailer camp, where "Uncle" Seton lives. Johnny straightens things out with Kathleen. He has to fly back to Kerrigan City where he owns a manufacturing company. Seton takes her to the airport and the plane takes off with them aboard. Johnny invites her and Seton to stay with him as house guests. Later, Kathleen quarrels with Johnny and runs off to Palm Beach.

To Johnny, Seton confesses he is really the noted millionaire Alfred Mowbray, who walked out of a big business enterprise to enjoy life. Johnny thinks it's a swell idea. So when Kathleen seeks her "Uncle" at the trailer camp, she finds a shiny new trailer with Johnny waiting for her.

UNDER FIESTA STARS (Republic)

Western with Music

Associate producer, Harry Grey, Directed by Frank McDonald.

SYNOPSIS

When Pop Erwin is fatally injured in a mine accident, he leaves his mine, ranch and the residue of his estate to Gene (Gene Autry) and niece Barbara (Carol Hughes). It is his wish that Gene and Barbara continue to operate it, but Barbara, on arrival from the east, wants to sell and is provoked at Gene's refusal.

She and her girl friend, Kitty Callahan (Pauline Drake), try to win Gene and his pal, Frog Millhouse (Smiley Burnette), over to their side, by wheedling. Although Frog succumbs to Kitty's charms—much to the disgust of his young brother, Tadpole (Joseph Strauch, Jr.)—Gene pays no attention to Barbara. Enraged, Barbara goes to two lawyers, Arnold (Ivan Miller) and Fry (Sam Flint), in an attempt to break the will.

Arnold and Fry have been trying to gain control of the mine for years. They stir up trouble which results in the miners leading a campaign against Gene. Barbara, realizing she is in love with Gene, reverses herself again. Gene and Frog are ambushed. However, little Tadpole manages to get help. Gene risks his life to capture Arnold and Fry, and is successful.

WHEN LADIES MEET
(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Drama

Produced by Robert Z. Leonard and Orville O. Dull. Directed by Mr. Leonard. Based on the play by Rachel Crothers.

SYNOPSIS

Jimmy Lee (Robert Taylor) is in love with Mary Howard (Joan Crawford), who writes popular books about romance. Jimmy finds that Mary is beginning to believe what she writes, and is falling for her suave publisher, Rogers Woodruff (Herbert Marshall). Mary's new book deals with the delicate subject of a girl who loves a married man. Mary can't decide on a last chapter, but has almost come to the conclusion that her heroine would bravely go ahead and have the affair with the married man. Rogers encourages her in this.

About this time, Jimmy meets Clare Woodruff (Greer Garson), Rogers' wife. Then he learns that Mary and Rogers have planned a week-end rendezvous at the country home of Bridget Drake (Spring Byington), Mary's dizzy friend. By a ruse, Jimmy gets Rogers away from the house. The next step in Jimmy's plan is to drop in on Mary with Clare, introducing her as a "cousin." Mary and Clare become friends.

When Rogers returns there is a showdown. Mary feels sorry for Clare and waits for Rogers to take her in his arms. Instead, Rogers stuns Mary by telling her that he loves Clare and always has. His other affairs haven't meant a thing. But this time, Clare is through. She tells Rogers off, and leaves.

Rogers is broken by the realization that Clare means it. Jimmy tells him not to be a fool, to go after Clare, and if he can prove himself a devoted husband, maybe she will take him back. Mary is bitter. She decides that her parting with Jimmy must be final. But, Jimmy sees it differently and convinces Mary to see it his way.

THE PRIME MINISTER
(Warner Brothers)

Historical Drama

Produced at Teddington Studios, England. Directed by Thorold Dickinson.

SYNOPSIS

In 1837, a young dandified fashionable writer, Benjamin Disraeli (John Gielgud) has an accident when his velocipede crashes into one of Mrs. Wyndham Lewis (Diana Wynyard). She is reading one of his novels and suggests that he enter politics. At a garden party, Lord Melbourne (Frederick Leister), Liberal party leader, makes the same suggestion to Disraeli.

Mrs. Lewis, who controls a borough, goes to the Conservative party leaders and offers them a seat if they nominate Disraeli. They accede to her demands. Disraeli's maiden speech in the House of Commons is a fiasco. His foppish dress and ornate words afford the members great amusement. He is kept from resigning by Melbourne's encouragement and advice. Later, he disagrees with Melbourne on politics. All over England, there are Chartist riots. The Liberals, led by Melbourne and Gladstone (Stephen Murray), want to abolish income taxes. Disraeli does not.

Disraeli marries Mrs. Lewis. At the next session of Commons, Disraeli breaks Melbourne, his personal friend but political enemy, but is not given a position on the new cabinet because he is considered "unsound." Encouraged by his wife, he forms his own group and becomes prime minister. Although Disraeli has trouble forming a cabinet he receives the support of Queen Victoria. He purchases the Suez Canal and the island of Cyprus as a naval base.

Mrs. Disraeli dies and only the wishes of Victoria keeps him in politics. Bismarck, the German Chancellor, and others begin to act against Turkey and the Balkans. Disraeli secretly mobilizes the Indian Army. When Bismarck is certain that England means to go to war if the status quo is not maintained, he gives in. Honors are heaped on Disraeli.

ICE-CAPADES
(Republic)

Comedy and Ice Skating

Associate producer, Robert North. Directed by Joseph Santley.

SYNOPSIS

Newsreel cameraman Bob Clemens (James Ellison), who is allergic to women, is assigned to cover the Lake Placid exhibition of Karen Vadja (Renie Riano), the Swiss ice queen. He misses the plane to Placid and after a consultation with his pal, Colonna (Jerry Colonna), he decides that he must make some showing for his boss, Robert Ellis (Alan Mowbray).

He goes to Central Park to photograph shots of a skater picked at random, to submit as those of the Swiss skater. The girl he selects is Marie Bergen (Dorothy Lewis), who is wanted by the immigration authorities for having overstayed her passport. Impresario Larry Herman (Phil Silvers), seeing the newsreel and realizing the skater is not only talented but pretty, decides to star her in an ice spectacle to be called "Ice-Capades."

He sends for Karen Vadja's agent, draws up the contracts, and invites the press to meet his "discovery." Then he meets Karen, who is a good skater but far from pretty. Herman calls off the show, and instigates suit against the newsreel company for the costly hoax. Ellis blames Bob and Colonna. They propose that they find the girl who posed for the pictures.

Since Marie has a deportation threat hanging over her, she and Bob get married. Marie becomes the star of the ice show, which features the "Ice-Capades" company, including the following stars of the ice: Belita, Lois Dworshak, Megan Taylor, Vera Hruba, Red McCarthy, Phil Taylor, Jackson and Lynam, the Benoits and Dench and Stewart.

FLYING BLIND
(Paramount)

Action Drama

Produced by William H. Pine and William C. Thomas. Directed by Frank McDonald.

SYNOPSIS

Jim Clark (Richard Arlen) resigns his job with a commercial airline after being double-crossed by Nick Drake (Roger Pryor), a fellow pilot. Because she loves Clark, stewardess Shirley Brooks (Jean Parker) also leaves the company. Clark obtains backing and sets up a "Honeymoon Air Service," specializing in flying elopers to Las Vegas and back to Los Angeles. Aiding him are Shirley and Riley (Eddie Quillan), a mechanic.

Clark becomes so immersed in his business endeavors that he seldom finds time to spend any romantic moments with Shirley. She decides to marry Bob Fuller (Dick Purcell), a newspaper man, but Clark ships Fuller off on a phony publicity job.

Passage on one of the trips is booked by a man named Karolek (Nils Asther), a foreign agent who is interested in obtaining a new airplane transformer. Drake is in cahoots with Karolek. On the "Honeymoon" flight beside Karolek are Miss Danila (Kay Sutton), his accomplice, and a nit-wit couple, Scoutmaster Gimble (Grady Sutton) and his fiance, Veronica (Marie Wilson). Riley is another passenger.

While the marriage is taking place in Las Vegas, Drake removes the transformer from a big bomber. Drake kills a workman. Drake persuades Clark to allow him passage on the trip back to Los Angeles. There is a fight on the trip back and Clark is forced to land on a bushy plateau. Drake is killed just before the plane takes off by a shot from the injured Riley. Karolek is outsmarted and Clark brings the plane back to Las Vegas safely. Clark is a hero in Shirley's eyes.

SYNOPSIS

Lee Walker (James Seay), manager of the Rio de Oro Division of the Great Northern Fruit Company, offers a ridiculously low price for the planter's fruit. So, Pancho (Leo Carrillo), a planter, negotiates with another company. That night, while guarding the first load of fruit to be sent to the new company, Pancho's foreman, Andy (Andy Devine) and Andy's new-found friend, Kansas (Dick Foran), are attacked by natives, who have ruined a banana shipment with kerosene, but Kansas repels the attackers.

Following a riot of workers led by Cesar (Francis McDonald) at Pancho's plantation and quelled by Andy and Kansas, Pancho calls on Russell (Wade Boteler), the local banker, for a loan to pay the men. Russell refuses. Pancho is agreeably surprised when a girl chemist, Smitty (Ann Doran), arrives to make an analysis of the soil for Great Northern. Kansas is accused of the murder of a planter, but escapes the police. Linda (Marcia Ralston), Walker's wife, visits Pancho's place and makes a play for Kansas. He incurs her wrath when he pays little attention to her.

Linda tips off Walker as to the whereabouts of Kansas. Walker arrives with the police chief. Kansas insists that Walker accompany him, Pancho and Andy on the boat trip down the river. Walker, who has arranged a murder trap, tries to escape from the boat. This is a tip-off to Kansas, who it turns out is an investigator for Great Northern. They force Walker to confess and the crooked manager implicates Russell in the plot to swindle the honest fruit planters.

LOOK WHO'S LAUGHING (RKO Radio)

Comedy
Produced and directed by Allan Dwan.

SYNOPSIS

Their last broadcast of the season completed, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy give a party at which Bergen announces the engagement of his faithful secretary, Julie (Lucille Ball), to his business manager, Jerry Norton (Lee Bonnell). Bergen wonders why he is gloomy, not realizing that he is really in love with Julie himself. Meanwhile, Julie trains Marge (Dorothy Lovett) to take her place with Bergen.

Bergen and Charlie start off on a vacation in Bergen's plane. They run out of gas and land at the flying field at Wistful Vista. Jim Jordan (Fibber McGee) and his wife, Marion (Molly), are struggling to have the community retain the Wistful Vista flying field, for Fibber, president of the Chamber of Commerce, hopes to induce the Horton Airplane Company to build its new factory there. Gildersleeve (Harold Peary) is trying to sell the Horton company another site.

Learning of Fibber's troubles, Bergen assures him he'll fix everything up; he's a personal friend of Hilary Horton (Neil Hamilton). But the wily Gildersleeve learns that Charlie dislikes Wistful Vista and wants to go south where the pretty girls are. So he persuades Charlie to fake a telegram from Julie to Bergen, in order to get Bergen out of the way. Bergen flies north, learns he has been fooled and returns to Wistful Vista with Julie. Jerry and Marge follow by car.

Bergen, Julie and the McGees evolve a scheme to double-cross Gildersleeve. Marge and Jerry arrive, announcing that they discovered they love each other, so they stopped and got married en route. Then Jerry reminds the forgetful Bergen that he is the chief stockholder in the Horton Company, which just about fixes everything up.

REG'LAR FELLERS (Producers Rel. Corp.)

Juvenile Drama
Produced and directed by Arthur Dreifuss. From the cartoon strip, "Reg'lar Fellers", by Gene Byrnes.

SYNOPSIS

"Reg'lar Fellers" visit Hetty Carter (Sarah Padden), wealthy eccentric, in an effort to secure the use of her barn as a "labbertory." Hetty is the mother-in-law of Caroline Carter (Maren Mayo), whose baby, Ruthie, is the club mascot. Hetty, an introvert since her missing son, Larry, married Caroline against her wishes, refuses the youngsters the use of the barn. They decide to do Hetty a favor by locating her son.

Pinhead (Billy Lee), one of the "Reg'lar Fellers," obtains Larry's last address from Emory (Roscoe Ates), proprietor of the town hardware store. They write to Larry in New York, but the letter gets into the hands of Ferrell (Don Stowell) and Lubec (Lew Launa), two crooks who have framed Larry into prison.

Ferrell and Lubec arrive in Middleville and convince Hetty they are old friends of her son. They are invited to stay at Hetty's house. Meanwhile, Police Captain Dan Flynn (Jack Smith), upon receipt of a letter from the New York police, questions Jimmy Dugan (Buddy Boles), moving spirit of "Reg'lar Fellers." Flynn tells Jimmy that Larry is in prison. "Reg'lar Fellers" make plans to watch the two strangers.

The youngsters make a secret hideout of Hetty's barn. Bumps (Alfalfa Switzer) rigs up several weird "enemy catchers." When finally Ferrell and Lubec loot Hetty's house and try to make their escape they are caught in Bumps' "traps." The police take charge of Ferrell and Lubec and Hetty rigs up the barn as a permanent "labbertory" for "Reg'lar Fellers."

DOCTORS DON'T TELL (Republic)

Drama
Associate producer, Albert J. Cohen. Directed by Jacques Tourneur. Title from the Liberty Magazine serial.

SYNOPSIS

The day before Interne Ralph Sawyer (John Beal) is to receive his medical degree, Diana Wayne (Florence Rice), a night-club singer, is brought to the hospital after being injured in an automobile accident. None of the staff surgeons are available, so Ralph performs the necessary operation. His irate superiors suspend him, but finally allow him to graduate when Diana recovers.

Ralph opens an office with two of his classmates, Frank Blake (Edward Norris) and Hubert Piper (Grady Sutton). They have few patients. Ralph and Frank spend most of their time trying to win Diana's affections. Ralph is deeply disappointed when Diana decides in favor of Frank. The desire to earn more money to marry Diana causes Frank to accept a large medical fee from Joe Grant (Douglas Fowley), gangster, who forces Frank to continue as his physician under threat of exposure.

Ralph, meanwhile, severs his partnership with Frank and becomes a medical examiner in the District Attorney's office. Diana learns of Frank's associations with the gangster and returns his ring. Frank gives up his practice and hides himself in a remote section of the city. He is very bitter towards Ralph, believing his former partner has been responsible for Diana's learning the truth.

When he discovers Ralph is not responsible for breaking up his engagement, he sends Ralph X-Ray photographs of Grant's operation, and testifies at the trial. As Frank is leaving court, he is killed by one of Grant's thugs.

SUCKER LIST (MGM)

Crime Does Not Pay (P-206)

This subject delves into a field well-known as a sucker's game and brings to light the operations of crooked racing touts. It opens on a middle-aged man named Gus who is carefully studying the finish of the third race through a pair of powerful binoculars. By means of a compact short-wave broadcasting set Gus transmits the results of the race to a truck parked several miles away. Inside the truck, Slick jots down the winners and hands them to another man who stencils and mimeographs them on a tipsheet called "Best Selections." The tipsheets are rushed to the track and carefully placed about the grounds. In this manner the "sucker bait" is set. Other methods are also employed to increase the sucker list. When the customers protest they are set upon by the gang.

TROUBLE IN STORE (WB)

Hollywood Novelty (6306)

Arthur Bryan in this one tells the story of the time he experienced a bit of difficulty in a department store. He tried to exchange a pair of stockings for his wife, and before he was finished, he was arrested for shoplifting, molesting a woman shopper and being a general nuisance around the store. Bryan says it was none of his doing. It all resulted from his getting caught in a mob scene around a bargain counter. When the women shoppers got through with him, he wasn't fit for any argument.

IT'S A HAP-HAP-HAPPY DAY (Par.)

Gabby Color Cartoon (GO-8)

Gabby, the bossy little Town Crier of Lilliput, horns in on the Mayor's camping trip and proceeds to take charge. Gabby tries to set up the tent but becomes entangled in the ropes. Then a collapsible cot gets the better of him. After felling a tree the wrong way, Gabby strings a hammock on an angry moose's antlers. As the moose takes Gabby for a ride, the Mayor is left to sleep in peace.

HOW GOES CHILE? (RKO)

Special (14,503)

In this third and last of the special series on South America, the commentator, Julien Bryan, points out that protracted modern warfare cannot be waged without nitrates. From Chile comes ninety percent of the world's supply. Mr. Bryan further points out that Chile's army was trained for over twenty years by German officers. In southern Chile the rich landowner, the merchants and leaders in every field are German—the Swastika, according to Mr. Bryan, being more prominently displayed in Chile than anywhere else outside of Nazi-controlled countries.

WINTER IN ESKIMO LAND (20th-Fox)

Father Hubbard (1110)

Winter comes to Eskimo land with the suddenness of a Summer shower, the only difference being that it comes to stay for long, dark months. A typical Eskimo house, not an igloo, is shown, with the natives therein playing cards with a deck left by some whalers of another day. "Big Ed" Levin, one of Father Hubbard's associates, introduces Eskimo youngsters to physical training featuring boxing matches and football. The break-up of Winter comes and the Eskimos go on a walrus hunt.

DUMB LIKE A FOX (Col.)

Fable Cartoon (2757)

Papa Hound tells his little puppy hound he is too young to go fox hunting. Disappointed, the little fellow decides to go out on his own and very shortly meets a sly fox. Never having seen a fox, he innocently asks where he can find one. The cunning fox leads the pup to a beaver busily engaged in building a home. The little pup interferes with the beaver's work, ruining the house while the fox, in the background, enjoys the proceedings. The pup then urges the fox to lead him further, and this time Mr. Fox guides him to a cave. The little hound starts pulling an unwilling victim behind him—a skunk! Worried Papa Hound welcomes his prodigal pup home, but seeing the captured skunk administers paternal justice.

OF PUPS AND PUZZLES (MGM)

Passing Parade (K-288)

How animals have aided in attaining the utmost production efficiency through the science known as psychometry is told here by John Nesbitt. The theory is that by observing animals' reactions to certain stimuli, one can judge better what to expect from humans under comparable conditions. To illustrate this, several tests are made with animals. Then a human test is shown, which briefly, concerns the reactions of three men to a shot fired while taking an examination for a job.

READY, WILLING, BUT UNABLE (Col.)

El Brendel (2434)

El Brendel and his pal are truck drivers. They run over a dummy and, believing they have killed a man, make haste to bury him. They mistake a girls' seminary for a cemetery and remove the supposed corpse into the school grounds. When they find that they are being watched by a colored janitor, they run. A wild chase follows on the school ground and in the dormitory where the girls are sleeping. They put the "corpse" in one of the beds. In the meantime, the head falls off and on to a parrot, which causes much consternation. In the end, the cops have to straighten matters out.

THE LION CLAW (Col.)

Serial—15 Episodes

Culver Benson (James Metcalfe), after quarreling with his two brothers over the division of a huge fortune in gold, is murdered by a mysterious man known as The Iron Claw. Newspaper reporter Bob Lane (Charles Quigley) and his pal, Jack Strong (Walter Sande), come to the eerie, old murder house and find the suspects as numerous as the relatives.

These include Anton Benson (Forrest Taylor), older brother of the murdered man; another brother, Roy (Norman Willis), an ex-convict; Benson's nephew, Dr. James Benson (Alex Callam), and Simon Leach (Allen Doone), who is married to Milly (Edythe Elliott), Anton's daughter.

Lane discovers all are after Anton's gold and that even an outsider, Silk (Charles King), is hanging around conniving with Roy. The only sincere person that Lane meets is Patricia Benson (Joyce Bryant), Anton's niece.

After a series of climatic events, which sees Anton and Simon Leach murdered, Lane succeeds in identifying the Claw and the fiend is shot to death trying to escape.

PRAIRIE STRANGER (Columbia)

Western

Directed by Lambert Hillyer.

SYNOPSIS

Steven Monroe, M. D. (Charles Starrett), and his pal, Bones (Cliff Edwards), decide to find more fertile fields for the practice of medicine. Learning that the only doctor in Red Fork has died, they head for there. Steve's first patient is Sue Evans (Patti McCarty), daughter of one of the two big ranchers in the territory.

The people of Red Fork think Steve too young to be a doctor and a Dr. Westridge (Edmund Cobb) gets the patients. Steve accepts a job as a cow hand at Evans' (Forbes Murray) ranch. Dawson (Frank LaRue), another rancher, is out to wreck Evans' cattle business. He finds Dr. Westridge is an ex-convict, and forces him to concoct a potion that will kill Evans' cattle. Bones discovers a bottle of the poison. He takes it to Steve.

Steve is forced to flee when Dawson, learning of the discovery, brings a posse and charges that Steve is the poisoner. Westridge is killed when he attempts to make a clean breast of the poison plot. Steve and Bones recover the bullet that killed Westridge. Then Bones, taking advantage of a town dance, steals the guns of the men. By a process of elimination they discover the gun that the bullet was fired from. It belongs to Barton (Archie Twitchell), henchman of Dawson. Steve captures Barton after a chase.

THE LONE RIDER AMBUSHED (Producers Rel. Corp.)

Western

Produced by Sigmund Neufeld. Directed by Sam Newfield.

SYNOPSIS

Mistaken for Keno Harris, Tom Cameron (George Houston), is captured and brought to the county jail where the real Keno is imprisoned. Tom shows the sheriff a letter of identification and explains that he is on the trail of the Harris gang and the $100,000 Keno salted away before he went to the pen. Tom sees Keno (also George Houston) in jail and is amazed to note the resemblance to himself.

He decides to impersonate Keno. At Seven-Mile House, Tom, as Keno, enters to find the gang, headed by Blackie Dawson (Frank Hagney), the proprietor. Fuzzy (Al St. John) riding up almost gives Tom away by recognizing him, but Tom knocks him cold to keep him quiet. Linda (Maxine Leslie), Keno's girl, accuses him of double-crossing the gang. Tom promises her that he'll prove Keno does not intend going straight as she imagines in order to keep her silent.

Keno, released from jail, forces Tom to change clothes with him and is shot by one of Blackie's henchmen. In a free-for-all at the Seven-Mile House, Tom, Fuzzy and Linda hold off the gang until a posse arrives.

WILD HORSE VALLEY (Monogram)

Western

Produced and directed by Robert Tansey.

SYNOPSIS

Jim Vernon (Tom Keene), owner of the Wild Horse Valley ranch, has a contract to deliver wild horses to the Mexican government. The two hundred-head which he already has turned over to them has been stolen and Jim's life is threatened by a gang of desperadoes.

Tom Sterling (also Tom Keene), an agent hired by the Mexican government, is sent to investigate the matter. Tom and Jim look exactly alike. Jim goes into hiding and Tom, impersonating the rancher, has several encounters with the gang. Ace (Louis Yacconelli), leader of the rustlers, tries to frame Jim by putting some of the stolen horses in Jim's corral. He then summons the sheriff and accuses Jim. Ace is unaware that Tom has taken Jim's place.

Tom is locked up, but escapes. Ace learns of the impersonation and when Betty (Betty Miles), Jim's girl friend, rushes off, Ace has his henchmen follow her. Betty meets Jim at the hotel. Ace's men attack them. Slim (Slim Andrews), a firecracker salesman, Betty and Jim set off firecrackers and manage to hold the outlaws off until Tom arrives with a posse.

Replace that yellow tint with snow white light

The New "One Kilowatt" Arcs use "National", "Suprex" and "Orotip" Carbons

1881—1941

This is our sixtieth yeor of service in the field of corbon orc lighting. Throughout the yeors "Notionol" carbons, by constont reseorch and development, have been steadily improved and adapted to the needs of the times.

● The most satisfactory projection of modern films requires a white light of daylight quality. This means high intensity projection. Color that is really natural — snappy black and white — comfortable vision at all times assure audience satisfaction which spells success for any theatre.

The modern "One Kilowatt" arcs bring High Intensity projection within the reach of any small theatre. If you are still using Low Intensity projection ask your dealer to demonstrate this new light. The difference is marvelous. Step into High — It pays dividends.

The words "National" "Suprex" and "Orotip" are trade-marks of National Carbon Company, Inc.

BOX OFFICE MONEY

WITH all the "planned economy" in the air, from gasoline to steel, to silk socks, there's not a lot to encourage the motion picture exhibitor. But there does appear, for the moment, until something else happens, a glint of cheer for the box office in the impending curb on installment buying. The money that does not have to go to the installment collector may pause in the pocket long enough to be subjected to the box office lure. Certain it is that seats to the movies are bought with free coin in hand. It's money that jingles that pays for the pictures, money that never gets on a budget.

MUCH has been said, more will be said, with verity, on both sides of the issues between Hollywood and the daily lay press, as indicated in this week's news story, about picture coverage. Meanwhile, let it be hoped that Hollywood will not forget it has the same shop rights as any other manufacturer of a mercantile product. The motion picture as merchandise has just as much claim on newspapers as soap, pickles, automobiles, department stores—which draw no scandal stories, no product criticism.

"PUBLICITY"

AMID the flotsam of publicity which the tides wash across this desk appear two items of particular mal-odor, and a pity, too, because they represent somebody trying hard.

One announces that Dr. William Moulton Marston has been conducting some "Hyde Detector Tests" at the Astor Theatre in New York and finds that there is an "average percentage of Hyde in every man of 34%," etc.

Dr. Marston is credited with the invention of the "lie detector." He bears the academic seals of several universities. Some years ago, about a dozen, he functioned in a picture to show how variously blondes and brunettes reacted to assorted stimuli. He was a lecturer at Columbia University then, where there was no demand at that time for a bologna detector.

Dividends of dignity and status for either the cinema or psychology are yet to be reported.

Again, in the shuffle, turns up a piece which announces "a four couple wedding on the stage of the Sheepshead Theatre, in Brooklyn. . . . The brides and grooms were united in marriage by a leading jurist. . . . The multiple civic ceremony was followed by religious observances at other theatres of the circuit . . ." etc.

In most of the United States marriage is considered something of a sacrament, a hallowed event in the lives of the persons directly concerned.

Will you fancy for a moment the scene some twenty years or so hence when young Richard Roe pridefully leads his sweetheart past that theatre to remark: "Poppa and Mamma were married here at the nine o'clock show in '41 and drew a full house at a forty cent top!"

That is going to be a lovely bit of Americana of '61. Redolent of glamour and sentiment and sanctity of marriage.

Now neither of these matters are to be checked against either the industrious, if imitative, young men who brought the events about. They are lads on a job trying to deliver to a management.

Somewhere along, and up, the line somebody ought to know that such devices do not represent "the American way," as represented by the tastes and mores of the majority, that such carnival procedure builds neither kudos nor acceptance for the institution of the motion picture.

FOR THE ART

THE art of the motion picture, distinctly apart from the industry and even more distinctly apart from the consumer or fan audience, or the attentions of the daily newspaper which seem to cover a little of each, has had no press. In the September issue of Theatre Arts, monthly, there is serious endeavour in that direction. Advance proofs on this desk display an important and impressive range of serious attentions in important special articles. The authors include such persons as Miss Bette Davis, with a collaborator, Mr. Walter F. Wanger, Mr. Garson Kanin, Mr. Gregg Toland, Mr. Albert Lewin, Miss Hermine Rich Isaacs, and Mr. Ashley Dukes. There are words, too, from Mr. Howard Deitz, Miss Lillian Gish, Mr. Samue Goldwyn, and Mr. Alexander Woollcott, to name but a few.

Entertaining and informative as the communications of these persons may be, the more important manifestation is that there is prospect of a meeting place in print for the concerns of those interested in the intimacies and considerations of the art of saying things on the screen, and apart from all other considerations.

That this manifestation should appear in Theatre Arts is of significance. The actual identity of interests, as well as artistic technologies, between the stage and screen, becomes, as the years pass, more and more manifest. There is one over-all function: to tell stories. The drama does it, no matter how drama is delivered to the customers. The motion picture does it "to the mostest".

TWO TO REMEMBER

THE news of the day brings to mind two pictures, which, if prints could be had, might prove of acute interest to the occasional minority audience. First, now that Iran is so much in the news with the newest of wars, there's that classic of the silent days, "Grass", covering the migration of a typical tribe of Persian nomads, living a life where desperate effort was the norm and commonplace. Their hard world is the newest arena of world destiny now. Second, there's that H. G. Wells - Alexander Korda opus, "Things to Come", a release by United Artists of the spring of '36. That was long ago. The war was far away, our public thought then. The story would seem more dramatic now.

Win With Willkie

WENDELL WILLKIE may lead motion picture leaders, as spokesman and counsel, to the industry's rebuttal of war propaganda charges, before the Senate Interstate Commerce committee appointed by Burton K. Wheeler, at hearings starting September 3rd.

Indications are that the industry is preparing strong and rather heated refutation to the charges of isolationist Senators.

Washington Merry-Go-Round, the syndicated column written by Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen from Washington, on Wednesday, linked the former GOP presidential candidate to film preparations for a militant statement of their case.

By telephone from the New York office, at 15 Broadway where he now practices law, Mr. Willkie indicated Wednesday that the Pearson and Allen story was at least premature.

Of Mr. Willkie, the columnists wrote,

"He is an old finish fighter with Congressional committees. Before he entered the political arena the repute he won battling them primed his meteoric rise.

"A militant anti-isolationist, Willkie nurses strong personal feelings about Wheeler's committee. Willkie considers it (the screen propaganda charges) a 'sneak' investigation and part of an organized isolationist drive to terrorize opponents into silence."

Senator Wheeler's committee, they observed, "may get a hot-foot when it tackles the movie-makers. They are ready to give the committee a battle on all issues it undertakes."

A vigorous reply from Will H. Hays was also indicated at New York by a spokesman for the president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. "There will be no apologetics, no supine attitude at that hearing," he said. Mr. Hays, currently in California, is reported marshalling evidence and testimony for the hearing.

As of Wednesday, Mr. Hays and Nate J. Blumberg, president of Universal, had accepted the bid to testify sent to 15 industry executives by Senator Worth Clark, committee chairman. George Schaefer, RKO chief, and chairman of the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense may also appear. From Hollywood it was reported that Walter Wanger, Y. Frank Freeman, and Lieutenant Colonel Darryl F. Zanuck would be witnesses too.

Fight for Freedom, Inc., at New York, this week announced recruits from entertainment circles for a stage, screen and radio committee, headed by Helen Hayes and Burgess Meredith. The entertainers will lead rallies to "propagate the principles of democracy."

We're Astonished

THE STAID Associated Press—the Associated Press, we said—says that "The Government wants to use Marlene Dietrich's legs." It's a bit too bad, for some of the oldsters, that that was not signed M. E. S.

One would gather that the Office of Production Management would want to do something about substitutes for silk-stockings. As much has been said by Robert W. Horton, publicity agent for the OPM.

Columbia's "The Lady Is Willing" has been delayed because Miss Dietrich has sprained an ankle saving a baby from a fall—thirteen days out on a production schedule.

A Question of Law

CLERGYMEN, labor and civic leaders banded together this week to fight the proposal by the Boston City Council that motion pictures condemned by the Legion of Decency as unfit for public presentation, be banned from exhibition in motion picture theatres in Boston.

The ban was ordered in a resolution passed by the council early in the month. Opponents of the measure are fighting the resolution on the ground that it "delegates a governmental function to a private organization and secondly because it is an interference with democratic liberties guaranteed by the Federal and state constitutions."

The group declared it felt that "no private organization, however well intentioned or high principled, has the ability or the right to dictate to the whole community what motion pictures the community shall see. . . ."

From St. Louis, on Tuesday, came word that The Daughters of Isabella, women's organization, had voted a resolution protesting what they termed "a growing tendency by film producers to become more liberal and daring in the portraying of suggestive and double-meaning dialogue and offensive scenes." The resolution, published in the St. Louis press, and sent to "the Hays office" in Hollywood, directed all state and subordinate circles of the D. O. I. to join with the Legion of Decency in objecting to the showing of indecent pictures, and to object to producers before such possibilities are filmed.

To the Woods

BUDD SCHULBERG, son of Ben, and author of "What Makes Sammy Run," is reported by the literary columns to have left Hollywood for the fastnesses of Vermont. Dayton Stoddart, author of "Lord Broadway," is, by the same authorities, headed for the Adirondacks.

Product Trouble

A SUIT charging non-delivery of pictures promised on 1940-41 contracts impends at Philadelphia for Paramount, RKO, and 20th Century-Fox, George A. Aarons, general counsel for United Motion Picture Theatre Owners announced Wednesday. He said the exhibitor organization would file action for its members in U. S. District Court "within two weeks."

The companies, he charged, withheld product promised for last season and included the pictures in their 1941-42 blocks-of-five. Specifically cited were Paramount's "Nothing But The Truth," "RKO's "Citizen Kane," and Fox's "Belle Starr," "How Green Is My Valley" and "Sun Valley Serenade," originally titled, "Sun Valley." The MPTO will circularize all exhibitors in the area urging them not to sign 1941-'42 contracts for the pictures, and will seek nationwide support in its suit.

The action was voted at an executive luncheon in the Bellevue-Stratford Wednesday. The meeting also designated Lewen Pizor to fill a vacancy as chairman of the board of managers until the next election in 1942.

New Job for 'Jimmy'

UNITED STATES Marine Captain James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, and frequently associated with motion pictures, in color, in production, and in juke-box movies, joined the staff of Colonel William J. Donovan, on Wednesday, in the Office of Co-ordinator of Information, a Washington bureau established by the President for special international war-intelligence.

Colonel Donovan made two tours of the world, last summer and in fall-winter, on personal assignment of President Roosevelt, to determine the inside at first hand, reporting direct to the White House.

Mr. Donovan, head of the law firm of Donovan, Leisure, Newton & Lumbard, No. 2 Wall Street, was the senior advisory counsel for the majors in negotiating the motion picture consent decree with the United States Department of Justice.

"Ol' Man River"

PARE LORENZ, one time picture critic in New York, and more recently known for such productions of message as "The River" and "The Fight for Life," made under governmental auspices, is on the verge of contract with the new Joseph I. Breen administration of the RKO studios in Hollywood. Verbal agreements have been had, it is competently reported, but Mr. Lorenz is said now to be expected on the West Coast at uncertain date following a visit to Washington.

Starting this week the Product Digest Section of Motion Picture Herald is published weekly, including also Showmen's Reviews and The Release Chart. The Product Digest will also continue to include advance synopses of features and shorts, service data—Legion of Decency Ratings, Audience Classifications, references to exploitation material in the Managers' Round Table department of the Herald. Exhibitors may find necessary information about all product, conveniently arranged, this week and every week in the Product Digest, the living catalogue of the indusrty. See page 67.

Extra Vice Presidents

THE high command of the American Federation of Labor has determined to oust George E. Browne, president of the IATSE, from the executive council of the Federation and from his post as AFL vice president at the union's convention in Seattle on October 6th, the New York Post declared in a dispatch from Washington on Wednesday. A recent meeting of the executive council in Chicago, unattended by Mr. Browne, voted to force him from his AFL posts.

The ouster will, or would, be accomplished by reducing the number of vice presidents from 15 to 11. Nominations will be closed after 11 of the present incumbents have been renamed by the convention, according to the Post. One vice presidency is vacant through the death of Thomas Rickert, Garment Workers Union head. Edward J. Gaynor of the Letter Carriers and W. D. Mahon of the Street Railway Employees, have reached retirement ages. The fourth vice presidency to go, the council agreed, will be Browne's.

Dark, Dark Checking

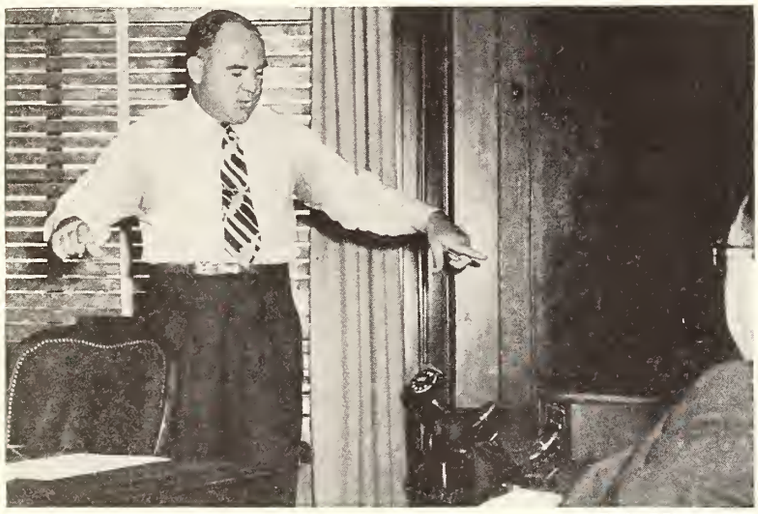
"DARK CHECKING," carried on by some distributors, and the continued cause of concern among Philadelphia exhibitors, reached the altercation stage this week, when the manager of the Apollo Theatre in Chester, Pa., said he caught red-handed a "blind checker" whom he had recognized when the man purchased a ticket at the box-office.

The checker is said to have stationed himself in the rear of the house to check secretly the number of patrons entering the theatre. When the manager asked him to be seated, he refused. An argument ensued which resulted in the manager's hauling the checker into court on charges of disorderly conduct and assault and battery. In court, the checker produced credentials of identification and paid costs of $7.50. Philadelphia exhibitors, it was reported, signified intentions of treating spotted checkers in similar manner if distributors continue the practice of secretly checking house attendance.

"Sun Valley" Snow

EARLY evidence of high interest in the 20th Century-Fox offer of all-expense trips to Sun Valley, Idaho, for theatremen turning in the best campaigns on "Sun Valley Serenade" is noted in the exploitation executed on the date at Loew's Palace, in Washington, D. C., by Dan Terrell, in arranging for Sun Valley snow to be airmailed to the Capital for advertising on the picture. Packed in dry ice, the snowballs were met at the airport by photogenic 'moiselles, whose participation in the showmanship manoeuvers stimulated interest of the Washington newspapers and the wire services. Distribution of individually packaged and labeled snowballs to the drama editors and local columnists also contributed further to the extra publicity aimed for by Mr. Terrell, as is told in this week's Managers' Round Table, starting on page 57.

Nothing for Blacklisted



FASCIST firms listed in President Roosevelt's blacklist of Latin American firms engaged in Italian and German propaganda are discovering that the American film industry will have no traffic with them, according to John Day, Paramount supervisor in Brazil who reached New York Wednesday.

Distributors are filling existing contracts with blacklist theatres and other firms, he said, but will make no new agreements. American tourist trade, "increased tremendously" since the war, is helping to fill theatres in South American cities Mr. Day reported. Although the blockade has impaired South American economy, relations with the United States in general and film companies specifically are excellent.

'NEW ORDER' IS NOW LAW, INDUSTRY CHANGES OVER TO DECREE PRACTICES

Distributors Say Sales Forces Are Ready for Changeover; Arbitration Jurisdiction To Be Widened Starting Monday

That "new order" becomes law on Monday.

After ten months of preparation, involving many reshuffles of traditional trade practices, procedure and personnel, the five majors who signed the consent decree with the U. S. Government on October 29, 1940, have adjusted their 1941-42 selling plans to comply with the formula approved by Judge Henry W. Goddard.

Five of the eight distributors named in the Government's original anti-trust action in 1938 signed the consent decree and have made the changes in selling methods. They are Loew's, Inc., Paramount Pictures, Inc., Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation and Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc.

The "Little Three," Columbia, United Artists and Universal did not sign the decree, and are not affected by the regulations which becomes operative on September 1, 1941. However they still face anti-trust action in courts, and, if they win, may yet bring about an early end to the "new order" of selling.

New selling regulations and trade practices lead the new decree provisions which become operative on Monday, September 1st. Henceforth the Big Five must not license or offer for license more than five pictures in one block, and features must be trade shown in each exchange district before salesmen may unlimber pens and contracts. Selling must take place within the exchange area in which pictures are to be exhibited. Conditioning of short subjects, newsreels, trailers, or other product on features is barred.

Arbitration Extended

Arbitration before the motion picture tribunals of the American Arbitration Association is also extended on Monday when it becomes permissible for exhibitors to ask for specific runs under Section X of the consent decree. Previously clearance, "some run," withholding prints and cancellation for moral, religious or racial cause were the principal grounds for arbitration action.

Also, the voluntary arbitration clauses in the large majority of new season contracts become operative. Many exhibitors, it is reported, are signing this clause when they buy the first blocks-of-five pictures, agreeing to submit all contract disputes to AAA arbitration. It is believed by some that complaints filed under these clauses may constitute an important part of future arbitration.

Changes in operating methods among the home office and field staffs of the Big Five have been underway for almost six months and the Monday deadline is not expected to cause any disruption in operations. All of the companies have already trade shown and started selling five or more 1941-42 pictures. At least two companies, RKO and MGM, had their first pictures ready for tradeshowing and marketing as early as July 1st. Others have listed their third group of trade shows.

Sales, accounting and legal staffs have been working intensively during the last ten months to meet the changes. Physically the localized selling has greatly increased the legal and accounting paperwork in all offices, but department heads report that the new system has been shaken down and is now in good operating order. Legal chieftains, since last winter, have been supervising extensive educational campaigns among salesmen, branch managers and other personnel to familiarize them with the decree provisions. They express confidence that their employes are thoroughly familiar with the problems of the "new order," and its restrictions.

Product for selling under the new order is plentiful, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on August 23, page 12. The Big Five have a backlog of 72 new titles. Only 38 of these have been trade shown or dated. With all 1940-41 product out of the way by Monday an intensive drive to sell these pictures is forecast.

Arbitration assumes increasing importance as the sales practice clauses of the decree become effective on Monday. To the motion picture tribunals of the AAA will come complaints, if any, charging violation of the selling methods in the decree. Additionally arbitrators will now be called upon to determine whether distributors have "arbitrarily refused to license features on the run requested" by a complaining exhibitor.

Limited to Independents

Section X of the decree, which thus allows exhibitors to ask for specific run, covers only those theatres in existence at the date of the decree's signing. The section, designed as protection for independents against allegedly unfair circuit buying power, limits complaints to independent operators. Further it provides that in making an award the arbitrator must find that the distributor refused run over a period of three successive months; licensed the features and run requested to a competitive circuit house; that the complainant has insufficient features to operate on the requested run; and that the complainant had had a run comparable to the present circuit position during the period from July 20, 1930 to July 20, 1940 and had demanded the run again in writing.

A long list of operating factors, potential revenue, physical characteristics and history of the theatres involved are enumerated for consideration by the arbitrator in Section X. It further specifies that the refusal of run must be based on the based on the fact that the theatre in preferred position is part of a circuit. Awards will not affect current contracts, but require a change of run in future agreements.

The section further provides that if distributors fail to comply with a first award the complainant may institute a second arbitration and recover damages in compensation for loss sustained by failure to receive the run awarded by the arbitrator.

Complaints from exhibitors that distribution has offered, or attempted to sell, pictures conditioned on another block of five, on short subjects, trailers, news, etc.; or conditioned on a sale in another territory will also be subject to arbitration after September 1st.

In cases where exhibitors complain that pictures were conditioned upon another block the arbitrators are authorized, in Section IV of the decree, to find whether or not features were so conditioned; and if they were to issue an award cancelling the license to the extent that it relates to the conditioned features or short subjects. The offending distributor is also subject to a $500 fine.

Restriction of licenses to the exchange district in which theatres are located may be arbitrated if an exhibitor feels that purchases in one district have been affected by his own, or competitive operations in another district. Arbitrator's powers are limited by Section V to finding that the sale was so conditioned. The arbitrator is empowered by Section V to find whether the sale has been so conditioned. If it has been the award may cancel the contracts and fine the distributor $500. The fines which under Sections IV and V the arbitrators may levy, are payable to the motion picture arbitration fund provided for in Section XX.

Other Conflicts Provided For

Other controversies between consenting distributors and exhibitors are provided for in Section XX of the decree which asserts that all the rules of arbitration will apply in such cases filed with motion picture arbitration tribunals. Other exhibitors and distributors however may not intervene in the submitted disputes. Although no such complaints have as yet been entered at any of the AAA tribunals they are expected when the new season contracts become operative after September 1st.

With the start of decree trade practices for the Big Five on Monday only nine months remain for the Government to try its amended anti-trust complaint against the Little Three, or to effect a similar consent decree with them. Under Section XII, the so-called "escape clause," of the decree, the Big Five are freed from provisions for blocks-of-five, trade shows and other practices after June 1, 1942. The rules would cover pictures contracted for up to the end of the 1941-42 season however.

At New York this week observers expressed the belief that the Department of Justice was holding off on its suit at New York against the Little Three until the Crescent anti-trust action, at Nashville, in which they were named, shall have been completed. There has been no indication, officially, or otherwise, however that the Government has altered its intention of bringing Universal, United Artists and Columbia to trial sometime this autumn.

Executives of the Big Five said that their plans took into cognizance the possibility of a readjustment of the consent decree in line with future disposition of the Little Three action, but denied published reports that they were already drafting tentative changes in selling methods in the event the decree is lifted. They emphasized that every effort is being made to sell pictures under the blocks-of-five rule, and other motion picture regulations now in force.

MANAGER FINDS TASTE CHANGING

The taste of the people in motion picture fare has undergone a decided change, writes Frank Loftus, manager of the American theatre in Pittston, Pa., in an article in the Wilkes-Barre Sunday Independent. He cites as fact that films on the serious side have little draw.

On the other hand, he observes, a slapstick comedy, even with an unknown comedian, using gags that are outdated brings a waiting line at the box office.

'BIG 5' SHOOTING 21 DECREE TRADE SHOWS AT EXHIBITORS IN 8 DAYS

Heavy Schedule Announced as Decree Provisions Go Into Effect; Eleven Pictures Set for the First Three Days

The Consent Decree imposed by the United States Government on Loew's MGM, Paramount, RKO Radio, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warners, formally and officially becomes effective at precisely 12:01 A. M., Monday, Monday, being Labor Day and a national holiday, application of physical procedure goes over to Tuesday.

On that day, the Big Five will literally "let go with both barrels" on advance trade showings of 1941-42 pictures for those exhibitors who want to take a look before buying. The exhibitors don't have to look, but the distributors must show.

Starting Tuesday, the five decree signers will shoot at exhibitors no less than 21 screenings of different features in eight days between September 2nd and 12th, running as many as four a day. On next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, alone, there will be 11 different screenings—all under that clause No. III of the decree which requires that advance showings be made available before offering the product for sale.

To those theatre owners who desire to take advantage of the decree's provisions for advance presentations of the completed picture, it will be obvious that the timing makes highly impractical in some instances and physically impossible in others to see all of the next 21 "decree films" offered.

The 21 screenings coming up in the eight days might be compared to the 24 shown in all of the six weeks beginning on July 14th, when MGM and RKO, first of the decree-film-screeners, and the other three companies shortly thereafter started to experiment in advance of the September 1st effective date of the new U. S. law governing practice and procedure in motion picture selling.

Trade Showing Timetable

Based on New York datings, the 21 trade shows set by the "Big 5" consent decree signatories for the first 10 days of the 1941-42 season (excluding, of course, the Sept. 6-8 weekend), are as follows:

Tuesday, Sept. 2

10:00 A. M.—Law of the Tropics, WB.
11:15 A. M.—Nine Lives Are Not Enough, WB.
11:30 A. M.—Birth of the Blues, Paramount.

Wednesday, Sept. 3

10:00 A. M.—Glamour Boy, Paramount.
10:00 A. M. and 2:30 P. M.—Mexican Spitfire's Baby, RKO.
11:30 A. M.—Night of January 16th, Paramount.

Thursday, Sept. 4

10:00 A. M.—Skylark, Paramount.
10:00 A. M. and 2:30 P. M., Outlaw Trail, RKO.
11:00 A. M. and 3:40 P. M.—Dude Cowboy, RKO.
12:20 P. M. and 4:50 P. M.—Riding the Wind, RKO.

Monday, Sept. 8

2:00 P. M.—Yank in the R. A. F., We Go Fast, 20th-Fox.

Tuesday, Sept. 9

10:30 A. M.—Man at Large, Last of the Duanes, 20th-Fox.
2:00 P. M.—Great Guns, 20th-Fox.

Wednesday, Sept. 10

2:00 P. M.—Weekend in Havana, Riders of the Purple Sage, 20th-Fox.

Thursday, Sept. 11

9:30 A. M. to 12:30 P. M.—Married Bachelor and 1:30 P. M. to 5:30 P. M.—Smilin' Through, MGM.

Friday, Sept. 12

9:30 A. M. continued to 5:30 P. M.—The Feminine Touch and (except 12:30 to 1:30 P. M.)—Honky Tonk, MGM.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on August 23rd, starting on page 12, listed the titles of the 24 pictures which had been shown up to Sept. 1*st.*

The September 1st decree date brings, also, changes in other forms of industry practice. It widens the scope of arbitration of trade arguments between film buyer and seller (this week's arbitration docket is reported on page 35). It will apply, also, to many basic trade practices in distribution-exhibition (as described on page 12).

Territorial Release Dates A New Trend

Following the lead of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer which already has started to establish territorial release dates of films based on the closing of key deals in individual localities, opinions in home office sales departments this week were that at least some of the "Big Five" decree selling companies would institute this new localized dating policy, eventually replacing national release dates under the decree. Paramount is expected shortly to follow Metro's lead.

At the moment, however, distributors are feeling their way through initial stages of the new selling system, with many agreeing that experience to date has been insufficient to determine whether any vital changes in the old order or release and availability are in store for exhibition on any wide scale. Definite indications point to territorial release dates prevailing which will be based on the time of closing of the first run or key accounts in each situation.

Majors Report New Spurt in Selling 1941-42 Product Under the New Order

Brisk business in new season contracts for the pictures screened in the first trade shows was reported this week by the Big Five under the consent decree.

Twentieth Century-Fox home office executives this week said the company had closed contracts for the five pictures in its first block with 1,200 theatres during the week following the screenings. At Detroit the Fox exchange signed three major circuits—the Butterfield circuit, Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, and Schulte circuit—for the first block, according to Manager Lester Sturm. The deals cover 225 theatres. In Detroit the Fox and Adams theatres will split the first five pictures. At Chicago, Clyde Eckhardt, exchange head, reported a deal with J. J. Rubens of Great States for the initial Fox block in 68 theatres in Indiana and Illinois.

RKO Radio this week reported half a dozen major circuit deals and a sizable list of independent contracts for its first group of five. Home office executives and field men closed the sales. Warners' Pittsburgh circuit, for 76 theatres, closed with Sales Manager Andy Smith, Jr., and Harry Kalmine. At Detroit, United Detroit Theatres, for 16 houses, signed with "Bob" Mochrie and Charles Boasberg. Also signing circuit deals were Y. & W. circuit at Indianapolis, Ideal Amusement Company, Pittsburgh, Neighborhood Theatres in Richmond, Va., Monarch Theatres in Indiana and Ohio and several groups of New York independents. RKO's first block of five pictures has been signed for 267 Fox West Coast theatres.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has signed 2,500 contracts since August 1st for its initial block of three pictures, it was reported at the home office.

Republic Pictures, not a decree signer, reports a contract for all its 1941-42 product with Central States circuit, covering 31 Iowa and Nebraska situations.

Bert M. Stearm, United Artists district manager in Cleveland, at a territorial sales meeting Wednesday, reported 1941-42 circuit deals have been closed with the Robins circuit, Cleveland; H. Schwartz, Black Diamond and Family Theatre circuits, Cincinnati; Affiliated, Rembusch and Horsefield circuits, Indianapolis, and Manos-Lipsie, Osborne Dipson, Verne Scott, H. J. Thompson, Alpine and Walters circuits, Pittsburgh.

Executives of National Theatres, including Spyros Skouras, president, Edward Zabel and Aubrey Schenck, left this week for Los Angeles to aid Fox West Coast in its new season buying. They will tour other National circuit headquarters.

21 Trade Shows In 8 Days Start "Decree Season"

Closing of initial deals, on which release dates will be based, however, will vary as to time in many situations, it was pointed out by sales executives.

None of the consenting companies, it was learned, has been confronted to date with the necessity of selling its initial decree releases away from an established account and selling is proceeding in exactly the same order of offering new season product as would have been the case had there been no decree.

Warners, Columbia, and RKO Executives in Conferences

Warner Brothers' general sales manager, Gradwell L. Sears, was on hand in Hollywood over the weekend to confer with H. M. Warner, J. L. Warner, Hal B. Wallis and S. Charles Einfeld in mapping out release policies for forthcoming productions. Details for special campaigns on new personalities also were discussed.

Warner executives decided to sell singly "One Foot in Heaven," co-starring Fredric March and Martha Scott, which film they saw in "rough cut." Studio heads completed all details over the weekend for nationwide release of "Sergeant York," slated for general release September 27th. Other important features for fall release under discussion were "Navy Blues," "New Orleans Blues," "International Squadron" and "The Maltese Falcon."

Ned E. Depinet, RKO Radio's vice president in charge of distribution; A. W. Smith, Jr., sales manager, and Cresson E. Smith, Western division sales manager, are on the West Coast this week for studio conferences. They are expected to return to New York after Labor Day.

Following Hollywood conferences, Abe Montague, Columbia's general sales manager, and Joseph A. McConville, foreign manager, left the West Coast for New York last week. Jack Cohn, vice president; Abe Schneider, treasurer, and Leo Jaffe, assistant to Mr. Schneider, remained on the coast throughout the week.

RKO Holds Second South American Meeting

R. K. Hawkinson, Latin American division manager for RKO, sailed for Havana last Wednesday for the company's second South American sales convention. The first one was held in Rio de Janeiro, at which Phil Reisman, RKO vice president, presided. The Havana meeting, scheduled for September 1st to 3d, will be attended by managers from Mexico, Panama, Venezuela, Puerto Rico and Trinidad, in addition to the Cuban manager and his staff. Michael Hoffay, director of RKO's foreign publicity department, is enroute to Havana's Hotel Nacional, where he will handle all arrangements for the convention.

P. R. C.'s Fifth Regional In Los Angeles

Producers Releasing Corporation will hold its fifth regional sales meeting in Los Angeles this Saturday and Sunday, August 30-31st, at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel, with Arthur Greenblatt, general sales manager, presiding. Representatives from Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle will attend conferences on sales policy.

Definite release dates will be announced for the first four features and first three westerns on the 1941-42 program, and plans will be discussed for an intensive sales campaign for the Ann Corio special, "Swamp Woman."

The four features set for release are: "The Devil's Sister," "Hard Guy," "The Ghost and the Guest" and "Swamp Woman."

The westerns are: "Billy the Kid Wanted," the first of the new series, starring Buster Crabbe; the first of the Frontier Marshal series with Bill (Radio) Boyd, Lee Powell and Art Davis, and the first Lone Rider, starring George Houston.

Franchise holders and salesmen at the meeting included Sam Decker, Louis Rustin, Dave Nathanson, Max Meyer, Ralph Dostal, Charles Owens, Bjorn Foss, Ed Morris.

Paramount Theatre Partners Meet

Paramount theatre partners from various regions of the country were in New York this week for conferences with Barney Balaban, company president, and Leonard Goldenson, head of Paramount's theatre department. Discussions, at the Waldorf Astoria, centered on new season product.

Those present included: E. V. Richards, Paramount-Richards Theatres, New Orleans; R. J. O'Donnell, Dallas; Col. Frank Rogers, Jacksonville, Fla.; A. H. Bank and G. Ralph Branton, Des Moines; Sam Pinanski, Boston, and John Balaban of Balaban and Katz Theatres, Chicago; R. B. Wilby, Atlanta, and M. A. Lightman, Memphis.

Preliminary discussion of new season's product was held between the associates and Paramount's distribution executives.

Northwest Allied Belittles Reports of Apprehensiveness Over Film Shortage

by ROBERT E. MURPHY
in Minneapolis

Judge Hugo O. Hanft of Ramsey County District Court in St. Paul on Tuesday is to begin consideration of the move by six majors to get a temporary injunction preventing enforcement of the Minnesota anti-blocks-of-five decree selling law.

Plaintiffs' briefs replying to defense briefs will be filed on that day, David Shearer, majors' attorney in Minneapolis, said. Meanwhile, Judge Hanft told attorneys for both sides at the time defense briefs were filed that he fully realized the importance of quick action and would try to return a ruling as quickly as is consistent with the importance of the case itself. There were reports in Minneapolis that some independent exhibitors not affiliated with Northwest Allied, which sponsored the Minnesota bill and is fighting the case, were growing apprehensive concerning shortage of product, since sales of new season product have been halted by the law and its litigation.

Fred Strom, secretary of Northwest Allied, characterized these reports as "ridiculous". He said independents may buy from United Artists, Columbia and Universal, majors not affected by the consent decree (although United Artists is lined up with the other five majors in fighting the law), from Republic and Monogram, and that Warner Brothers, Paramount and RKO are selling on short-term deals pending a decision on the law.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Twentieth Century-Fox, he said, are the only distributors which thus far have not sold a foot of film in the state.

There were reports that Minnesota Amusement Co., Paramount chain, was in a more precarious position, since films must clear through its theatres, and it may not service its own houses without servicing independents. The state restraint of trade act, a miniature Sherman-Clayton anti-trust law, prohibits this.

Defense briefs, filed Thursday, August 21st, covered in more than 60 pages the points brought up in the initial hearing but also called attention to the state legislature's policy of protecting independent business.

A section written by State Senator Earl J. Neumeier pointed to the fair trades practices act and trade diversion law as points in the policy of protecting small independent business by guaranteeing them a profit. The Minnesota motion picture bill, he contended, is another point in the same policy.

Judge Hanft was asked August 21st by attorneys for both sides to return a decision as quickly as possible. He said he would begin study of the case as soon as material was in his hands, but refused to intimate just when a decision might be expected.

Fox Circuit Divisions In Annual Convention

A two-day annual meeting of Fox Intermountain Theatres, division of National Theatres, was held on Wednesday and Thursday of this week at the Cosmopolitan Hotel in Denver. A "streamlined" promotion campaign was the principal topic of discussion, with Rick Ricketson, president of Fox Intermountain, presiding.

Meanwhile, the 11th annual convention of Fox Midwest Theatre managers, is scheduled for September 9-10th, at the Hotel President in Kansas City. Spyros Skouras, president, and Charles P. Skouras, vice president of National Theatres, will be special guests at this parley. Elmer C. Rhoden, division manager of Fox Midwest, will preside. Charles Skouras, as field head for the annual showmanship campaign, will present awards to Midwest managers who won prizes in the campaign.

Screen Musical Filmed

"Beauty and the Beach," Paramount's innovation in the field of single-reel screen musicals, and the first motion picture ever to be filmed at Jones Beach, Long Island, N. Y., according to the company, has gone into production at the resort with Johnny Long and his orchestra. Leslie Roush is directing the picture which is the first of the Paramount "Headliners" series for the year.

HOLLYWOOD TAKES ITS ARMY FILMS TO 'WAR LORDS'—AND THEY LIKE 'EM

Zanuck Presents First Samples of Training Pictures to High Army Officials; 100 Finished, 40 in Production

by GERALD G. GROSS
in Washington

Lieutenant-Colonel Darryl Francis Zanuck, U. S. A., Signal Corps, Reserve, took to the "war lords" of Washington, last Thursday, the first fresh samples of the assignments issued to Hollywood by the United States Army, of motion pictures of defense and Army training. About 100 reels of training film have been completed in Hollywood and 40 more are in production. The regular Army, in addition, has 250 subjects in production at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey.

Before a critical audience of some 200 U. S. Government, war and military officers, and representatives of film producers, newsreels, news and trade papers and members of Congress, Mr. Zanuck and the Army presented for the first open showing six subjects of Hollywood's version of how the new Army should be trained. Mr. Zanuck represented organized Hollywood and the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, under whose auspices the films are being made.

Colonel W. Mason Wright, Jr., of the War Department, had telegraphed invitations to attend the screening to industry leaders and to the trade and news press. He urged personal attendance.

Frank skepticism was overheard from some of the old War Department experts when they were seated in the screening room of the Archives Building to witness Hollywood's demonstration of its assignment. The viewers departed, two hours later, uttering commendations for the professional finesse and artistic finish of the specialization.

Lieutenant-Colonel Zanuck, who, when not engaged in Army production, is chief producer for 20th Century-Fox Studios at Movietone City, in California, had taken the prints to Washington, and, from Thursday, was ordered by the Army to do five days' active duty. His tour ended Monday, after which he engaged in new Fox picture promotional discussions, in Washington, with Fox executives who had flown from New York.

The Washington "Demonstration"

Through the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, the best of Hollywood's facilities have been made available to the Government for the purpose—direction, acting, editing, processing and everything else, all on a non-profit basis, and with practically all studios participating.

John Ford, an Academy Award winner, directed one of the six pictures previewed for the invitational audience. Frank Capra is now directing the forthcoming "Combat Counter-Intelligence." Among others announced as having volunteered directorial services are Irving Pichel, Harold Young and Hal Roach, Jr. Awaiting assignments are Mervyn LeRoy, William Wyler, Michael Curtiz, President George Stevens of the Screen Directors' Guild, and others.

The Screen Actors' Guild, the Screen Directors' Guild and the Screen Writers' Guild all have waived contract rights with the studios, in connection with services for the training films, to assure that production costs shall be kept to a minimum.

The preview audience recognized many familiar screen faces, particularly character actors and juveniles. Especially in the subject entitled "Military Courtesy and Customs of the Service" and the reel dealing with personal hygiene were these well known performers prominent.

Soldier's Data

Of the two films mentioned above, the first is concerned with recognition of officers' insignia, the system of saluting, honors due the American flag and the National Anthem and other information which the soldier must know. The other is self-explanatory. These were shown in their entirety, as were the instructive item called "Pioneer Equipment," which shows the soldier how to tie various kinds of knots and hitches, and a technical picturization of the 60 millimeter mortar. Abridged versions were shown of the film titled "Basic Principles of Skiing" and the one on the 240 millimeter mortar, due to the great length of the complete films.

"Military Courtesy and Customs of the Service" and "Basic Principles of Skiing" might well be adapted for showing to general audiences, both adult and juvenile, because of their universal appeal and, in the case of the latter, the scenic beauty. The former is a gem of skillful direction and understanding portrayal.

Immediately following the preview, the Army Signal Corps officers in charge presented a terrifying demonstration of the use of recorded sound to strike terror in men on the battlefield. This novel facility is being experimented with in the Army primarily as a defensive preparation to accustom troops to the frightful noises of combat. The recording sampled by the preview audience proved to be a five-minute blend of cannon fire, the whine of artillery shells, scream of ricochets, rumble of mechanized vehicles, roar of attack aviation and rattle of anti-tank and anti-aircraft weapons.

Lieut. Col. Darryl F. Zanuck, temporarily on active duty in the Signal Corps and who came here for the screening, heard himself and the film industry as a whole warmly praised by Col. Clarence R. Huebner, chief of Training Branch G-3.

"The importance of this cooperation from the motion picture industry does not lie in the excellence or the effect of their work with the Signal Corps on Army training films alone," said Col. Huebner.

"The real importance lies in this manifestation by an American industry, of its willingness to assist its Government's Army, without regard to profit or gain.

"I shall not discuss the efficacy of these films. I will leave that to your judgment, except that I would like to call to your attention how demonstrations by experts can be presented to an unlimited number of men. I will, however, state that every American citizen ought to be proud of a nation which has an industry working so closely with the Army, and thus contributing materially to the National Defense Program."

The ranking Army officer attending the preview was Maj. Gen. William Bryden, deputy chief of staff. Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, chief of the Army's press relations branch; Lieut. Col. Mason Wright; Senator Elbert Thomas of Utah; and numerous other top ranking men in their Army, press and film fields viewed the showing.

Officers Course Maintained

For the last eight years, the Motion Picture Academy Research Council has maintained a training course for Signal Corps officers in Hollywood. One officer has been trained each year in film production. Last year, at the Army's request, the Council gave Lieut. Jacinto B. Chong of the Philippine Army the same course in motion picture production as that given to Signal Corps officers.

"Training films are not created for entertainment," says the Army. "They are intended for one purpose only—graphically to present military instruction precisely as it should be presented in a military demonstration or lecture

The six pictures previewed were selected from the 100 reels—approximately 100,000 feet—of training films already completed for the Army in Hollywood. Forty more reels are now in production on the Coast. In the meantime, 250 reels are being produced by the Signal Corps laboratories at Fort Monmouth and Wright Field.

"No studio is charging overhead for films produced in their stages," the Signal Corps states. "All equipment and facilities used in the production of these films are made available without any charge. All stage space and studio property used are made available to the War Department without charge. Individuals in the industry are contributing, and more have offered to contribute their time and talents to assist in the production of training films without cost to the Government. The only expenditures involved in the production of these films is money actually paid out for labor, film and other out-of-pocket expenses."

Training films already completed were made on the 20th Century-Fox, Goldwyn, Republic, Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Hal Roach lots. Others are in production at Warner Brothers, Universal, Sol Lesser, 20th Century-Fox, M-G-M, Paramount and Roach.

ARMY MOVING MOVIES IN MOBILE THEATRES

Three mobile outdoor motion picture theatres are being sent into the area of the United States Army's field manoeuvers, in the South, by the United Service Organizations to entertain soldiers during periods of relaxation.

Housed in specially constructed streamlined buses, the portable theatres are enroute from Detroit, where they were built, to New Orleans. Within the next few days, two units are expected to be operating out of New Orleans and the other from Monroe, La.

Each unit will present full-length shows, including a feature picture, newsreels and a comedy. The mobile units carry complete power plants with which to operate the projectors and sound equipment. Each also has a high-powered broadcasting system over which large groups may listen to radio programs or records.

UA EXECUTIVES STUDY CONTRACTS, NEW PLANS

Acquisition of Theatres Begins; Kelly Contract Renewed; Plan for British Production Set

The revitalization recently launched at United Artists continued this week as the new season started with reports from the home office and field of continuing UA activity directed towards theatre acquisition, a plan to finance independent British production, and new contracts for major home office executives.

The presidency of United Artists remained vacant at midweek, although there were many promises of an early appointment to the post of chief executive. Still unsettled, also, was the deal by which David O. Selznick is reportedlv joining UA as an operating partner. Papers were said to be set for signatures at Los Angeles this weekend.

Kelly Contract Renewed

On Tuesday at New York Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president, accepted the two-year renewal of his contract voted by the board of directors in California last week. Terms of the new agreement with the executive were not revealed.

The United Artists' project of acquiring $6,000,000 worth of key first-run theatres (reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on July 19th) appeared nearing its first concrete stage on Monday when Harry D. Buckley, vice-president, flew to San Francisco to close a deal for the purchase of half interest in the United Artists theatre there. According to reports, UA has offered to operate the theatre as partners with Joseph Blumenfeld, circuit head, and D. J. McNerney, UA branch manager. The latter, personal partners in several theatre operations, reportedly offered $150,000 for the house, now operated by Herman Cohen. Reopening, scheduled for August 28th, was postponed.

Alexander Korda, UA partner-producer who has been acting for the directors recently in handling many home office administrative details indicated on Tuesday that David O. Selznick would become a United Artists owner-producer at Los Angeles this weekend. Contracts giving Mr. Selznick partnership in UA with Mr. Korda, Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin and the Douglas Fairbanks estate, were in final draft and ready for signature at midweek.

A meeting of the UA partners is scheduled for Friday or Monday in Los Angeles, Mr. Kelly indicated at New York. He leaves for California on Thursday. The session, it is understood, will formally close the Selznick deal.

Further discussion of presidential possibilities is also slated for the gathering, it was understood. Previously the company had asked William F. Rodgers, MGM sales manager, to accept the post. Contractual obligations at Metro, blocked his acceptance. The partners, it is said, are unwilling to make a further bid until they can locate a top executive willing and capable to head the company's expanding program.

Reports that N. L. Nathanson, now head of Canada's new Odeon circuit, had been offered the post were quashed at Toronto on Monday. Mr. Nathanson said he had no financial interest in UA, contemplated none, and had not discussed the presidency. Further, it was indicated that the Canadian government would be unwilling to permit the Canadian executive to accept a post outside the Dominion until the war is over.

Financial backing for independent British producers will be supplied by United Artists partners from their blocked currency, Ted Carr, co-director for the company at London, revealed as he left New York by clipper on Tuesday.

The United Artists producers now have more than $5,000,000 in frozen funds to their credit at London, Mr. Carr said. A part of this money, he said, will be used to provide up to 50 per cent of production costs for British producers, on stories which the company feels will have market value in the United States. Only top bracket productions, costing from $500,000 to a million dollars, will attract the UA capital, he intimated.

Shares in United Artists share of the British productions will be offered to the company's partners, who will share in profits pro rata, according to the proportion of their blocked currency used for the picture. Distribution will be through the UA sales organization.

The funds will form a sort of underwriting pool and will be allocated on a per picture basis, Mr. Carr said. He will have sole charge of UA English activity. George Archibald, co-managing director, plans to enter the RAF on Mr. Carr's return.

Two Films Set

First of the new pictures to be released by UA for the Ealing Studios is "Ships With Wings." It will be followed by "Siege." The company does not have a financial interest in production at Ealing, a recent contract calling only for distribution of the product.

A $2,000,000 United Artists institutional advertising program, slated for the autumn, was launched last week in the trade press with the first of a four-week series of advertisements asking exhibitors to build industry harmony, and to join in selling every picture. Following the campaign for theatre men the company will spend $2,000,000 for copy in national media. At least $1,500,000 of the money will be used for newspaper space in key cities.

Arthur W. Kelly, in announcing the promotional drive, commented:

"Now is the time for all branches of the motion picture industry to get together and work in harmony. It is essential that while Hollywood busies itself preparing the new season's product, the link between Hollywood and the motion picture going public—the exhibitors of America—assume their rightful responsibility.

"In the past, the exhibitor has laid too much stress upon the buying of the film and not enough stress upon the merchandising of those films direct to the ticket-buying patrons. We are openly asking all companies to step up their newspaper advertising and exploit all films courageously and intelligently, so that good pictures will play the maximum number of days in theatres everywhere. Too many films are being fed into the hopper and devoured like a product of mass production instead of a product of effort, ingenuity and imagination."

Berstein from England

Sidney L. Berstein, former British exhibitor who arrived in New York recently as a representative of the Ministry of Information in London, left for Hollywood over last weekend by plane. While in New York it is understood Mr. Berstein discussed with two major companies the release in the country of "Target for Tonight," aviation propaganda film made by the Ministry, and other propaganda pictures.

Musicians Halt Stage Shows

Warner Brothers' Earle theatre in Philadelphia, the only circuit house in that city with a stage show policy, faces elimination of stage performances as a result of the local musicians' union requesting AFM to place the Earle on the restricted territory list. The local adopted a new wage scale, effective September 1st, with increases of 10 to 15 per cent for theatres, night clubs and ballrooms. The new scale was declared justified by the union because of increased cost of living.

The Earle's present contract with the musicians' local expires September 28th. The union wants to continue the present arrangement for 28 men split into two shifts while the circuit is seeking only one shift of 14 men. The effect of placing the Earle on the restricted list would be to prevent AFM bands from working there without permission of the local. Union officials, however, declared that there would be no arbitration and no picket lines if the contract is not renewed as they believe the list will produce the desired effect. Before negotiating the 1940-41 contract, the union picketed the theatre for six months.

Film Stars-FDR on Radio

Hollywood stars will share the radio limelight with President Roosevelt on Labor Day in the special program arranged by the office for Emergency Management which will feature the President, Ernest Bevin, British Labor Minister; William F. Green, A. F. of L. president; James B. Carey, C. I. O. executive secretary, and Sidney Hillman. Melvyn Douglas will be master of ceremonies in the pickup from the Coast. James Cagney and Edward Arnold, representing the Screen Actors' Guild, will be in an orginal radio play written by Bernard C. Schoenfeld, chief of OEM's radio section.

French Films for Latin America

Two French motion pictures—"Pepe Le Moko" and "Un Carnet De Bal"—will be distributed by United Artists in certain selected territories in Latin America, it has been announced by Walter Gould, foreign manager for the company. Both productions will carry superimposed Spanish titles.

Stitt Resigns U.D.T.

Ralph F. Stitt, advertising manager of United Detroit Theatres, has resigned, effective September 1st. He was associated with Paramount theatres since 1927 with the exception of 18 months during which the company was undergoing reorganization.

Markmo Leases Stanley

The Markmo Amusement Corp., of which Maurice Maurere is president, has leased the two-story Stanley theatre property at 586 Seventh Avenue, New York, from Howard E. Haines through Tankoos, Smith & Co., broker.

DeMille Program Returns

Cecil B. DeMille, Hollywood film producer and director of the "Lux Radio Theatre," a Columbia network broadcast of current screen-hits will launch the program's eight C.B.S. season on Monday, September 8th.

HOLLYWOOD AND L. A. TIMES MEET, DEBATE PRESS POLICY, SO WHAT?

Producers and Publisher Differ on News-Publicity-and-Advertising Relations; Adverse Columnists' Criticisms Hit

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

The issues of motion pictures and the newspaper, press-and-pressure, news-and-publicity, and publicity-and-advertising have been joined for action, decision—this time between official Hollywood and the Los Angeles Times.

The end is not in sight.

It began, formally, Friday of last week when an array of the top-most executives of Hollywood accepted an invitation to luncheon with the Times, and went downtown to that imposing cubistic pile of modernism in white stone, walked through that august lobby paved with green marble, with bust of General Otis, founder, presiding, and took the elevators to a session that lasted for three hours.

According to one of the picture principals in attendance, there was no marked meeting of the minds, for, as he remarked, there was the same difference as on that classic occasion when Mr. Samuel Goldwyn, artist, did not get along with Mr. George Bernard Shaw, business man.

The upshot of the meeting seems to have been that it was decided to withdraw the executive weight at the top and let some of the hired hands for both sides talk it out—maybe.

The attendance at the Times' three hour luncheon was impressive. Included, on the film side were Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Motion Picture Producers Association; Louis B. Mayer, Harry M. Warner, Charles P. Skouras, Marco Wolf, Howard Strickling, Harry Brand and Thornton Sargent, and on the Times sides, Norman Chandler, president; Edwin Schallert, motion picture Editor; Robert White, Sunday Editor; and Kyle Palmer, now a political writer for the Times following some years in the service of the Producers Association.

Complaints Registered

Complained of by the film men were the Times' use of certain materials appearing in the syndicated columns of Jimmy Fidler, Hedda Hopper and Richard Griffith, this last a weekly column reporting New York critics' reviews of pictures in exhibition there, charges ranging from inaccuracy to more on the part of these writers. Failure of the Times to publish certain types of publicity releases supplied by studios and theatres purchasing advertising space was also cited as ground for grievance, reference being made the while to past curtailments of advertising appropriations indicatedly punitive in intent.

Complained of by the Times management was, principally, lack of cooperation with Times reportorial representatives in the matter of news supply and inferiority of written material furnished for editorial attention.

There was, according to the principle above mentioned, much expressing of views, stressing of ideals, emphasizing of importance, and a deal of talk about mutuality of interest, the film men leading with their statement of issues and Mr. Chandler, the publisher, closing the session with a restatement of Times policy.

Citing the newspaper's extensive, and sometimes conspicuous record of resistance to pressure groups, and remarking its reputation for persistence in observance of the principle of a free press dedicated to the information servicing of a paid readership, the Times publisher told his callers that the Times would continue to function on the basis of that policy without conditioning it in any degree for any or all of the reasons brought forward at the meeting or to be advanced subsequently, including any that the newspaper's own business department might see fit to set forth in the event of sagging lineage.

Mr. Chandler's reference to certain adamantine elements of Los Angeles Times policy was reminiscent of many an episode of drama in the career of that paper, including assault by dynamite, and the McNamara brothers, through which its open shop policy survived.

The reports available from the executive session do not indicate that the conference endeavored a survey of the whole field of the nature of advertising accepted by The Times, on amusement and other mercantile pages.

The film men received Mr. Chandler's assurance that his staff would investigate the charges of inaccuracy brought against the syndicated writers by the men of films.

Scheduled for a date subsequent to this investigation, possibly this week, was a meeting between the publicity directors of the studios and theatres making the charges, and L. D. Hutchinson, Times managing editor, due back from vacation. None of the principal executives were to attend.

CALIFORNIA FAIR HITS THEATRES

Normally expecting a 40 per cent drop in box office receipts during the California State Fair, Sacramento exhibitors are even more worried this year that the curtailment will be greater for this year's exhibition.

The outdoor headliners for this year's show were announced as follows: Aug. 29, 30 and 31—Harriet Hilliard and Ozzie Nelson's band; Sept. 1—Abbott and Costello and Gene Krupa's band; Sept. 2—Sacramento Symphony orchestra and Susanna Foster; Sept. 3—Orson Welles and Ray Noble's band; Sept. 4—Gene Autry and Charlie Barnet's band; Sept. 5—Vera Vague and Charlie Barnet's band; Sept. 6—Kay Kyser; Sept. 7—Tony Martin and Dave Rose's orchestra.

Senators Favor Elimination of Tax Exemption

In a reconsideration of the admission tax proposal, the Senate Finance Committee on Wednesday eliminated the nine-cent exemption and provided that children's tickets, not exceeding ten cents, should be tax free, and reduced-rate tickets sold to youths between 12 and 17 years old, should pay tax at the price for which they are sold.

Previously it was indicated that the committee would adopt some of the recommendations made by Abram F. Myers, Allied States general counsel and chairman, and Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, both representing the exhibitors' views, for the extension of taxes to juke boxes and "free" shows and the imposition of tax solely on the amount paid for reduced rate tickets.

It was also considered likely that the committee would reject the taxes on radio advertising, opposed by both the industry and the Federal Communications Commission, on the ground that it was discriminatory in that only one of several competing advertising media was singled out for tax.

Nearing the end of two weeks of hearings on the measure, the committee had before it few tangible suggestions for sources of revenue to make up for more than $300,000,000 required to offset the House rejection of the provision requiring husbands and wives to file joint returns.

Urge Double Radio Tax

Appearing before the Senate Finance Committee, as it prepared to close its hearing on the new tax measure, John B. Haggerty, president of the International Allied Printing Trades Association, asserted the broadcasters have available for taxes some $20,000,000 a year now allowed, he said, to advertising agencies in extra rebates and discounts.

Mr. Haggerty urged a doubling of the radio tax rates, as written into the House tax measure, which the Senate has before it.

Mr. Haggerty frankly admitted he sought to curb what he called unfair competition with the printed page, but told the committee, in making his argument, that broadcasting's closest competitor is the motion picture. He said broadcasters are in the entertainment business and not the advertising, and held that the proposed tax be on amusement.

Newsreels Fight Levy

Walter C. Ament, managing editor of RKO Pathe News, is representing the five newsreel companies before the Senate finance committee against the proposed ten per cent levy in the tax bill on all raw stock. Tax, it is estimated, will add approximately $200,000 a year to newsreel production costs.

The Greater Cincinnati Independent Exhibitors League, at a meeting held in that city, formulated a tentative price increase for downtown and outlying houses charging 20 cents and less to be put into effect if and when the new Federal ticket tax incomes effective.

U. S. APPLIES THE BRAKES TO AXIS FILM IMPORTS, SEIZING UFA FILMS

New German Pictures Held Up Indefinitely at New York Customs Office Until "Certain Technicalities" Are Cleared

The brakes are on for Axis films in the United States, applied rather suddenly and without any outside notice of specific seizure, such as the 16 German-produced, German ideological-minded subjects seized on reaching the Port of New York on consignment to the German film agency, UFA, intended for circulation in the U. S., and, as has been customary, for further transplanting in the South American countries where the Nazis have been infiltering propaganda and fifth columnists for years.

Further indication that the United States Government aims to revise or draft specific legislation to ban exhibition of German or other Axis pictures in America was disclosed this week when the Customs Office in New York revealed it was "temporarily holding" 16 features, short subjects and newsreels which arrived in this country for UFA from Germany about the time of Hitler's invasion of Russia on June 22.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD reported on July 12th, page 48, that Customs Office Commissioner W. R. Johnson had disclosed that "all foreign pictures offered for importation were being inspected to determine whether they contained propaganda against the United States."

N. Y. Says Yes, Capitol Says No

Despite the open admission of UFA officials in New York, of two U. S. Customs officials, at New York's Custom House, and three U. S. Treasury officials in the New York Federal Building, that the Nazi films were being held, Washington Customs Bureau officials on Tuesday denied any knowledge of any Nazi films being held in bond in New York.

This twist to the situation assumed even stranger proportions when Washington indicated that not only had no such stock of pictures been accumulated, but that they had received no application from UFA for the release of any German films.

Capital officials explained that while no changes have yet been made in the regulations relative to the importation of motion pictures, enforcement was tightened up under the existing regulations some months ago.

This tighter enforcement, it was said, called for strict scrutiny of foreign films offered for entry instead of the less careful inspection which had been the rule in the past.

There have been reports from time to time that the Nazis had sent over a large number of feature films for distribution in the United States, but that their clearance through the customs had been delayed, possibly for strategic reasons.

Last Monday, at the New York Customs Office, U. S. officials, following customary official practice, insisted upon anonymity in discussing the Nazi films now being held. It was learned, however, that the pictures would continue to be held. One reason being given was that the importer, Ufa Films, "did not comply with certain customs regulations" in making application for release of merchandise.

Another official intimated that U. S. Customs could hold the films indefinitely on this "technality" and that the importer would not be able to get the pictures until the officers decided whether or not the "regulations" had been satisfactorily carried out.

It was also suggested that strict interpretation of present Customs' laws would have to be studied in order to determine whether the Nazi pictures "tend to incite to riot."

Treasury Department officials in the Federal Building also declined to make public whether or not Ufa funds were frozen, following the Presidential decree of June 14th to freeze assets of Axis powers. One executive said it was not within his province to disclose whether or not Ufa funds were blocked.

Still Under Import Status

At the Customs Office, however, it was learned that the 16 films were "still under import status and if we decide to 'seize' them that fact would then become public." One of the pictures is "Bismarck," which an official said had arrived in America a few days before that ship was sunk. This film was recently reported in the press to have been released to Ufa for showing, but the Customs' men denied the report. At the New York office of Ufa Films, Inc., George Nitze, president, inferred that "Bismarck" was one of the pictures held by Customs for which his company had already contracted for distribution.

When asked to give his explanation of the action taken by Customs' officers, Mr. Nitze said he did not know. He did say, however, "This is the first time Ufa has had to wait so long—six to eight weeks—for release of pictures imported from Germany. He said the usual period lapsing between time of arrival and release to Ufa was from one week to two.

Queried whether Ufa funds were frozen and whether this fact in some way affected the stand taken by Customs, Mr. Nitze replied in the affirmative and said, "Every American corporation with German capital stock was included in the freezing order." Whereupon the reporter reminded Mr. Nitze of his earlier assertion on June 28th, as reported in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD, Page 67, at which time he denied any connection between Ufa in America and Universum Film Aktiengesellschaft in Germany. Ot that time he said, "Ufa is merely an American business organization that has contracts with producers in Germany and Italy on the usual percentage arrangement."

Asked to elaborate on his statement that capital stock of Ufa was owned by Germans, contrary to his earlier denial of any German connection of his company, Mr. Nitze replied, "Many American corporations have stock owned by people in Europe."

When the reporter suggested that he release the names of the films being held in the Customs Office, Mr. Nitze answered that he didn't have the list available. He did reveal, however, that he had hoped to distribute the pictures for September showings and said that now he would have to wait until the Customs Office finished their inspection and turned the films over to him.

INDEPENDENTS SCORE "PERCENTAGE" FILMS

Independent exhibitors of New Jersey declared this week that too many percentage pictures are presented by distributors, resulting in a higher average price per picture than formerly paid and also resulting in the exhibitors being pressed by preferred playing time pictures. It would be desirable, members believed, to wait until more equitable terms could be negotiated. These opinions were voiced during the meeting of Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey at the Monmouth Golf and Country Club in Eatontown, N. J.

Allied also went on record as supporting the USO theatre drive starting next week. Committees were appointed in each county in the state.

Skouras, Sweigert Head Variety Clubs

Charles P. Skouras, president of Fox West Coast, on Monday, August 25th, was elected Chief Barker of the newly organized Variety Club of Southern California. Other officers elected are Duke Clark and Robert H. Poole, assistant chief barkers; Wayne Ball, wagon master; Harry Humber, treasurer; Dr. A. H. Giannini, Al Hanson, Charles Buckley, Walter Wanger, Jack Y. Berman and Guy Gunderson, canvasmen.

Earl W. Sweigert, Paramount district manager in Philadelphia, has been elected chief barker of the local Variety Club, succeeding Dr. Leon Levy, president of station WCAU, who resigned on being called into active military service.

Al Pratt of Warners won the Washington Variety Club golf tournament held last Friday, August 22nd, at the Manor Country Club. He scored a low gross of 72. Ed Wortman won second prize.

The Cincinnati Variety Club will hold its annual golf tournament on September 29th, at a location to be decided on later, while the Indianapolis Variety have announced their annual tournament will be held September 15th at the Broadmoor Country Club.

Parker Joins Universal

William Parker has resigned from the exploitation staff of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in Seattle, after having been associated with the company for more than six years there and in Chicago. He left this week for Los Angeles, where he joined the sales department of Universal Pictures. His successor has not been announced.

Griffith Convention Planned

The second annual convention of H. J. Griffith, Inc., will be held September 17th and 18th, at the Ambassador Hotel in Kansas City, Mo. A substantial list of business topics, with speakers, has been arranged and there will be special features and entertainment for the ladies.

WHO DID WHAT WHEN PRESIDENT AND CHURCHILL MET? THEY SAY:

Of the Mishaps That Dogged Publicity Efforts on That Meeting-at-Sea; and of 3,000 Feet of Hollywood Film

Mishap after mishap seems to have befallen the public relations aspects of that meeting-at-sea between President Roosevelt and Winston Churchill. The story began to unravel this week, but with snarls and knots still in the yarn.

Taking the reports, and they have come from London, Washington, Canada and Hollywood, they seem to sort out to this:

The Roosevelt expedition took off for the rendezvous expecting the meeting to be entirely "in camera," which means no camera, utterly confidential, off-the-record, etc. That would have left to the official announcements all that could be said, told. Then, it appears, when the President arrived at the scene, he was apprised that the British had come fully equipped, press and newsreels. The story was to be Britain's story, for the wide-wide world.

Immediately, it would appear, there was need of American cinema. It was found, reported, discovered, or otherwise revealed that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer had an expedition including director and cameraman in the immediate vicinity, in eastern Canada, making location shots and background material for a projected picture—working title "Cargo of Innocents," a picture with war reference. The outfit was commandeered, invited, or whatever. In any event it was made, or made itself, available.

Map, Not Cinema, Cameramen

Next it appears Captain Elliott Roosevelt was coincidentally on the scene as previous news stories have related. It appears, also, that somewhere there was insistence that the job be "official" and that the photography for the American side of the conference would be by a brace of naval photographers, equipped with cinema cameras, not film, and considerably more trained in the making of maps than the art of narration by film. Then, so it is related, Harold Mazorati, M-G-M camera man of the "Innocents" expedition, was invited, so to speak, to deliver the 3,000 feet of negative that he had available, to the official cameramen. That he is said to have done, holding out a matter of some five or eight hundred feet on some pretext of "testing."

The American pictures, so resulting, have been reported upon. There were, it seems, difficulties, such as occur to persons unfamiliar with cameras. Most of the film, as delivered to Washington, and subsequently the newsreels, was blank. Maybe the lens was capped. Some of the rest of it was half-masked. Why that, hardly anyone would know. The picture did not disclose.

Meanwhile, it seems that Mr. Mazorati, Hollywood cameraman, operating under some difficulties, and assuredly not laden with the shoot-from-the-hip technique of newsreels, exposed his "test." He at least got an image.

WHAT FOREIGN MARKET?

More headaches for the motion picture industry arising out of the combustible international situation were reported this week from various foreign fronts. In addition to the news that the Japanese Government has imposed complete control of the American film business, through new restrictions and freezing of assets, the Nipponese announced on Tuesday that all American motion pictures must obtain police permission for showing, after September 1st. Japanese police already have prohibited exhibition of Deanna Durbin's film, "First Love", and the Marlene Dietrich picture, "Destry Rides Again".

India, it was reported early this week through Al Daff, Universal's Far Eastern manager, who is visiting the U. S., has set a new film import quota for September 1st, reducing picture imports by 50 per cent of the 1939 quota. Although no monetary restrictions have been invoked thus far, American distributors are considerably disturbed by this measure.

Next went the film to Stephen Early, White House secretary, and thence for development to the newsreels, which found the blanks, half blanks, and pictures.

Up to then it was all a secret. Transcontinental telephones boiled. Montreal, New York, Hollywood, Culver City, Washington, and some way stations.

Then came that evening when, it would appear by the Los Angeles Examiner the next morning, Richard Rosson, director in charge of the M-G-M location party in eastern Canada, told Louella Parsons of the Hearst papers something. Exactly what is not entirely clear at this distance and time, since it does not seem to have been on the transcontinental wires of the Hearst press service. A summary reading would tend to indicate that Mr. Rosson had made the pictures. In view of the nature of them, it was the opinion of some newsreel experts in New York that as for both Mr. Rosson and Mr. Mazorati, it should have been two other fellows.

Incidentally, to make the situation clearer than it was when the story which buzzed around the nation started, Dick Rosson is a brother of Harold Rosson, one time husband of the late Jean Harlow, and who had nothing to do with the matter, despite all the garbles of prior reports.

The technical opinion in New York seemed to be that if Mr. Rosson made the pictures he was a director and that if Mr. Mazaroti made them, he was in a lot of trouble.

In view of the report from Washington that all hands were under the most extreme requirements of secrecy, it was reported from Culver City on Wednesday that there was a state of executive annoyance at the newspaper break. In New York newsreel offices it was heard that Mr. Early, who would appear to have been doing his best with very little, was not enjoying the situation officially, even less unofficially.

An American newsreel special on the material, such as it was, went out last week. Somewhat belatedly, due to zeal that dispatched it on a bomber-ferry-flight that did not fly, the lavender copy of the British newsreel version arrived in New York Saturday night. It went into newsreel production. Monday night a lavender copy of the complete British newsreel exposure, some ten thousand feet, arrived. It was of merely historic interest, since the pre-edited version had gone to print and this week was in circulation in the mid-week reels, complete with pictures-and-sound, including a close-up of the Roosevelt-Churchill duo, if not duet, helping with the chorus of "Onward Christian Soldiers," with the crew of the conference ship.

Trouble in Canada

Meanwhile up in Montreal, the Associated Screen News, Ltd., which so long ago so importantly helped the British Empire cause with world coverage of the Canadian-American tour of the Prince of Wales of 1919, had a bit of a time of it, because a negative of the British story for them was mis-sent east to England instead of west to Quebec, resulting in a flutter of communications and the reversing of a bomber in full flight. This practically completed the score of mishap.

As they remarked around the poker table of the University Club in Montreal, it was "a bit thick, eh! Ben."

Up to this juncture the relations between the press, newsreels, etc., and the Administration, were in need of repair.

According to reports on Wednesday the repairs were underway, with both the press and the screen. There were sundry manifestations, and among them, the President decided that newspapers, and photographers, which seemed to include newsreels, could go to Iceland.

NBC Sells Artists' Management Service

Termination of the long-continued speculations as to who would eventually take over the NBC artists' bureau reached a climax at mid-week with reports that Daniel S. Tuthill, executive of the bureau, completed arrangements on Tuesday for purchase of the artists' management service of the network. NBC declined to confirm the purchase, terms of which were not determined, probably because network officials wish to avoid any "unfavorable" publicity or possible misinterpretations resulting from the sale of its bureau to one of its own executives. Mr. Tuthill is reported to have Hollywood backing.

SPECIAL PROMOTIONS FOR NEW FILMS; SCORES IN HOLDOVERS, GROSSES HIGH

'Aloma', 'Pittsburgh Kid', 'International Squadron', 'Saddle Mountain', 'Quiz Kids', 'Male Animals', 'Navy Blues' on List

A dozen productions of Hollywood's new crop reached the field this week, or were on their way, with special promotion attentions by distributors to aid their box office performances, among them: Dorothy Lamour's "Aloma of the South Seas," Paramount; "The Pittsburgh Kid," starring Billy Conn, the prize fighter, for Republic; Warners' "International Squadron"; Monogram's "Saddle River"; Warner's "Male Animal" and Navy Blues," and even short subjects came in for extra showmanship effort, that given by Paramount to its "Quiz Kids."

Meanwhile, distributor home offices in New York were issuing reports right and left of holdovers and more holdovers, and of climbing grosses from some of their new pictures.

Broadway Business Up

Over last week-end the New York Times reported that the theatrical business took an unexpected spurt at the ten Broadway matinees reflecting the strong trade. The consensus was that New York was enjoying its usual late summer influx of tourists and that the Rialto houses were reaping their share of the alien coin. After a two-month siesta, the Times reported, eager press agents for the majority of attractions busied themselves with announcements containing the words "sellout" and "standing room only," the surest sign that Autumn is not far away.

Detroit Strike Ends

The settlement of the Detroit citywide transportation strike tieup, last Monday, encouraged local exhibitors who had reported that grosses at downtown theatres were off as much as ten per cent due to the strike which had tied up the city's public transportation. Neighborhood theatres reported they were not affected as much, with reductions varying from one to five per cent. All types of vehicles were pressed into service, and patrons were using automobiles or walking long distances to theatres.

The strike, however, failed to have any effect at the Fox theatre in that city where "Charley's Aunt" was playing, grossing $25,000 for the first week. The average for the house is about $15,000.

Theatres Undamaged in Storm

Theatres were reported undamaged in the slashing wind and rainstorms which swept the Atlantic from Wilmington, Del., although many buildings were wrecked.

At Wilmington it was reported the storm was confined to the suburbs and theatre men there said it had no noticeable effect on business.

In Milwaukee, however, weekend business fell off somewhat when local events kept thousands away from the theatres. The Wisconsin State Fair brought a record Sunday crowd of 122,612 persons. The same day saw 100,000 persons on hand for the national Eagles' parade which had 10,000 participants. This same convention was responsible for attracting 20,000 persons to the lake front following the parade to see the drum and bugle corps and drill team contests; 11,000 persons to Sunday morning mass and 10,000 to a musical program in the evening at the Washington Park Temple of Music.

UNIVERSAL BUYS COMIC STRIP

Motion picture rights for the comic strip, "Winslow of the Navy", which appears in the New York Sun, have been purchased by Universal Pictures, it was announced last Tuesday. The strip, written by Lieut. Commander Frank V. Martinek, U.S.N.R., is syndicated to 200 leading newspapers. Decision to film "Winslow" was made after a checkup of its widespread national popularity.

Universal will assign a number of its top featured players for leading roles in the picture, which will be released in weekly chapters with navy shots to be filmed in cooperation with the U. S. Navy. According to present plans, chapters will be geared to adult as well as juvenile taste.

The same Sunday saw an estimated 7,000 persons attending a water sports show, another 11,000 visiting the Washington Park zoo; 10,000 Whithall Park and 2,000 the Brewer baseball game. On Saturday night, the Eagles attracted 135,000 persons to the lake front with a free boxing show sponsored by a local brewery.

"Rebecca" Record

Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president of United Artists, announced last week that the sales organization had achieved a record in contracts for any one picture. He said 12,055 contracts had been obtained for the showing of David O. Selznick's "Rebecca." This count was taken as of August 2d, with contracts continuing to come to the home office.

"Aloma" Premiere Held

"Dorothy Lamour Week" was officially inaugurated in New Orleans and throughout the state last Saturday, August 23d, when Miss Lamour, in Hollywood, spoke over long distance telephone and loud speaker hook-up to the audience assembled in the Saenger theatre attending the world premiere of Paramount's color production, "Aloma of the South Seas," in which she is co-starred with Jon Hall. Mayor Robert S. Maestri of New Orleans proclaimed the week of celebration.

Conn Film Opening Saturday

Republic's "The Pittsburgh Kid," starring Billy Conn, leading heavyweight contender, is to have its world premiere at the Fulton theatre in Pittsburgh on Saturday, August 30th, it was announced this week by J. R. Grainger, president of Republic.

Bill Saal, special home office representative, left for Pittsburgh last week to set up the advance advertising and exploitation campaign, and to arrange for the festivities planned to honor Billy Conn in connection with the opening of his first picture in his home town.

Mr. Saal has already prepared the preliminary newspaper, radio and billboard campaign, and has sent out invitations to the premiere to many sports celebrities as well as to motion picture personalities and exhibitors in the east. Republic executives from the studio and home office will also participate.

"International Squadron," Warners' air story of the world's fliers who have lost their homelands and are now fighting in a group under the RAF banner for England, has been set for a world premiere at the Dixon theatre, Dixon, Ill., on September 15th. Dixon was chosen as the site of the premiere because it is the home town of Ronald Reagan, star of the picture, and columnist Louella Parsons.

Dixon has already announced September 15th as "Louella Parsons and Ronald Reagan Day." Both Miss Parsons and Reagan, accompanied by Jane Wyman (Mrs. Reagan) and numerous other stars, will attend and will be guests of honor of the population of Dixon. In Dixon and a number of surrounding towns through the Rock River Valley a girl will be chosen from each town as its official representative at the celebration in connection with the opening of the Warner film.

Dixon Hospital will be the recipient of all profits from the personal appearances and a grand ball which will be held at the Dixon Armory.

Asks "Male Animal" Opening

"The Male Animal" does not go into production at Warner Brothers studio for several days, but the first request by a city for the world premiere arrived this week from Columbus, Ohio. The Variety Club of that city made what is probably the first request in history for a premiere before production on a picture had been started.

Pete J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, adds weight to the Variety club request by saying that the ITOO convention would be held on the same dates as the premiere to make the event even more significant to exhibitors.

Virgil A. Jackson, president of the Variety Club, bases the request for the premiere in the Tent's home town upon the facts that Elliott Nugent, co-author with James Thurber of the play, is a graduate of Ohio State, and that Mr. Thurber formerly was a resident of Columbus and attended the local University.

Special "Navy Blues" Trailer

A special trailer with the hit songs from Warners' "Navy Blues" will be ready shortly for distribution to all Warner theatres in advance of openings of the picture. Musical numbers written by Johnny Mercer and Arthur Schwartz have been arranged in overture fashion. A radio campaign to introduce the public to "Navy Blues" score will be inaugurated over ASCAP stations well ahead of the picture's release.

The company has also planned a nationwide exploitation tour of 15 cities featuring the "Navy Blues Sextet" who appear in the picture. Their tour starts early in September with a hop from Hollywood to New York, where they will appear for two weeks at the Strand theatre on Broadway. This will be followed by engagements in Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City and San Francisco. From the latter city they will return to Hollywood.

"York" Louisville Premiere

The week which began Friday, August 22d, has been proclaimed "Sergeant York Week" by Governor Keen Johnson for the city of Louisville, Ky. An intensive publicity and advertising campaign coupled with a round of social events opened the picture to the public in that city last Friday.

The Dayton opening of the picture on the same day is reported to have received similar attention, both cities heralding the picture on world premiere scales. Mort Blumenstock assigned Frank Seltzer, Monroe Rubinger, William Brumberg and other field men to these cities to handle the advance campaigns and openings.

"Quiz Kids" Premiere

A world premiere on the scale of a feature production will be accorded Paramount's first "Quiz Kids" short subject at the Chicago theatre, Chicago, Wednesday evening, September 3d. Oscar A. Morgan, general manager of short subject and news, announced this week.

The five Quiz Kids featured in the picture, none of whom ever before appeared in a theatre, will broadcast from the stage over a coast-to-coast hook-up on 48 NBC Blue Network stations.

Preceding the nationwide broadcast a special program of outdoor events has been arranged. From a platform erected in front of the theatre, civic and theatrical leaders will make public appearances and will join in a fifteen-minute broadcast to be given over station WLS. The streets will be roped off in front of the theatre and giant amplifiers will carry the proceedings to the public.

The quintet of juvenile stars who appear in the short and who will take part in the opening night broadcast includes 9-year-old Gerard Darrow, the youngest member of the group; Cynthia Cline, 15; Richard Williams, 11; Joan Bishop, 14; and Van Dyke Tiers, 13. Joe Kelly, quiz master of the show, will preside.

State Street merchants in Chicago who have been featuring for the past month Quiz Kids merchandise and novelties will lend an added touch of color to the premiere by special window displays. Chicago theatre ushers will wear Quiz Kids caps and gowns for the opening.

"Foxes" Record at Music Hall

"The Little Foxes," first to be distributed by Samuel Goldwyn through RKO, opened Thursday, August 21st, at the Radio City Music Hall in New York, to a waiting line four abreast and a block long. Since its opening the picture has grossed an estimated $18,000 a day, and is expected to be one of the few pictures to gross more than $110,000 for its first week.

The picture was screened for the Roosevelt-Duke of Kent party at the White House Monday night.

"Sergeant York" Drawing

Completing its first two weeks at the Hollywood theatre on Broadway, after moving from the Astor down the street, "Sergeant York" piled up a gross of $34,000 the first week and $33,300 the second, according to reports from the Warner Brothers home office. This figure tops everything done at the smaller Astor theatre by more than 50 per cent.

The company also reports that every record for opening day at the Community theatre was shattered in Saratoga, N. Y., when the picture opened there and turned in a first day gross of 80 per cent above average.

Four current Warner releases have rolled up top grosses during the past week in key city engagements, the company further reports. They are "Bad Men of Missouri," "Manpower," "The Bride Came C.O.D." and "Underground."

"Bad Men" opened at the New York Strand over the wekend and hit $19,721 for the first three days of its engagement. It will be held a second week. The film continues strong at the Fox, San Francisco.

"Manpower" accounted for $16,000, $2,000 over average at the Stanley, Philadelphia; exceeded $13,000 at the Hippodrome, Cleveland, and did $6,500 at Warners, Memphis.

"Underground" goes into second week at both the Fox, Philadelphia, and the Stanley, Baltimore.

"The Bride Came C.O.D." is doing 50 per cent above average at the Karlton, Philadelphia, and shows a 20 per cent above average take at the Garrick, Chicago.

Playing 12 key cities to date in pre-release engagements, Warner Brothers "Dive Bomber," in color with Errol Flynn and Fred MacMurray starred, has topped opening week grosses of "Sea Hawk" in every spot despite the fact that this picture opened over a Labor Day holiday. The picture has also been held over or moved over to continue its first run in every situation,

"Bomber" Business Good

Records were set in all three San Diego theatres where it had its world premiere and the picture compiled an all time top gross of $21,000, in its first week at these three houses. It is still being held over in the Naval base city. Boston run at the Metropolitan is equally impressive with picture held over after a record first week. Other situations turning in top business include: San Francisco, Rochester, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Houston, San Antonio, Syracuse, Seattle, Denver and Philadelphia.

New York opening of "Dive Bomber" will take place Friday at the Strand.

Opening Thursday, August 21th, at the Keith theatre, in Syracuse, N. Y., Warners' "Dive Bomber" piled up an opening day gross comparable to the best opening day business the theatre has had in four years, the company said.

Triple first run in San Diego, at the Fox, State and Plaza, is now in its first holdover week for all three houses and it is likely that it will continue in at least one theatre for several additional weeks. Rochester engagements of the picture has been satisfactory in that city. After doing close to capacity business at the RKO Palace in its first run at that house, it moves to the Regent to continue its first run.

Holdovers of Abbott and Costello feature comedies are becoming an accepted occurrence at the Penn theatre in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., according to a report from that city. It all started with "Buck Privates" which was held over for a record-breaking five weeks at the theatre. "In the Navy" was next and remained 15 days. Shortly after "Hold that Ghost" opened and didn't close until 15 days later on August 24th.

Hardy Film Held Over

In its first 42 key city engagements, "Life Begins for Andy Hardy" has smashed all "Hardy Family" film records, according to a report from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and has been held over in 29 situations. Last week the Capitol theatre in New York joined the "Hardy" engagements, opening to 142 per cent of normal business.

In three single feature engagements, in Nashville, New Orleans and Washington, D. C., "Dr. Kildare's Wedding Day" is running more than 35 per cent ahead of the previous top grosser in the "Kildare" series, the company said.

Forman Organizes New Theatre Circuit

With the completion of the Vision theatre at Longview, Wash., and set for opening October 1st, William Forman, formerly general manager and film buyer for the Sterling Chain, has consummated a merger and pooling of theatres in Longview, Kelso, St. Helens and Salem, to create a new circuit of eight theatres. He has formed the United Theatres Corp., of which he is general manager and buyer, with headquarters in Seattle.

The merger includes the Columbia and Roxy theatres in Longview; the Kelso and Liberty in Kelso; two in St. Helens, Ore., the Columbia and Roxy, and the Grand in Salem.

Blocks Attorney's Suit

Paramount Pictures took action on Tuesday in the New York Supreme Court to restrain Benjamin Blumenthal from prosecuting his New York suit for $965,000 damages until a similar action in England is passed upon. Mr. Blumenthal claims that he was retained by Paramount in August, 1938, to obtain a purchaser for Paramount's theatre interests and that he subsequently secured an offer of 2,500,000 pounds. The New York suit is for alleged commissions due him.

MGM'S RICHEY CALLS EXHIBITORS TO UNITE AGAINST POLITICAL CRITICS

"Solid Front" Against Charges of War-Mongering Urged in Speech at Southern Meeting; Newspaper Critics Attacked

A solid front between exhibition and distribution in "a first line of defense for motion pictures" was the appeal which distribution directed to theatre managers on Monday at the meeting of the West Virginia Managers Association at the Greenbrier Hotel, White Sulphur Springs. Senators Nye and Wheeler have charged motion pictures with war propaganda on the screen. A Senatorial committee has called industry leaders to a hearing in Washington on September 3rd—see page 8.

Henderson M. Richey, chief of exhibitor relations at MGM, speaking to the convention, warned of the increasing barrage of criticism from persons outside the industry and told the independents, "The entire industry must present a common front in refutation." He characterized as particularly unfair and untrue attacks on the industry's patriotism from "those on the outside who seem to utilize every excuse to dig our business."

"Something Sinister"

"The motion picture industry has been investigated many times but there is something somewhat sinister in the realization that now the motion picture business is to be investigated because of its patriotism—the fact that the motion picture business hates Hitler, stands for national defense and has cooperated with the Government in carrying the message to the American people of defense activities is now the subject of investigation in Congress," Mr. Richey said.

His remarks closely followed the renewed charge in Congress by Senators Nye and Wheeler that the industry has been guilty of war propaganda. The words of the MGM representative might be taken as presaging a specific reply to the critics by some in the industry.

"We cannot help but feel that out of such an investigation will come a new appreciation by the American people of the lengths that our industry always has gone to cooperate with city, state and nation in carrying their constructive messages," he added. The attacks emphasize the need for unity in the business, Mr. Richey commented.

Hits Hollywood Columnists

A rebuke to Hollywood columnists, and observers not actually engaged in the making and selling of pictures, was also contained in Mr. Richey's speech. He cited interviews in which Hedda Hopper attacked the industry's leadership and a statement by Jimmy Fidler advising the public that admission prices are too high. Mr. Richey pointed out that the average theatre sold an hour's entertainment for less than the price of an ice cream soda.

"The organization of the motion picture business for the protection of those who depend on the business for a likelihood is vital," Mr. Richey declared. Progress in that direction has been encouraging, he told the exhibitors organization, and urged their further participation in the work.

The MGM spokesman reiterated his company's promise to cooperate in the operation of the consent decree, arbitration, and other facets of the new order. He described the new Metro sliding scale of regional percentage and flat prices. The company, he added, is not concerned over possible changes in the decree at the end of its first year of trial operation.

New attention to the salable values of in-between pictures is evident in every section of the country, Mr. Richey reported, and said that the increasing interest in institutional selling, through newspapers and otherwise, is marking 1941 as a "showman's year." The effects of defense industry prosperity, although delayed, are now making themselves evident in increased boxoffice revenue, he reported.

Cites Vogel's Message

An important message to exhibitors was contained in the recent address of A-Mike Vogel, editor of the Managers' Round Table, at the Schine convention in Gloversville, Mr. Richey told the West Virginia operators. He cited the "confidence in the industry" theme of Mr. Vogel's address and urged that every film employee stop disparaging talk within the industry by selling themselves on the value of motion pictures.

"With production, exploitation, and exhibition doing its job I cannot help but feel that the future looks bright indeed," he said.

In a report on the effectiveness of joining local civic groups and clubs Mr. Richey noted that MGM's field men, numbering over a thousand, were identified with 600 different organizations. The fact that they are identified with the film business makes all employes potential spokesmen, and experts to the public. The public is very much interested in learning about motion pictures, he said, and urged the West Virginia managers to join in the institutional missionary work.

Claude Lee, Paramount distribution executive speaking at the Greenbrier on Tuesday, told the West Virginians that the most needed thing in the industry is a unanimous concept of loyalty to the motion picture as an institution and a business.

"There is need," he said, for "a loyalty not only to one personal interest but to the advancement and preservation of the industry as a whole. The natural order of the importance of these two things to the individual must be tempered with greater foresightedness for the future," he said.

"In industry leadership each must draw a more unselfish line where self-aggrandizement stops and industry welfare begins," according to the Paramount spokesman. "To all branches of this industry I would say, let us develop in ourselves and encourage in others a greater spirit of self-effacement where it can serve the common good in establishing an improved institutional identity for this business.

"Let us tell the people of this country more of the good things about this industry. There is much, very much, to recommend us to their respect and appreciation," Mr. Lee concluded.

Ed Kuykendall, national president of the MPTOA, also addressed the West Virginia meeting at the final session of Tuesday. J. C. Shanklin acted as chairman of arrangements for the meeting. S. J. Hyman, of Huntington, W. Va., is president of the group.

DEFENSE HALTS THEATRE BUILDING

Government priorities on construction materials have halted theatre building plans in Bridgeport, Conn., and delayed even plans for theatre alterations in other parts of the state.

Theatre interests believe that the situation will prevent new theatre construction in the territory for some time to come. However, the 690-seat New Newington theatre at Newington has been completed, and the 1,000-seat East Hartford is scheduled for completion in October.

Allied Maps Program

National Allied Theatre Owners from its convention headquarters in Philadelphia this week announced five leading topics for discussion at its meeting at the Benjamin Franklin hotel on September 16, 17 and 18.

"Film Buying and Selling," "Arbitaration," "Boxoffice Performance," "How to Recapture the Lost Audience" and "The Defense Program" head the subjects for Allied convention discussion. An open forum will discuss better commercial relations within the industry, and speakers from all branches of the business have been invited to attend.

Southeastern Meets

The Southeastern Theatre Owners Association, representing operators in Alabama, Florida, Georgia and Tennessee was scheduled to meet at Jacksonville, Fla., on September 7, 8 and 9 to discuss the effects of the consent decree, and other operating problems, on southern theatres.

Ed Kuykendall, national MPTOA president, was scheduled to also address the Florida meeting on "Industry Problems." Guy A. Kenimer and M. C. Moore, of Jacksonville, are in charge of convention planning.

P. C. C. Discusses Duals

The Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners is slated to take action on the double bill situation when its trustees meet at Seattle on September 10th and 11th. According to Robert H. Poole, executive secretary, a canvass of members on the subject is likely.

Michigan Allied Meets Again

Allied Theater Owners of Michigan will held their first state-wide convention in five years at Detroit on October 6, 7 and 8, when a meeting at the Book-Cadillac hotel will examine new industry problems arising from the consent decree and other factors.

New N. Y. Allied Progressing

The temporary committee handling organization affairs for the new New York State Unit of National Allied, met Wednesday in the Ten Eyck Hotel, Albany—headquarters are at nearby Troy. Field organizer William Bryant conferred with the organizing committee: Abe Stone, Albany; Leonard Rosenthal, Troy; Max Cohen, New York; Robert Goldblatt, Tarrytown; H. P. Wallace Auburn, and Albert Francis, Buffalo. Progress in membership was reported. Officers were to be elected.

The organization's first state meeting will be held September 16-18, in Philadelphia, in conjunction with National Allied's annual convention.

Iowa and Nebraska Board Meets

The executive board of the Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska met at the Kirkwood Hotel in Des Moines, Monday, with F. E. Wolcott, organization president, at the gavel. Some 30 members and guests attended a special luncheon.

The Blonde from Singapore

Romantic Comedy

Pearl poaching and love among thieves form the background of "The Blonde from Singapore." It is a romantic comedy in which the principal characters are a fortune hunter masquerading as a missionary's daughter, a flier who with his pal turns to pearl diving in order to obtain a plane and join the Royal Air Force and an oriental prince who wants to add the girl to his harem. Florence Rice, Lief Erikson, Gordon Jones and Alexander D'Arcy have the top spots, supported by Don Beddoe, Adele Rowland, Lumsden Hare, Richard Terry and Emory Parnell.

Adding to the fliers' difficulties is the fact that the girl steals the pearls with which they hope to buy a plane, and then turns them over to the police as thieves, later relenting.

Edward Dmytryk directed the picture at a fast pace, cramming the picture's 65 minutes with comedy and action.

Jack Fier as producer obtained the maximum value from his budget.

When Ladies Meet

(MGM, 1940-41)

Sophisticated Comedy Drama

Rachel Crothers' stage play, filmed by MGM in 1933 following a Broadway experience rated a success, is in this 1941 version, as in the original form and in its first filming, a treatment of the triangle theme in terms of sparkling dialogue. Its outspokenness when serious and the nature of its allusions when humorous restrict its usefulness as an attraction to the adult sector of cinema patronage. But within this sphere it delivers a maximum of diversion only slightly marred now and again by an excess of conversation.

It will be remembered that the plot pertains to a budding affair between a book publisher and an authoress and the title refers to a meeting between the ladies in his life at a time and under circumstances which precipitate a discussion of the practical issues involved, a discussion conducted with candor and with the sophisticated young writing woman discovering that love is not in fact what it is in her fiction, while the wife discovers that a dilletante husband is not worth keeping. For a clinch finish the disillusioned authoress returns to the arms of the suitor whose interest in her has prompted him to arrange the meeting without consent of the interested parties.

As is commonly the case in such pictures, the action is almost entirely conversational. The dialogue upon which rests the burden of interest is equal to the responsibility in substantially all sequences, a bit wordy in some, and there is incidental humor to lighten the strain of protracted debate on love, life and related matters.

Performances are without exception excellent, Robert Taylor distinguishing himself in a mainly humorous assignment and Greer Garson adding to her "Blossoms in the Dust" laurels by her portrayal of the wife. Accountable for most of the laughs which kept a Hollywood preview audience in high spirits was Spring Byington as the addled hostess in whose home most of the tale is told.

Production by Robert Z. Leonard and Orville O. Dull and direction by Mr. Leonard impart a high gloss to the enterprise and maintain interest remarkably well in view of the necessary reliance upon dialogue.

Previewed at the Alexander Theatre, Glendale, to a mixed and mainly adult audience which manifested a high degree of approval.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

The Forgotten Village

(Arthur Mayer-Joseph Burstyn)

Steinbeck and Mexico

This is another protest from the vigorous pen of John Steinbeck. In "The Forgotten Village," which is a documentary of remote village life in Mexico, Steinbeck inveighs against the superstition and ignorance which burdens the inhabitants of a rude and ancient settlement. In the vein of his familiar sociological views he argues for the blessings of a better life for the peasants of Mexico.

The subject is laden with controversial aspects. It already has run afoul of the New York State Board of Censors, which institution has refused a permit for its theatrical exhibition. On re-consideration it seems likely that the exhibition of the picture will be permitted because a childbirth incident, which was objected to, while calculated to give anguish to an audience, seems hardly to fit tightly under the classification of indecency.

The film in its over-all argument affords many suggestions of an anti-religious attitude and as such becomes classified with a well-known school of criticism of Mexico and Mexican affairs. Damaged church buildings with barricaded doors creep in as apparently innocent background shots. There is, if only accidentally, a confusion of religion and superstition, especially in symbols and in depictions of rites and customs.

"The Forgotten Village" is a sociological study of the people of the little pueblo of Santiago, in the mountains of Mexico, who have not yet caught up with modern civilization, reflected in the life of the boy Juan Diego and his family. They are shown working in the fields, going to market, the children going to a crude school. Depicted are their problems of life, disease and death solved with superstition and ignorance. When the children become infected with typhoid because of the pueblo well water, Juan Diego, who has never been more than 10 miles from home, goes to great lengths to obtain medical aid, and for this he is turned out by his father. The picture ends on a note of hope, however, for the seeds of enlightenment have begun to germinate in young Juan, and "there are thousands of Juan Diegos in the villages of Mexico."

The film is well done, the photography is noteworthy and the narration by Burgess Meredith calls for special mention.

Previewed at the Preview Theatre, New York, where a mixed audience of professional reviewers reacted to the few humorous incidents, and applauded spasmodically at the finish.—IRENE SMOLEN.

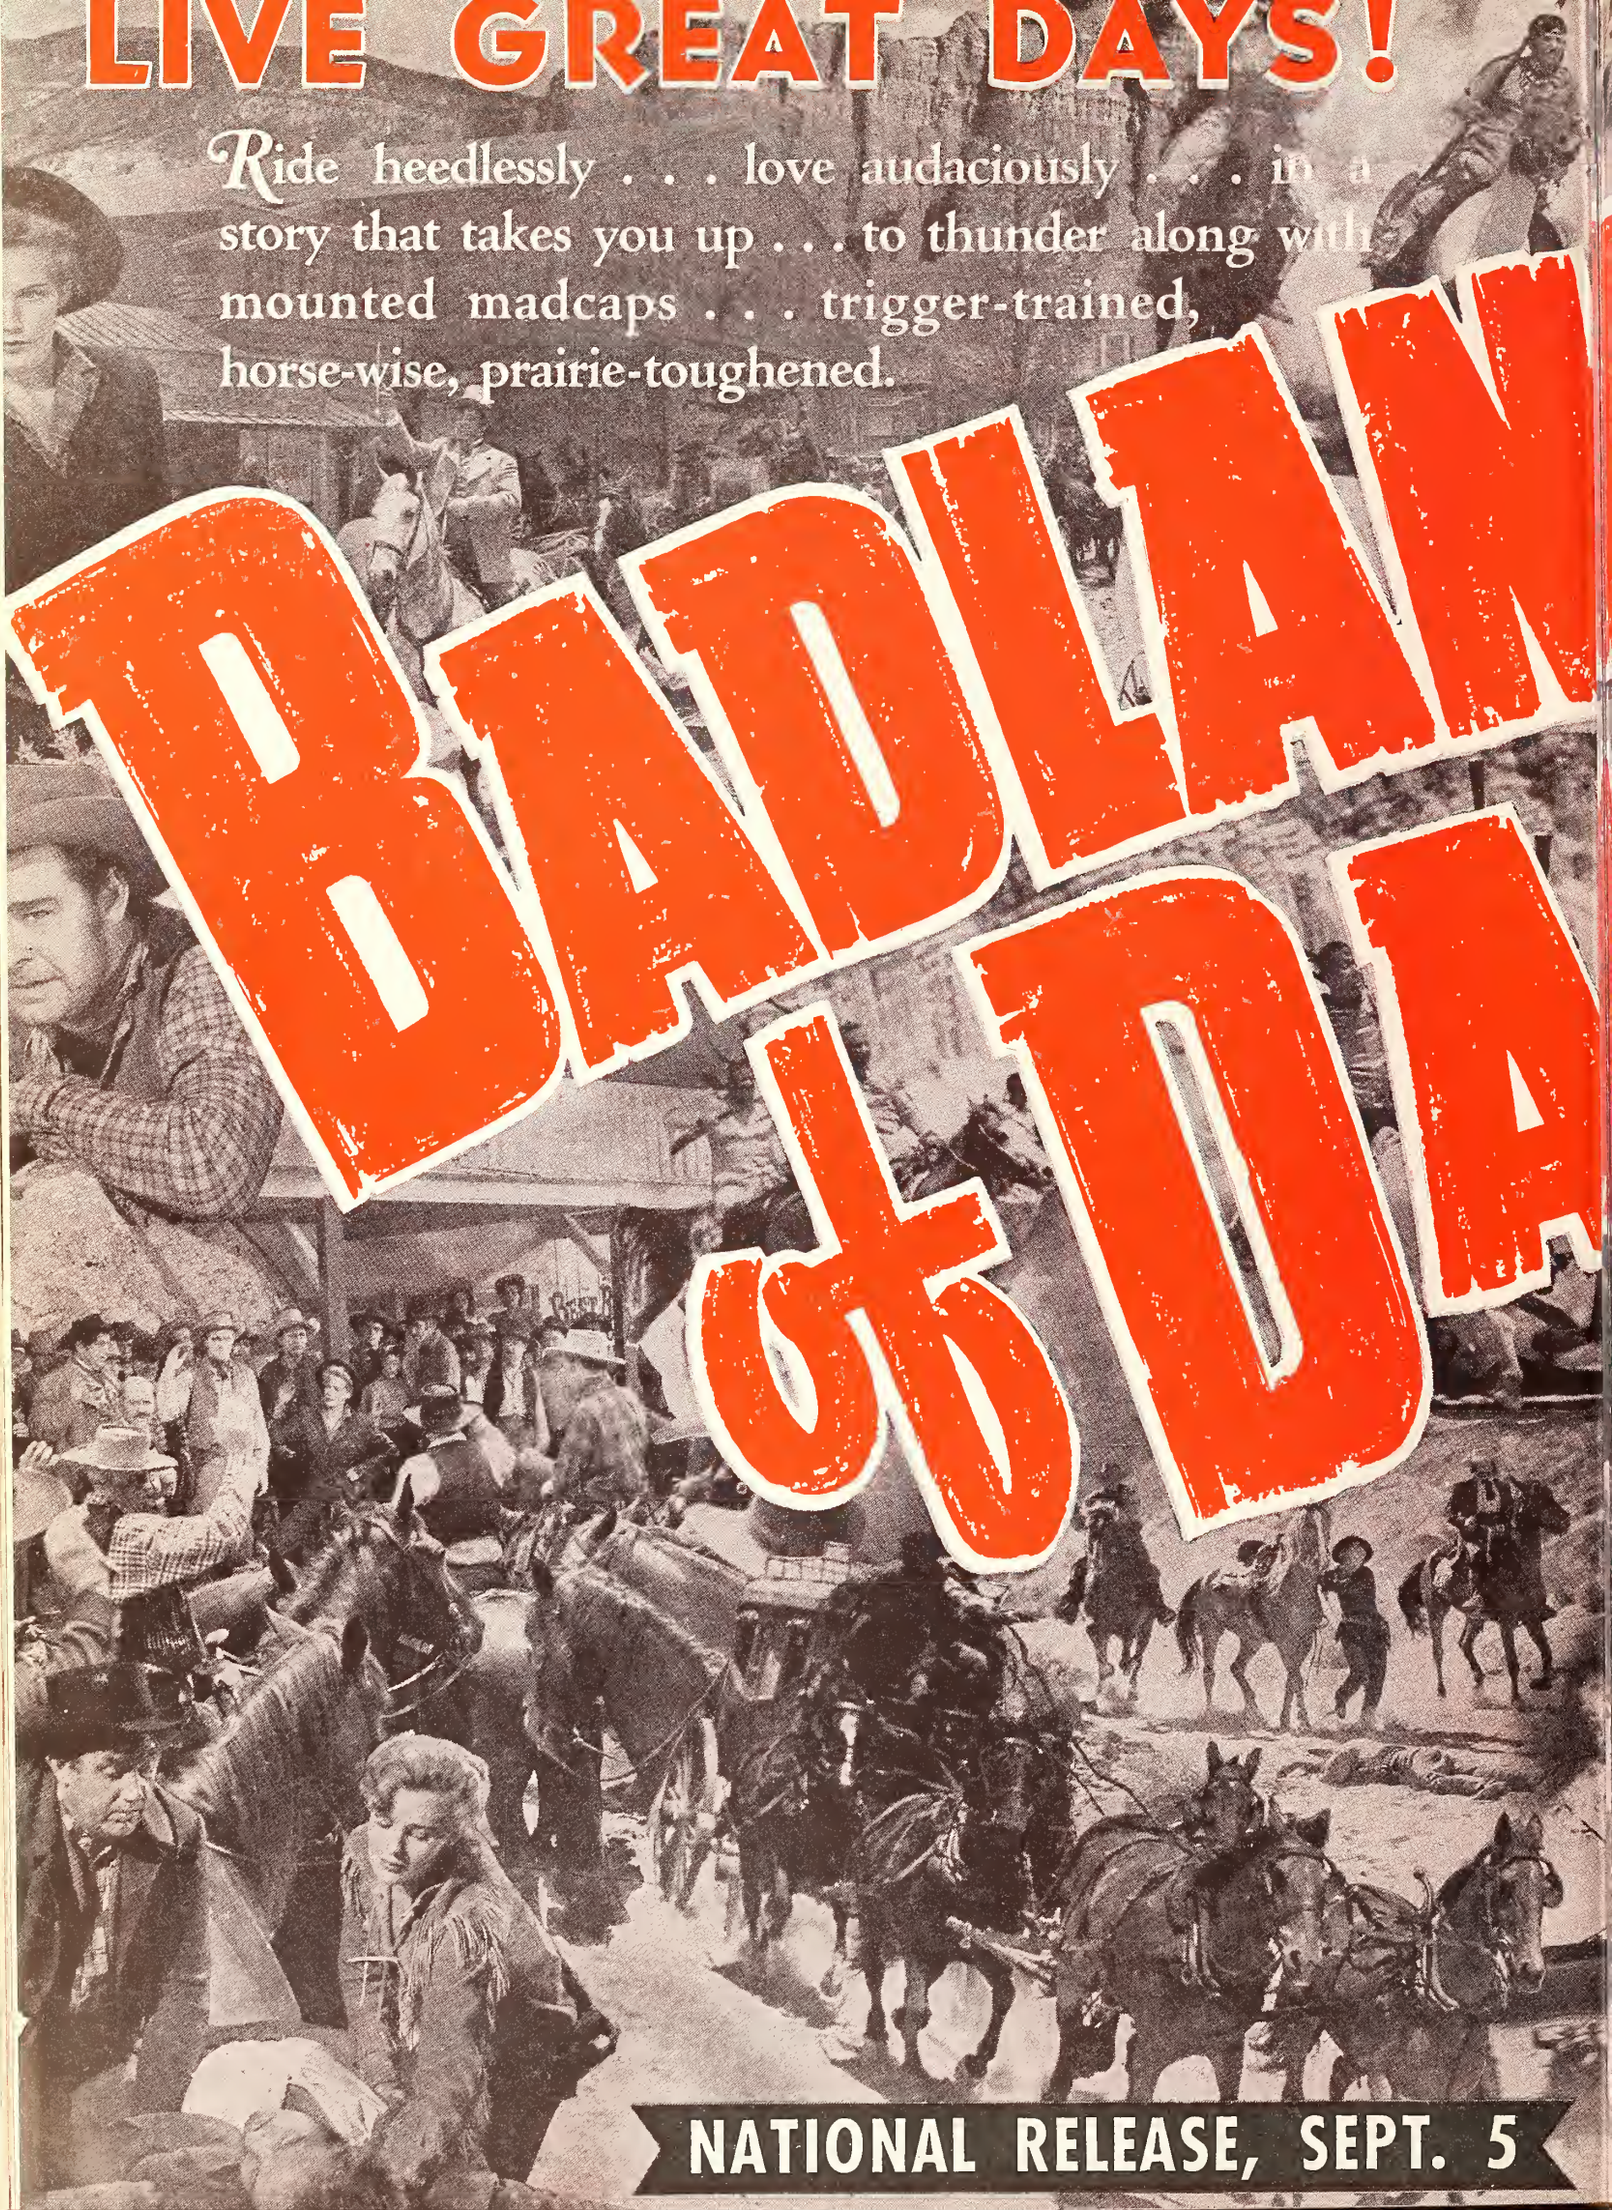
Harvard Receives 25 Film Scripts

Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., has been given the scripts of 25 outstanding films of the past six years. The scripts will be added to the University's Theatre Collection. They were presented by the individual studios through the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. Studios donating scripts included Metro Goldwyn Mayer, RKO, Warners, Samuel Goldwyn and Selznick-International. The scripts will be used in connection with a course to be given in the University and will also be available for study by all members of the University.

The scripts included "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Boy's Town," "Broadway Melody of 1936," "Camille," "The Citadel," "David Copperfield," "Fury," "Goodbye Mr. Chips," "The Great Ziegfeld," "Naughty Marietta," "Pride and Prejudice," "Pygmalion" and "Waterloo Bridge" from MGM; "The Gay Divorcee," "The Informer," "Roberta," "Stage Door" and "Winterset" from RKO; "Dead End," "These Three" and "Wuthering Heights" from Goldwyn; "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "A Star Is Born" from Selznick-International; and "Midsummer Night's Dream" and "The Story of Louis Pasteur" from Warner Brothers.



Paramount Seattle Changes

Changes in personnel at the Seattle Paramount exchange, effective this week, have just been announced by manager Morrie Segel. Robert Estill returns to Film Row as head booker, replacing Max Hadfield, who resigned to accept a position with Golden State Theatres in San Francisco. A UNIVERSAL PICTURE

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

We've heard of theatre lobbies being filled with groceries, crockery and even automobiles, but this year of surprises brings word that theatre lobbies in the great Inland Empire of Washington are now being used to store sacked wheat, because all the grain elevators are over-flowing from the bumper wheat crop.

And from Ketchikan, Alaska, theatre owners advise there has been a record Klawok salmon pack, and that the cases piled up faster than they could be shipped south, so some seats were removed from the theatres and used as a storage space.

You'll soon find out what a suppressed desire looks like. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has announced that theatres in various metropolitan cities are planning to conduct contests for the best surrealist painting or drawing of "a suppressed desire." They got the idea from "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," which illustrates Dr. Jekyll's suppressed desires.

It is proposed to turn the winning portrait over to some museum for display, where it will be dedicated "to all men who have ever longed to lead a double life."

James R. Young, International News correspondent who was jailed by the Japanese in Tokyo, has written a note to the "Gone With the Wind" producer, David Selznick, in which he relates that during his incarceration the Supreme Court Justice and the Attorney General in Japan gave permission for three books to be read. One was the New Testament, the second was "North To The Orient," and the third was "G.W.T.W." Also, while he was in prison, he says he noticed music at a Japanese school near by. They had athletic exercises. The students numbered several hundred and each afternoon they would do their exercises to the tune of "Marching Through Georgia."

Is that a threat or a promise?

Francis Gillon, managing the LeClaire Theatre in Moline, Illinois, was figuratively and literally "caught in the draft." He was caught in the draft on the day the Paramount picture "Caught in the Draft" arrived at his theatre for playing.

He's now Private Francis Gillon, Battery D, 3rd Battalion, First Training Regiment, Field Artillery Training Center, Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

Gloria Swanson is also an aerobat. RKO says that Gloria positively refused the use of a double in "Father Takes A Wife," and that when time came to film those ship-board gymnastics, she literally pushed aside a double who had been engaged for those scenes, and personally topped off a series of vigorous handstands, armspreads, push-ups, push-overs and forward and backward somersaults.

Lloyd's of London offers odds of 1,000-to-1 that America won't be bombed, accepting wagers of $1 to $1,000 that U. S. houses, apartments, theatres, hotels, banks and other buildings will not be destroyed or damaged by war, bombardment, military or usurped power.

We suppose that this automatically allows anticipatorians to go home and sleep easier.

JOHN O'DONNELL and Doris Fleeson, writing from Washington, tell how America's press, radio and newsreels were put on short rations by President Roosevelt in reporting the visit of F. D. R.'s Hyde Park and White House guest, His Royal Highness, the Duke of Kent, brother of King George VI.

Kent himself, recalling his last visit to the terrain of the United States, is extremly gun-shy of American reporters. And, a fortnight hence, Kent's oldest brother, the Duke of Windsor, with his American-born consort, arrives here en route to Canada. England's former King and the woman he loves would like to stop over in the United States; the prospect of such a visit gives the diplomats the jitters. After all, if Kent, the youngest brother of the royal family is entertained by President Roosevelt on the "strictly social" basis of personal friendship, can F. D. R. withhold the same hospitality from the royal elder brother?

On his part, Kent wants as little as possible to do with "pressmen," either American or British. As the Duke might justly remark, he has at times had a "bad press." There was the embarrassing occasion, he now recalls, of his only other visit to American shores, back in the piping days of peace, and the reign of George V, when he put into San Diego arbor as "Lieut. Windsor" aboard H. M. S. Durban.

That was the time when newspapers carried the report of the mysterious disappearance of "Lieut. Windsor" from His Majesty's ship and the yarns of a merry Hollywood party, thrown by movie queen Lili Damita, at which His Royal Highness was entertained by such film royalty as Gloria Swanson, Billie Dove and June Collier.

News stories of that strictly social Hollywood entertainment included the depressing report that Lieut. Windsor's naval superiors became a bit miffed when His Royal Highness prolonged his stay at the party and grimly marked him down AWOL with a sentence of 30 days' confinement to quarters when he finally bade farewell to Hollywood.

Floyd Stone, our staff photographer, has run into a form of Times Square, New York, "concession," which, while new to him, has been going on for several years, to the amused chagrin of some of the city's regular daily newspaper cameramen.

He attempted to enter the Times Building the other Tuesday night to picture, from one of its windows, Broadway's first "blackout" since the First World War—a half hour darkening of theatre and amusement signs, created by the electrical workers' union.

A Times Building night elevator operator deemed entrance into the building a privilege —and placement at a window a greater privilege. He had been "placing" photographers all that evening—on various floors, he said. Maybe he could "spare" another floor for the lensman.

The "fee" was 50 cents, Mr. Stone learned, and paid. He also learned some 30 news cameramen did likewise.

We assume that the newsreels were on hand, too, to record for posterity the arrival of the billionth egg, its wrapping and sealing in a carton of 11 other just-ordinary eggs and its later discovery, through markings, by a lucky buyer who received twenty-five dollars in cash for the finding.

ARBITRATION BOARDS CLEAR DECKS FOR WIDENED JURISDICTION SEPT. 1

Appeals Board Upholds Dallas Dismissal; Boston Exhibitor Wins Victory on Clearance; Three New Complaints Filed

Action on pending arbitration cases quickened this week with a second decision from the Appeals Board, three new cases and a clearance victory for a Boston independent as the motion picture arbitration tribunals of the American Arbitration Association faced an extension of their work on Monday when the balance of the consent decree provisions become effective.

New grounds for arbitration complaints on specific run, contracts, and the selling provisions of the consent decree's new order are discussed on page 12, in a report on change in trade practices decreed for September 1, 1941, in the consent decree signed last October by the Big Five and the U. S. Government.

Dallas Decision Upheld

In their second decision the three members of the Appeals Board on August 21st upheld the dismissal at Dallas, Tex., by L. M. Jordan, arbitrator of the some-run complaint filed by Reuben Frels, operator of the Normana, in El Campo, Tex., against 20th Century-Fox Corporation.

While dismissing the complaint after finding that the Fox representative had offered pictures to comply with Section VI of the decree the board interpolated in its decision an extensive discussion of the decree's provision that no distributor shall refuse to license pictures "on some run (to be designated by the distributor) upon terms and conditions fixed by the distributor which are not calculated to defeat the purpose of this section. . . ."

An offer of some run, the Appeals tribunal observed, must be on fair and reasonable conditions to meet purpose of the decree. As possible guidance in future some-run cases the decision stated that arbitrators should carefully study the practicability of some-run offers.

In the Normana case the Board found that Fox had in fact offered runs, not contrary to Section VI, and that Mr. Fels had refused them. They denied the complainant's contention that delay of the Fox manager in granting a license for second run until a competing theatre had been licensed for that run was "calculated to defeat the purpose of this section." They noted that there was no requirement in the decree that a distributor shall give any exhibitor an exclusive run.

Two New Appeals

Two new cases were received during the week by the Appeals Board, bringing to 10 the number of cases on the review docket. Two decisions have been received.

At New York the Skouras Circuit and Northern Amusement Company jointly appealed on August 20th the clearance award of George P. Spiegelberg reducing the margin for the Squire theatre at Great Neck, L. I. The award, on August 5th, cut the Skouras's playhouse margin and eliminated clearance for the Northern's Little Neck.

The Warner circuit at Washington last week also contested an exhibitor clearance victory when it appealed the decision of Louis M. Denit who reduced the margin held over the K. & B. Amusement Company's Apex theatre.

Cue to Future "Some Run" Actions Is Observed in Appeal Board's Decision

Although the Appeals Board dismissed the specific appeal of Mr. Frels from the some run ruling of the Dallas arbitrator, in defining the scope of Section VI of the consent decree they wrote what observers called a very specific rule for appraising future some run complaints.

The Appeals Board noted that, in order to meet the purpose of the decree, distributors must first offer "some run" and, secondly, offer it on proper terms and conditions. The decision declared, in part:

"Although the primary requisite of Section VI is expressed in negative form, it may under certain circumstances become affirmative in effect. It would be absurd to construe this clause to mean that a distributor could evade its effect by simply avoiding a definite refusal. Failure for an unreasonable time to respond to applications for a license, or the prolongation of negotiations for a license over an unreasonable period, might well be equivalent to a refusal.

"It is not sufficient, however, that a distributor has merely offered some run to an exhibitor; it must be a run upon terms and conditions fixed by the distributor which are not calculated to defeat the purpose of this Section. The requirement that the terms must be such as 'are not calculated to defeat the purpose of this Section' could not well be expressed in more general and comprehensive language. This clause is to be broadly construed for the purpose of ensuring good faith on the part of distributors in the exercise of their right to designate runs, and the terms and conditions offered by the distributor must be fair and reasonable.

"It is the duty of Arbitrators to scrutinize carefully situations of this sort and to inquire thoroughly into all the facts bearing upon the question whether the offer of a run and the terms and conditions offered to an exhibitor are calculated to defeat the purpose of Section VI. Merely offering a run on obviously impossible terms would certainly indicate an intent to defeat the purpose of the Section."

The Waltham Amusement Company at Boston won a reduction by half of clearance over its Grand theatre in suburban Whittenton last week. In a concise award William H. Hitchcock, arbitrator, cut from 60 to 30 days the margins granted by the Big Five to the Strand and Park in Staunton, characterizing them as unreasonable.

The award order that the 30-day clearance be given a test and pointed out that if the 30-day margin warranted modification a new arbitration action could be brought by the distributors to this end. Mr. Hitchcock also ruled that competition between the theatres must be of a substantial character to warrant clearance protection.

In his award, Mr. Hitchcock declared, "The only matters submitted for my determination in this case are whether a clearance now prevailing of 60 days between the exhibition of features in the Park and the Strand, first-run theatres located in the center of Taunton, Mass., and their availability for the Grand Theatre, a second-run theatre operated by the complainant in a suburban part of Taunton, known as Whittendon, is reasonable; and if it is found unreasonable, what maximum clearance would be a reasonable one.

"I find that a clearance of 60 days is unreasonable. I do not deem it my duty to discuss the evidence in detail, but I have fully considered the evidence before me as to the factors listed as items 1-6 inclusive in Paragraph VIII of the Consent Decree. I particularly find that, while there is some slight competition between the Grand and the two first-run theatres, it is not of such a substantial character as to require a clearance of 60 days for the reasonable protection of the two other theatres of the distributors.

"The fixing of a maximum clearance which shall be reasonable under all the conditions is a matter of considerable difficulty. Perhaps it can fairly and finally be fixed only by experiment. On the evidence now before me I find that the maximum reasonable clearance between the theatres involved in this case is 30 days. In reaching this conclusion, I have in mind that if the putting into effect of a 30-day clearance seems, after a fair trial, to produce such a change in conditions as in their judgment to warrant a modification of that clearance, the distributors may under the Consent Decree institute a further proceeding for that purpose."

Costs, the award stipulated, shall be paid by the five distributors.

Three New Complaints

A new complaint, Boston's sixth, was filed August 20th by William Deitch and Pauline Goldberg, partners in the operation of the Weymouth theatre in Weymouth, Mass., for a reduction of clearance. The complainants assert that their house serves the population of the town, about 22,000, and an additional four or five thousand persons. The Weymouth plays after the Strand and the Quincy in nearby Quincy, Mass., operated by the Levinson Brothers. The complainants charge that they had had 14 days clearance after Quincy and that without warning, the clearance was raised to 30 days. They seek a return to the 14-day clearance. The demand listed Paramount, RKO, 20th Century-Fox and Loew's, Inc., as defendants.

At Dallas a fifth case was filed on Monday by B. R. McClendon, owner of the Texan and State theatres in Atlanta, Tex., asking that all clearance be eliminated. MGM, RKO, Warner Brothers, and 20th Century-Fox are named in the complaint. Mr. McClendon charges that the Paramount and Strand theatres in nearby Texarkana hold an unreasonable 30 to 60-day margin over his houses.

At Memphis on Monday the management of the Petit Jean theatre filed the tribunal's second complaint asking for some run. MGM was the only distributor cited.

Distributors were asked to supply product pending the publishing of an award by A. A. Ribicoff, Hartford attorney, at the conclusion of the hearings before him at New Haven on the clearance complaint of Fred Quatrano, operator of the New Newington, Newington, Conn., last Thursday. The case, the tribunal's third, was filed in behalf of a new house, which opened August 1st.

Hearings were completed August 21st with an evening session that lasted until midnight. Mr. Ribicoff urged the parties to sit until the case was finished at the second hearing since no convenient continuance date could be set for several weeks. He noted that the new theatre awaited disposition of the case before closing new product deals. The Warner circuit and Peter Perakos, operating intervening houses in New Britain, were given 14 days to file answering briefs. The arbitrator promised consideration of the 51 exhibits and a decision in less than the maximum 30 days.

New Haven's fourth case, that of College Open Air, Middletown, against the consenting distributors, for "some run," will be heard October 6th.

St. Louis

At St. Louis hearing on the some-run complaint filed by Louis Sosna, of Mexico, Mo., against MGM, was postponed from August 26th to September 4th at the request of intervening Frisina circuit. Fred Armstrong is the arbitrator.

Paramount Office Union Meets

Circulars and handbills distributed in and around the Paramount Building in New York last Tuesday brought to light the "organizing" meeting of Paramount Pictures Employes Association of Greater New York, an office workers' union, which was to be held at the Capitol Hotel on Thursday.

The circulars disclosed no affiliation of the Paramount union with either established office workers' unions or an international union. Statements in the circular revealed that organization of Warner home office employes is nearing completion and that Columbia, Twentieth Century-Fox and Loew's employes already have launched organizing drives. Universal has had an office workers' union for several years, but it was not mentioned in the circulars. The Universal unit belongs to an A. F. of L. affiliate. Organizers at Fox, it is said, are representing the C. I. O. office workers' union.

New Astoria House

Wednesday, August 27th, marked the official, gala opening of a new theatre in Astoria, Queens, the Strand, located on Broadway and Crescent streets. Jacques Horn is manager. The Strand is owned by the Cedar Operating Company, an affiliate fo the Croyden Operating Company, of which Jacob Levy is president and Leon Levy, vice-president. The theatre seats 1,250.

8,369 Houses in USO Theatre Drive

Joseph Bernhard of Warners', chairman of the USO theatre drive, announced this week that a total of 8,369 theatres throughout the country had been enrolled in the campaign which begins next Monday. Mr. Bernhard reported that every theatre on Broadway and every circuit in the New York exchange area would participate. Co-chairmen in 31 exchange centers have reported that all important circuits, affiliated and independent, will have been enrolled for participation by Labor Day.

Meanwhile, Governor Bricker of Ohio designated next week as USO Theatre Week and urged people of his state to support the campaign. President E. L. Kuykendall of MPTOA, in a bulletin issued to all members, requested them to cooperate in the drive, pointing out that the great majority of theatre patrons had relatives or friends in U. S. service and that theatres would earn the good will of their patrons through helping these men.

Mr. Bernhard announced that while the USO theatre week officially starts next Monday, those houses which usually change programs on Thursdays and Fridays may, if they wish, start their collection campaigns accordingly towards the end of the week. The USO trailer, made at the MGM studios, is being supplied to theatres by National Screen Service for the drive.

In Kansas City, Elmer C. Rhoden, Fox-Midwest division manager, and R. F. Withers, Republic, co-chairmen respectively for exhibitors and distributors for USO in that exchange territory, announced that they already had obtained many pledges of cooperation for the week's campaign.

Stanley Books Stage Shows

Stage shows at the Stanley theatre in Pittsburgh will be the fixed policy of the house. Shep Fields, Alvino Rey, Glenn Miller, Jimmy Dorsey and Frankie Masters have been booked for five consecutive weeks, supported by straight acts. Other name bands and units will be scheduled as available.

Sees Psychology Aid for Studios

Recommending that motion picture producers employ psychologists as consultants to sit in on "script conferences before a film is produced in order to save companies thousands of dollars before a picture hits the cutting room," J. S. List of New York, consultant psychologist who specializes in pre-testing children's radio programs for psychological effects, said, "The motion picture industry should take a lesson from radio and employ psychologists as technicians."

Seated in a heavily draped and carpeted sanctum decorated to lend an atmosphere conducive to sympathetic rapport between consultant and client, Mr. List, who is licensed with the N. Y. State Department of Mental Hygiene, held forth for an hour last week on "wrong thinking" prevalent in the industry.

Quotes Survey

According to a survey he conducted, statistical reports on which were not revealed, Mr. List deduces that "fifty per cent of the nation's theatregoers cease to be regular patrons when they reach the age of 40; 75 per cent are lost to the theatre when they reach 60, and 98 per cent at the age of 70." He believes that one of the principal reasons for the drop in box-office receipts is at the source. "Million dollar investments," he said, "are handled by theatre managers getting $35 or $40 a week. They are not equipped to tie up their product with the community life around them. They have no knowledge of how to build up a psychological public relations job with various centers of their community such as Parent-Teacher groups, Rotary and Kiwanis clubs."

He recommended that the film firms should invite Parent-Teacher groups, of which there are 150,000 local organizations in the country, to preview with exhibitors, and Rotary and Kiwanis clubs, blocks-of-five pictures in order to give community interests an opportunity to pre-test films before their release.

As an example of "wrong thinking," Mr. List cited a letter which he wrote to Walt Disney after release of "Snow White," in which he charged the film as "affecting the emotions of children and even adults." According to the psychologist, Mr. Disney replied: "We make our pictures only for the child mind in the adult," whereupon Mr. List enquired, "What can you expect of such an unhealthy attitude?"

Reminded of efforts on the part of the industry to determine public taste in pictures, currently being waged throughout the nation, Mr. List said that such "questionnaires can be planted for 'yes' and 'no' answers, depending on how the questions are worded," and he intimated that the questionnaire method, unless conducted by a psychologist, is not valid for determining "correct" answers.

Mr. List began his career with the original Bray-Paramount studios which animated the early Max Fleischer cartoons and was the first psychologist "ever associated with handling educational scripts for animated work."

No Politics

When Paramount purchased Ernest Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls" last October for an aggregate amount of $150,000 there was much speculation in Hollywood as to what the political implications would be. Since the book was on the Spanish Civil War many of the industry's figures seemed to feel that was a rather touchy subject.

However, word in Hollywood this week has allayed these fears, Mr. Hemingway's story will reach the screen as a classic love story without political hue. This was revealed by Louis Bromfield, himself a novelist of some renown, who is adapting the Spanish war story to the screen.

Mr. Bromfield explained that he has strong classic views about the virtue of eliminating propaganda from art, and Sam Wood, who will direct the production, and Buddy G. DeSylva, Paramount's executive producer, have agreed from the outset that the scenario should be a romance laid against the tragic background of the Civil War. Mr. Hemingway's mood of impending doom will remain, but the ideological lines of the book will not be drawn on the screen.

The censorable aspects of the book have been avoided, according to Mr. Bromfield, and the dialogue has been considerably cleaned up. The hero's sleeping bag, which has been the subject of much discussion since the story was purchased, will be seen in the picture, but will remain unoccupied.

"I have had a good deal of experience in suggesting enough to let members of an audience think anything they like," Mr. Bromfield said. "Anyone who has the novel will feel, I think, that we have been faithful to the original because he can fill in whatever we leave unsaid. To others, the omissions will not matter."

The start of "Vicki and Her Eagles" was postponed by Twentieth Century-Fox this week for eight to ten weeks because of rewriting necessary to remove similarity between the story as originally planned and Warners' "Dive Bomber." The film originally was titled "Flight Surgeon." George Mongomery and Jack Oakie are the only ones set for the picture so far.

Paramount has announced "Amateur Admiral" as the next for Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour, following "Caught in the Draft." Writers have been assigned to prepare an original.

Earl H. Rettig, formerly an executive with Hal Roach and the Disney studio, has been appointed financial assistant to Reginald Armour, studio representative of George J. Schaefer, RKO president.

Paramount will release "Guardians of the Wilds," a one-reel short subject, dealing with the Forest Rangers and their efforts to protect and develop America's forests. The short was produced with the cooperation of the Forest Service of the United States Department of Agriculture and has been set for August 29th release.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has obtained the cooperation of the United States Army in the production of "Steel Cavalry," formerly titled "Combat Car," which will star Wallace Beery and Marjorie Main. The film will be shot in part at Fort Knox and Fort Lewis.

Name News

DEANNA DURBIN's first picture not produced by JOE PASTERNAK will be "They Live Alone" in which she will play a newspaper reporter. BRUCE MANNING will produce.

PRESTON STURGES' next picture for Paramount after "Sullivan's Travels" will be "Take a Letter, Darling," co-starring JOEL MCCRAE and VERONICA LAKE.

JEAN PARKER, seen opposite RICHARD ARLEN in "Power Dive" has been signed by co-producers WILLIAM PINE and WILLIAM THOMAS to appear opposite CHESTER MORRIS in "No Hands on the Clock" for Paramount.

JUNE PREISSER, whose way with a sweater the magazines were photographing before the Breen ban occurred, will have the feminine lead in Paramount's "Sweater Girl," previously titled "Sing a Song of Homicide."

TO PRODUCE ON STAGE AND SCREEN

After several years as an associate producer at the Twentieth Century-Fox studios in Hollywood, Harry Joe Brown announced last week his intention of entering the field of independent stage and motion picture production. He plans to do one play in New York annually, followed by a screen production of the play if the initial adventure is successful.

For the new Broadway season Mr. Brown has scheduled "After Tomorrow" which George Seaton is currently rewriting. Mr. Brown expects to have the piece ready for a Broadway opening October 1st. The play was given a tryout in Hollywood last winter by the producer, with Frank Craven heading the cast at that time.

Product Tally

Eighteen pictures were taken off the shooting stages last week and put in the editing cubicles, making a total of 80 there. Only nine pictures started, lowering the total of features in production to 44, as against 53 the week before. Twenty five are being prepared.

Showings will begin at 9:30 A.M. each day and will be repeated during the day until 5:30 P.M. with an intermission of one hour, between 12:30 and 1:30.

'GRAND FIESTA' TO MARK MEXICAN CINEMA WEEK

Government to Sponsor Fete Sept. 10 to 17; Workers Ban Columbia's "Breakfast"

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

Public interest in Mexican pictures and the domestic cinemetographic industry is to be whetted with the presentation of an elaborate program during National Cinematographic Week which has been finally decided upon for September 10 to 17. This fiesta will be staged by the National Athenaeum of Sciences and Arts and the Federal Film Supervising and Censoring Department. Both organizations announce the following program:

September 10: "Gran Gallo" ("reveille"), pasting of proclamations of the Week and its festivities and a parade of the principal streets by the studios' workers.

September 11: President Manual Avila Camacho, accompanied by the Ministers of the Interior, Finance and National Economy and the Mayor of Mexico city to visit the two principal studios here, the Clasa and the Azteca, special performances in all the theatres which will be profusely illuminated and decorated, featuring the national colors:

September 12: Flag raising and general exercises before the Monument to the Revolution by the studio workers:

September 13: Street parades, "verbenas populares" (block parties), and a grand ball in the Hotel Reforma under auspices of the Association of Cinematographic Journalists of Mexico. Five young stars will be chosen from among the candidates representing various Federal Government Ministries and departments and clubs throughout Mexico. Contracts are to be awarded the five winners of this contest by the Mexican Association of Motion Picture Producers;

September 14: Procession of decorated cars and floats in historic Chapultepec Park, a special program devoted entirely to pictures and the theatre on the "National Hour" by the Federal Government of a national network of 26 radio stations;

September 15 and 16: a series of fiestas organized by picture players;

September 17: a supper to President Avila Camacho and his cabinet tendered by the Producers Association.

Theatres in the provinces are to participate in the Week with the presentation of special programs featuring Mexican pictures.

Fight Over "Breakfast"

The industry and the public are indignant about the arbitrary banning by the powerful Confederation of Mexican Workers of "He Stayed for Breakfast." This Columbia picture which provoked such a protest by the Confederation when it was announced for exhibition late last year at the select Cine Teatro Alameda, that screenings of it had to be cancelled, seems now to be strictly banned as far as Mexico is concerned.

The Alameda management decided to try again with "Breakfast." But the second attempt failed, under more sensational circumstances that it did the first. For some time before the theatre opened for the second scheduled debut matinee of "Breakfast," a large number of uniformed police, armed with rifles, mounted guard at the main entrance and surrounded the theatre. Some unidentified person, it is understood, had tipped police headquarters that there might be trouble in connection with this second try at serving "Breakfast."

A crowd of about 300 angry looking men and women hovered about the theatre. But there was no disturbance. The presence of the police apparently kept order. Just before the show was to have started, the theatre's management posted an announcement to the effect that "Breakfast" had had to be cancelled because the civic government had not approved the exhibition and that Mickey Rooney's "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary" would be continued for a second week.

As was the case with the banning the first time, the reason unofficially cited for this second action was that "Breakfast" was not to the taste of the Confederation because it ridiculed Communism.

The Ministry of the Interior, whose section, the Federal Film Censoring and Supervision Department, has full charge of pictures in Mexico, declared that it could not nothing about "Breakfast" and its case. The Ministry explained that this was a 1940 film and as the department did not come into existence until last March 26 it had not authorized this picture.

Protests against the prohibition of "Breakfast" were lodged with President Manual Avila Camacho and the civic government by the Association of Mexican Cinemotographic Journalists which called the action "arbitrary."

The banning was caustically criticized by the local press which openly accused the Confederation of being directly responsible for the action.

Strike Looms for September 2nd

Complete support in their controversy with the eight major American distributors over demands for a new contract that entails increased wages and several other expensive concessions that bears the threat of a strike for September 2, has been pledged the National Cinemetrographic Workers Union by the Confedation of Mexican Workers. The Confederation, in making this announcement, declared that the distributors were trying to deprive their employees of "labor conquests they have made during 20 years of constant striving" and that it was only just that the Americans raise wages because, so says the Confederation, they are making huge profits, most of which go abroad, leaving only small change in Mexico.

The distributors have told local newspapers that are unbiased in this controversy that after paying salaries, rent, other operating expenses and taxes and giving the exhibitors a cut they only make a clear profit of 15.57 per cent.

The industry is rather pessimistic about the result of conversations that Lic. Javier Rojo Gomez, the local mayor who is acting as arbiter in this case, is holding with a view to averting the strike.

Provincial exhibitors have implored the Federal Government to do all it can to prevent the strike which they declare would be disastrous for them because of the acute shortage of films it would mean.

A Mexican distributor, Felipe Mier, who before he went into business for himself was Warners' manager in Mexico, will be affected by the strike threatened against the eight major Americans because of his membership on the Film Board of Trade, the Americans' unofficial organization. Sr. Mier is the only Mexican member of the Board.

Though Mexico is short of Mexican pictures, a curious circumstance has developed in this regard as 33 Mexican films, some of them said to be excellent, have not yet been exhibited. Some of these films were produced as long ago as 1937. Producers and exhibitors, it is said, have various reasons for not screening these films. In some cases, the producers do not consider the picture good enough. In others, the exhibitors are chary about taking a chance with them in view of losses they suffered with some Mexican productions.

Producers and exhibitors are expected to get together with regard to the exhibition of at least some of these 33 pictures, for they represent a considerable amount of frozen capital.

Mexico to Grade Pictures, Theatres

Theatres and films in Mexico are soon to have letter gradings similar to those given milk in the United States. This system is being prepared as an official efficiency measure, to facilitate check ups on the exhibitors and films, and as a protection for the public by the federal film supervision and censoring department. All of Mexico's 958 theatres are to be so rated. So will every picture exhibited in this country.

For example, the film cathedrals, the largest and best equipped ones that give the best shows, will be rated AA. A, B and C will be the other ratings. Like lettering is to be given pictures.

This measures, which is expected to go into effect in September, demands that the theatres in all their advertising must give their particular grading letter and those of the kinds of picture they screen. This, the department explains, is to inform the public as to the various classes of theatres and films.

Parking of automobiles and other vehicles before the doors of theatres and other amusement centers here is to be forbidden and the managements of these places must provide a sufficient number of emergency exits and keep them in good working order, under a bylaw the municipal government is preparing. The measure is intended to reduce the danger of accidents to patrons of theatres and other amusement centers.

Preparations are being completed by the federal government for the installation here of equipment of radio station XERA, of 180,000 watts, that it recently expropriated at Villa Acuña, over the border from Eagle Pass, Tex., on the ground that the station was not obeying Mexican regulations.

The government expects to have this station in service by next February. It is to be the official radio mouthpiece of the administration and its power may be increased to as high as 250,000 watts.

Lamm with P.R.C.

Joseph H. Lamm has been appointed Comptroller and assistant to Leon Fromkess, Vice-President in charge of domestic and foreign operations of P.R.C., according to an announcement by Mr. Fromkess. Mr. Lamm, formerly comptroller of Monogram and treasurer of subsidiary companies of that organization, resigned to accept his present position with P.R.C.

SEC APPROVES KAO DEAL; RKO GETS $3,000,000

New Financing Deal Made With Bankers Trust Company; Half Year Net Is $485,605

The RKO interests this week obtained $3,000,000 of new financing from Bankers Trust Company, in New York, and at the same time, obtained approval of the Securities and Exchange Commission, in Washington, of the RKO-KAO-Atlas-Mike Meehan application for approval of a plan of reorganization for Keith-Albee-Orpheum.

RKO is already operating under the credit fund, it is reported. The fund is to be used for production under its terms, and the company is privileged to obtain certain credits as low as one-half per cent.

RKO reported on August 18th a net profit of $485,605 for the 26-week period ending July 5th, compared with a profit of $220,819 for the corresponding period in 1940.

The earnings statement noted that for the 53 calendar weeks ended July 5th the company and its subsidiaries showed a net loss of $723,404 after all charges.

KAO Votes Dividend

The board of directors of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corp., principal theatre subsidiary of RKO, it was disclosed Friday, August 22nd, has declared a dividend out of operating surplus of $1.75 a share of the seven per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock, for the quarter ended September 30th, payable to stockholders on record September 15th.

The sale by KAO to the B. F. Keith Corporation (a company to be formed as a result of the consolidation of two existing subsidiaries of KAO), of certain securities and other property of KAO having a book value of approximately $1,400,000 and the purchase of such securities and other property by the B. F. Keith Corporation.

The entry into and the exercise of an option agreement between the Atlas Corporation and the American Company on behalf of and for the account of RKO and the sale by Michael J. Meehan to Atlas Corporation and American Company, for the account of RKO, of 21,800 shares of KAO's preferred stock.

The purchase by KAO from RKO and the sale by RKO to KAO of 48,586 shares of KAO's preferred stock.

The entry into and exercise of an option agreement between RKO and Atlas Corporation and American Company for the purchase by RKO from Atlas Corporation and American Company of all or any part of the outstanding voting trust certificates for 6,000 shares of the preferred stock of KAO.

Pathe, DuPont Deal

Pathe Film Corp. and E. I. du Pont de Nemours on Friday, August 22nd, signed an agreement for the exchange of stock, a deal under which Pathe stockholders will receive the equivalent of more than $15 a share in du Pont stock for their Pathe shares. Robert Benjamin, attorney for Pathe, said the price was based on the present market value.

Mr. Benjamin also said that Pathe stockholders would meet about September 23rd for the purpose of approving the plan and to vote on the dissolution of Pathe Film Corp.

It is also understood that the deal involves $10,000,000 in stock and cash. Proxy statements were to be mailed out this week.

'Medicine Show' Tax Invoked to Stop Free Films

Backers of merchant-sponsored free motion pictures in small communities filed suit in circuit court at Wabash, Indiana, August 22 asking an injunction and declaratory judgment to prevent the state of Indiana from collecting a $1 per day tax from the operators. About six Wabash county communities have the free shows each week.

Plaintiffs are the Dennis Film Bureau, Inc., V. E. Bromley, Roger Wright, Earl Scott, Clarence Crouch, Hugh Singer, Howard Gaunt and Russell Hughes of Wabash and George Morgan of Peru, Ind.

Ruled "Wagon Shows"

The attorney-general of Indiana, George N. Beamer, has ruled that the free movies come under the classification of "wagon shows" and thus are subject to the tax. Penalty is a fine of $50 for each day when a show is given without payment of the $1 tax. Plaintiffs say the law was passed in 1917, before the day of the free motion picture show, and was intended to apply to medicine shows.

The complaint contends that an automobile used to transport film from town to town can't be termed a wagon. If the attorney-general's ruling is upheld, the suit sets out, it should be necessary to collect the $1 a day fee from college glee clubs, 4-H Clubs and all others who provide any sort of entertainment and travel by automobile.

Wabash county, Indiana, lays claim to being the first to have free motion picture shows. Original show was held there by Dennis & Scott in 1925.

During the last three sessions of the legislature, the Indiana Theatre Owners' association is understood to have proposed bills to cripple non-theatrical shows, but each time the measure was defeated.

The Dennis Film Bureau, Inc., is the only exchange in the state furnishing films for these shows. The film has been named a party in the suit because it sponsors two shows in the community, one at the Eagles lodge and the other in the Century school.

Advertising reels will be taxed the same as entertaining pictures should the state contention be upheld. It is believed that the present court action will attract interest throughout the state and other states where the same or similar statutes are in effect.

Six Negro Features Set by Cinema Studios

Six features and a series of short subjects for coin operated machines have been set for production at Cinema Studios, Inc., Palisade, N. J., and stages are being enlarged in preparation.

The feature productions will be with all-Negro casts, directed by Joseph Seiden for Jack Goldberg of Internations Roadshows, Inc.

Warner Houses Reopen

Two houses of the Warner theatre circuit in Philadelphia reopened this week. The center city Aldine Theatre, always closed during the summer, resumed operations on Friday, August 29th, as a first run house, showing "Our Wife." George Balkin returned as house manager. The Sixty-Ninth Street Theatre, key neighborhood house, reopened earlier in the week after renovations costing $150,000 were completed.

TO MY FELLOW EXHIBITORS

In the next few days you will be making final arrangements for U.S.O. Theatre Week. The Drive officially begins next Monday, Labor Day. However, those theatres which start their week on Thursday or Friday, etc. may start showing the U.S.O. trailer on their opening day this week.

While you are making these arrangements, let your mind slip back 24 years ago when YOU were in the service, or had relations and friends wearing the uniform of Uncle Sam. Just try to recall how you felt about having some wholesome recreation at the end of a hard day Just try to remember how much you wanted some good, clean fun, away from barracks, hiking and maneuvers.

I am sure you will want to help the boys of '41 as you wanted to be helped in 1917. To do this - you will run the U.S.O. trailer at every performance. You will spot it away from the break of your show, when most of your patrons are seated and can be reached by the collection basket. You will collect in the audience because you get the most money that way. You will keep the house lights up until the collection basket reaches the last row.

For the honor of our industry which has so generously cooperated in helping other causes, for your own satisfaction as an American - together with the thousands of other exhibitors throughout the country who are uniting during Labor Day Week - let's make sure we will collect all the people want to give.

Up to date, we have the largest exhibitor enrollment in the annals of the industry. Now - let's make it the greatest collection in movie history. Let's do a man-size job for our boys in uniform.

Sincerely yours,

JOSEPH BERNHARD,
Chairman.

NEW TRUST MOVE AGAINST MAJORS, AS CRESCENT BATTLE CONTINUES

Philadelphia Suit Against Majors Brings Request to Force "Open Market"; Long-Term Contracts Studied at Trial

Engaged in a vigorous defense of the United States Government's prosecution of its anti-trust suit in the Crescent case in Nashville, the major companies were this week hit by independents on another front, in Philadelphia, where the Schad Theatres filed an application for a preliminary injunction in the $750,000 anti-trust suit brought August 20th against Twentieth Century-Fox and 8 other defendants.

Balancing this, however, was the dropping of the Shapiro anti-trust suit in Philadelphia.

Probably the most effective testimony offered by the Crescent defense thus far was that introduced last Wednesday in Nashville when officials of the Vitagraph and Twentieth Century-Fox companies gave their reasons for making film long-term contracts and franchises. Upsetting the Government's case considerably, Benjamin Kalmenson, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., Western and Southwestern division sales manager for Vitagraph denied that Tony Sudekum ever told him that if he didn't make a deal with Crescent and the Rockwood Amusement Company that he could not sell to Muscle Shoals and to certain other Crescent affiliates. Defense attorneys believed that the entire Kalmenson testimony completely cleared up the vital issue of second runs and re-runs in connection with Crescent contracts in competitive situations. Court observers felt that Judge Elmer D. Davies' reaction to the witness' statements concerning this issue was visibly favorable.

Denies Agreement

Following Mr. Kalmenson, W. J. Kupper of New York City, Western division sales manager for Twentieth Century-Fox, took the stand and testified that he had never met Mr. Sudekum or any other of the defendants, that he had never had any direct correspondence or communication with them and had never been a party to any agreement or understanding with the defendants in any way leading to any monopolistic control of films in restraint of interstate commerce.

On Friday, defense attorneys had opportunity to clear up the Universal Film Exchange deal with John D. Henry at Union City, in December, 1938, which Judge Davies declared on August 8th, was the only reason which prevented him from dismissing Universal as a defendant to the anti-trust suit. Testifying for the defense were J. A. Prichard, former Memphis exchange manager for Universal and Mrs. L. D. Miller, "office secretary."

According to the witnesses and on direct testimony of Mr. Henry who was witness for the plaintiff, the Union City theatre operator made application on December 30, 1938 for a second-run contract for Universal pictures and then, as late as January 13, 1939, telephoned Harry Graham, manager of the Universal exchange at Atlanta, Ga., about the rejection of his application for first-run contract for 1938-39. Mr. Henry did contract with Universal for second-run for this season but played only four pictures out of 22, as play-off sheets proved.

WOR SURVEYS PUBLIC ON FM

A survey conducted by station WOR, the Mutual Broadcasting System's New York outlet, covering 3,000 homes in New York City, revealed that over 50 per cent of radio listeners have some understanding of the term, FM, it was announced this week. Station officials believe the survey proves that frequency modulation broadcasting no longer is a "stranger to the public." WOR's questionnaire also revealed that ten per cent of those queried expect to own FM receiving sets within the year.

Kermit C. Stengel, president of the Rockwood Amusements, Inc., a Crescent affiliate, introduced a new note in the case last Monday when he testified that exhibits prepared by a Crescent auditor and Rockwood bookkeepers, produced in court, showed that four or six geographically selected Rockwood theatres operated at a loss during 1940 unless popcorn sales and advertising revenue were counted. He said that in 33 houses, income on Saturdays, when westerns were shown, averaged 33 to 35 per cent of the entire week's income.

Following prosecution Attorney Wright's contention that the exhibits were "immaterial," Judge Davies ruled these out. WilliamWaller, defense counsel, questioned Mr. Stengel on every bit of evidence introduced by the Government pertaining to contracting for or buying of films. Mr. Stengel emphatically denied that there had ever been any agreement or understanding between any distributor or his agents and the Crescent company or its affiliates that could be used in any way to prevent competitive showing of pictures.

On Monday, it was expected that defense presentation of its case would be concluded by mid-week. With possible rebuttal testimony and final arguments to follow, it was doubted, however, whether the case would close this week.

Contracts Identified

David Prince, former United Artists' Southern district manager and branch manager at Atlanta, testified on Tuesday during an all-day questioning in the Crescent case. John D. Mosby, attorney assisting Edward C. Raftery of New York in defense of UA and Universal, examined Mr. Prince, who is now Southeastern district manager at Atlanta for RKO.

The witness identified for Attorney Mosby 35 UA contracts with theatre groups in the South since 1928, describing all as blanket deals. Arguing on this exhibit, Mr. Mosby declared the contracts were introduced in answer to an earlier challenge by Robert L. Wright, Government counsel, to show a single other instance where UA had made such a contract as the much-discussed 61-situation deal with Crescent for 1938-39 product.

One of the highlights of the Crescent defense trial last week was the appearance of Oscar A. Morgan, division sales manager for Paramount Pictures who testified as a defense witness. Previously Mr. Morgan had been a Government witness when he was called on subpoena by the prosecution. Under examination of William Waller, Crescent counsel, Mr. Morgan outlined negotiations of several years' standing with Tony Sudekum and generally brought to light the matter of extended and circuit contracts and franchises, points of the utmost importance to the outcome of the suit. He described as "the most difficult deal I ever had with Crescent" the two years of negotiations leading to a five-year franchise on Paramount product for the Crescent circuit and the leasing of the Paramount Theatre in Nashville to the defendant company for five years, beginning in 1937.

Mr. Morgan pointed out that franchises were advantageous in that they assured distributors a steady outlet for films and saved much expense, and he added that the film business "is a horse-trading business." He scored an effective point for the defense when he explained that the terms of a franchise covering any number of situations are determined from the estimated saleability of films in each town individually and not the basis of a combination.

Meanwhile, in Philadelphia, last week, Harry and Sallie R. Schad, operators of Schad Theatres, applied for a preliminary injunction in the $750,000 anti-trust suit filed August 20th against the following: Twentieth Century-Fox, Wilmer and Vincent Theatre Company, Wilmer and Vincent Amusement Company, Berks Amusement Company, Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., Warner Brothers Circuit Management Corp., Warner Brothers Theatre, Inc., Stanley Company of America and Vitagraph, Inc. The case is expected to be heard on September 8th by Judge J. Cullen Ganey in Federal Court.

Triple Damages Asked

Filed under the Clayton Act, the anti-trust suit asked for triple damages and charged "illegal operations" of certain theatres in Reading, Pa. The plantiffs claimed among other points, that Warner and Wilmer and Vincent caused the Berks Amusement Company to sublet the State in Reading to Warner and that the theatre was renamed "Warner" subsequently showing all Vitagraph product. They also charged that Warner then subleased the Arcadia to Wilmer and Vincent, renaming it the "Ritz." Tracing further operations, the Schads asserted that the alleged combination should be declared illegal and that steps should be taken to keep a "free, open and untrammeled market" in Reading. They further stipulated that the defendants conspired to relegate the Schad Astor house in Reading to a "secondary" position, damaging its reputation and denying it the right and ability to bargain for product.

While the Astor is presently operated on a pooling deal with Jay Emanuel's Park Theatre in Reading, Mr. Emanuel is no party to the litigation. The house has operated as a first run house, playing RKO, Universal and some Columbia product, which is an open account in Reading.

State Senator Harry Shapiro of Pennsylvania, and William Rudenko are attorneys for the plaintiffs.

Balancing the new Philadelphia move against the distributors, however, was the subsequent action, this week, by the A. M. Ellis interests in taking over the operation of the Admiral theatre in that city, from Rubin Shapiro, resulting in the dropping of the Shapiro anti-trust suit, filed January 3, 1940, against Warners and all the major distributors. It was understood that an unofficial out-of-court settlement was made by the defendants prior to the sale of the case.

The action sought damages of $22,530 and was scheduled to go to trial this autumn, based on charges that product for the Admiral was cut off when the management tried to reduce admissions to compete with circuit properties in the neighborhood.

'BINGO FOR DEFENSE' IS NEW TWIST TO KEEP CHANCE GAMES IN THEATRES

Officials Approve New Game Which Uses Defense Bonds and Stamps as Giveaways; Chicago Theatres Test Plan

"Bingo for Defense."

The new slogan forecasts Bingo's revival, under the habilments of patriotism. "Bingo for Defense" is being tried on a big scale in Chicago, currently; to test the efficacy of the new "line" in that city's 360 theatres. The plan is being tried elsewhere, too, and is growing.

Of the Chicago theatres, 50 are featuring the game one to three times weekly. They give United States Defense Stamps as awards and use U. S. Defense Savings Bonds, for building the "jackpot."

That is "Bingo for Defense."

The Illinois theatres are members of the Illinois Allied, reported sponsoring the new idea—and reported receiving the sanction of city officials, who ordinarily dislike theatre chance games.

Those officials see impetus in public acquisition of defense bonds and stamps, from the games. They see customers for the bonds and stamps, not ordinarily reached. The same officials, in scores of places who previously cracked down with legal clubs on "Bingo" at theatres and clubs and churches, now find themselves in the position of practically having no alternative but to smile approval on "Bingo for Defense."

Reports Vary on Drawing Power

As played in Chicago, theater Bingo operates with a bulb controlled, electrically operated slide, leased to the theater for $2.50 a week, price entitling licensee to use same as many times weekly as he wishes. Bingo cards are furnished for $2.00 per thousand. A complete line of advertising accessories are obtainable including two 40 x 60s, one type and one screen process; one one-sheet; window cards; two types of handbills; two doorhangers, and two trailers.

Theaters are giving from $15 to $50 worth of stamps at each playing with $20 to $50 (maturity value) in bonds added each time to a jackpot.

Although some theaters report negligible results at the box office since starting the game, two and three weeks ago, others claim it has increased receipts considerably. This is in face of an 18-day hot spell, which began about the same time the theaters started Bingo. One theater manager reports that his audience expressed dissatisfaction at the awards preferring something to spend instead of something that had to be saved. This angle may rob the game of popularity in many sections, it is said.

Bringing back Bingo marks the second attempt this year by the exhibitors of Chicago to find something to bolster their box offices. In December, 1940, certain groups of managers "took the bull by the horns" and revived Screeno, despite a city ordinance prohibiting games of chance in Chicago theaters. Screeno had been banned for many months by city officials previously but they were allowed to run until March, 1941 before being stopped. Some 92 theaters participated in the last effort.

I. H. Van Winkle, attorney general of Oregon, last week ruled that "Defense Bond Night", a game to have been tried by some Portland theatres, is a violation of the state's anti-lottery laws.

In the game any person 18 years old or more, signs his name opposite a number in a book at the theatre front. On a specified night, after completion of performances, theatre doors were to be opened, with free admissions, for the drawing. Contenders in lobby, and outside the theatre, were to have the same chances.

U.S. defense bonds are being used as 'come-ons' by Fox in a number of its Wisconsin houses.

Michigan exhibitors who saw an opportunity to circumvent stringent state laws on bank nights by using U. S. bonds and stamps as prizes had their enthusiasm dampened at Detroit this week when Internal Revenue officials indicated that they would permit no evasion of state laws.

Dallas downtown and neighborhood theatres have started offering U. S. defense savings stamps of 25 and 50 cent denominations to customers in change at the boxoffice. The idea is reported to be finding high public favor.

Florida Circuit Uses Stamps for Admissions

Endeavoring to aid national defense, the Florida State Theatres circuit, of approximately 110 houses, is running special Saturday childrens' matinees, allowing United States Defense Savings Stamps to be used as admissions.

The idea brought immediate response. It was estimated that prior to one Saturday 35,000 children bought ten cent stamps in postoffices and theatre lobbies, where the samps were also sold.

J. L. Cartwright, circuit publicity director, last week hoped all exhibitors of the state would adopt the plan. He sent an outline of it to every Florida theatre owner and suggested exploitation ideas, such as making of pictures of children buying stamps; speeches at the matinees to impress the children with the importance of their contributions; staging of prologues with patriotic themes; issuance of passes and extra stamps as bonuses to children who come to theatres with filled stamp books.

Radio stations and newspapers have cooperated with the circuit's matinee plans.

Cash giveaways, once featured at almost 30 Warner circuit houses in eastern Pennsylvania, are now being used at only two houses in the circuit with a strong possibility that they might be discontinued even there. At the present time, Bank Night is featured at the Majestic Theatre in Gettysburg, Pa., and Bingo at the State Theatre in Hanover, Pa. Emphasis on the cash giveaways was minimized by the circuit after the movie games were banned in Philadelphia by city officials.

SHOOTING GALLERIES FOR YOUR LOBBY

Robert Waldman, Boston attorney and former theatre man, is operating target guns in theatres within a 100-mile radius of Boston. He has installed the coin-operated target guns in approximately 30 theatres and house managers report the guns more than pay for the space they use. Different types of guns, depending upon the amount of floor space available, are installed. As little as 6 feet is needed for some of the one-unit gun installations. Others, involving two separate pieces, need more room. All are electrically operated and make no noise.

Because there is no gambling element involved, the machines are legal for use anywhere. In addition to the guns, bowling alleys and baseball games are available.

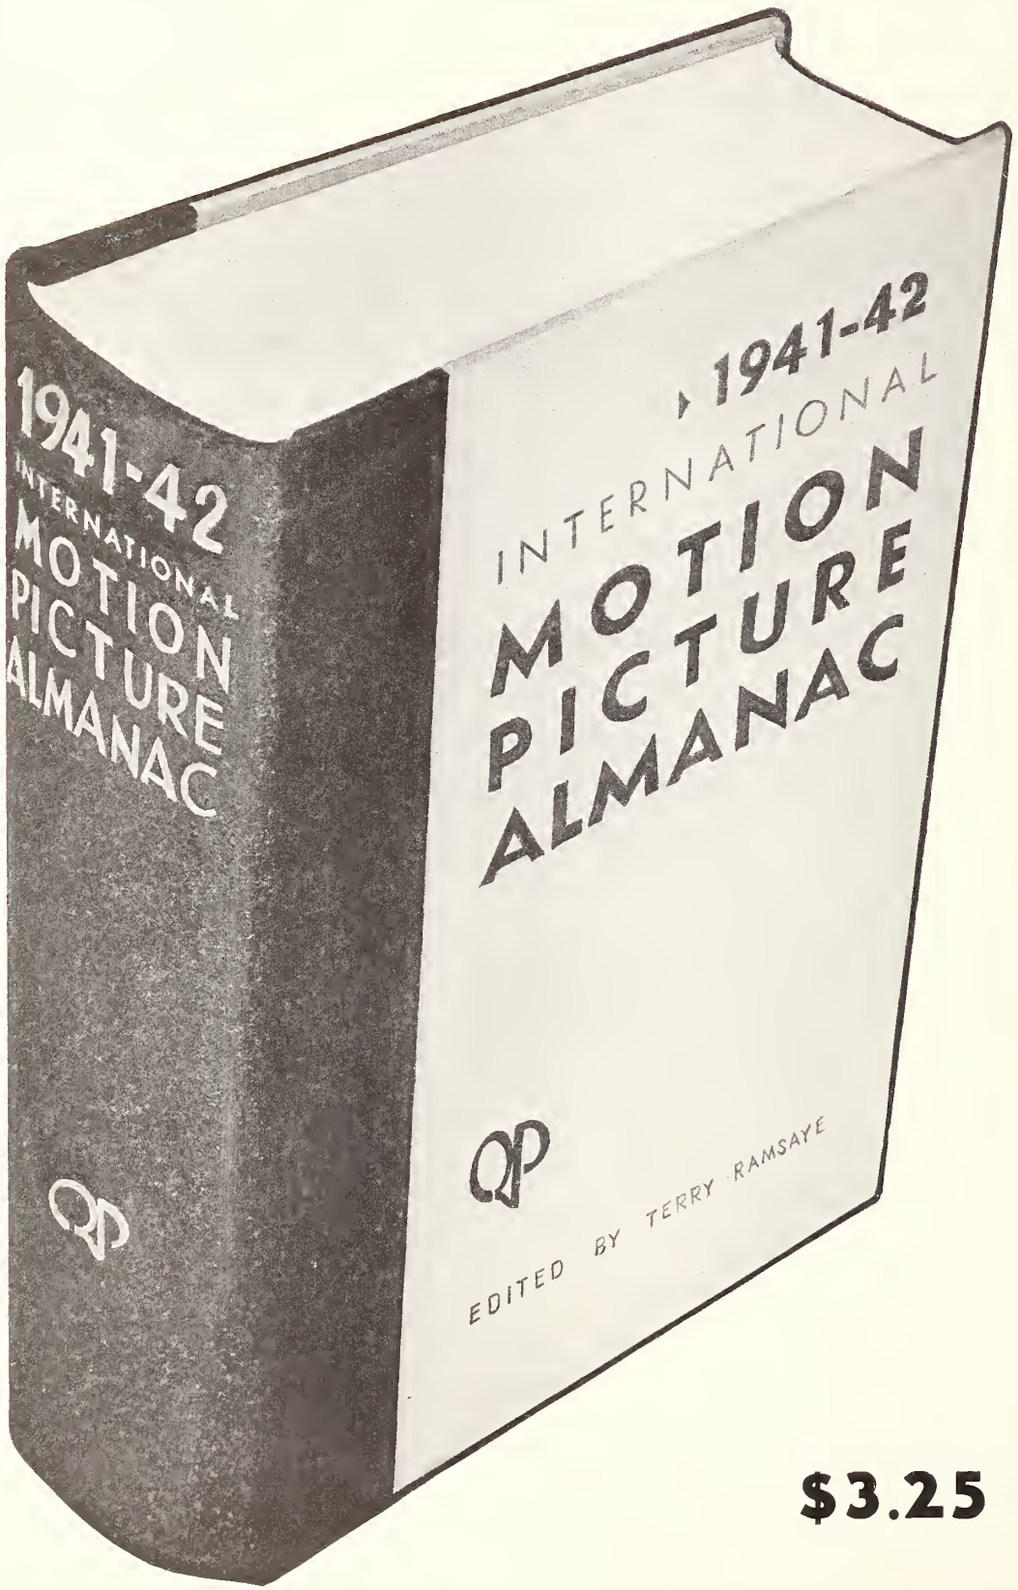
Warner Theatres To Sell 'Service'

Fall show business at the Warner theatre circuit houses in the Philadelphia area for this coming season will be divorced of "phony" ballyhoo methods and meaningless "overstuffing" of lobbies. Under the personal supervision of zone chief Ted Schlanger, a new and revised method of soliciting old and new theatre business was outlined to the circuit's district managers, including Maurice Gable, Steve Barutio, Al Plough, Larry Graver, Paul Castello, Louis Davidoff, Jack Flynn, Bill Morgan, Eddie Moore and Mort Levine.

Representing the most comprehensive "right-down-to-business" ideas and operating formulas ever adopted by the circuit, the new season selling campaign calls for discarding unnecessary draping around lobbies with all house managers instead to be prepared to sell the new season with actual programs, carefully arranged kiddie shows, special adult serials, and adventure nights, using pictures that lend themselves to the program idea and are an adjunct to the regular program.

Moreover, Mr. Schlanger impressed, there will be no "phony" ballyhoo. The house managers are going to ballyhoo what they conceive and have to sell. Importantly, the house managers will be encouraged to build good-will dealings with organizations, churches, merchants and schools. Also, the house managers are to become an integral part of activities around their particular neighborhood or communities, bringing as many of the benefits to their theatres. Still another important factor in the new season's selling campaign calls for a vigorous effort to sell and serve "service."

Warner Theatre Meeting



Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner Theatres, presided at home office meeting Wednesday of Warner Theatre zone managers, film buyers and bookers. Theatre men discussed merchandising, handling of forthcoming product and company operational problems. The one

Those present at the meeting were: Zone Managers—James Coston, Chicago; Nat Wolf, Cleveland; I. J. Hoffman, New Haven; Don Jacocks, Newark; Moe Silver, Albany; Ted Schlanger, Philadelphia; Harry Kalmine, Pittsburgh, and John J. Payette, Washington.

Film Buyers—Alex Halperin, Chicago; Nat Fellman, Cleveland; Bert Jacocks and Max Hoffman, New Haven; Frank Damis, Newark; Max Friedman, Albany; Ed Hinchy, Philadelphia; Harry Feinstein and Saul Bragin, Pittsburgh; George Crouch, Washington.

Among the Home Office Executives who participated in the conference were: Clayton Bond, Harry Goldberg, Leonard Schlesinger, Frank Phelps, Sam Morris, Abel Vigard, W. S. McDonald, Harry Rosenquest, Louis Kaufman, Herman Maier and Frank Cahill.

N. Y. Censors Stop "Forgotten Village"

New York's State Board of Censors acted last week to prevent theatrical exhibition of another of those screen portrayals of childbirth, the John Steinbeck-Herbert Kline "Forgotten Village," made in Mexico. Irwin Esmond, director of the motion picture division of the State Department of Education, directed the firm of Mayer-Burstyn Productions, Inc., distributors of the picture, to "eliminate" approximately 400 feet of the picture before he would license it for showing.

John Steinbeck, of "Grapes of Wrath" and "Of Mice and Men" fame, wrote the film in Mexico and it was directed by Herbert Kline, who also made "Crisis" and "Lights Out in Europe." "Forgotten Village" was produced by Pan-American Film Company. It is reviewed on page 31.

At the Mayer-Burstyn office last Monday, it was learned from Joseph Burstyn that the firm intended to contest the ban in the courts, if necessary, on the ground that the State Censors had no jurisdiction in this case as the picture is a documentary film.

Mr. Burstyn said that at the time he was preparing to distribute "Crisis" and "Lights Out in Europe," he "invited" Mr. Esmond to see the pictures, but the latter said "that he didn't have to see them, that they were documentaries and therefore application for license didn't have to be made."

The West Coast Hays' office approved of the picture, by letter, Mr. Burstyn said, although it did not furnish a seal. He, therefore, could not understand the action taken by Mr. Esmond in banning its exhibition. Neither could a number of motion picture critics of the New York press, who, during the week-end, crusaded in behalf of "The Forgotten Village."

The film was scheduled to open at the Belmont Theatre, September 16th, Mexico's Independence Day, under the auspices of the local Mexican Consulate and the sponsorship of the Mexican Government.

Tampa Censors "Girlie" Shows

Instigated by complaints from the Tampa, Florida, Ministers' Association, the police of that city cracked down last week on the Broadway and Rialto theatres for permitting "obscene and indecent" acts in their burlesque shows. Both houses are managed and operated by the B. E. Gore Company, which has used burlesque only as "Midnight Matinees" for adults only. The firm recently turned another theatre it operates, the Howard, in West Tampa, into a straight burlesque show. Advertisements of the Howard show which have appeared in Tampa newspapers already have prompted many "irate" citizens to write letters to the editor in protest of the "indecent" ads.

The Tampa police sat through the midnight performances at both the Broadway and Rialto theatres and at the close of the show arrested the managers and 15 members of the cast who were taken to police headquarters and held until bonds of $50 each had been posted.

Trial was set for Thursday of this week, but was postponed because of illness of the assistant city attorney who is prosecuting the case.

In Philadelphia last Thursday, the Pennsylvania censor board stopped the scheduled opening of the 16 mm. silent version of "Charley's Aunt" which starred Charles Chaplin's brother, Syd.

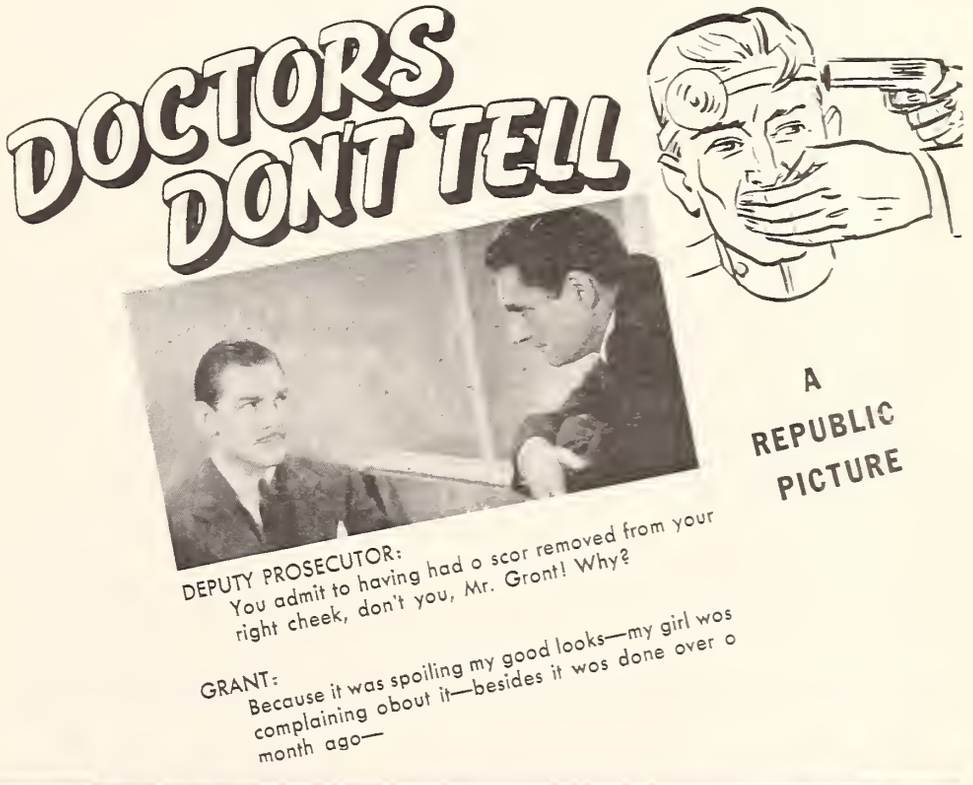
Horne Calls for 30 Exploiteers



Hal Horne's newly established exploitation organization, in New York's General Motors Building, at 1775 Broadway, sent out a call Tuesday, through Richard Condon, its general manager, for 30 exploitation men, to begin work immediately on scheduled openings of "Belle Starr," and to lay the groundwork in the field for "A Yank in the R.A.F.," the two initial Twentieth Century-Fox productions the Horne Organization will handle.

M. D. (Doc) Howe, formerly with RKO in the midwest, has assumed duties as field coordinator for the organization.

In keeping with his arrangement with Twentieth Century-Fox, under which Mr. Horne will handle national exploitation for top Fox pictures, these men, it was announced, will work directly out of the Horne office.

Staunton Union Elects

At the annual election of officers of Staunton, Va., Local No. 572 of the IATSE, held Sunday, August 17th, the following were elected to office: Lewis Rodgers, Lexington, president and business agent; George Riley, Staunton, vice-president; Donald Pattee, Harrisonburg, financial and corresponding secretary; Anthony Peduto, Staunton, treasurer, and Raymond Bowers and Clifton Forge, sergeants-at-arms. All officers were reelected with the exception of Mr. Riley, who succeeds Herman H. Diehl, Jr., of Harrisonburg, who is now at Fort Meade, Maryland.

Western Mass. Circuit Turns to Institutionals

Institutional selling of the screen by theatres is growing. Plans for an institutional advertising campaign stressing the need of relaxation at film theatres and for introducing a system of junior admissions were discussed last Thursday, August 21, at the last session of a three-day convention of Western Massachusetts Theatres, Inc., managers held at the Hotel Weldon, in Greenfield, Mass.

The advertising campaign has two ideas—an adaptation of the movie vacation idea started some months ago in Philadelphia, these ads to be run off the amusement pages, and introduction of the new season pictures as Happy Movie New Year.

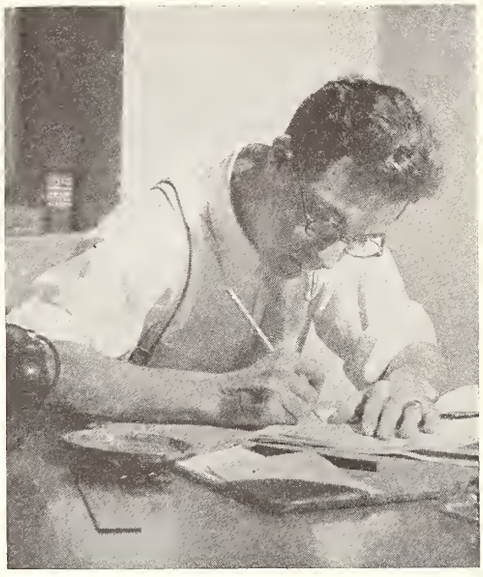
Ad Campaign Started

First of the institutional series was started the opening day of the convention, Aug. 19, in papers in Brattleboro, Greenfield, Northampton, Holyoke, Chicopee, Springfield, Pittsfield, North Adams and Westfield. Trailers and lobby displays also were used. The Movie New Year ads will be interspersed as the campaign progresses.

The convention was the first of the kind for Western Massachusetts Theatres. Usually one-day meetings are held and a large part of the time is devoted to bookings. Business and pleasure were mixed at this convention, with golf the afternoons of the first and second days. Wednesday a Hollywood preview of "Whistling in the Dark" and a broadcast over WHAI were staged at the Garden Theatre.

A special edition of the Greenfield Recorder-Gazette, with banner headlines, was issued the opening day of the convention.

Harry Smith, division manager, was guest of honor throughout, as it was his 33rd anniversary with the Goldstein brothers—Nathan E. and Samuel, president and vice-president of the company.



Managers were urged by Mr. Goldstein to take an active part in the civic affairs of their communities to increase the prestige of their own houses and of the industry. A talk along these lines also was made by Maurice Wolf, New England district manager for M-G-M, who was present the opening night. It was decided to get in back of the Labor Day week U. S. O. campaign in a big way.

In addition to trailers and newspaper ads, several thousand window cards will be used in putting over the New Movie Year campaign.

Several personnel shifts were announced at the convention. Claude Frederick, who has been on leave of absence from the Garden, Greenfield, for two months because of his health, was transferred to the Paramount, Brattleboro. Clifford Boyd was moved from Brattleboro to the Arcade, Springfield, replacing Ray Cronin, who has returned to the Paramount, Springfield, as house manager for Edward Smith. Gerald Savoie, assistant at the Capitol, Pittsfield, was made manager of the Colonial, Pittsfield. He fills the vacancy caused by the transfer of James M. Gerauld back to the Springfield home office.

Since May 13 Mr. Jerauld has been handling publicity and advertising for the six houses in Pittsfield and North Adams, taking care of other public relations problems and at the same time managing the Colonial. Don Chambers and Mr. Jerauld will handle the circuit publicity and advertising jointly, and Mr. Jerauld will take on such other duties as are assigned to him from time to time by Harry Smith.

HERALD PEOPLE

PAUL C. MOONEY, JR., whose diligence is so accurately recorded here by Motion Picture Herald's staff photographer, is so devoted to matters of dates and times that he reminds one of Ben Franklin's remarks on the superstitious nature of creditors. Mr. Mooney presides over the compilation of those utterly statistical and highly informative pages of the Product Digest Section — the same which this week appears in gay new format and arrangement. Mr. Mooney is a stickler for facts and the regimentation of figures in orderly array so they add up and count. In lighter mood he looks at pictures and writes reviews that tend to indicate that he likes them. So far as is known, he is the only track athlete on the staff. As a runner he seems to have preferred the quarter and the half mile. Incidentally, he is the only member of the staff born in Council Bluffs, Iowa, and that was, if you know esoteric screen history, where—many the year before—the first film corporation was formed. Mr. Mooney had a military education and was an instructor in tactics at LaSalle Military Academy, 1930-33. He came to the editorial staff of the Herald in 1934.

Hearing Equipment Installed

The Philadelphia League for the Hard of Hearing reported that it has been successful in getting nine theatres in the area to install headphone equipment for the convenience of those hard of hearing. The Alden, Rialto, Fox, Terminal and Tioga in the city proper have installed hearing devices, and in the suburban areas, the Seville, Bryn Mawr; Anthony Wayne, Wayne; Suburban, Ardmore; and the Savar, in Camden, N. J.

Al Pearce for Republic

Republic pictures have closed a deal with Harry C. Arthur, Jr., executive of Fanchon & Marco, to present Al Pearce and his radio "gang" in a musical for next season. Fanchon and Marco will be the associate producers on the picture to be titled "Marines On Parade."

Erpi to Close Coast Studio

Electrical Research Products, Inc., will end operation of General Service Studios, Inc., in Hollywood on March 31st, 1942, when existing studio rental commitments cease, T. K. Stevenson, president, announced this week. The move applies only to the studio and will not affect the portable sound facilities now available, it was announced.

Efforts have been made to dispose of the property in the past, Mr. Stevenson said. No plans for disposition have been set but offers will be sought, he explained.

The portable facilities by which independent producers utilize Western Electric recording, re-recording and scoring equipment will continue to be offered in the future either by Erpi or through some other operator. Erpi's primary purpose in taking over the studio was to protect an indebtedness due from the former owners, he explained, and successful operation of the studio for the past several years has reduced the investment to a point where the property can be disposed of at a figure which would substantially clear the remaining investment.

In Hollywood, the Erpi decision created much speculation, wondering whether it was accepted as meaning that Erpi money no longer would be available for production financing.

Producers using space at the studio included Alexander Korda, Edward Small, Boris Morros and Richard Rowland.

Tax Collections Show Increase

Federal admission tax collections in July totaled $6,760,861, against $5,880,649 in June. Most of the $880,000 increase was confined to the Third New York (Broadway) District, it was reported Wednesday by the U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau at Washington. All of which shows the marked upward trend of the black line on the graph of box office income.

July's collections were more than $5,000,000 ahead of July, 1940, when $1,650,163 was collected, and brought the total for the first seven months of the year to $45,408,414, against $12,817, 994 for the same period a year ago.

The Bureau's side report for the Broadway sector showed that tax collections increased from $818,629 in June to $1,434,942 in July, where they compared with $484,661 for that month a year ago.

Screen Club Picnic Set

The annual picnic of the Rocky Mountain Screen Club will be held August 28th at Eddie Ott's By-the-Lake, Evergreen, Colo. Features of the all-day event will be golf and bridge tournaments, tennis, horseback riding, swimming, soft ball and other games, followed in the evening with an outdoor chuck-wagon dinner, and dancing.

Warners Schedule "Peary"

Warner Brothers has added to its new season's schedule, "Peary at the North Pole," a film dealing with the adventures of the famous explorer. Raymond Schreck will do the story.

700 Operators In N. Y. Houses To Get 5% Raise

In New York on Monday 700 projectionists in 150 metropolitan circuit theatres will receive an additional five per cent increase in wage scales, in accordance with the agreement reached March 26th, 1940, on the wage and hour terms of the contract between Operators' Local 306 and the circuits. The contract extends to August 31st, 1945.

An initial increase of eight per cent, retroactive to September 1st, 1939, was won in the 1940 negotiations, which also provided for the five per cent increase due Monday and a final two per cent increase on September 1st, 1943. Hours remain at 30 a week, and no further wage-hour negotiations under the existing agreement are anticipated.

Studio Contract Pushed

The Hollywood Motion Picture and Amusement Federation consisting of ten IATSE studio locals, on Monday pushed forward its plan to negotiate contracts for wage scales and working conditions with producers independently of the International officers. Meetings were set with Pat Casey and Fred Pelton, producer labor contracts, throughout this week. Delegations from Costumers Local 705 and Utility Workers 727 met with Mr. Casey and Mr. Pelton on Monday.

At a convention attended by 50 accredited delegates and many others, The New York IATSE meeting in Syracuse, N. Y., in advance of the week's sessions of the State Federation of Labor, by unanimus vote re-affirmed the vote of confidence given George E. Browne, international president, at the Louisville convention.

The group also voted immediate affiliation with the Union Labor Trades Department of the state, gave a vote of confidence to the State Federation's officers and fixed jurisdictional lines of the various state locals.

Readers Win Voting

The Screen Readers Guild of New York won a 100 per cent victory in the voting for a collective bargaining agency for home office readers, it was determined last week when the ballots were counted at the offices of the National Labor Relations Board. Charles Kramer, trial examiner, supervised the count. Of 22 votes cast, all favored the guild, but three were challenged by the companies. The guild, it was said, will ask immediately that contract negotiations be opened with the major companies.

The first meeting between representatives of the Screen Publicists Guild and home office publicity heads of the home offices in New York was held Thursday, August 21st, to discuss terms of a proposed contract submitted by the Guild. The meeting was said to be preliminary in nature and no specific agreement was reached.

In Los Angeles, contracts covering working conditions and minimum wage scales for writers has resolved itself into a 27-page document which the Screen Writers Guild bargaining committee and producer attorneys are still ironing out.

Operators Local 329 of Scranton, Pa., has elected the following officers: Percy Carr, president; William Wolft, vice-president; Vincent Brozill, secretary; Joseph Namitha, financial secretary; Clayton Leas, treasurer; Sam Kessler, business representative; Chris Armstrong, Glenn Ornstein and Edward Miles, trustees; Angelo Greco, Ralph Longs, William Warner, Vincent Costanzi and Joseph Dubish, executive board.

Pay increases of five cents an hour and one week's vacation with pay were terms of settling the Exhibitor's Service Co. strike in Pittsburgh of drivers and mechanics, president George Callahan revealed. Delivery of film to more than 350 theatres in the Tri-State area had been stopped for more than a week by the strike.

C. N. F. E. Moves; Aberman Joins

Ted Toddy, head of the Consolidated National Film Exchanges, has announced that they have moved into larger quarters at 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City. Arthur Aberman, formerly of Columbia Pictures, has joined the organization as executive assistant to Mr. Toddy, and also supervisor of the New York branch.

Urges Handbill Ban

The Town Council of West Haven, Conn., is proposing legislation this week which would prohibit distribution of handbills and advertisements to homes, on public property and in automobiles, except during daylight hours and then only with the announced permission of the owner of the property. Walton Cronan, town councilman, sponsored the bill.

Grove Theatre Opens

The Grove theatre in Galesburg, Ill., was to be formally opened on Friday, August 29th. For the opening night all seats were to be reserved and a capacity audience was expected.

CIO Failure Seen In Detroit Theatres

by JOHN WAGNER

in Detroit

An attempt by the CIO to organize more than 1,000 ushers, usherettes, cashiers, doormen and other employees in local theatres apparently has failed with the announcement by the newly formed AFL Local-B-179 that it will start conferences Wednesday with three exhibitor groups leading toward union recognition. This meeting as a basis for future negotiations for a contract will mark the first time such a union will have obtained recognition by the local exhibitors.

The local is affiliated with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Motion Picture Operators. The organization campaign came to its climax last Friday. At that time 750 stage employees met at the Labor Temple to discuss organization plans for the Local.

Frank X. Martel, president of the Detroit & Wayne County Federation of Labor, addressed the young workers and reviewed the history of the labor movement. He welcomed them into the AFL and predicted that they would eventually get more money and better working conditions.

According to R. M. Kennedy, business agent of Local 299 of the ATSEMPO, the meeting Wednesday will bring together representatives of the union and the Cooperative, the United Detroit Theatres and the Allied Theatres of Michigan, Inc.

"We will discuss the existing working conditions and wages and use them as a basis for future negotiations which we hope will lead toward a contract for our new local," Mr. Kennedy explained. "Of course we will hold for the 40-hour week. But other than that we do not know yet just what wage rates will be set up."

Billy CONN

BILLY: I'm liable to be pretty busy—road work, keeping fit. There won't be much time for fun. It's just that I take fighting seriously—you see what I mean?

BABS: Yes—I think I do. You can skip the rest.

OBITUARIES

George Fischer, Music Publisher, Dies at 70

George Fischer, president of the musical publishing firm of J. Fischer & Brothers, New York, which specializes in printing Catholic liturgical music, died Saturday, August 23d, at his summer home on Fire Island, Long Island, N. Y., after an illness of eight months. He was 70 years old.

During his music publishing career he was president of the Music Publishers Association for three years, and for the past 18 years treasurer of the St. Gregory Society of America. He is also a former member of the board of directors of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. He leaves a widow, three sons and a daughter.

David C. Werner

Funeral services were held in Hollywood for David C. Werner, casting director, formerly with Universal and later with Richard Rowland, who died Tuesday, August 19th. Interment was in New York. Mr. Werner is survived by a widow and a son.

J. C. Yorkney

Funeral services were held in Fort Lee, N. J., on Sunday, August 24th, for J. C. Yorkney, an actor of the silent film days when motion pictures were produced at Fort Lee by D. W. Griffith.

Henri Chomette

Henri Chomette, brother of Rene Clair, French film director, is dead at Rabat, Morocca, according to a cabled report. Mr. Chomette also directed several films, although most of his time was taken by technical research for motion pictures.

Art Curry

Art Curry, 56, night construction supervisor for Samuel Goldwyn for the past 13 years, died at his home in Culver City of a heart attack, Wednesday, August 20th. Funeral services were held in Inglewood Cemetery Chapel.

E. M. Corcoran, Paramount-Richards Executive, Dies

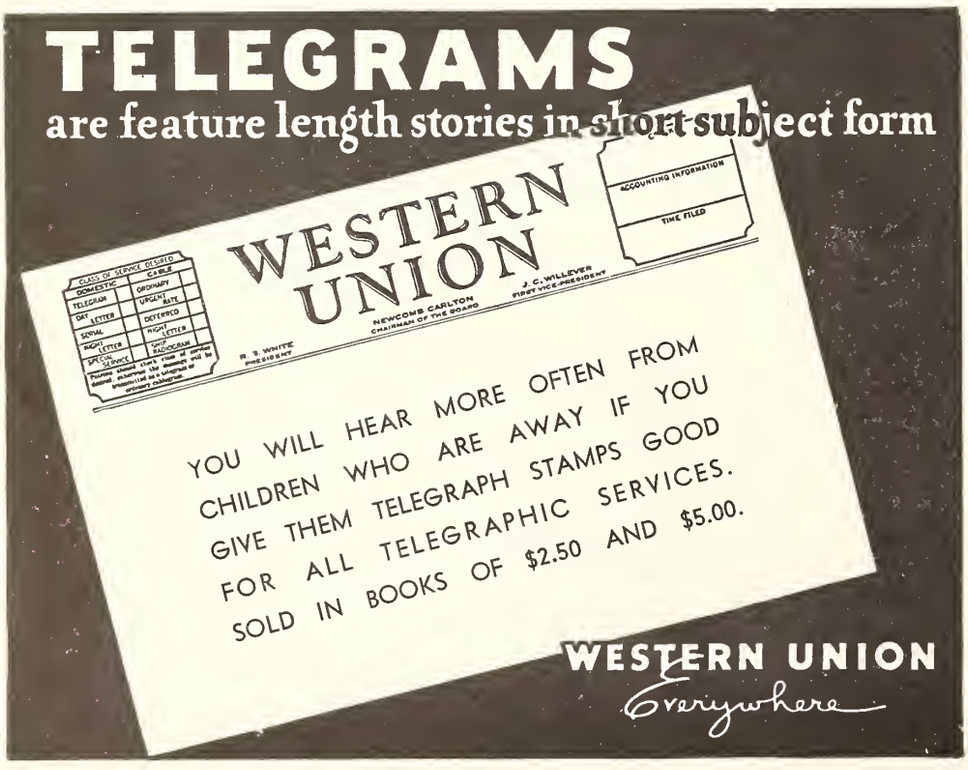
Edward M. Corcoran, an executive of Paramount-Richards Corporation of New Orleans, died Monday, August 18th, while vacationing in Miami, Fla. Mr. Corcoran was an executive of the Paramount Pictures Corporation in New York for many years prior to joining Mr. Richards in New Orleans in 1932.

Surviving are his widow, a daughter, three sons, two sisters and one brother.

Glenn N. Heiser

Glenn N. Heiser, 34, former poster artist for the Ottumwa Theatre Corp., at Ottumwa, Ia., until forced to resign a few months ago by illness, died at his home in that city Monday, August 18th. He is survived by his wife, a son and his parents.

David Robbins



David Robbins, Warner theatre manager in Youngstown, Ohio, died Monday, August 25th, following an operation. Mr. Robbins' widow is the former Anna Warner, sister of Harry and Jack Warner.

De Navarro Will Filed

Mary Anderson De Navarro, American actress of the 1870's and 80's, who died in England last May, left an estate of $183,659 gross and $174,732 net, according to a transfer tax appraisal filed in the New York State office building. The bulk of the estate was left to her son, Jose M. De Navarro.

Sues on Prize Award

Aubrey L. Loew of Ilion, N. Y., has filed suit against the Liberty Operating Co., operating the Liberty theatre in Herkimer, N. Y., for a $1,800 "Pot O' Gold" radio prize. Mr. Loew contends that last May the Liberty advertised that the theatre would make up the difference if any of their patrons were in the theatre when the contest phone call arrived. He alleges that he was in the theatre when the phone call arrived at his home but that the theatre refused to make up the prize money.

IN COURTS

Government Seeks Third Davis Trial

After a Federal jury failed to reach a verdict Friday, August 22d, in the trial of J. Warren Davis, retired judge of the Federal circuit court of appeals, and Morgan S. Kaufman, a Scranton, Pa., attorney, the Government will move for a third trial, it was announced in Philadelphia by Walter H. Gahagan, special assistant to the Attorney General. William Fox, former film executive, pleaded guilty some months ago to charges of attempting to influence court decisions in his bankruptcy proceedings by loans made a that time to Judge Davis. The first trial also ended in a jury disagreement.

Mr. Gahagan said he would confer with the Department of Justice in Washington before seeking a third trial.

The Government contends that Judge Davis accepted $27,500 in two unsecured loans from Mr. Fox. The former executive testified that he had hoped to obtain favorable rulings.

Court Directs Trial Action

Complaint of Joseph Auerbach in the $14,805 damage suit against Grand National Pictures, Ltd., was upheld Wednesday, August 20th, by Justice J. Sidney Bernstein of the New York supreme court, who directed a trial of the action. Defendant had sought the vacating of a levy of attachment against its New York property. The suit is based on the alleged agreement made by the defendant with Grafton Films, Ltd., to repay a debt of the company to the plaintiff.

Mae Murray Loses Plea

Justice Denis O'Leary Cohalan of the New York supreme court on Friday, August 22d, refused to entertain the motion of Mae Murray, former motion picture actress, to enjoin Mitzie Haynes and George Fontana, dancers, from performing the "Merry Widow" waltz. Miss Murray sought the court action on the grounds that Miss Haynes is impersonating her in a dance she made famous.

Annabella Sued

Annabella C. Power, known on the screen as Annabella, has been sued for $47,000 commissions in the New York supreme court by Thomas Hayes Hunter as assignee of Film Rights, Ltd. Mr. Hunter claims the actress in 1936 signed a three-year exclusive agency contract on a ten per cent commission basis.

Cincinnati Petition Filed

The city of Cincinnati has filed an intervening petition in the dissolution proceedings of the Delta Realty Co., owners of the Strand Office Building, which houses the 1,200-seat Strand theatre. The petition, which was filed in behalf of the "Cincinnati University Fund," which holds a $285,000 mortgage on the building, requests sale of the property.

Republic, Actress Sued

Republic studios and Judy Canova were named defendants Monday, August 25th, in a $35,000 suit for alleged unauthorized use of the song "Puddin' Head" in the picture of the same name. George R. Brown, who wrote the song with Sol Meyer and Jule Styne, filed the action in Los Angeles, charging consent was not given for its inclusion in the picture.

Examination Ordered

Konrad Bercovici, plaintiff in a $5,000,000 suit against Charles Chaplin, will submit to examination before the trial on August 29th. He claimed his script was used for "The Great Dictator."

Columbia

ADVENTURE IN WASHINGTON: Herbert Marshall, Virginia Bruce, Gene Reynolds—Played with "She Knew All the Answers" (Col.) to satisfactory business. Although well done with good acting by Gene Reynolds and the rest of the cast, this type of film means very little to me. My audience just sat through it without comment. I think the story was too obvious for one thing. Your bunch may think this is swell. If so, congratulations! As you know, it is a patriotic story of the Senate Page Boys. Running time, 86 minutes. Played August 11-12.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred City, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

MEET BOSTON BLACKIE: Chester Morris, Rochelle Hudson—A fast mystery drama. Not bad. Running time, 58 minutes. Played August 8-9.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons City, N. Y. General patronage.

PENNY SERENADE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—Picture well liked, especially by the women. Business below normal due to extreme hot weather. Running time, 119 minutes. Played August 10-11.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

SHE KNEW ALL THE ANSWERS: Franchot Tone, Joan Bennett—After this gets under way it has some of the funniest moments we have shown in quite a while. Columbia certainly knows how to make this style of comedy. Audience very enthusiastic about it. The eye exercises made a hit and could be used for come-on build-up to good advantage in advance humorous advertising. Played with "Adventure in Washington" (Col.) to satisfactory business. Running time, 86 minutes. Played August 11-12.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred City, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

TIME OUT FOR RHYTHM: Rudy Vallee, Rosemary Lane, Ann Miller—Attracted by Glen Gray's Orchestra, the dating crowd kept our gross in line with pictures of higher allocations, but don't bank too heavily on big grosses. Running time, 75 minutes. Played July 13.—D. E. Burnett, State Theatre, Larned, Kans. General patronage.

TIME OUT FOR RHYTHM: Ann Miller, Rosemary Lane, Rudy Vallee—Good picture, one that kept them in stitches all the time. The Rhumba dance by the 3 Stooges and Brenda and Cobina was something that they all talked about. If Columbia had left Rudy Vallee out it would have grossed more, as his name is wortb nothing at the box-office. Keep up the good work, Columbia, and you will have a big winner yet. Running time, 74 minutes. Played July 30-31.—Bryan Turner, Jr., New Royal Theatre, Archer City, Texas. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD MAN, THE: Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—Price of it calls for Sundays. It is a fairly good picture, but not for Sundays. Play it on Friday and Saturday if you can. Running time, 70 minutes. Played August 1-2.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons City, Nebraska. General patronage.

BAD MAN, THE: Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—Good Wallace Beery picture but not up to his usual standard. The picture did average Friday, Saturday business. Comments were about 50-50. Some said that it was good, others were disappointed. Played July 25-26.—Bryan Turner, Jr., New Royal Theatre, Archer City, Texas. Small town patronage.

BIG STORE, THE: Marx Brothers, Virginia Grey, Tony Martin—A very good picture for Marx fans but not enough fans to do any business.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

BILLY THE KID: Robert Taylor, Brian Donlevy, Ian Hunter—Remarkably beautiful technicolor, an ordinary plot with not enough action in the first half, good enough acting; brought out a fairly good turn-out for our summer season. The color in the final chase sequence is certainly outstanding. It really is a scene stealer at that point in the picture. Running time, 95 minutes. Played August 8-9.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred City, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

BLONDE INSPIRATION: John Shelton, Virginia Grey—Didn't get film rental on this one. Played July 5-7.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

FLIGHT COMMAND: Robert Taylor, Ruth Hussey, Walter Pidgeon—Exceptionally fine feature and very appropriate at this time for the flying forces of our nation. A very interesting story with plenty of action. Enjoyed by all my patrons. Would recommend this for any spot. Played August 7-9.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. General patronage.

FREE & EASY: Ruth Hussey, Robert Cummings—This one failed to pay off and was very weak. Played July 29-31.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

GETAWAY, THE: Robert Sterling, Charles Winninger—It's a gangster picture with terriffic action. It has every thing in it for entertainment. If you can get them in they will like it but it hasn't much drawing power. Running time, 89 minutes.—J. L. Thayer, Leddy Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Olivia de Havilland—Nothing unusual—just a big build-up to an awful letdown. Good work by Hattie McDaniel and Olivia de Havilland. Not Gable's type of picture. This picture could have told the same story in about half the time it ran. Business good, mostly curiosity seekers. Running time, 225 minutes. Played July 27-28-29.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons City, Nebraska. General patronage.

LOVE CRAZY: Myrna Loy, William Powell—Very good picture; however, it did not draw like I believed it would. Pleased all who saw it. Played July 23-24. —Bryan Turner, Jr., New Royal Theatre, Archer City, Texas. Small town patronage.

MEN OF BOYS TOWN: Mickey Rooney, Spencer Tracy—One of the best; is equal to its original. Play on best days. Running time, 105 minutes. Played August 10-11-12.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons City, N. Y. General patronage.

PENALTY, THE: Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold—A picture that pleased. Business up to standard. —Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

PEOPLE VS. DR. KILDARE, THE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—It's a grand little picture—everybody will enjoy it and it will draw them in. Running time, 78 minutes.—J. L. Thayer, Leddy Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

PEOPLE VS. DR. KILDARE, THE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day—Just as good as the rest and that always means extra business at our box office. This series is getting rather long-winded but don't believe our patrons would have them stop making them. But why in the world would MGM make the mistake of having Miss Day die in the next picture when she has just recently been honored as the most popular screen star? Sure, they had to get her out of this series because she is too valuable to play such small roles, however popular she was in them, but they could get her out some better way, surely! (Messrs. Horn & Morgan, refer to MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S Exhibitors Poll of "Stars of Tomorrow." See MOTION PICTURE HERALD, August 9, 1941.) Running time, 77 minutes. Played August 8-9.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TRIAL OF MARY DUGAN, THE: Laraine Day, Robert Young, Frieda Inescort—Here is a picture worth your best days. Very interesting and good for general patronage. Not as good as its original version in 1930, but will rank among the best today. Running time, 99 minutes. Played August 3-4-5.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons City, N. Y. General patronage.

WASHINGTON MELODRAMA: Ann Rutherford, Kent Taylor, Frank Morgan—This one fell flat and did not even do one-third bargain nite business. Many were dissatisfied and told me so. It just failed to click despite a good trailer on it. Running time, 80 minutes. Played August 12.—Bryan Turner, Jr., New Royal Theatre, Archer City, Texas. Small town patronage.

WASHINGTON MELODRAMA: Frank Morgan, Ann Rutherford—A small picture that pleased. Ann Rutherford does her best performance in this one. She is surely headed for a big success.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

WOMAN'S FACE, A: Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas—One of the best that has come from Metro. I thought that this type story would fall flat in my small town, but they ate it up. Did average business despite opposition from street dances and side shows in town. Many remarked that this one was the best one that I had shown in a long time. Running time, 102 minutes. Played August 13-14.—Bryan Turner, Jr., New Royal Theatre, Archer City, Texas. Small town patronage.

WOMAN'S FACE, A: Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas, Conrad Veidt—Excellent cast—excellent acting. I thought it was a good picture but it just did not seem to click with the audience. Possibly because of its foreign setting. The crowd seems to want stories with a good old U. S. A. background. Running time, 105 minutes.—J. L. Thayer, Leddy Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

ZIEGFELD GIRL: James Stewart, Judy Garland, Hedy Lamarr, Lana Turner—A big picture made by a big company who knows how to put in the big-time stuff. Well produced and well acted by entire cast. Lana Turner was very good and Judy Garland came up to expectations. James Stewart was good. Picture was about 30 minutes too long.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

I WANTED WINGS: Ray Milland, William Holden, Wayne Morris—Good show for all Americans to see. Especially pleasing to those who are "air minded." Above average gross. Running time, 135 minutes. Played July 20.—D. E. Burnett, State Theatre, Larned, Kans. General patronage.

LADY EVE, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda—We did not do very well with this picture. Weather was terrifically hot. It is, however, a fine picture. Good cast. Funny and entertaining all the way. All classes of people will like it. Running time, 95 minutes.—J. L. Thayer, Leddy Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

LIFE WITH HENRY: Jackie Cooper, Leila Ernest —Excellent program picture. Everyone commented favorably on it. Running time, 81 minutes. Played July 30-31.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons City, Nebraska. General patronage.

ONE NIGHT IN LISBON: Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray, Patricia Morison—While this picture started out a little slow, it managed to hold the patrons interest to the climax. Audience reaction fair. Average gross. Running time, 97 minutes. Played July 27.—D. E. Burnett, State Theatre, Larned, Kans. General patronage.

ROAD TO ZANZIBAR, THE: Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope—It's "tops" from start to finish. Pulled a full house. One of the good pictures; you can stand in the lobby afterwards and smile with the audience as they come out. Running time, 90 minutes. —J. L. Thayer, Leddy Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

ROAD TO ZANZIBAR, THE: Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Bing Crosby—Pleased generally. Everybody likes Hope but only the men seem to go for Lamour in this town. Guess there's a reason! Has lots of laughs and borders on the slapstick in many places. Incidentally, what's wrong with you exhibitors who read all these reports but have quit making them yourselves. The Department will be closed perhaps if you don't do your share. Running time, 90 minutes. Played August 10-11.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Nebr. Small town patronage.

WIDE OPEN TOWN: William Boyd, Russell Hay-

den—Hop-a-long always pleases the Western crowd.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Republic

SINGING HILL, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Lee—Doubled this with "Melody and Moonlight" (Rep.). Makes a grand show. Stood them in the aisles. Autry packs them in like no other star. Running time, 75 minutes.—J. L. Thayer, Leddy Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

RKO

DEVIL AND MISS JONES, THE: Jean Arthur, Charles Coburn, Robert Cummings—A swell picture which will undoubtedly please the masses if you can get them in. We couldn't. But we're glad we played it even if we did lose money. Played August 3-4.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

THEY MET IN ARGENTINA: James Ellison, Maureen O'Hara—Very ordinary to say the most. Running time, 77 minutes. Played August 6-7.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

COWBOY AND THE BLONDE, THE: George Montgomery, Mary Beth Hughes—Just a filler. Running time, 66 minutes. Played August 10-11.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

GIRL IN THE NEWS, THE: Margaret Lockwood, Barry K. Barnes—Well, this turned out to be just what was predicted by reviewers. We were fortunate in having an outside drawing card, had good attendance and it pleased immensely. Well played throughout but the talk was hard to understand if your sound equipment is not in the best of condition. Running time, 77 minutes. Played August 13-14.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GREAT AMERICAN BROADCAST, THE: Alice Faye, John Payne, Jack Oakie—Here is a good idea gone wrong. The history of radio should make a good story but this one misses fire somewhere badly. Jack Oakie does a good job and the specialties by the Ink Spots, Nicholas Brothers, and the Wiere Brothers are very good but the story itself just doesn't jell. (Maybe Jack Benny could have helped out on that with some flavor or another.) Attendance was just fair. We are closing for a month now, thank goodness. I'll be seeing you again when our tremendous crowds flock back to do nothing but attend our shows. Running time, 91 minutes. Played August 13-14.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred City, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

GREAT AMERICAN BROADCAST, THE: Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, John Payne—Enjoyed by our patrons. Musicals with Alice Faye seem to click here. Running time, 89 minutes. Played August 3-4.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

GREAT COMMANDMENT, THE: John Beal, Maurice Moscovitch, Albert Dekker—No appeal for our audience. Biblical stories just don't go here. Running time, 79 minutes. Played August 8-9.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

MOON OVER MIAMI: Don Ameche, Betty Grable, Robert Cummings—This picture did above average for us. Color was fine and music pleased everyone. Average recording, but nothing to boast about. This picture is a hot weather special, light story, light music and Florida background make it ideal for "Movie Vacation" promotion. Running time, 91 minutes. Played August 10.—D. E. Burnett, State Theatre, Larned, Kans. General patronage.

TOBACCO ROAD: Gene Tierney, Charles Grapewin—Picture did fair business but did not please many of the patrons, however. I had heard it wasn't much but personally I thought it not so bad.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

CHEERS FOR MISS BISHOP: William Gargan, Martha Scott—Very good picture. Started off slow but on last day business was more than good. Good comments sure helped this one along. Martha Scott's "Miss Bishop" was good as was the story and the remarkable makeup was something to talk about. Running time, 100 minutes. Played July 26-28.—Bryan Turner, Jr., New Royal Theatre, Archer City, Texas. Small town patronage.

Universal

SAN ANTONIO ROSE: Robert Paige, Jane Frazee—If Universal could deliver some more of this type every exhibitor would need their product. This picture drew well and pleased as we had a number to see it two times and some came back all three days; yes, paid to see it three times. A well balanced musical that everybody enjoyed. It really did the business here. If more pictures were of this type and drawing power, we would not need the super million dollar type. Running time, 63 minutes. Played August 2-4.—Bryan Turner, Jr., New Royal Theatre, Archer City, Texas. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

DEVIL DOGS OF THE AIR: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay—It's a honey of a picture. The night was hot but still they crowded in to see it. It has plenty of drawing power and the picture has everything else too. Show it if you can buy it. Running time, 86 minutes.—J. L. Thayer, Leddy Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

GREAT LIE, THE: Bette Davis, George Brent, Mary Astor—Pleased all. An excellent picture.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

GREAT MR. NOBODY, THE: Eddie Albert, Joan Leslie, Alan Hale—An excellent medium priced picture that pleased all. Excellent comedy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HERE COMES HAPPINESS: Mildred Coles, Edward Norris—Fair; will give you a few laughs. Most people liked it. Running time, 58 minutes. Played August 6-7.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons City, N. Y. General patronage.

HIGH SIERRA: Humphrey Bogart, Ida Lupino—A swell picture that pleased and thrilled most of the patrons. Bogart and Lupino were very good and also the supporting cast. Played July 12-14.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

KNUTE ROCKNE—ALL AMERICAN: Pat O'Brien, Gale Page, Ronald Reagan—Very much enjoyed by my patrons but struck the worst part of the season as it rained all three nights of playing. However, cannot blame the product for this and would recommend this to any theatre. Played August 2.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. General patronage.

MEET JOHN DOE: Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck—Good picture that followed the Capra pattern. Good comment and good business. However, this one in my estimation does not come up to the previous standard set by Capra in his previous productions. Running time, 123 minutes. Played August 6-7.—Bryan Turner, Jr., New Royal Theatre, Archer City, Texas. Small town patronage.

UNDERGROUND: Jeffrey Lynn, Philip Dorn—A very good picture for its type, well produced, well acted; should do good business if advertised properly. I played it early and didn't know much about the picture at that time.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

WAGONS ROLL AT NIGHT, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Eddie Albert, Joan Leslie—Good picture, business up to standard and pleased. Bogart was good, and Albert was exceptionally good.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

BLACK EYES AND BLUES: Roscoe Karns—This is a very wacky slapstick comedy that managed to keep the kids laughing at any rate. The grown-ups laughed while it was on and then said they didn't like it afterward. I suppose it is one of those things you feel ashamed to admit you liked. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred City, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

COOKOO CAVALIERS: Stooges—The Stooge's two reel slapstick comedy, in a class by themselves.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

INTERNATIONAL FORUM NO. 2: Special—This issue deals with invasion and seems to me to be better than the first. However, when most of your patrons spend the day studying and thinking, they rather resent being asked to do it again when they spend some money for relaxation. These subjects are respected but not particularly looked forward to in this spot. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred City, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BABY BLUES: Our Gang—They are still good in comedies. Running time, 9 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons City, Nebraska. General patronage.

FLAG SPEAKS, THE: Special—Advertise it for best days. Not only interesting but educating as well. In Technicolor. Running time, 18 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons City, Nebraska. General patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: No. 286, Vol. 286—Fair. Running time, 8 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons City, Nebraska. General patronage.

Paramount

FLIES AIN'T HUMAN: Popeye the Sailor—Most Popeye cartoons slipping. Should be revived and made in color.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. Genearl patronage.

HOOLA BOOLA: Madcap Models—These animated models continually amaze me as I have done enough of that type of work to realize the problems in it. The color is dandy, the subject matter is entertaining, and the technique is marvelous. It must have taken patience to handle so many characters at one time. Running time, 9 minutes.—W. Varick, Nevins, Ill. Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred City, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

HOOLA BOOLA: Madcap Models—Better than Paramount's cartoons. Running time, 9 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons City, Nebraska. General patronage.

MY POP, MY POP: Popeye the Sailor—Fair. Running time, 7 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons City, Nebraska. General patronage.

OCCUPATION NO. 6: Unusual Occupations—These reels always please and are one of the best fillers on the market.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO

PATHE NEWS: Too much war. Have ladies wait outside until news is over. Why not give us a News about one-third war, the balance news of the day.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

PLAYING WITH NEPTUNE: Sports Review—Nice slow motion diving and water sport reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred City, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

UNCLE JOEY: Terrytoons—A fairly good color cartoon but my patrons are used to much better ones. Running time, 6 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred City, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Universal

BAGDAD DADDY: Musicals—Why do they do it? Very poor musical play, mostly to Harem girls running around. Disgusted our audience.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SALT WATER DAFFY: Color—A shame to spend the money on color on such a cartoon. Pass it.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Vitaphone

CRACKPOT QUAIL, THE: Merrie Melodies—An excellent color cartoon that pleased all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WACKY WILDLIFE: Merrie Melodies—Very good. Running time, 8 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons City, Nebraska. General patronage.

Miscellaneous

MARCHING WITH OLD GLORY: William J. Ganz—Very good. Running time, 11 minutes.—Guy G. Black, Plaza Theatre, Inc., Lyons City, Nebraska. General patronage.

Serial

Republic

JUNGLE GIRL: Frances Gifford, Tom Neal—This is the best serial Republic has made since the Lone Ranger. All the kids like it and most of the adults. Plenty of action and the main thing it is different.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

Griffith Theatres: A Bill of Rights

MUCH has been written here and more will be set down upon economic soundness of profit-sharing and employee-welfare. Leading circuits have given evidence of the reasons therefor. Currently and conspicuously, the Griffith-Southwestern Theatres now hold the floor.

The facts of it prominently come to attention in the elaborate souvenir program issued on the dedication of the circuit's new Will Rogers theatre, in Tulsa, Oklahoma. The brochure, additionally, does an excellent public-relations job in revealing the inner workings of Griffith operations having to do with manpower-guidance.

It is no new story that worthy Griffith managers are given a stock interest in the company. That emerges as one of the earliest operation foundations. Costless group insurance, a benefit trust fund, a retirement pension plan and salary savings insurance for employees are other steel spokes long turning the circuit's wheels, profitably and progressively.

Now the story bears retelling, and is best told in the brochure on "Employees and Their Welfare", in these quotes:

"The founders of this company have consistently, from the beginning, recognized the value of happy, satisfied and permanent employees. They recognized the duty of management to care for and help the people who made this company their life's work.

"Not all employees can scale the heights of promotion . . . but each employee is important as an individual. Your company has tried to make it possible for every person connected with it to fill his particular spot to the best advantage to himself in line with his abilities.

"Promotion from the ranks has been an ironclad rule. No outsider has ever been moved in over the heads of worthy men or women working for advancement.

"College educations have been possible for ambitious young men and women by arranging transfers to college towns where we are operating.

"The Griffith companies have been developing a plan of entire financial security for employees and have instituted a program which through Home Office guidance and cooperation will serve to offset to a great degree the hazards of illness, accident, death and old age.

"The success of the individual is dependent upon the ability to work, earn and accumulate; yet this constitutes a problem with which the average employee is unable to cope—except by planned cooperative effort. To assist employees in solving such problems, your company has from time to time inaugurated a concerted program of security, now available to every employee, regardless of position, age or sex."

Here is summed up an exact measure for evaluation of employer-employee relationships that tell a story of successful theatre operation. It is a credo for living, a bill of rights determining once and for all the "importance of the individual".

THE POLISHING OF THE APPLE

This week's pages tell of a "Whodunit Jamboree" in Corsicana, Texas, where Interstaters Miller and McCary surrounded a mystery picture showing with a citywide fanfare that just about doubled average grosses. In October of 1940, as reported in the Round Table, the Miller-McCary duo performed as sensationally for the box office with an amazing "Corn" campaign wherein they calmly sold a comedy date as "corny"—but strictly for gales of laughter.

In both instances it is to be noted—and emphasized—that the theatremen used excellent judgment in selling their wares for nothing more than represented. The exploitations they conceived and advertised served only to enhance the entertainment values of their programs. The customers, according to returns, were the ones to call out, "Colossal".

WITH the results set down on a following page, the Third Quarter Competitions of the 1941 Quigley Awards move nearer to the finish. Which is set down as a reminder to those of the membership interested in taking down one of the Quarter-Master prizes.

Round Table In Pictures

Atmospheric lobby display arranged by Gaston Dureau of the Saenger Theatre, New Orleans, for the world premiere of "Aloma of the South Seas" stressed star cutouts visible from window of thatched hut.

Animation for "In the Navy" lobby at Warners' Jeffery, Chicago, and reported by Manager Bob Busch, had guns raising and lowering, with flasher-bulbs in gun barrels simulating gun fire.

Crowd-stopper slant arranged by Arnold Gates for "Barnacle Bill" at Loew's Granada, in Cleveland, featured lad in rowboat on wheels appropriately bannered and manoeuvered about streets at peak hours.

Before taking over his new spot in Madison, Wis., Marlowe Conner used compoboard silhouette, painted black, illustrated at right, for date on "Woman's Face"

Fitzpatrick Seeks Rooney "Doubles"

To announce his date on "Life Begins for Andy Hardy" at Loew's Poli, in Waterbury, Conn., Ed Fitzpatrick got behind a Rooney doubles contest, publicized with miniature counter cards in department stores, window cards in strategic locations and colorful heralds. Special trailer some two weeks ahead gave further details of the hookup and among other sources, leading downtown hotel which feted the winner on opening night, used 40 by 60 display in the lobby. The Loewman also made much of a Rooney poster in the foyer by stapling a real straw hat to the star's head, surrounding it with scene stills of Mickey purchasing a "bonnet" in the picture.

Street ballyho that attracted was a rolled 24-sheet carried along the downtown streets by a quartette of boys who, from time to time, unrolled the poster as a crowd attracter. Another slant was cutout of Garland with arms around Rooney, copy inviting boys to have their pictures taken alongside the girl. 1931 jalopy, bannered with Andy Hardy sayings and plastered with scene stills, was also driven about town. The jalopy stunt was built up further by cooperation of a boys' story which put on a contest inviting customers to decorate the "heap." For this purpose, scene cut of Rooney in the car was made into heralds and distributed at the store.

Fitz Plans School Tieups

With schools reopening in the next few weeks, Fitzpatrick has already made contacts with private and public schools and local colleges for cooperation through the school year. Among the things already set is a movie column in the high school paper on pictures that have historical or educational value. School paper will also run essay, coloring and drawing contests, etc., students offered guest tickets as prizes. Librarians and dramatic clubs are also in line and the Loewman is working with the senior class officers for the formation of school parties on selected attractions. In addition, permanent poster space has been arranged for in all high school gymnasiums.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Tillie the Toiler" Star Attends Home-Town Premiere

Since it is the home town of Kay Harris, who has the title role in the picture, Elkhorn, Wis., was chosen for the premiere of Columbia's "Tillie the Toiler" with the opening elaborated by the personal appearance of Miss Harris during the run at the Sprague Theatre. Due to the enterprise of Daniel Kelliher, manager and owner of the theatre, a big-time premiere was put on with all the Hollywood properties, the event further publicized by photographers from nearby key cities on hand to cover the opening.

Prominent among the guests at the showing were the mayor and city counsel, his honor extending the keys of the city to the star. Civic cooperation was additionally had with a reception at the city hall to which the entire town was invited. As part of the campaign, Kelliher arranged for telegrams of congratulations from other picture stars who came from Wisconsin.

SOME LATE STUNT STUFF

Bowing in with the first snaperoo reported on "Sun Valley Serenade," Dan Terrell hit a flock of newspaper breaks and windows for the date at Loew's Palace Washington, D. C., by having snowballs from Sun Valley, Idaho, brought in by air-mail for advance on the date. Packed in dry ice, the snow was called for at the airport by a flock of photogenic girls with Terrell arranging further to have the local "Miss Snowball," in bathing costume, pose with an armload of the imported ice. The wire services also picked up the gag and additional shots were taken by Life magazine.

One of the snowballs was planted in the window of the airlines offices with explanatory card and theatre credits. Rest of the "plug-hat destroyers" were repackaged and sent around to drama editors and columnists—a neat opportunity the newspaper folk took to speak up about it, and of course about the picture.

HOLDEN REWARDS PURSE-FINDERS WITH ADMISSIONS

As a switch from the double-horror program, Earle Holden recently booked a Double-Laff show at the L. & J. Capitol, Atlanta, using a lost-purse idea to secure attention. About 25 pocket-books, used and new, were "lost" on the street, in stores, and lobby. Inside of each was a note that invited finders to return the purses for free admissions. Many were returned and quickly put back into circulation to keep the gag going, says Earle. Here is the copy he used in the purses to explain the thing:

"Hello, Sucker. Sorry to have fooled you, but you won't be a sucker if you see the Double-Laff Show, at the Capitol, starting Sunday. You'll see Hugh Herbert in "Hello, Sucker" and Mischa Auer in "Cracked Nuts," two big comedies on the same program. If you will take this purse and note to the cashier at the Capitol immediately she will present you with a free guest ticket."

HAMMITT OFFERS CALL ON "HANDSOME SOLDIER" CONTEST

Two weeks of newspaper featuring, page-one and otherwise, was the net reported by Guy D. Hammitt on his "Most Handsome Soldier" contest in which reader submitting the winning photo was awarded the unique prize of a long-distance call from the stage of the Strand, Crawfordsville, Ind., to the winning boy in camp. As to be expected, entries were had in great number, the winner selected by a committee of local artists. Call was made during the run of "They Met in Bombay," credited in all the publicity, with hookup arranged over the house p. a. system so that the conversation was amplified to the capacity house.

PINCUS TIES NEWSPAPER SMASH TO "MANHUNT" TRAILER

Instead of the page-one overprint idea, for "Manhunt" at the Utah, Salt Lake Charlie Pincus had newspaper-size banner heads made up with three full lines of copy reading: "Salt Lake's Great Manhunt Starts Thursday." These were pasted in regular headline position over top half of local dailies, and 15 seconds before the trailer was shown, at a given signal from Charlie, newsboys rushed up the theatre aisles shouting "extry." Newsies then adjourned to out front where on spills they caught audience attention with the same spiel.

DINERMAN LANDS SEVEN-DAY RUN ON BENNY CONTEST

Among the late hookups reported on "Charley's Aunt" is the fun-photo contest put across in the Cincinnati Times-Star by "Dinny" Dinerman wherein for four days the daily ran two-column cuts, each with head of Jack Benny superimposed on the full-length figure of a different woman star. Cash prizes were offered for correct identifications of the girls, plus best letters of 25 words or less stating which of the feminine stars contestants preferred. Clews were supplied with each of the photos. In all, contest ran seven days, with initial break running a quarter-page, plus two-column followup.

ELDER SHORT TIEIN BRINGS CROWD TO THEATRE

The unusual sight of a page one break on short subjects exploitation was recently had by Bill Elder on behalf of MGM's "Coffin on Wheels" at Loew's, in Indianapolis. The 17-minute film, which depicts what could happen to juvenile motorists who operate defective used automobiles, moved the Loewman to contact local juvenile court judges to "sentence" youthful traffic violators to see the picture. This was carried out at the theatre where court was featured by a showing of the film with the added presence of civic heads, Chamber of Commerce, officers, etc. Regular courtroom procedure was followed, the entire proceedings being sufficiently newsworthy to rate a two-column break.

LOBBY PUBLICITY OFFICE

For the purpose of bringing extra attention to "Red" Skelton in "Whistling in the Dark" at Loew's Century, in Baltimore, Billy Saxton and George Avis set up a publicity department in the lobby, decorated with all the appropriate fixings, as here noted. Patrons were asked to suggest ways and means of advertising the new star, request further emphasized with circulars distributed to the customers asking them to inform their friends of the Skelton performance.

Poppay Sells "Love Crazy" With Lobby Peep Show

Ahead of "Love Crazy" at the Warner-Majestic Theatre, in Gettysburg, Pa., Manager Sid Poppay arranged a shadow-box out front with a peephole labeled "See what happens to some individuals when they are 'Love Crazy.'" Inside was still showing William Powell dressed in woman's attire as he appears in the picture. In addition, serialization was planted in local daily.

In connection with "The Singing Hill," Poppay arranged with local Rotary Club to provide transportation to the theatre for underprivileged children. Member of nearby Gettysburg College faculty addressed the club prior to the event. While for "Wings," a model plane display, special still board, radio plugs, Boys Legion Band parade and tieups with local recruiting stations gave the picture a goodly start.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Advertises for Ghosts On "Hold That Ghost"

Teaser classified ads were run by Eddie Dunn at the Paramount, in Des Moines, ahead of "Hold That Ghost" asking for two boys experienced as ghosts, to ballyhoo Abbott and Costello in their newest laugh hit. From the applicants chosen, lads, one tall and the other short, were dressed in sheets, etc., to represent haunters of houses with chest and back banners. Novelty herald was distributed carrying cut of smiling ghost with small buttons sewed into eye sockets. Copy on card read "A couple of spares to replace those buttons you'll lose from laughing when you see," etc.

"Victor Day" Proclaimed By Mayor for Murdock

With the RCA-Victor Company located in town, Joe Murdock, manager of Warner's Stanley, in Camden, N. J., tied in with outfit and secured cooperation of Mayor Brunner, who proclaimed a "Victor Day" in connection with "Penny Serenade," during which day some 1300 employees of the plant attended the theatre. Opening night Murdock arranged a broadcast over WCAM, from lobby, following 15 minutes of picture endorsements by city officials and visiting celebrities. This was followed by radio interview with record salesgirls and finally, dialogue and music from the film was picked up by a back-stage mike and rebroadcast.

Lobby display included an exhibit showing how recordings are made, models of the very first Victor talking machine up to the latest radio-phonograph combination sets, blowups of Victor recording artists and an improvised music store. Opening day, Joe promoted a cooperative ad section in local papers which was called "RCA-Victor-Penny Serenade" section.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Bair's Novel "Navy" Ad

Taking one of the two-column mats from "In the Navy," E. E. Bair at the Valentine, in Defiance, Ohio, made up an unusual advertisement for the date by adding a column of space of the same depth, which he devoted largely to personal copy on his reactions to the show. Headed "Facts About the Feature," Bair stressed the high entertainment value and found this especially effective, since he was playing the picture ahead of "Buck Privates."

Ties "Kiss" Date To Local Election

Coming just in advance of the local elections, "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," at the Fulton, in Fulton, Ky., was tied into the excitement by Malco City Manager Harold H. Thomas, who placed Mary Martin's name and the picture before the voting public, using duplicates of election banners in all of the election wards. Banners were carried by boys who marched up and down in front of the polls during peak hours, Thomas carrying the idea further by painting the sidewalks with the names of his candidates.

For feminine attention, Hal put up what he terms a lucky "kiss wheel" in the lobby, wherein women patrons were allowed to spin the wheel for guest tickets when the wheel stopped at card carrying star names and title. Wheel, electrically controlled, was in charge of girl usher and to build up the stunt, other panels of the wheel carried boy-and-girl kiss sketches.

Stoltz Forms "Kiss" Unit

One that the local dailies went for immediately and sold by Arnold Stoltz for the date at Warner's Avon, in Utica, was a "Kiss the Boys Goodbye Club," membership composed of girls who volunteered to be at the Union Station to "kiss the boys goodbye" on their induction into army service. Stoltz promoted three local goodlookers to pose with the membership poster, the dailies reproducing this in three column breaks.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Jungle Cavalcade" Tied To Local Zoo by Bremer

W. E. Bremer of the Kirby, Houston, Texas, tied in with the zoo for exploitation stunt featuring "Chico," trained chimpanzee for his campaign on "Jungle Cavalcade." A special preview was staged for the monk morning ahead. On opening day Bremer had "Chico" selling tickets in the boxoffice, writing a review for the Houston Press, editing a piece of film in the lobby and examining a photo of Frank Buck on the sidewalk in front of the theatre.

Another phase in the campaign was the special front with Jungle grass and tropical moss. Wrestling match programs were distributed the night before at local matches, jungle helmets with imprinted bands were worn by newsboys throughout downtown area beginning on opening day and Bremer also stepped up his advertising campaign with papers running daily feature stories and art while the local radio station plugged the film with spot announcements.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Walsh's "Flying Fortress" Lobby

Model replica of the Douglas B-17 Flying Fortress was featured in a display set up by Bill Walsh of the Comerford Theatre, in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., as part of his work as a member of the Motion Picture Committee cooperation in national defense. Model was complete in every detail, with four motors turning continuously and was surrounded by toy soldiers and military weapons with a large American flag on either side. Credit for construction of the display goes to Art Bullock and Howard Williams of the circuit's art department.

Newspaper Pushes 'Mr. Jordan' Hunt

It seems that "Here Comes Mr. Jordan" came to Meriden, Conn., recently as part of Joe Samartano's campaign for the date at Loew's Poli, the arrival being noted by a newspaper tiein wherein readers were invited to find "Mr. Jordan" on the main street at a designated time. Details were carried by the daily in addition to photo of "Mr. Jordan" with eyes and most of nose blacked out. To be considered for the prizes, readers who thought that they recognized "Mr. Jordan" were requested to carry a copy of the participating newspaper to which they would refer in making the identification.

For an additional street stunt, Samartano had a saxophone player make the rounds, copy on back banner reading: "Don't laugh. I don't play the sax good, but neither does Robert Montgomery in," etc. More sax stuff was had with three-sheet cutouts of the star playing the instrument and the Loewman was successful in promoting a lot of saxophones which were hung from lobby ceiling with copy to the effect that they were Montgomery's lucky piece as depicted in the picture.

Added helps in the campaign were a surrealist lobby display with miniature doll, boxing gloves, etc., and another mystery heightener included stencilled sidewalk footprints, copy reading "Follow Mr. Jordan's footprints to," etc. It was emphasized in the advertising that the picture be seen from the beginning, and more of this was made by the Loewman in personal announcements from the stage a week ahead, asking the audience not to divulge the plot to their friends. This was also brought out in the trailer in advance and during playdates.

Paper Runs Benny Wire

On his recent "Charley's Aunt" date, Samartano promoted some unusual publicity with a personal wire addressed to him by Jack Benny in Hollywood, paper thinking enough of it to run a four-column shot of the wire with head "Jack Wires Joe on Charley's Aunt." The Benny wire read "Dear Joe: All the boys tipped their hats to me on the set while making 'Charley's Aunt' but I didn't mind it in the least. 'Charley's Aunt' is the greatest comedy ever written. For 50 years audiences throughout the whole world have been shrieking at it. I will confess this though; all my life I've wanted to win the leading lady in a picture but I never dreamed I'd end up being the leading lady. Regards. Jack Benny."

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Hill Goes Circus

Elaborate circus atmosphere was introduced by Manager Roy Hill for his date on "Wagons Roll at Night" at the Electric, in Springfield, Mo., the advance newspaper campaign spotted with clown teaser copy, breaking with a large display day ahead set in circus style. Main attractor in the lobby was a carnival booth decorated with banners and pennants. In the booth, a penny pitch board was set up with nine black squares. Patrons were invited to pitch discs to cover the squares with guest tickets to those who were successful.

JUST TWO MORE TO GO

As the Awards move merrily toward the ending of the Third Quarter, the pace continues even as entrants jockey for position into the stretch run. The fourth Fortnight, here reported, finds 59 of the boys represented in the 57 "Fortnighters" voted, for the most part, to "repeaters" but not to the entire exclusion of new names. The Competitions are now moved into the fifth Fortnight of the Third Quarter, leaving just "two more to go"—a month before the voting is held for the Quarter-Master prizes. These two preliminary two-week periods will be made much of by Round Tablers intent upon the Quarter results and, with the current Fortnight added, will be taking advantage of the remaining opportunities to fatten their scores.

"WHODUNIT JAMBOREE" SELLS HORROR PICTURE

Miller and McCary Tie Up City With Exploitation Barrage; Campaign Doubles Business

The picture was "Horror Island." So seeing the wide showmanship possibilities of selling the date with a twist over and above the usual scare-and-thrill attack, Sidney Miller and Terry McCary, at the Interstate Ideal, Corsicana, Tex., advertised the date as "Whodunit, or Murder on Horror Island," and got behind the showing with a "Whodunit Jamboree" that had the town gasping.

The "Whodunit" label identified the campaign, started 10 days ahead with "coming" lobby copy, followed with a four-day newspaper teaser drive, nine days ahead, copy changed each day as follows, ads running one-inch on two columns:

THAUMASION

(In Greek this means "it's swell.")

MACANUDO

(In Argentina this means "it's swell.")

QUEBUENO

(In Spanish this means "it's swell.")

ELLSWA

(In Dog Latin this means "it's swell.")

Then on the fifth day, larger space was taken to repeat the teasers, followed by the "snapper," which ran, "Whodunit; this means it's swell entertainment," plus theatre and date. Newspaper "personals" also were used, two-line shots reading: "For information concerning the guy 'Whodunit' call 2186," the theatre number.

Pup Dogs Stop Traffic

Unique lobby display had to do with four-month-old white Spitz pup dogs, borrowed for the showing, and placed in the foyer in a small pen to which was attached a clothes line hung with women's hose. The pups constantly chewed upon the hose for a crowd-attractor, and tiein copy banner above read: "These Lady Kay hose from K. Wolens Department Store were new. Look at 'em now. Yet it takes no detective to know "Whodunit," etc., etc. As an added pay-off, the theatremen promoted the store's best window for a similar tieup. The aftermath of the stunt was that so many people offered to buy the pups that the Round Tablers decided to name the doggies "Who" and "Dunit" and gave them away on a "lucky number" tiein.

Stunts were widespread. One ballyhoo concerned an old Model A Ford, the sides painted with "Our motor is missing—Whodunit?" Vacant store windows were bonamied with "Help us catch the guy Whodunit." Book store windows carried Whodunit mysteries, and in another window was planted a setpiece with a collection of razors, axes, guns, swords, etc., explained with the line, "Just a few of the gadgets used by the guy Whodunit."

Printed material took different forms. For instance, small cards distributed in advance at the boxoffice read, "Sure, you know that the war of 1812 was fought in 1812. And the battle of Gettysburg was fought at Gettysburg. But do you know Whodunit," etc. Invisible ink heralds also were compelling. They read: "That guy Whodunit writes mysterious messages. Wet the above box. See what it says," etc. When wet, some of the boxes revealed the word "Whodunit" and it was advertised that these would be good for free admissions. Most of the heralds, however, read: "No Soap," or "Try Again," or "Who—Not You," etc.

Aim Puzzle at Rural Schools

Old dictionaries were used for another hand-out, the pages separated and imprinted to read: "There's just not a word in the entire English language to describe the fun you will have trying to find out Whodunit." And especial attention was paid to the rural schools with a numbered-dot puzzle wherein the pupils were invited to discover the face of the "guy Whodunit" by starting at Dot No. 1 and drawing consecutive lines through Dot 81. Space on the puzzles was provided for names and addresses, and completed puzzles mailed to Miller were rewarded with single guest tickets, mailed in return. The stunt sold a lot of extra tickets, since it was found that the winners usually brought relatives or friends for the journey into town. Another publicity builder had the biggest local laundry put slips in all outgoing bundles, copy reading: "If your laundry comes back clean, white and expertly done, then you know Whodunit," etc., etc.

Pass Stunt Climaxes Campaign

The campaign was climaxed with what was intended to be a local school tiein, but speedily reached much greater proportions. It started with two-column ads four days ahead which said that Friday, last day of the school week, would be "Whodunit Day," at which time many guest tickets would be distributed around the town. To obtain a pass, readers were invited to repeat the magic word "Whodunit" to friends, business associates, students, etc., and those possessing the ducats would then give them up.

According to Miller, it took about one hour until thousands of school children were saying "Whodunit" to every one they met, and others took up the call. The passes changed hands rapidly, as all concerned "played ball" to keep the stunt alive. The stunt ran until three o'clock, when those who had the passes were allowed to keep them. Though they recommend this one highly, the Interstaters note it must be handled with great care since school officials, for obvious reasons, might object if the stunt is confined to the youngsters. By carefully advertising that the "Whodunit Day" was for the entire city, and by planting some of the passes in the downtown area, as well, objections from the schools were avoided.

Other appropriate slants were included, the only thing the Interstaters did not get around to, for lack of time, being a "Whodunit Week" proclamation by the Mayor. This did nothing to mar the elaborate but small-cost campaign which increased the Sunday-Monday gross to nearly double the average business, they report.

Radio Announcer Slant Aids Flex on "Tom, Dick and Harry"

Contests were the order of the day on Jack Flex' "Tom, Dick and Harry" date at the Keith, in Syracuse, program manager of WAGE tying in on a radio announcer's stunt, whereby guest tickets were awarded to those submitting largest list of popular radio announcers whose first name was either one of the three used in the picture title. Local daily ran contest on famous persons named Tom, Dick or Harry, entrants required to give full name of person and tell of their prominence nationally.

Extra break was accorded Flex on his "Moon Over Miami" date, since he secured a photo of well-known local physician taken on the lot with Betty Grable, Don Ameche and Harry Joe Brown; this was used in a three-column cut in local daily together with appropriate copy. Numerous window displays were promoted which included scene stills of Grable and Landis.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Trick Teaser Ads Launch "Zanzibar" for Petch

Run on the classified ad page by Ernie Petch of the Strand, in Brandon, Manitoba, in advance of "Road to Zanzibar" were such teasers as: "Octopus wrestler wanted who can do a job as good as Bob Hope does in," etc., or "Human Cannonball, to be fired 500 yards the same as Bing Crosby fires Bob Hope in," etc. Office workers were supplied with tinted blotters carrying cut of the stars with copy: "You will blot out all other laugh and love treats when you see."

Getting away from the straight merchant co-op ad, Ernie's promotion in this respect contained picture comment under signature of different members of the theatre staff, which were run in each merchant's ad. Signs with picture title were used on all roads leading into the city, numerous window displays promoted and radio coverage included spot announcements over Station CKX three days ahead and during run.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

School Dress Designing Class Tied to "Ziegfeld" by Brien

Of no mean proportions was the high schools tieup on "Ziegfeld Girl" arranged by Lige Brien at the Belmar, in Pittsburgh, with 140 students of the dress designing class submitting costume designs for the stars in the picture. These were placed in the local Carnegie Library for display purposes two weeks ahead. Highlights of the campaing consisted of entire student body of 3500 pupils marching to the Library to cast their votes for their favorite "Ziegfeld Girl" design. Winners received guest tickets, dailies coming through with art.

Metal signs with title were planted at stratgic spots around town. Through tieup with local merchant imprinted cellophane bags containing peanuts were distributed copy reading "It's the nuts," etc. Through cooperation of five and dime store, guest tickets were offered to those securing weight cards bearing cut of any star appearing in the picture and four local plants came through by distributing salary checks in imprinted envelopes.

About Novelty Advertising —and What Makes It Work

Theatreman-Specialist Relates Instances to Cite Why "Off-Center" Heralds Pay

by ARNOLD STOLTZ

Manager, Warners' Avon, Utica, N. Y.

Since many of the Stoltz novelties have been reproduced and explained in the Round Table, it was felt that some inside stuff on this form of exploitation would be welcomed by the membership. With this in mind, the Warnerman was asked to say a little more on the subject in general and on this page is set down the first of two articles. The second in the series by Stoltz will be run in an early issue.

One of the earliest forms of advertising was the printed herald. Together with billposting, it was probably the only means Nero used to advertise which gladiator would fight whom, and what delectable Christians would be fed to which Leo. For a certainty, the herald was one of the theatre's earliest forms of publicizing, and was often used in towns too small to even boast of a newspaper. At the time when the country had no free libraries and few publications, the theatre heralds were read from start to finish by a public starved for reading matter. But, later, herald advertising became (as my dad—an old legitimate showman, called it) "blizzard advertising," for the reason that the public no sooner received the heralds than they discarded them with hardly a glance, and, in no time, the area where they were distributed looked like a snow scene.

Calls Herald "Child of Necessity"

The novelty herald, like many other things, was the child of necessity. If you need proof that novelty advertising pays, watch a man with a package of matches. As long as one match remains in the package it will not be thrown away. The reason? Intrinsic value. Thus a theatre ad with any kind of a novelty attached to it will not be discarded hastily.

Every herald, however, cannot have a gadget attached to it, and, therefore, unusual interest must be occasionally aroused by an element of surprise, humor, or oddity. For example, Joe Doaks heard a good story in Los Angeles last week. This week it has already been told and retold in New York City. So, if your herald strikes the funny bone of Mr. Doaks, he will be sure to pass it on before discarding it.

Sets Down Proven Examples

There are several helpful sources of ideas for making your herald into a gadget herald, a novelty herald, or a humorous or surprise herald. The simplest of these sources is found in the title of the pictures. For instance, "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" fairly shrieks for a herald tied up with lip-sticks or kleenex. Here's something we know no women will toss away and men will take home. Just a simple little twist like, "When you Kiss the Boys Goodbye you will give him an extra kiss for taking you to see this swell show," will make for the humorous line necessary for the plain printed throwaway.

Suppose the title fails to give you an idea and the cast likewise leaves you cold. What's the story about? The sea? How about a sample package of life-savers; a single life-saver attached to a card; or a message rolled up in a bottle? (Miniature milk bottles or coca cola bottles can be promoted free). A western story? How about a paper gun; a piece of string looped like a lariat; or the old stand-by, "wanted dead or alive" herald?

But what if even the story leaves you blank? Let's open the newspaper. What's the headline? "Ickes Places Curfew on Gasoline." All right, we'll bring out a folded herald. On the first page we'll print "How To Save Gas." The inside will read, "Park your car and see our show!" Maybe the headline in the newspaper reads—"Rush On Lady's Silk Stockings—Supply Shut Off!" So we'll put out an envelope containing a few small round candies, poppy or carraway seeds, and we'll tell the ladies that the star of our picture has a Christmas gift for them, that the envelope contains silk-worm eggs, and that by Christmas they will have a pair of silk stockings. The women know we are kidding, yet we have told them the name of our star, the show, the theatre and the date. They will not discard the envelope until they have read the copy because their curiosity makes them investigate the alleged eggs.

Here a word of caution to managers in putting novelties together. Experience has taught the dangers of using material that perhaps might injure the curious. As an instance, instead of a tin disc on a recent "money" novelty, we used candy replica of a half dollar. On the silkworm novelty we also protected ourselves by using poppy seeds instead of any other material that might be injurious.

Now then, just suppose there is no news in the newspaper. What's that on the wall? A calendar? Maybe it says March. Let's get busy. We'll print our herald on stage money and be set for April the first with copy like, "Don't be fooled! The best show in town today is," etc. Maybe it's May. Let's give the public a hot tip for Derby Day. They can't lose if they come to see our show.

All right, so we haven't got a calendar. It's Spring! We can feel it in the air. We can't think so we'll take the easy way out. We'll let them "gamble" by numbering our heralds or printing letters on them holding one letter for a key and we'll promote a few prizes from a merchant.

Adds "Twist" for Effectiveness

Advertising stunts often go off better due to a little twist or oddity. For example: I once called an obliging mayor to ask him to present the key to the city to a visiting actor. He agreed but the papers were uninterested. A quick call to the sign shop and I had a big card board key made. When the time came the actor turned the tables by presenting the mayor with the key to the stage door before the clicking cameras of the now interested newspapers. Then there was the time when the police were handing out tickets right and left for careless driving. I supplied several cops with theatre tickets to hand out to careful drivers. It broke front pages and is still being used. Reason: both the above belong to the "Man bites dog" school. The same reverse often clicks in a herald and so our purpose is accomplished. Our heralds are gadgeted and novelty is painted over our stunts. The public has received our message.

Printing costs are no more for well chosen words than for trite ones. The difference between a selling throwaway and a standard one is best expressed by the now famous words of the artist, John Opie. A patron, exclaiming in ecstasy over his beautiful hues, asked with what Opie mixed his paints. "I mix them with brains, Sir," he answered.

USE LAUGH-QUIZZOR FOR "WHISTLING" DATE

Patrons interested in listening to their own laughter had an opportunity to do so last week at Loew's New York Criterion when, reported by Phil Laufer, publicity head, a recording machine, called a "laugh-quizzor," promoted for the date on "Whistling in the Dark," was planted in the lobby. Those participating received autographed photos of Red Skelton.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Faille's "Kid" Jigsaw

Planted in both his lobby and nearby vacant lot was stunt pulled by Francis Faille ahead of "Billy the Kid" at the Paramount, in North Adams, Mass. Using nine five-foot cutout letters spelling the word "desperado, Faille mixed up the letters and offered guest tickets to those correctly assembling them.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Arranged at practically no cost was the "balcony closed" sign constructed by Chris Pope, acting manager at Schine's Strand, in Delaware, Ohio. Promoted from drugstore was cutout figure of a drum majorette, which had been part of a cigarette ad. A little art work and a colored spot dressed the sign for the theatreman's purposes.

Newspaper photographer snapped folks on the streets of Crawfordsville, Ind., as part of Guy D. Hammitt's advance for "A Woman's Face." Each day photos were run in cooperating daily with certain faces ringed, to those identifying themselves at the boxoffice guest tickets were awarded.

"What do you seek most in 'A Woman's Face'?" was the subject of a "Woman's Face" contest used by E. Gray Huffman, Clifton, Huntingdon, Pa.

Three men dressed as the Marx Bros. handed out theatre time schedules for "The Big Store" as part of J. Keefe's campaign for the film's showing at the Cambria, Johntown, Pa.

Ahead of "I Wanted Wings" at the Brandon, in Brandon, Vt., John Hamilton purchased a number of various type planes from the five and ten and hung them from the ceiling of the lobby. In addition, one-sheets from the Army on flying were spotted about the theatre. On "Man Hunt," John invited localites to enter his search, guest tickets going to those identifying the man, description of whom was given to the newspapers for breaks.

A four-day contest asking readers of the Press Scimitar for suggestions on what famous person, novel, play or short story they would like to see brought to the screen was a feature of the "Blossoms in the Dust" campaign executed by Cecil Vogel, Loew's State, Memphis. Each day the paper ran a two-column picture plus a story about Mrs. Edna Gladney, impersonated in the film by Greer Garson. Cash prizes went to winners of the contest.

An "It's True" mat was used on a "Woman's Face" herald with copy for the film, and guest tickets were awarded those who received heralds with lucky numbers that were posted in the lobby of the Majestic, Ellwood City, Pa., during Andy Biordi's campaign for the film.

First 25 listeners submitting correct lists of Wallace Beery's last three pictures were awarded guest tickets in a radio contest arranged by George Papoulas, Capitol, Wheeling, W. Va., as a highlight of his "Barnacle Bill" campaign.

Making up checks—like those used by the local bank—issued for "1,000 in Entertainment," Orville Rennie, Fort, Rock Island, Ill., distributed them among local merchants. Patrons getting four of these checks at different shops were awarded guest tickets for "They Met in Bombay."

BARBARA SUE, weight six pounds, 10 oz. on August 13 to Mr. & Mrs. George L. Rabb. Daddy manages the Phillips Theatre, in Springfield, Mass. Mother is daughter of Herman Rifkin, Vice President Monogram Pictures.

JONATHAN, weight seven pounds, on Monday, August 25, to Mr. and Mrs. A-Mike Vogel. Proud father is Chairman of Managers' Round Table.

A well-rounded campaign was accorded the opening of "North West Mounted Police" in Sao Paulo, Brazil, through the efforts of Julio Llorente, director of the Empreza Serrador Cinema, who secured wires from the picture's producer and stars in Hollywood which were used for newspaper breaks. Special house front displays were constructed for the engagement. Co-operating newspapers came through with stories and art, one-sheet posters were planted about town and stills were landed in magazines.

To open his date on "In the Navy" at the Capitol, in Winnipeg, Manitoba, Hal Bishop arranged for a contingent of local navy boys to parade to the theatre in uniform. Lads put on a nice show out front before entering, drilling in formations for five minutes.

Tying in with drugstore, Al Hostler at Schine's Palace, in Lockport, N. Y., ahead of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," distributed heralds on which were outline of Mary Martin's lips. Space was provided for imprint of patron's lips, with guest tickets awarded those whose impressions came closest to the star's.

EGAN'S ALERTNESS NETS CUT AND STORY

In addition to his job of assistant manager at the Palace, Calgary, Canada, Gail Egan also does a regular theatre program over CFAC. Discovering recently that the station technician was a brother of one of the players in "There's Magic In Music," booked at the theatre, Gail promoted a lot of plugs to that effect and also planted an added two-column newspaper cut and story on the girl and the picture.

Since Brenda Marshall was born in the Philippines, Clifford Almy, Warner's manager in Manilla for the date on "Singapore Woman" at the Lyric built a special lobby display featuring the fact that the "local-girl" actress was elevated to stardom in this picture. In addition, giant easel carrying congratulatory message to Brenda in Hollywood was available for patrons to affix their signatures.

In connection with "Beast of Berlin" at the Lafayette, in St. Louis, John Heflinger constructed a gallows on roof projecting over sidewalk and strung up cutout of Hitler in effigy. In addition a "wanted" herald was distributed ahead as teaser and for lobby purposes, herald blowup was featured surrounded by scene stills.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Aloma of the South Seas

(Paramount, 1940-41)

South Sea Island Romance

Designed to profit by a number of precedents, this South Sea island romance in Technicolor lives up to most of them.

Precedent for the title is the success of like title in which Gilda Gray at peak of her popularity made money for showmen up and down the land.

Precedent for the co-starring of Dorothy Lamour and Jon Hall is, of course, Samuel Goldwyn's "Hurricane," which turned in substantial returns more recently.

Precedents for the Technicoloring of Miss Lamour in sarong and gardenias against background of ukelele music and palm trees are plentiful.

This offering differs from most in kind mainly in that it contains a villain whose jealousy of the hero animates him to the extent of coldbloodedly murdering an innocent bystander by way of implementing a threat. After which the story exerts more power than previously by this intimation that anything in the nature of the unexpected may be expected to happen, although it finally doesn't. A volcanic eruption which destroys the island finishes the picture, sweethearts and their friends escaping disaster.

Production by Monta Bell is elaborate and successful, as is Alfred Santell's direction. Frank Loesser and Frederick Hollander supplied Miss Lamour with a song in her pattern which has the essentials of popularity.

Previewed in studio projection room to small press audience which seemed satisfied.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Produced and released by Paramount. Monta Bell, producer. Alfred Santell, director. Assistant director, John Coonan. Photographer, Karl Struss. Color cameraman, Wilfred Cline. P. C. A. Certificate No. 7578. Running time, when seen in Hollywood, 77 minutes. Release date, August 29, 1941. General audience classification.

Unfinished Business

(Universal, 1941-42)

Another Triangle

Irene Dunne as "Nancy Adams" dons her "Back Street" role in another portrayal of the woman who loves not wisely, but too well, which establishes "Unfinished Business" as a woman's picture. When she declares, in speaking about love, that in every woman's life there is some "unfinished business," the daughters of Eve will probably sigh with reminiscent regret, and the sons of Adam will probably wonder again about the operation of the female mind. Unlike "Back Street," however, the "business" is finally "finished" with Miss Dunne marrying, having a baby, and settling down.

The star will continue to charm her fans as the small town singer who embarks for New York in her search for love and romance, and attains them—with heartache and compromise. Preston Foster is the man she desires; Robert Montgomery is the man she acquires. Miss Dunne makes good compromises.

Under the direction of Gregory La Cava, of "My Man Godfrey," "Stage Door" and "Fifth Avenue Girl" fame, the picture is treated as sophisticated comedy, despite its theme. The dialogue is witty and amusing, comedy is supplied by Walter Catlett as a night club proprietor and Eugene Pallette as a butler, and music is furnished by Miss Dunne who sings several songs, including "Happy Birthday To You."

Despite its sophistication and obvious adult appeal, the picture never leaves the straight and narrow path of good taste.

Previewed at the studio projection room, before a mixed audience, who seemed to enjoy especially the humorous aspects of the picture.—IRENE SMOLEN

Badlands of Dakota

(Universal, 1941-42)

Ridin', Shootin' and History

When Universal sets out to do a big-scale western the sky's the limit and this number falls into that category with a bang. It's got more shootin', more ridin', and a heap more story-tellin' of the kind that makes a hard-bitten western fan saddle sore from grippin' his opera chair than any similar project of approximately contemporary circulation.

The terrain of this outing is the area named in the title and most of the action happens in Deadwood, the murder of Wild Bill Hickok at the poker table being just an incident in the riotous goings-on. There's a link with history, too, in the presence of General Custer, who rides out of this picture to his last stand against Sitting Bull, and there's a character named "Jane" who might as well be "Calamity" if she isn't.

Brod Crawford and Lon Chaney, Jr., are the principal bad men of the story, Richard Dix playing "Wild Bill" as a heroic character and Robert Stack attending to the romantic requirements opposite Ann Rutherford, who turns in quite a performance as the sweet young thing contrasted against Frances Farmer's "Jane." Hugh Herbert, Andy Devine and Fuzzy Knight put a lot of zip and much effectiveness into comedy assignments.

The story is about two brothers in love with the same girl, the younger marrying her and the elder turning outlaw in his heartbreak. Robbing of stagecoaches is the principal occupation of the bandits concerned, who are numerous and full of gun fight. An Indian raid on Deadwood, with the arrival of the cavalry deferred beyond the point of corny climax in the interest of plausibility, highlights a film full of all the things western lovers love.

Alfred E. Green's direction achieves a realism seldom paralleled in the field of westerns. George Waggner, associate producer, rates a bow from the waist.

Previewed in studio projection room to a large turnout of press people who relished the offering as a forthright western tailored to the market it serves.—W.R.W.

World Premiere

(Paramount, 1940-41)

The Profile Returns

With the title and situations based on the recent world premiere ballyhoo and long-distance junkets sponsored by film companies, John Barrymore, thespian of stage and screen, again brings his much publicized profile before the camera to give it an unprecedented workout in the cinema art of "mugging." With a Hollywood background the star appears as the producer of an anti-Axis production which is constantly under the threat of sabotage by Axis spies.

Produced by Sol C. Siegel and directed by Ted Tetzlaff, "World Premiere" ofttimes for the sake of comedy overreaches for sprightliness, although comedy roles by Sig Rumann, Luis Alberni and Fritz Feld, as Axis spies, and Cliff Nazarro with his double-talk dialogue, are handled competently. The romantic roles enacted by Frances Farmer, and Ricardo Cortez as the temperamental film stars, and Virginia Dale and Don Castle, as the actress and press agent secretly married, supply the remaining ingredient to round out the picture as an entertaining comedy farce.

For the showman whose patrons thrive on Barrymore comedy, "World Premiere" may be exploited to its utmost since the star has been given a free hand in enacting the role of the eye-rolling and temperamental producer. Mr. Barrymore's antics and ad-libs on a national hook-up with the Rudy Vallee show during the past months have also kept him before the public and is an angle worthy of exploitation.

Reviewed ot the Criterion theatre on Broadwoy, New York, attended by an eorly afternoon audience who found many chuckles in the humorous dialogue ond situations.—GEORGE SPIRES.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Produced by Sol C. Siegel. Directed by Ted Tetzlaff. Sound mixer, Hugo Brenzbach. Film editor, Archie Marshek. Art directors, Hans Dreier and William Flannery. Scattergood Meets Broadway

(RKO-Pyramid, 1940-41)

Comedy

Taking the principal characters, "Scattergood Baines" and his wife, indigenous to the fictional country town of Coldriver, to New York, Producer Jerrold Brandt has "Baines" engage in show business to the extent of backing a play written by one of Coldriver's youths in order to extricate the latter from difficulties caused by two unscrupulous partners. The show is a success, and the stenographer, who steps into the lead of the play when the star vanishes, and the author find romance.

That is the story of "Scattergood Meets Broadway," third of the Pyramid Productions made for RKO release.

Despite the increase in budget over the other two in the group, which shows itself on the screen, the picture nonetheless remains secondary program material, due to an obvious story, trite dialogue, over-acting, and ineffective comedy efforts.

Guy Kibbee again plays the title role, with Emma Dunn as his wife. Others in the cast are Joyce Compton, as a showgirl; Bradley Page and Frank Jenks, as the producers; William Henry, as the playwright; Mildred Coles, as the stenographer, and Paul White, Chester Clute, Carl Stockdale, Charlotte Walker and Sharon MacKie.

Christy Cabanne directed the picture, making the most out of the poor materials he had.

Roaring Frontiers

(Columbia, 1940-41)

Western, with Songs

Second of the Bill Elliott-Tex Ritter co-starring westerns for Columbia release during the new season, "Roaring Frontiers" may be found by western fans to contain a loosely joined story, implausible situations, and dialogue unbelievable in content and manner of delivery.

Supporting the pair are Ruth Ford, Frank Mitchell, Bradley Page, Tristram Coffin, Hal Taliaferro, Francis Walker, Joe McGuinn, George Chesebro, and Charles Stevens.

Elliott still continues his characterization of "Wild Bill Hickok," and as such cleans up a western town, freeing "Tex" from the accusation of murder and ridding the village of its criminal element. A romance between "Tex" and "Reba," manager of a stagecoach office, blossoms.

Ritter sings three songs, one while trapped in a box canyon by the outlaws, one in jail and the third while a prisoner being taken to the county seat for trial.

Lambert Hillyer directed this Leon Barsha production.

Shown ot a Columbia studio projection room in Hollywood.—V. K.

Under Fiesta Stars

(Republic, 1940-41)

Shootin', Horsin', Singin'

The mere mention of "Gene Autry" is enough to elicit hosannas from both exhibitors and western fans alike. The exhibitor knows what he has to do; dust off his old S. R. O. sign and get busy.

In "Under Fiesta Stars," Autry is called upon to do all the things his devotees demand. The picture opens with the star at his own rodeo, doing some fancy riding on a difficult horse. He is then summoned to manage a mine, which he does, honestly and honorably. He sings several pleasantly lilting songs in his usual agreeable manner. And he gets the girl. What more could anyone ask of any one man?

The plot concerns itself with the efforts of Autry to manage a mine in accordance with the terms expressed in the will of his friend, "Pop Erwin," who had refused to sell it because it afforded employment to bankrupt ranchers. Half-interest is also left to a niece, "Barbara Erwin," played by Carol Hughes, who prefers money to management. To achieve her mercenary ends, she employs two lawyers, "Arnold" and "Fry," not realizing that they have been trying to gain control of the mine for several years, and that they are thoroughly unscrupulous. Eventually "Barbara" sees the error of her ways, and law, order and peace emerge, after a number of explosions and considerable shooting.

Comedy is furnished by Smiley Burnette and his cinematic brother, Joseph Strauch, Jr. Young Strauch, Jr., just can't see women for either Gene or Smiley, but at the end of the picture he, too, is enlightened.

Previewed at Republic projection room before on audience comprised mostly of women to little reoction.—I. S.

Reg'lar Fellers

(Producers Releasing Corp., 1940-41)

Comedy

Gene Byrnes "Reg'lar Fellers" comic strip, with its newspaper circulation and its radio presentations Sunday nights on NBC, comes to the screen in this Producers Releasing Corp. picture with a wide ready made following. It emerges as good entertainment, centering about the activities of a group of youngsters who, anxious to do a good deed, attempt to brighten the life of a wealthy recluse by effecting a reconciliation between her and her estranged daughter in law.

Playing the children's roles are Billy Lee, Carl "Alfalfa" Switzer, Buddy Boles, Janet Dempsey, Jerry Wilson and Malcolm Hutton. Adult members of the cast include Sarah Padden, Roscoe Ates, Maren Mayo and Pat O'Malley.

Arthur Dreifuss produced and directed the picture, making the most of his opportunities for comedy. The picture, however, appears to be aimed directly at the juvenile market, and its exploitation possibilities along that line are unlimited.

The story told is that of a group of youngsters who putter around with "inventions." Attempting to reconcile the wtalthy women with her daughter in law, the boys stumble on to a family secret, and help round up two criminals.

Previewed at Hawaii theotre, Hollywood, to excellent oudience reactions.—V.K.

ADVANCE SYNOPSES and information

BIRTH OF THE BLUES
(Paramount)

Drama - American Music

PRODUCED by B. G. DeSylva. Directed by Victor Schertzinger.

PLAYERS: Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Brian Donlevy, Carolyn Lee, Rochester, Warren Hymer, Horace MacMahon, J. Carroll Naish, Jack Teagarden's Orchestra.

SYNOPSIS

"Birth of the Blues" is dedicated "to those brave souls who raised American music out of a rut and placed it in the groove." It is a story of the recognition and acceptance by the public of a type of music once believed to be "low down." The New Orleans of 1910 is the scene of most of the action.

SPECIAL REMARKS

To be heard in this production are fifteen songs ranging in age from twelve to forty years. They are: "Memphis Blues," "Melancholy Baby," "That's Why They Call Me Shine," "St. James Infirmary Blues," "Tiger Rag," "Cuddle Up a Little Closer Lovey Mine," "By the Light of the Silvery Moon," "Wait Till the Sun Shines Nellie," "At a Georgia Camp Meeting," "Waiting at the Church," "After the Ball," "St. Louis Blues," "Minuet," "Birth of the Blues," "The Waiter and the Porter and the Upstairs Maid."

AMONG THE LIVING
(Paramount)

Melodrama

PRODUCED by Sol C. Siegel. Directed by Stuart Heisler.

PLAYERS: Albert Dekker, Susan Hayward, Frances Farmer, Harry Carey, Gordon Jones, Jean Phillips.

SYNOPSIS

In this production Albert Dekker plays a dual role, twin brothers, one of whom is a successful business man, and the other a dangerously insane maniac. When the maniac escapes and commits a series of murders, a wave of fear and fury sweeps the city. Mobs form, seeking the murderer, and the sane brother is captured and accused.

Susan Hayward, who recently played a prominent role in "Adam Had Four Sons" has the top feminine role in this picture in the part of a boarding-housekeeper's daughter. Frances Farmer is the sane Dekker's wife. Gordon Jones, who has been appearing in the Broadway play, "My Sister Eileen," plays Miss Hayward's sweetheart. Harry Carey is the doctor who solves a baffling horror case, and Jean Phillips plays the girl who is murdered.

LAW OF THE TROPICS
(Warner Brothers)

Melodrama

ASSOCIATE PRODUCER: Ben Stoloff. Directed by Ray Enright. From a book by Alice Tisdale Hobart.

PLAYERS: Constance Bennett, Jeffrey Lynn, Regis Toomey, Mona Maris, Hobart Bosworth, Frank Puglia.

SYNOPSIS

The locale of this picture is a rubber plantation in South America. Jeffrey Lynn plays the role of an assistant supervisor who has discovered a new way to speed up the rubber process. While he waits for the company to take action on his proposal, he obtains leave to meet his fiancée, who is coming from the states. When the fiancée fails to show up Lynn drowns his sorrows by drinking and annoying a singer in a cocktail room. The singer (Constance Bennett) and Lynn make a deal. She needs a certain amount of money and he has to save face with the natives by bringing back a wife. They get married. The singer is a fugitive from justice and the law finally catches up with her. She leaves, but Lynn, now in love with her, follows and they are reunited.

SKYLARK
(Paramount)

Comedy

PRODUCED and directed by Mark Sandrich.

PLAYERS: Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland, Brian Aherne, Binnie Barnes, Walter Abel, Mona Barrie, Grant Mitchell.

SYNOPSIS

Here is a fast-moving comedy on domestic affairs. It is the story of a woman (Claudette Colbert) who, after five years, concludes that the "other woman" is too much for her—this other "love" of her husband's (Ray Milland) being his big money-making job of advertising. She decides to settle it her own way, first with divorce then with the romantic attentions paid her by her lawyer (Brian Aherne). These three are co-starred.

It is Director-Producer Mark Sandrich's first venture in some years away from musical comedy such as his Astaire-Rogers and Jack Benny hits. The story, by Samson Raphaelson, was a serial in 1939 in the Saturday Evening Post, then became a Broadway play, followed by publication as a novel.

GLAMOUR BOY
(Paramount)

Hollywood Drama

PRODUCED by Sol C. Siegel. Directed by Ted Tetzlaff.

PLAYERS: Jackie Cooper, Susanna Foster, Walter Abel, Darryl Hickman, Ann Gillis, Jackie Searle.

SYNOPSIS

Jackie Cooper and Susanna Foster, the harum-scarum sixteen-year-old singer, are co-starred for the first time in this production. Having a Hollywood background, much of the picture's action takes place in a studio. Jackie portrays the role of a former child star who is engaged to coach a radio quiz kid (Darryl Hickman) in the role of "Skippy," a story that Jackie starred in years before.

Jackie falls in love with Joan Winslow, who has taken over a role which Brenda Lee has walked out on. Jackie and Susanna have a misunderstanding and Jackie convinces Brenda to return to her role thus causing Joan to be taken out of the cast. The quiz kid straightens everything out.

NIGHT OF JANUARY 16TH
(Paramount)

Murder Mystery

PRODUCED by Sol C. Siegel. Directed by William Clemens. Based on the play by Ayn Rand.

PLAYERS: Robert Preston, Ellen Drew, Nils Asther, Clarence Kolb, Don Douglas.

SYNOPSIS

Robert Preston, Ellen Drew and Nils Asther bring the stage play to the screen in a fast-moving detective story. The picture opens with a murder in a New York Penthouse. Miss Drew is arrested for the murder. Preston decides to prove her innocent. Both soon become fugitives until the story moves to an unexpected climax in Havana.

HONKY TONK
(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Drama, Romance

PRODUCED by Pandro S. Berman. Directed by Jack Conway.

PLAYERS: Clark Gable, Lana Turner, Frank Morgan, Claire Trevor, Marjorie Main, Albert Dekker.

SYNOPSIS

After being thrown out of nearly every frontier town west of the Mississippi, Clark Gable, in the role of "con" man extraordinary, decides to settle in a gold rush boom town. There he quickly takes over the gambling house and generally makes his weight felt. Not the marrying type, he is tricked into marrying the daughter of the local judge when she gets him drunk one night. He becomes a power in the town, electing city officials and hobnobbing with senators and governors. But the town's citizens rise in revolt and chase him and his hirelings out of town. In this mass exodus Gable proves himself a changed man by staving off a riot. He is joined by his wife.

NINE LIVES ARE NOT ENOUGH
(Warner Brothers)

Melodrama

ASSOCIATE PRODUCER: William Jacobs. Directed by Edward Sutherland. From the novel by Jerome Odlum.

PLAYERS: Ronald Reagan, Joan Perry, James Gleason, Faye Emerson, Edward Brophy.

SYNOPSIS

This is a combination newspaper and murder mystery yarn with a newspaper reporter (Ronald Reagan) holding forth as the center of attraction. The reporter is given cub assignments by his hard-boiled city editor when he is the cause of a libel suit. He is cruising in a police radio car with two officers when they get a call to go to a house in the slums. There they find the dead body of a millionaire. A suicide report is brought in but the reporter and the millionaire's daughter (Joan Perry) have different ideas on the subject and prove it to be a murder. Before they uncover the murderer, two more murders are committed and the reporter is fired. The reporter has his revenge on the city editor when the millionaire's daughter buys the newspaper and installs the erstwhile reporter as managing editor.

THE OUTLAW TRAIL
(RKO Radio)

Western

PRODUCED by Bert Gilroy. Directed by Edward Killy.

PLAYERS: Tim Holt, Janet Waldo, Ray Whitley, Lee ("Lasses") White.

SYNOPSIS

This is the first in the 1941-42 series of six outdoor dramas which RKO Radio will produce with Tim Holt as the star.

The experiences of an honest, but hot-headed young rancher who turns bad man to right the wrongs done to his father but accidentally becomes a hero and is appointed sheriff by a grateful citizenry, forms the story basis. When he is expected to rob the people who have trusted and honored him, he leaves his crooked associates. But they think he is double-crossing them, and set a trap to kill him. He escapes from the trap and is enabled to escape exposure as a wanderer from the straight and narrow. The locale is the southwest and the time 1905.

TEE UP (Col.)
World of Sport (3801)

Here is a golf subject featuring Patty Berg. Winning championships is Miss Berg's specialty. At the age of 19 she was voted the number one athlete. Now at 22, Miss Berg has played in 38 major tournaments and won 30 of them. In this subject, she shows her form in gripping the club, addressing the ball and executing the swing. She believes in studying the nap of the grass, claiming they're as different as the nap on rugs. Bill Stern does the commentary.

SO YOU THINK YOU KNOW MUSIC (Col.)
Quiz Reel (3601)

Based on the radio program of the same name, this issue of the series has as guests, Faith Baldwin, novelist; H. V. Kaltenborn, news analyst; Peggy Wood, Broadway actress of "Old Acquaintance," and Johnny Green, composer of "Body and Soul" and "I Cover the Waterfront." Ted Cott is master of ceremonies and Leonard Liebling, the judge. The questions make puns and gag situations out of popular and classical music.

THE ONE MAN NAVY (20th-Fox)
Terrytoon (Color) (2552)

Gandy, the simple, but slightly erratic young Goose, receives notice to report to his local Draft Board, but is rejected after a physical examination. Despondent, Gandy joins up in the Navy in his own way and with his own equipment. With a crew recruited from the barnyard, Gandy sets out in his small boat looking for hostile submarines. One is sighted and the battle is on. The enemy attacks with ferocious efficiency, but Gandy deflects, repels or utilizes its missiles and manages to rout the enemy. When the Navy arrives, the admiral pins a medal on the hero.

THE ICE CARNIVAL (20th-Fox)
Terrytoon (2501)

In a winter setting, the little animals of woods, field and barnyards are disporting themselves on the ice-covered local pond. Little Elmer Tortoise and his father learning to skate furnish the comedy. A group of rabbits laugh at Elmer and his troubles. Their father challenges the elder tortoise to a skating race. The race is all to the swift—meaning the hare—until Elmer has a friendly fish help the elder hare.

LOVE IN GLOOM (Col.)
Henry Youngman (3421)

It's about the Meet-a-Mate Agency that turns from match-making to heart-mending because Henny Youngman, a refugee from a padded cell, draws this screwball idea out of the ether. So when Karyl Gould admits having a broken heart, Henny turns her over to the boss's son who does a neat job of cardiac-curing. In the course of events, Henny becomes involved with those three zanies, the Radio Rogues, impersonators; Elaine Arden, Al Shean and a host of people who sing, dance and make for general merriment.

THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET (20th-Fox)
Terrytoon (Color) (2551)

The leading character in this rural comedy is a Frog who would a-wooing go, and the course of his romance carries the spectator from the Old Oaken Bucket that hangs in the well, to a neighboring amusement park, and back again to the bucket. The Frog calls on his girl friend at the bottom of the well and they are off to the fair. They patronize all the attractions at the play ground. Weary but happy, they fly home in the Pelican Taxi-Plane. Into the bucket and down the well they go.
